That perhaps should not concern us so much, and it would not were it a corporation to carry on some ordinary business, such as a mining, manufacturing, or other industrial business; but, Mr. President, this is a transportation corporation. It is one created for constructing a line of transportation for the use of which it will collect tolls from the traveling and the freight-transporting public; and when they succeed in saddling upon it $160,000,000 in the shape of $80,000,000 of stock and $80,000,000 of bonds, so that it will appear to the Interstate Commerce Commission and the public to have cost $160,000,000, it means that rates and tolls on traffic of every character will be established upon that basis of cost and the public must submit to the extortion.

We all know that the business of corporations of this character is in a special class. They are quasi public; their business is in the nature of a monopoly; they demand and command the public patronage, and the public, if such corporations be left to their own devices, must pay unfair prices for the privilege of using them. The law and the courts have all declared that, by reason of the character of these corporations, Congress has a right to regulate their tolls and charges and the character of the service they are to give to the public. That this may be done as to transportation companies a commission has been created, and only at this session of Congress the powers of that Commission have been vastly enlarged, in order that the extortions and discriminations that such corporations have been practicing upon the public and their nefarious discriminations shall no longer continue and that only just, reasonable, and fairly remunerative charges shall be exacted.

The peculiar relation of this corporation to the public is that when the Commission is called upon to regulate its charges the Commission must, ex necessitate, have regard for the amount of incumbrances that are upon the property. Even though the bonds secured by their mortgage is far beyond the real value of the property, the Commission must recognize the validity of the bonds thus secured and allow such tolls as will enable the company to pay interest upon them, that they may not be forced into the hands of a receiver; and, in addition, upon the theory that the stockholders of such a company are entitled to fairly remunerative profits, the Commission must also allow such charges as will permit of fair dividends being paid upon the stock, and upon all the stock. Therefore it is of prime importance to both the country and the public that the cost of the canals shall be supervised by Congress, and that proper provision shall be made to prevent the issue of an undue amount of bonds and stock.

This is positively necessary that the tolls and charges to be imposed upon the shipping interests shall not be extortionate or unfair. It is because under this bill the promoters may meet and agree to issue all the bonds and stock and agree upon the price they will pay for them, taking all the bonds and stock to themselves at a price only sufficient to construct the work that, as guardians of the public interests, we should prevent it. Congress, since its approval is applied for, should make it impossible to saddle a public work that can't cost more than $50,000,000 with a stock and bond debt of $160,000,000.

Mr. President, one Senator may say that such is not the provision of the bill; another may say that it is. I have examined it for myself, and, to my mind, such are the provisions of the bill, and such are the powers given to the incorporators and to those who are to undertake to construct the work. That it is I have no more doubt than I have that I am on the floor at this time addressing the Senate; and no Senator has undertaken to disprove these facts.

Mr. President, as I said before, we should always be particularly careful in chartering transportation corporations, because the business of the country will immediately be put under tribute to such corporations, and we should see to it that that tribute shall not be made extortionate, unjust, or unreasonable.

I will not, Mr. President, pay any attention to what was said by the Senator from Missouri about what he hopes the Democratic party will be. I was in doubt whether he was indulging in a eulogy or a criticism of the Democratic party. I have no question as to what the Democratic party will be and must be. If it was not a party that did represent constructive statesmanship, if it was not a party that did represent the real interests of the masses of the people, if it was not a party that could not be cajoled or intimidated indefinitely by the consolidated wealth of the country whether operating in the form of trusts or industrial combines or monopolies, it would have been dead and buried long ago. The fact that it lives, the fact that it is to-day arraying itself as a body militant, the fact that the conservative press of the country is already recognizing the almost certainty of the success of the Democratic party in the coming campaign, proves not only that it is a conservative party, but that it is a party militant, that it represents and stands for sound, national, undying principles, and without which a republican form of government must perish from this continent. Its destiny is not to be determined by Senators who are shocked at the attitude of brother Senators who fight for honest financial methods, nor by Senators who become unduly indignant because their colleagues see fit to criticise in an honest way legislation which they believe to be unwise and dangerous. Such are not going to determine the fate of the party of which the Senator and myself are members—the Senator from Missouri a very distinguished member, and I a much less one and more of a negative quantity.

Mr. President, why should the Senator suggest that we are unduly criticising the Committee on Commerce? I have no question but that all the members of that committee when they reported the bill believed that they were doing a wise and a patriotic thing. When I heard the eulogy that was passed upon the Pittsburg gentleman who appeared before the committee, I was inclined to think that, instead of any of the opponents of the measure being carried off their feet, some of the committee, who ought to have stood firmly on solid ground, did permit themselves to be swept away, and they are now floundering about quite unconscious of the fact. The very fact that a number of important amendments have been made, shows that the bill deserved criticism, that it was a proper subject of discussion, and that, had it been passed without amendments, something would have been done that could hardly be defended.

I believe, Mr. President, that the measure, except in essential particulars, was well guarded. It was well guarded in nonessentials. I recognize the constitutional power of Congress to give charters of this character, but, while that is true, when I saw the vital defect in this bill, when I realized the certainty that it gives to the corporation, the opportunity to oppress the shippers of the country, through the lien of an exorbitant and wholly unwarranted amount of indebtedness, an indebtedness out of all proportion to the money to be put into the enterprise, acting upon my own individual responsibility, and not as a partisan, not even realizing that there was an obligation upon any Democratic Senator to vote with me or against me, I took the stand upon the bill I did. So far as I am concerned, with this vital defect in the measure, as broad and clear as it was at the very moment we commenced deliberating upon it, I can not vote for it.

I can not vote for it for another equally good reason—because it does not follow at all that though this bill should be defeated the canal will not be built. As it was clearly pointed out by the Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON], this company already has its charter from two States, with the power to consolidate and construct this work as though it were being constructed in but one State. That was the channel these incorporators first sought, and it seems to me as though coming to Congress were but an afterthought.

The Senator from Missouri says that he looks for the day and longs for the day when the United States will own all of these canals constructed by private corporations and otherwise. Well, Mr. President, I should like the Senator from Missouri to draw the line between canal government ownership and railroad government ownership. Canals and railways are both instruments of commerce; they both connect all the States and all the great waterways and the great oceans. The railroad system is of much vaster importance to the business of the country than any canal system that can be built.

The mere fact that canal transportation is cheaper than railroad transportation does not in the least change the principle that is involved. These are all great public highways; they are all for the advancement of commerce; they must all be used by the public; they are all subject to Congressional control; they all aim at the same end—and the mere fact that one system of transportation is by water and the other system of transportation is by steel rails does not and can not alter the eternal principle that lies at the bottom.

I am not advocating government ownership; but I do not hesitate to say that whenever any Senator, I care not what his political affiliations may be, insists that because it will be for the benefit of the country, because it will cheapen transportation and improve business and add to the prosperity of the country, because it will bind together in closer lines the great water highways—when for those reasons he insists that the Government should own the canals and operate them and rent them out and charge tolls upon them, he has made every argument that is necessary for the government ownership of railroads, and he is familiarizing the public mind with the idea that after all the only harbor of safety to the business and to the people of the country from transportation extortion is by putting under government control not only the canals, but the railroads.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. PATTERSON. Certainly.

Mr. STONE. I do not care to enter into a discussion on the subject of government ownership of railroads, but I should like to ask the Senator—and it is pertinent to what he is saying—whether he can not differentiate and clearly draw the distinction between the Government of the United States improving the Mississippi River, for instance, and better adapting it to commercial uses and navigable uses, and constructing a line of railroad?

Mr. PATTERSON. Oh, yes, Mr. President; I can differentiate, and nothing will give me greater pleasure than to differentiate. When Congress appropriates money for the widening or the deepening or the straightening of the Mississippi River——

Mr. STONE. Or the connection of one waterway with another.

Mr. PATTERSON. Or the connection of one waterway with another, whether through a bayou or through dry land, Congress is simply making easy the use of all of these waterways by all the people without charge or let or hindrance. Any man may take his steamboat or his flatboat or his log raft down those streams, and there is no guardian standing at the mouth or anywhere midway demanding tolls; but I conceive, Mr. President, that if this Government shall purchase a great canal and tributaries 200 miles in length that can be used only by a limited number of shippers or boats, Congress will do what it is natural for Congress to do under such circumstances—fix tolls and adopt regulations by which and under which such canal can be used.

The Senator from Missouri has not yet gone to the extent of suggesting that Congress buy the New York and Erie, the Wabash and Erie, the Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal—the one that is proposed to be built—and the other canals of the country and maintain them as open waterways for the unlimited and unrestricted use of the shipping or the traveling public. That is the vast difference between owning and operating canals and improving natural waterways. The latter are for all the public, who may use them at will and without charge; the other is for the customer—the man, the company, or corporation—that will pay the charges or tolls fixed by the Government and observe the regulations fixed by the Government. That is all there is in connection with the Government ownership of railways. Those who are advocating government ownership of railways do not for a moment suggest that they be made free highways, but they say the Government shall establish such regulations and fix such tolls as will maintain the roads in good order, extend the lines wherever they may be needed, and give the use of the roads, so far as they will accommodate the public, to shippers who are willing to pay the tolls and to meet and abide by the regulations.

Mr. President, I speak for no party. I am not advocating government ownership of railroads or of canals, but I do say that every measure of this kind is familiarizing the public mind not only with the idea, but with the benefits of public ownership of all the public utilities. The country is traveling quite rapidly enough in that direction. The goal is liable to be reached before the country is prepared for it, and I do not believe that Congress should make their strides too long or exhibit undue haste in reaching that goal. The public sentiment of the country will carry the country there quite rapidly enough.

Mr. President, I have simply spoken for myself to express my own views. This is not a party question in any sense of the word. No man is obliged to vote for the bill because he is a Republican or against it because he is a Democrat. It is merely a question of the exercise of good, sound, common sense and business judgment, and, in addition, to determine the wisdom of starting out along this new and untried path.

This is the first time that any canal company has ever received a charter from Congress. This bill will be the initial instrument in putting the Government into business of that kind; and since it is the initiation of a new policy Congress may well hesitate before it enters upon that policy. Certainly it is the duty of every Senator to discuss every feature of the bill critically and to discuss the policy that is involved, to determine whether or not by his deliberate action he will aid in starting the Government along this new line.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. BERRY. Upon that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CULBERSON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from California [Mr. FLINT]. In his absence, I withhold my vote.

Mr. MALLORY (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the senior Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. SPOONER (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. CARMACK] to the Senator from Idaho [Mr. HEYBURN], and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. WARREN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. MONEY]. I withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. CULLOM. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Virginia [Mr. MARTIN], and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Montana [Mr. CLARK]. I hold in my hand a telegram from him to the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. KNOX], saying he would vote in favor of the bill if here, which releases me, and I wish to vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. DILLINGHAM. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN], who I observe has not voted. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. CLAY. I am paired with the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE]. In his absence, I withhold my vote.

Mr. BAILEY. I desire to announce my pair with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. ELKINS].

Mr. MALLORY. I suggest to the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN] that we transfer our pairs, so that the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR] will stand paired with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. MONEY].

Mr. WARREN. That is agreeable to me.

Mr. MALLORY. I vote "nay."

Mr. WARREN. I vote "yea."

Mr. CLAPP. I transfer my pair to the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. DRYDEN], and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. CULLOM. I am informed that I can transfer my pair with the junior Senator from Virginia [Mr. MARTIN] to the Senator from Montana [Mr. CLARK], which I do, and will vote. I vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 41, nays 11, as follows:

YEAS—41.

Aldrich	Clapp	Hemenway	Scott
Allee	Clarke, Ark.	Kittredge	Smoot
Ankeny	Cullom	Knox	Spooner
Benson	Dick	La Follette	Stone
Beveridge	Dolliver	Long	Sutherland
Brandegee	Dubois	McCumber	Warner
Bulkeley	Foraker	Millard	Warren
Burkett	Foster	Nelson	Wetmore
Burnham	Fulton	Penrose
Burrows	Gallinger	Perkins
Carter	Hansbrough	Piles

NAYS—11.

Bacon	Daniel	McLaurin	Teller
Berry	Frazier	Mallory	Whyte
Blackburn	Kean	Patterson

NOT VOTING—37.

Alger	Dillingham	Latimer	Pettus
Allison	Dryden	Lodge	Platt
Bailey	Elkins	McCreary	Proctor
Carmack	Flint	McEnery	Rayner
Clark, Mont.	Frye	Martin	Simmons
Clark, Wyo.	Gamble	Money	Taliaferro
Clay	Gearin	Morgan	Tillman
Crane	Hale	Newlands
Culberson	Heyburn	Nixon
Depew	Hopkins	Overman

So the bill was passed.

ALASKA RAILROAD COMPANY.

Mr. BURNHAM. Mr. President, I give notice that I will ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill (S. 6358) to aid in the construction of a railroad and telegraph and telephone line in the district of Alaska after the routine morning business to-morrow and after the consideration of the District of Columbia bill, as to which notice has been given.

Mr. TELLER subsequently said: Mr. President, I am about to leave the Senate for the remainder of the session, for which I suppose I ought to obtain the consent of the Senate. I assume there will be no objection, although the rule, I believe, says I ought to ask leave, and if it is necessary I will do so.

I wish to say a word. The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BURNHAM] has just given notice that to-morrow he will call up a bill chartering a railroad company in the district of Alaska. I had intended to prepare some amendments to that bill, but I have not had the time to do it since the bill has been re-formed, as I think it came in in its present form on the 5th day of this month. I merely want to say with respect to the bill that I think its passage will be very unfair to a vast number of citizens who are putting their money into railroads in Alaska and are asking no assistance whatever from the Government, not even asking for a charter. I desired to say that because I have felt like attempting at least to re-form the bill properly, which I can not do under the circumstances. I did not think it would be called up during the session.

EDUCATION OF THE BLIND.

Mr. SPOONER. I am directed by the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 16290) to postpone until 1937 the maturity of $250,000 of 4 per cent United States bonds held in trust for the benefit of the American Printing House for the Blind, to report it with an amendment in the nature of a substitute, and I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Finance with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the sum of $250,000, heretofore invested in United States registered 4 per cent bonds, funded loan of 1907, inscribed "Secretary of the Treasury, trustee, interest to the Treasurer of the United States for credit of appropriation 'To promote the education of the blind,'" shall, upon the maturity and redemption of said bonds on the 1st day of July, 1907, in lieu of reinvestment in other Government bonds, be set apart and credited on the books of the Treasury Department as a perpetual trust fund; and the sum of $10,000, being equivalent to 4 per cent on the principal of said trust fund, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and such appropriation shall be deemed a permanent annual appropriation, and shall be expended in the manner and for the purposes authorized by the act approved March 3, 1879, entitled "An act to promote the education of the blind," approved March 3, 1879.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to modify the requirements of the act entitled "An act to promote the education of the blind,' approved March 3, 1879."

PRACTICE OF OSTEOPATHY IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. FORAKER. I ask present consideration for the bill (S. 5221) to regulate the practice of osteopathy, to license osteopathic physicians, and to punish persons violating the provisions thereof in the District of Columbia.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President——

Mr. FORAKER rose.

Mr. BAILEY. I thought the Senator from Ohio was going to address the Chair.

Mr. FORAKER. I did address the Chair a moment ago, and I asked unanimous consent for the present consideration of this bill. It is a bill of some twelve or thirteen pages, and I will withhold the request until a more opportune moment if Senators have shorter bills which they wish to have passed.

Mr. NELSON. The bill is of great importance, and I wish the Senator would let it go over.

Mr. FORAKER. It can be considered at another time, and I will withdraw the request for the present.

Mr. SPOONER. What is the bill?

Mr. FORAKER. It is a bill of some 12 or 13 pages, providing for the regulation of the practice of osteopathy in the District. It merely authorizes the creation of a board to make examination of those who wish so to practice. In view of the length of the bill, I will withdraw the request until a more opportune moment, as so many Senators are pressing shorter measures.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Ohio withdraws his request.

EDWARD S. BRAGG.

Mr. McCUMBER. I am directed by the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 6365) granting a pension to Edward S. Bragg, to report it with an amendment. I call the attention of the Senator from Wisconsin to it.

Mr. SPOONER. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill. It is very short and will not lead to debate.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 8, before the word "dollars," to strike out "seventy-five" and insert "fifty;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Edward S. Bragg, late brigadier-general, United States Volunteers, and pay him a pension at the rate of $50 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MEXICAN KICKAPOO INDIANS.

Mr. TELLER. Mr. President, I have what is intended to be a petition from some Indians, and I desire to have the petition and a letter which accompanies it printed and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, if I can obtain the consent of the Senate. I do not care to have them printed as a document, but I should like to have them printed in the RECORD, so that they may be preserved. I ask unanimous consent to do that.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Colorado asks permission that the papers sent to the Secretary's desk by him be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The papers referred to are as follows:

SAN FRANCISCO KICKAPOO COLONY,
Muzquiz, Mexico, June 10, 1906.

Hon. H. M. TELLER,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We, the undersigned Mexican Kickapoo Indians, are those referred to in the act of Congress of March 3, 1905, as "Oke mah and his wife Th the qua, and five others." We sent Mr. Bentley to Washington, after having agreed among ourselves to put our allotments in Oklahoma into a pool for the purpose of acquiring lands here, or rather, to exchange our lands there for land here. Of course, we are Indians and do not understand the details of such business, and employed him to look after it for us. He came back from Washington and told us that Congress had passed a law that we could do as we pleased with our land, just the same as a white man.

Then we deeded the land or turned it over to Mr. Bentley, that he might sell it and with the money buy land here. At the time we signed the deeds some money was advanced to us for us to live on until we could get some land and make a crop. Mr. Bentley took the deeds back to Oklahoma and tried to sell the land. The Indian agent there opposed the sale, and said the deeds were no good. The people up there who bought some of the land will not pay the last payment until the Secretary of the Interior follows the law and issues to us our patents, which he has not done.

We are all satisfied with what Mr. Bentley has done and tried to do, but the Secretary of the Interior keeps sending men here to tell us about it. We know all about it, and don't need some men who don't know anything about it to come and tell us about it. They try to break what we have done, tell us Bentley is a bad man, and that he has stolen everything. He did not steal anything from us. The money he has gotten so far was paid for the land where we live, and on which we make this letter now. We made lots of wheat right here this year. It was hauled in ox carts to Muzquiz. We are eating flour made from the wheat from our own land for the first time in our lives. We are plowing the land that raised the wheat, and planting it in corn right now. The spring crop of corn is just in good roasting ears now. We begin drying corn next week. Lots of corn this year, and good corn, but we have no houses to put it in, and no money to make them with. Some families have 10 acres for the first crop, and will plant 10 acres fall crop. Our pumpkins and melons are doing fine, and we have lots of beans right now. Our farm land is good. Lots of water, but too little grass for our stock, because we haven't got it fenced, and the Mexicans graze it with their goats, and they spoil the grass.

The Indian agent from Shawnee and the United States attorney from Oklahoma are here bothering us. We didn't call them here. If we have trouble we look to the Mexican law. The Mexican judge, when we complained, put them out of our camp, because we didn't want them here. They tried to get the young men who drink mescal to go back to the American side and sell their land; we don't want to sell any land; we want to swap it for land here. If they get money for the land they will spend the money and then come back to us and want us to take them in and share the land we have bought with them. We can't do that, for if they sell their land we won't have enough money to buy Piedra Blanca. Where we live now the land is too small. We just stopped here until we could get a larger land, and because this was the first place we could get. We expect the attorney and the Indian agent will lie about it just as Dixon did. They have got six white men with them. One of them had a saloon and gambling house when we left Shawnee, Okla. Another one of them was a saloon man, and Grimes, the leader, the department has refused to lease land to. Now, the Indian agent brings him over here to furnish the proof on which to lie about us. Thackery has been at Eagle Pass trying to coax the young men over there so these men can buy their land. These men that are here wanted us to sign papers for them to send to Thackery. They said he would telegraph the contents of the papers to Washington. Their papers, as they read them to us, said that Mr. Bentley had some of us arrested in order to make us sign to get in the new tribe here. Their paper is a lie. Not one of our people signed their paper; nobody has been arrested to make him sign anything; everybody was glad to sign the New Indian tribal roll. At first some of them did not understand it because these white men had lied to them, but now all have willingly signed.

The only arrests were some Indians who attempted to leave without paying their debts, but they were arrested on complaint of the Mexican merchants, and they were Pottawatomie Indians, who were going back to Shawnee anyway.

We want the United States to let us alone. Call back this Indian agent and attorney. We want the new law just as it has been explained to us. Every Kickapoo here sent Bentley to Washington to ask for this new law so we could swap our land there for land here. Some of us have not gotten our lease money for three years. We need it bad and ask you to help us. We want it sent to Eagle Pass, Tex. We want the Border National Bank to pay us. We are afraid of Thackery and will not sign anything unless our white friends who read English tell us what it is. We might touch the pen for lease money and he put our names on a deed. The Mexican authorities tell us that Dixon was a bad man and that he lied about us and that these men who came in company with Thackery are bad white men. Some of them stay in Muzquiz around the saloons and give beer and whisky to those of our people who will drink it. They offered some of our headmen $300 to let them come and stay in their tepees. In the lifetime of Senator Quay he started this work for us, with the help of Senator Pettigrew; now Johny Mine tells us you are our friend, and we are glad of that. We don't have many white friends, but we think a great deal of a straight white man. We thank you for what you have done for us and for anything you may do.

Most respectfully, your friends,

(1) OKE MAH (his x mark).
(2) THI THE QUA (her x mark).
(3) NO TEN (his x mark).
(4) WAH NAH KE THA HAH (his x mark).
(5) NE CON O PIT (his x mark).
(6) KISHKIN E QUOTE (his x mark).
(Sole heir of Shuck e quah.)
(7) TAH PAH THE A (her x mark).

Witnesses to marks from (1) to (7):
STANLEY EDGE (CADDO, Interpreter).
JACOB TOMAHAWK.

I hereby certify that I am the official interpreter of the Mexican Kickapoo Indians from Oklahoma now resident in Mexico, and that I correctly and fully interpreted the foregoing letter to each of the signers thereof, and caused him to fully understand the same before his signature was affixed thereto. The above letter was formulated by Oke mah in the presence of practically the entire tribe in council assembled, and received the unanimous indorsement of the tribe, and was written by our clerk, E. P. Erney, as dictated and directed by Oke mah, our principal headman.

JOHNY MINE (his x mark).
(Mah me qua che mah che ma net.)

Witnesses to mark:
STANLEY EDGE.
JACOB TOMAHAWK,
Chief Indian Territory Shawnees in Mexico.

EAGLE PASS, TEX.,
June 2, 1906.

Hon. H. M. TELLER, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I am just in receipt of a letter from Mr. Martin J. Bentley, who is now at Muzquiz, Mexico, who says that Mr. Thackery and the United States district attorney have been to Monclova, Mexico, and say they have examined the records and find no transfer of six days of water, etc., to Martin J. Bentley. I will say that there are now and have been for several months in our vaults the following papers:

A contract of sale from Celedonio Galan to Martin J. Bentley.

A deed to six days of water and the land thereto pertaining from Celedonio Galan to Martin J. Bentley.

A written opinion from Lic. Garza Castillion (a Mexican lawyer) that the said deed is a valid one.

An agreement from Mr. Bentley properly acknowledged that he will deed to certain Indians the above land when he makes final payment on same.

The deed from Celedonio Galan to Mr. Bentley is "registered" in the office of Eduardo Elizondo, a notary public at Muzquiz, Mexico, which is all that is required, under the Mexican laws, to pass title to land. They have no officer designated as a clerk of records, but deeds, etc., are registered (equivalent to our recorded) in the office of a notary public duly authorized to register public documents. Had Mr. Thackery or the district attorney asked us, we would have shown them the deed and would have also taken pleasure in explaining to them where they could find it recorded in Mexico.

We believe the papers are good beyond question, and we did not pay out any of this money until we got the certificate above mentioned from Mr. Garza Castillion that the papers were in order.

I will say that Mr. Garza Castillion is one of the best known lawyers in northern Mexico, and his opinion is accepted by all regarding land matters in that country.

Yours, very truly, W. A. BONNET, President.

[Copy of letter from Bentley.]

MUZQUIZ, MEXICO, June 2, 1906.

MY DEAR SENATOR: Thinking you should know the situation, I write you.

Upon my arrival here I found Mr. Thackery, the Indian agent, with an attorney, claiming to be special United States attorney, pretending to investigate titles. They have not learned much of Mexican law, and up to date have found no record of the transfer to me, and I presume they will report no transfer. I have asked the bank at Eagle Pass to write you a full statement. The first transfer is of record here, while they have been hunting at Monclara for it. The local judge ordered all persons objectionable to the Indians removed from their camp, and as they objected to the agent, he was obliged to go with the rest. About a dozen speculators are here trying to pull the Indians off and induce them to sell. They brought with them four boys who have been making trouble. These the authorities have ordered out of town, and the grafters are threatening all kinds of international complications. One boy is under arrest, but will be released on Monday. The Indians are jubilant, and are earnestly at work planting winter-wheat ground in corn.

The transfer is recorded after Mexican fashion here with Edward Elizondo, a notary public, and then placed in escrow pending the last payment formerly referred to.

Thanking you again for many favors,

Very truly, yours, M. J. BENTLEY.

I think the attempt will be made to have the President refuse approval and call the conferees before him. Could you not be present in such a case, and also the commissioner, so that the President may be made to fully see the situation?

M. J. B.

GRANT OF LANDS TO MANCOS, COLO.

Mr. PATTERSON. I am directed by the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 10292) granting to the town of Mancos, Colo., the right to enter certain lands, to report it without amendment. I ask unanimous consent that it be considered at this sitting. It is very short.

The Secretary read the bill; and there being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PASTURE RESERVE NO. 3, COMANCHE COUNTY, OKLA.

Mr. LONG. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate may consider at this time H. R. 16785, giving preference right to actual settlers on pasture reserve No. 3 to purchase lands leased to them for agricultural purposes in Comanche County, Okla.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with amendments.

The first amendment was, on page 1, line 5, after the word "act," to strike out "of this Congress in H. R. 17507" and insert "approved June 8, 1906;" so as to read:

That persons who are now in possession of land under leases approved by the Secretary of the Interior on pasture reserve No. 3, open for settlement by act approved June 8, 1906, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 2, line 24, after the word "act," to strike out "of this session of Congress in H. R. 17507" and insert "approved June 8, 1906;" so as to read:

The funds received from said sales to be placed to the credit of the Indians the same as other funds provided for in said act approved June 8, 1906: Provided, That the Secretary shall appoint said commissioners within thirty days from the passage of this act, and said commissioners shall make said appraisement and file their report within thirty days from the date of their appointments.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

VETERINARY SERVICE OF THE ARMY.

Mr. WARREN. I ask unanimous consent to call up for present consideration the bill (S. 3927) to increase the efficiency of the veterinary service of the Army.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill indicated by the Senator from Wyoming?

Mr. BURROWS. Let it be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the bill.

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill.

Mr. CARTER. This bill is likely to lead to some discussion, and I therefore suggest to the Senator from Wyoming, in view of the desire to have unobjected bills considered, that he withdraw the request for the time being.

Mr. WARREN. If the Senator from Montana objects, of course I have nothing to do but to consent that it go over.

Mr. CARTER. I do not care to be regarded as objecting to the bill, for perchance I might favor its passage ultimately, but I think it will lead to some debate.

Mr. WARREN. I will say to the Senator that it makes but little change, and it ought to be passed before we adjourn.

Mr. NELSON. It will create a new lot of commissioned officers in the Regular Army.

Mr. WARREN. It does not do that; but if the Senator objects, of course the bill will go over.

Mr. NELSON. I should like to have it go over.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Under objection, the bill will go over.

HELEN G. HIBBARD.

Mr. PERKINS. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 6268) granting a pension to Helen

G. Hibbard. It is a short pension bill, and the beneficiary is very much in need.

The Secretary read the bill; and there being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The bill had been reported from the Committee on Pensions with an amendment, in line 9, before the word "dollars," to strike out "twenty-four" and insert "twelve;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Helen G. Hibbard, widow of James M. Edminster, late of Company E, Ninth Regiment New Hampshire Volunteer Infantry, and pay her a pension at the rate of $12 per month.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DEATH OF REPRESENTATIVE RUFUS E. LESTER.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate resolutions of the House of Representatives relative to the death of the late Representative LESTER, of Georgia, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolutions, as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, June 18, 1906.

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. RUFUS EZEKIEL LESTER, late a Representative from the State of Georgia.

Resolved, That a committee of fifteen Members of the House be appointed by the Speaker to take order, superintending the funeral of Mr. LESTER, at Savannah, Ga., and to attend the same, with such members of the Senate as may be appointed by the Senate.

Resolved, That the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to take such steps as may be necessary to carry out these resolutions, and that the necessary expenses in connection therewith be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased the House do now adjourn.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, I offer the resolutions I send to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Georgia submits resolutions, which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolutions, as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with deep sensibility the announcement of the death of Hon. RUFUS E. LESTER, late a Representative from the State of Georgia.

Resolved, That a committee of seven Senators be appointed by the presiding officer to join a committee appointed on the part of the House of Representatives to attend the funeral of the deceased, at Savannah, Ga.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolutions submitted by the Senator from Georgia.

The resolutions were unanimously agreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT appointed under the second resolution as the committee on the part of the Senate Mr. BACON, Mr. CLAPP, Mr. CLAY, Mr. WARNER, Mr. FOSTER, Mr. FULTON, and Mr. OVERMAN.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, I move as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was unanimously agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 39 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, June 19, 1906, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate June 18, 1906.

AMBASSADOR EXTRAORDINARY AND PLENIPOTENTIARY.

John G. A. Leishman, of Pennsylvania, now envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Turkey, to be ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the United States to Turkey, to fill an original vacancy.

SURVEYORS OF CUSTOMS.

John R. Puryear to be surveyor of customs for the port of Paducah, in the State of Kentucky. (Reappointment.)

Frank B. Posey to be surveyor of customs for the port of Evansville, in the State of Indiana. (Reappointment.)

COLLECTOR OF INTERNAL REVENUE.

George H. Brown, of North Carolina, to be collector of internal revenue for the fifth district of North Carolina, to succeed Herschel S. Harkins, removed.

REGISTER OF LAND OFFICE.

John Reese, of Broken Bow, Nebr., now receiver of public moneys at that place, to be register of the land office at Broken Bow, Nebr., vice James Whitehead, whose term expired May 25.

RECEIVER OF PUBLIC MONEYS.

Darius M. Amsberry, of Broken Bow, Nebr., to be receiver of public moneys at Broken Bow, vice John Reese, to be transferred to register of that land office.

PROMOTION IN THE NAVY.

Capt. William T. Burwell to be a rear-admiral in the Navy from the 6th day of June, 1906, vice Rear-Admiral John J. Hunker, an additional number in grade.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

Lieut. Col. William L. Pitcher, Twenty-eighth Infantry, to be colonel from June 15, 1906, vice Whitall, Twenty-seventh Infantry, retired from active service.

Maj. Bernard A. Byrne, Thirteenth Infantry, to be lieutenant-colonel from June 15, 1906, vice Pitcher, Twenty-eighth Infantry, promoted.

Capt. Harry C. Hale, Fifteenth Infantry, to be major from June 15, 1906, vice Byrne, Thirteenth Infantry, promoted.

First Lieut. Garrison McCaskey, Twenty-fifth Infantry, to be captain from June 15, 1906, vice Hale, Fifteenth Infantry, promoted.

Col. Samuel R. Whitall, United States Army, retired, to be placed on the retired list of the Army with the rank of brigadier-general from June 15, 1906.

POSTMASTERS.

ARIZONA.

Albert L. Smith to be postmaster at Prescott, in the county of Yavapai and Territory of Arizona, in place of Albert L. Smith. Incumbent's commission expired April 25, 1906.

ARKANSAS.

G. H. Taylor to be postmaster at Morrilton, in the county of Conway and State of Arkansas, in place of Omar N. Hawkins, resigned.

COLORADO.

Clark Z. Cozens to be postmaster at Littleton, in the county of Arapahoe and State of Colorado, in place of Maud Olmsted. Incumbent's commission expires June 27, 1906.

FLORIDA.

Guy Gillen to be postmaster at Lake City, in the county of Columbia and State of Florida, in place of Berry E. Raulerson. Incumbent's commission expires June 25, 1906.

Alexander W. Jackson to be postmaster at White Springs, in the county of Hamilton and State of Florida, in place of Thomas H. Alexander, removed.

Henry J. Ritchie to be postmaster at St. Augustine, in the county of St. John and State of Florida, in place of Henry J. Ritchie. Incumbent's commission expired June 17, 1906.

Joseph L. Skipper to be postmaster at Lakeland, in the county of Polk and State of Florida, in place of Joseph L. Skipper. Incumbent's commission expired January 21, 1906.

ILLINOIS.

James F. M. Greene to be postmaster at Hillsboro, in the county of Montgomery and State of Illinois, in place of James F. M. Greene. Incumbent's commission expired May 27, 1906.

Edward Grimm to be postmaster at Galena, in the county of Jo Daviess and State of Illinois, in place of George S. Avery. Incumbent's commission expired June 10, 1906.

William H. Hainline to be postmaster at Macomb, in the county of McDonough and State of Illinois, in place of William H. Hainline. Incumbent's commission expires June 24, 1906.

James H. Lincoln to be postmaster at Franklin Grove, in the county of Lee and State of Illinois, in place of James H. Lincoln. Incumbent's commission expired June 10, 1906.

James R. Morgan to be postmaster at Maroa, in the county of Macon and State of Illinois, in place of James R. Morgan. Incumbent's commission expired June 10, 1906.

William E. Nipe to be postmaster at Mount Carroll, in the county of Carroll and State of Illinois, in place of William E. Nipe. Incumbent's commission expired June 7, 1906.

INDIANA.

William T. Baker to be postmaster at Alexandria, in the county of Madison and State of Indiana, in place of James F. Brenaman. Incumbent's commission expired March 31, 1906.

E. T. Botkin to be postmaster at Farmland, in the county of Randolph and State of Indiana, in place of William C. West. Incumbent's commission expired December 12, 1905.

IOWA.

Frank E. Fritcher to be postmaster at Nashua, in the county of Chickasaw and State of Iowa, in place of Frank E. Fritcher. Incumbent's commission expires June 30, 1906.

G. L. Van de Steeg to be postmaster at Orange City, in the county of Sioux and State of Iowa, in place of G. L. Van de Steeg. Incumbent's commission expired June 10, 1906.

KANSAS.

James A. Arment to be postmaster at Dodge City, in the county of Ford and State of Kansas, in place of James A. Arment. Incumbent's commission expires June 28, 1906.

Frank C. Bevington to be postmaster at Jewell, in the county of Jewell and State of Kansas, in place of William C. Palmer, resigned.

James Frey to be postmaster at Enterprise, in the county of Dickinson and State of Kansas, in place of James Frey. Incumbent's commission expires June 27, 1906.

Theodore Griffith to be postmaster at Great Bend, in the county of Barton and State of Kansas, in place of Theodore Griffith. Incumbent's commission expires June 24, 1906.

Samuel C. Lobaugh to be postmaster at Harper, in the county of Harper and State of Kansas, in place of Samuel C. Lobaugh. Incumbent's commission expires July 1, 1906.

Samuel R. Peters to be postmaster at Newton, in the county of Harvey and State of Kansas, in place of Samuel R. Peters. Incumbent's commission expires June 24, 1906.

George W. Watson to be postmaster at Kinsley, in the county of Edwards and State of Kansas, in place of George W. Watson. Incumbent's commission expires June 28, 1906.

MASSACHUSETTS.

William E. Freese to be postmaster at East Walpole, in the county of Norfolk and State of Massachusetts, in place of John F. Freese, resigned.

Joseph A. West to be postmaster at Provincetown, in the county of Barnstable and State of Massachusetts, in place of Joseph A. West. Incumbent's commission expired June 2, 1906.

MICHIGAN.

Minnie L. Hall to be postmaster at Lawton, in the county of Van Buren and State of Michigan, in place of Elmer W. Hall, deceased.

Charles G. Kellow, to be postmaster at Painesdale, in the county of Houghton and State of Michigan. Office became Presidential January 1, 1906.

MINNESOTA.

Charles E. Callaghan to be postmaster at Rochester, in the county of Olmsted and State of Minnesota, in place of Charles E. Callaghan. Incumbent's commission expired June 10, 1906.

Theodore P. Fagre to be postmaster at Blooming Prairie, in the county of Steele and State of Minnesota, in place of Walter L. Bucksen, resigned.

MONTANA.

Ira L. Kirk to be postmaster at Bozeman, in the county of Gallatin and State of Montana, in place of Ira L. Kirk. Incumbent's commission expires June 30, 1906.

NEBRASKA.

James M. Beaver to be postmaster at Scribner, in the county of Dodge and State of Nebraska, in place of James M. Beaver. Incumbent's commission expired January 20, 1906.

Frank D. Reed to be postmaster at Shelton, in the county of Buffalo and State of Nebraska, in place of Frank D. Reed. Incumbent's commission expired May 19, 1906.

NEW JERSEY.

Edwin Cadmus to be postmaster at Bayonne, in the county of Hudson and State of New Jersey, in place of Edwin Cadmus. Incumbent's commission expires June 24, 1906.

NEW YORK.

Robert H. Bareham to be postmaster at Palmyra, in the county of Wayne and State of New York, in place of Frederick W. Clemons. Incumbent's commission expired December 17, 1905.

Charles E. Sheldon to be postmaster at Sherman, in the county of Chautauqua and State of New York, in place of Charles E. Sheldon. Incumbent's commission expires June 27, 1906.

Claude L. Wilson to be postmaster at Little Valley, in the county of Cattaragus and State of New York, in place of Claude L. Wilson. Incumbent's commission expires June 19, 1906.

NORTH CAROLINA.

William H. Jenkins to be postmaster at Henderson, in the county of Vance and State of North Carolina, in place of Pryce T. Jones. Incumbent's commission expires June 24, 1906.

OHIO.

John W. Bath to be postmaster at Elyria, in the county of Lorain and State of Ohio, in place of Irving H. Griswold. Incumbent's commission expired January 16, 1906.

Henry S. Enck to be postmaster at Leipsic, in the county of Putnam and State of Ohio, in place of Henry S. Enck. Incumbent's commission expires June 30, 1906.

Frank A. Gamble to be postmaster at Van Wert, in the county of Van Wert and State of Ohio, in place of Clyde A. L. Purmort. Incumbent's commission expired April 5, 1906.

Allan Graham, jr., to be postmaster at Ottawa, in the county of Putnam and State of Ohio, in place of Allan Graham, jr. Incumbent's commission expired May 19, 1906.

Homer L. House to be postmaster at Deshler, in the county of Henry and State of Ohio, in place of John Vogt. Incumbent's commission expires June 30, 1906.

John Ramsey McElroy to be postmaster at New Comerstown, in the county of Tuscarawas and State of Ohio, in place of Robert F. Dent, deceased.

Leslie E. Meyer to be postmaster at Oakharbor, in the county of Ottawa and State of Ohio, in place of John C. Metzger, deceased.

William D. Powley to be postmaster at Monroeville, in the county of Huron and State of Ohio, in place of William D. Powley. Incumbent's commission expired January 16, 1906.

OKLAHOMA.

Alfred F. Deming to be postmaster at Snyder, in the county of Kiowa and Territory of Oklahoma, in place of Bess L. Bailey, resigned.

PENNSYLVANIA.

David M. Graham to be postmaster at Mahanoy City, in the county of Schuylkill and State of Pennsylvania, in place of David M. Graham. Incumbent's commission expired April 2, 1906.

Burd R. Linder to be postmaster at Orwigsburg, in the county of Schuylkill and State of Pennsylvania, in place of Burd R. Linder. Incumbent's commission expired April 3, 1906.

Jesse H. Roberts to be postmaster at Downingtown, in the county of Chester and State of Pennsylvania, in place of Jesse H. Roberts. Incumbent's commission expired June 30, 1906.

George W. Schmeltzer to be postmaster at Pine Grove, in the county of Schuylkill and State of Pennsylvania, in place of George W. Schmeltzer. Incumbent's commission expired April 10, 1906.

William H. Underwood to be postmaster at Washington, in the county of Washington and State of Pennsylvania, in place of William H. Underwood. Incumbent's commission expired March 10, 1906.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

John E. Hipple to be postmaster at Pierre, in the county of Hughes and State of South Dakota, in place of Samuel G. Dewell. Incumbent's commission expired March 4, 1906.

TEXAS.

William C. Smith to be postmaster at Bowie, in the county of Montague and State of Texas, in place of William C. Smith. Incumbent's commission expired March 25, 1906.

UTAH.

John W. Dougall to be postmaster at Springville, in the county of Utah and State of Utah, in place of Hugh M. Dougall, deceased.

Peter Martin to be postmaster at Park City, in the county of Summit and State of Utah, in place of Nellie M. Thiriot. Incumbent's commission expires June 30, 1906.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate June 18, 1906.

AMBASSADOR.

John G. A. Leishman, of Pennsylvania, to be ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the United States to Turkey.

PROMOTIONS IN THE ARMY.

Lieut. Col. Oliver E. Wood, detailed military secretary, to be colonel in the Artillery Corps from June 8, 1906.

Maj. John R. Williams, detailed military secretary, to be lieutenant-colonel in the Artillery Corps from June 9, 1906.

POSTMASTERS.

CALIFORNIA.

Thomas M. Wright to be postmaster at Watsonville, in the county of Santa Cruz and State of California.

ILLINOIS.

Thomas W. Price to be postmaster at Astoria, in the county of Fulton and State of Illinois.

William H. Shaw to be postmaster at Canton, in the county of Fulton and State of Illinois.

Joseph T. Van Gundy to be postmaster at Monticello, in the county of Piatt and State of Illinois.

Cassius M. C. Weedman to be postmaster at Farmer City, in the county of Dewitt and State of Illinois.

Sewell P. Wood to be postmaster at Farmington, in the county of Fulton and State of Illinois.

INDIANA.

James R. Spivey to be postmaster at Bluffton, in the county of Wells and State of Indiana.

Harry A. Strohm to be postmaster at Kentland, in the county of Newton and State of Indiana.

IOWA.

Edna Chesley to be postmaster at Sutherland, in the county of O'Brien and State of Iowa.

William Gray to be postmaster at Clear Lake, in the county of Cerro Gordo and State of Iowa.

William M. Sindlinger to be postmaster at Waterloo, in the county of Black Hawk and State of Iowa.

KANSAS.

Floyd E. Young to be postmaster at Stockton, in the county of Rooks and State of Kansas.

MICHIGAN.

Edward L. Bates to be postmaster at Pentwater, in the county of Oceana and State of Michigan.

E. A. Smith to be postmaster at Wayne, in the county of Wayne and State of Michigan.

NEBRASKA.

Albert M. Coonrod to be postmaster at Ord, in the county of Valley and State of Nebraska.

NEW YORK.

Charles Herbert Rich to be postmaster at Cattaraugus, in the county of Cattaraugus and State of New York.

Leroy H. Van Kirk to be postmaster at Ithaca, in the county of Thompkins and State of New York.

OREGON.

James T. Brown to be postmaster at Pendleton, in the county of Umatilla and State of Oregon.

PENNSYLVANIA.

John Grein to be postmaster at Homestead, in the county of Allegheny and State of Pennsylvania.

Alonzo G. Hudson to be postmaster at Safe Harbor, in the county of Lancaster and State of Pennsylvania.

George R. Morrison to be postmaster at Oakmont, in the county of Allegheny and State of Pennsylvania.

Harry G. Smith to be postmaster at West Chester, in the county of Chester and State of Pennsylvania.

John A. Wallace to be postmaster at Chester, in the county of Delaware and State of Pennsylvania.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

William A. Carter to be postmaster at Castlewood, in the county of Hamlin and State of South Dakota.

Edward G. Edgerton to be postmaster at Yankton, in the county of Yankton and State of South Dakota.

WASHINGTON.

James Ewart to be postmaster at Colfax, in the county of Whitman and State of Washington.

WISCONSIN.

John T. Harris to be postmaster at Ripon, in the county of Fond du Lac and State of Wisconsin.

Benjamin Webster to be postmaster at Platteville, in the county of Grant and State of Wisconsin.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, June 18, 1906.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, the Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Thou great Father Soul, above, beneath, around, within, impress us, we beseech Thee, with Thy presence and quicken all that is truest, noblest, best in our being, that with singleness of purpose we may serve Thee all the days of our life in a faithful service to our fellow-men. Profoundly impressed by the brief span of our earthly existence in the absence of one whose vacant chair and draped desk carry to our hearts the unwelcome tidings that the place which knew him here shall know him no more, the faithful service which he rendered his people, his State, his nation in the committee room and on the floor of this House is over. But Thou, O God, are ever the same, and Thy presence is ever with us, and though life is a mystery, strange its vicissitudes, death an enigma, yet underlying all, down deep in our being is the consciousness of the immortality of the soul. Comfort his colleagues and friends, his bereaved wife and children with the blessed truth, and impress us with the thought that though he may not return to us we shall surely go to him, there to dwell in the realm of eternal bliss forever, in Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to recommit the agricultural appropriation bill to the Committee on Agriculture.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] asks unanimous consent to recommit the agricultural appropriation bill to the Committee on Agriculture. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

SUSPENSION OF RULES.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a motion to suspend the rules be in order on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week the same as under the rules it would be to-day.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] asks unanimous consent that a motion to suspend the rules shall be in order on Tuesday and Wednesday next the same as it would be to-day. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

DEATH OF HON. RUFUS E. LESTER.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Speaker, it becomes my painful duty to announce to the House the death of an honored Member, the Hon. RUFUS E. LESTER, a Representative from the State of Georgia, who for nearly eighteen years has served the State in that capacity faithfully, earnestly, and devotedly. He met the great enemy of us all, Mr. Speaker, with that same uncomplaining courage that he met and discharged all of the duties of life.

At some later time I will ask the House to set apart a day upon which his colleagues and friends of the House may pay tribute to the memory and services of our deceased associate. I offer the resolutions which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARTLETT] offers the following resolutions; which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. RUFUS EZEKIEL LESTER, late a Representative from the State of Georgia.

Resolved, That a committee of fifteen Members of the House be appointed by the Speaker to take order superintending the funeral of Mr. LESTER at Savannah, Ga., and to attend the same, with such members of the Senate as may be appointed by the Senate.

Resolved, That the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to take such steps as may be necessary to carry out these resolutions, and that the necessary expenses in connection therewith be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to all of the resolutions except the last one.

The question was taken; and the resolutions were unanimously agreed to.

The SPEAKER announced the following committee: Mr. BARTLETT, Mr. BURTON of Ohio, Mr. BANKHEAD, Mr. GRIGGS, Mr. SPARKMAN, Mr. BISHOP, Mr. BRANTLEY, Mr. LAWRENCE, Mr. ADAMSON, Mr. HARDWICK, Mr. BELL of Georgia, Mr. LEWIS, Mr. CLAYTON, Mr. DAVIDSON, and Mr. BURGESS.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the last resolution.

The question was taken; and the resolution was agreed to.

Accordingly (at 11 o'clock and 15 minutes a. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATION.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive communication was taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a copy of a letter from the Commissioners of the District of Columbia submitting an estimate of appropriation for payment of a judgment against the District of Columbia—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. LEVER: A joint resolution (H. J. Res. 176) directing the Secretary of Agriculture to cause a survey and investigation to be made of the swamp and tidal lands of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia, to determine the feasibility and cost of leveeing and draining said lands, and the benefits to agriculture and the public health which would result therefrom—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. BARTLETT: A resolution (H. Res. 595) to pay Daniel G. Heidt, jr., amount due for clerk hire—to the Committee on Accounts.

By Mr. KAHN: A memorial of the legislature of California, favoring maintenance of appropriation for hydrographic branch of the Geological Survey—to the Committee on Appropriations.

Also, a memorial of the legislature of California favoring the suspension of section 2324 of the Revised Statutes on account of the recent calamity in that State—to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. SMITH of Arizona: A bill (H. R. 20280) to set aside certain lands to the town of Flagstaff for park purposes—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. MOON of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 20281) for the relief of the widow of the late Capt. Daniel C. Trewhitt—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. REEDER: A bill (H. R. 20282) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Morrell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HUFF: A bill (H. R. 20283) granting an increase of pension to Henry D. Bole—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 20284) granting an increase of pension to Lewis Hazlett—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 20285) granting an increase of pension to Alexander Thompson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 20286) granting an increase of pension to Bartholomew Holmes—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER: Petition of Daughters of the American Revolution for aid for the Jamestown Exposition—to the Committee on Industrial Arts and Expositions.

By Mr. BARCHFELD: Petition of Grange Association of Pennsylvania, for pure-food bill (Hepburn bill)—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. DRAPER: Petition of Robert S. Waddell, against the powder monopoly—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. FULLER: Petition of Board of Trade of Chicago, for a thorough inspection of packing-house meat products—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of D. Hernan, Streator, Ill., for pure-food bill and Federal inspection of meat-packers' products—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of United Trades and Labor Council, Streator, Ill., for the Gardner eight-hour bill—to the Committee on Rules.

Also, petition of Chicago Commercial Association, for the ship-subsidy bill or bill for upbuilding of American merchant marine—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition of United German Societies of New York City, for furtherance of treaties of arbitration—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. GRAHAM: Petition of M. Saperstein, Tarentum, Pa., against the Dillingham-Gardner bill—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of Grange Association of Pennsylvania, for pure-food bill (Hepburn bill)—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Mrs. Mary S. Ross et al., for investigation of affairs in Kongo Free State—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. HUFF: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Lewis Hazlett, Alexander Thompson, Bartholomew Holmes, David W. McClure, and Henry D. Bole—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LACEY: Petition of Hawarden Commercial Club, against parcels-post law—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

Also, petition of Samuel W. Jones et al., of Iowa, for the pure-food bill and Federal meat inspection—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. MOON of Tennessee: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Thomas R. Elliott—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. NORRIS: Petition of Nebraska Stock Growers' Association, for Government inspection of packing-house meat products—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. WEISSE: Petition of the Sheboygan Herald, against tariff on linotype machines—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of National German-American Alliance, for better system of distribution of immigrants in the United States—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

SENATE.

TUESDAY, June 19, 1906.

Prayer by Rev. ULYSSES G. B. PIERCE, of the city of Washington.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when, on request of Mr. HALE, and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Journal stands approved.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HALE submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 18750) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 9, 34, 35, 38, and 47.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 3, 5, 11, 12, 14, 16, 17, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 48, 49, 50, 52, 53, 54, 57, 58, 59, and 63; and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 8, and agree to the same with amendments as follows:

In line 10 of said amendment strike out the colon and insert in lieu thereof a period.

In lines 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, and 17 of said amendment strike out the following: "Provided, That hereafter the pay and allowances of chaplains shall be the same, rank for rank, as is or may be provided by law for officers of the line and of the Medical and Pay Corps, all of whom shall hereafter receive the same pay on shore duty as is now provided for sea duty: And provided further, That the present pay and allowances of any officer now in the Navy shall not be reduced: Provided further," and insert in lieu thereof, as a new paragraph:

"That all chaplains now in the Navy above the grade of lieutenant shall receive the pay and allowances of lieutenant-commander in the Navy according to length of service under the provisions of law for that rank, and all chaplains now in the Navy in the grade of lieutenant shall receive their present sea pay when on shore duty: Provided, That naval chaplains hereafter appointed shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of lieutenant (junior grade) in the Navy until they shall have completed seven years of service, when they shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of lieutenant in the Navy; and lieutenants shall be promoted, whenever vacancies occur, to the grade of lieutenant-commander, which shall consist of five members, and when so promoted shall receive the rank, pay, and allowances of lieutenant-commander in the Navy: Provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be held or construed to increase the number of chaplains as now authorized by law or to reduce the rank or pay of any now serving."

In line 17 of said amendment, commencing with the word "That," have a new paragraph; and in lines 17 and 18 of said amendment strike out the words "pay and;" and in line 21 of said amendment strike out the words "pay and."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 10, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 4 of said amendment strike out the words "rank, highest;" and in lines 4 and 5 of said amendment strike out the comma after the word "commander" and the words "and of no higher rank;" and in lines 6 and 7 strike out the words "be appointed from civil life in the manner and at" and insert in lieu thereof the word "receive;" and at the end of said amendment insert the following: "Provided further, That such officer shall not have the benefit of retirement;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 15, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In said amendment, after the word "million," strike out the words "three hundred thousand;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 18, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 5 of said amendment strike out the words "immediately available and to be;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 36, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In the last line of said amendment strike out the comma and the words "to be immediately available;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 51, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 6 of said amendment, after the word "graduation," insert the following: "or that may occur for other reasons;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 60, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In said amendment strike out the words "one million" and insert in lieu thereof the words "five hundred thousand;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 61, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: On page 76 of the bill, at the end of line 5, insert the following: "But this provision shall not apply to or interfere with contracts for such armor already entered into, signed, or executed by the Secretary of the Navy;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 62, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "thirty-three million four hundred and seventy-five thousand eight hundred and twenty-nine dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

On amendments numbered 2, 6, 7, 13, 32, 33, 37, 55, and 56 the committee of conference have been unable to agree.

EUGENE HALE,
GEO. C. PERKINS,
B. R. TILLMAN,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

GEORGE EDMUND FOSS,
H. C. LOUDENSLAGER,
ADOLPH MEYER,
Managers on the part of the House.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. I move that the Senate further insist upon its amendments still in disagreement and request a further conference with the House of Representatives on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, the Chair to appoint the conferees.

The motion was agreed to; and the Vice-President appointed Mr. HALE, Mr. PERKINS, and Mr. TILLMAN as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

Mr. WARREN. Before the Senator from Maine leaves the subject I desire to ask a question, or two questions, for that matter. Is the amendment regarding the large battle ship still open?

Mr. HALE. It is still open, and will be in the next conference.

Mr. WARREN. I presume the Senator has the figures in mind, and I should like to know what change the report just adopted makes in the salaries of the chaplains, and what is the maximum of the two different grades—that is, per year or per month—that the chaplains shall receive hereafter?

Mr. HALE. It puts them on the same basis of appointment as chaplains in the Army, and they succeed finally to the rank of lieutenant-commander. The largest pay of the chaplains ultimately is increased from $2,800 to $3,500.

Mr. WARREN. Does the Senator mean that it amounts to that with the longevity service additional, or is that the straight salary alone?

Mr. HALE. That is the final salary. They commence the appointment, as they do in the Army, with the salary of a lieutenant of the lower grade. Then they are promoted by longevity, as in the Army, and when they reach the rank of lieutenant-commander they receive the same pay that the present chaplains in the Army receive.

Mr. WARREN. And the same allowances?

Mr. HALE. And the same allowances.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President, I dislike to complain against the clergy. I do not intend to complain against them. I simply want to complain against Congress. Ninety per cent of the ministers of the gospel in this country work very much harder than these chaplains and receive very much smaller salary. I suppose, however, that a man who is expected to save the souls of soldiers ought to be pretty well paid for it. I understand that generally they are not very religiously inclined.

The salary is bad enough, and I want to ask the Senator from Maine if, in addition to that, the chaplains are entitled to the provisions for the retirement of officers of the Army and Navy?

Mr. HALE. Undoubtedly.

Mr. BAILEY. Then, Mr. President, that makes two reasons why this provision, for which the Senator from Wyoming is so solicitous, ought not to be incorporated in the bill.

Mr. HALE. The conferees strictly confined themselves to their right in the matter.

Mr. BAILEY. The Senator from Maine will observe that I did not say I wanted to complain against the conference; I said against the Congress.

Mr. HALE. Congress is always very liberal, and is so with chaplains undoubtedly.

Mr. BAILEY. It has been extravagant. It is bad enough to be liberal with other people's money; it is inexcusable to be extravagant with it.

Mr. HALE. The pressure was from the chaplains. They are a very worthy body of men, and are very modest in not asking for any advance in pay for any other corps.

Mr. BAILEY. I, of course, do not contradict the statement that the chaplains have been very modest.

Mr. HALE. In that respect.

Mr. BAILEY. I never did understand why a soldier of the Lord needed a rank in the Army of his country. But I make no complaint about that. I am perfectly willing to give them the rank, and I am perfectly willing to give them the pay that is commensurate with the duties they perform, both considered with reference to their importance and with reference to the work required. But I do declare that these chaplains do less work than 98 per cent of the ministers in actual service through the various States and communities, and they are receiving probably double, and it may be more than double, the average pay of ministers of equal piety, education, and ability.

Mr. HALE. Undoubtedly.

Mr. BAILEY. It seems to me that where a man must work as the average minister of the gospel in this country does work, he ought to be fairly paid. I believe every man in any field of endeavor ought to be properly paid. But it seems to me that the Government, using the funds of the people, ought not to consider itself justified in paying for a given service twice as much as that given service commands in what we call the "open market."

If ministers of the gospel, very learned, very pious, and very industrious, serving congregations in the various communities of this land are well content with a salary that ranges from $1,200 to $2,000, without any provision for retirement, such as the Army and Navy law provides, it would seem that the Congress ought to have followed as nearly as it could the example of our constituents at home, and fixed the salary of these ministers according to the difficulty of their employment.

Mr. HALE. I am very glad to hear the remarks of the Senator from Texas, and I commend them to the chaplains as being good, easy reading.

CHICKAMAUGA AND CHATTANOOGA NATIONAL PARK.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the chairman of the Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Park Commission setting forth the necessity for the immediate reconstruction of two bridges, and recommending that an additional appropriation be made for this purpose to be included in the sundry civil appropriation bill; which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

HYGIENIC LABORATORY, WASHINGTON, D. C.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the Surgeon-General, Public Health and Marine-Hospital Service, submitting an estimate of appropriation for improvement to the grounds of the Hygienic Laboratory, Washington, D. C., $15,000; which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

LEPROSY HOSPITAL, HAWAII.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the Surgeon-General, Public Health and Marine-Hospital Service, submitting an amendment to be included in the sundry civil appropriation bill for the maintenance of the leprosy hospital in Hawaii; which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills:

S. 1031. An act granting to the State of California 5 per cent of the net proceeds of the cash sales of public lands in said State; and

S. 1442. An act to increase the efficiency of the militia and promote rifle practice.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolution; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

S. 289. An act to provide a life-saving station at or near Greenhill, on the coast of South Kingston, in the State of Rhode Island;

S. 4250. An act to further enlarge the powers and authority of the Public Health and Marine-Hospital Service, and to impose further duties thereon;

S. 4806. An act to regulate the landing, delivery, cure, and sale of sponges;

H. R. 4464. An act to classify the officers and members of the fire department of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes;

H. R. 4468. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the appointment of a sealer and assistant sealer of weights and measures in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved March 2, 1895;

H. R. 7771. An act for the relief of Judd O. Hartzell;

H. R. 8428. An act to regulate the construction of dams across navigable waters;

H. R. 8973. An act to amend section 5200, Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to national banks;

H. R. 10715. An act to establish an additional collection district in the State of Texas, and for other purposes;

H. R. 14928. An act for the relief of F. V. Walker;

H. R. 14968. An act to amend the internal-revenue laws so as to provide for furnishing certified copies of certain records;

H. R. 16125. An act authorizing a license and permit to the Corinth and Shiloh Electric Railway Company to construct a track or tracks through the Shiloh National Park and to operate electric cars thereon;

H. R. 18442. An act to fix and regulate the salaries of teachers, school officers, and other employees of the board of education of the District of Columbia;

H. R. 18668. An act ratifying and confirming soldiers' additional homestead entries heretofore made and allowed upon lands embraced in what was formerly the Columbia Indian Reservation, in the State of Washington;

H. R. 19571. An act to authorize the county court of Gasconade County, Mo., to construct a bridge across the Gasconade River at or near Fredericksburg, Mo.;

H. R. 19681. An act to survey and allot the lands embraced within the limits of the Blackfeet Indian Reservation, in the State of Montana, and to open the surplus lands to settlement;

H. R. 20070. An act to authorize the Chattanooga Northern Railway Company to construct a bridge across the Tennessee River at Chattanooga, Tenn.; and

S. R. 60. Joint resolution providing for the purchase of material and equipment for use in the construction of the Panama Canal.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT presented a memorial of the North American Gymnastic Union, of Indianapolis, Ind., remonstrating against the adoption of a certain amendment to the sundry civil appropriation bill excluding alcoholic beverages from Soldiers' Homes; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a petition of the International Missionary Union, of Clifton Springs, N. Y., praying for a moderate enforcement of the present Chinese-exclusion law; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a petition of the National German-American Alliance, of Philadelphia, Pa., praying for the ratification of international arbitration treaties; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. NELSON presented the petitions of M. Condon, of Clara City; Elorum & Davis, of Amidon; the Farmers' Elevator Company, of Springfield; C. W. Chamberlain, of Amboy, and the First National Bank, of Luverne, all in the State of Minnesota, praying for the enactment of legislation providing for rigid Government inspection of packing meat products; which were referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. WARREN. I present a telegram in the form of a petition. It is from one of the prominent and one of the oldest citizens of what is now Wyoming, a man who settled there before there was any Wyoming and before there was any live-stock business. It consists of but three lines. I have had several scores of letters and telegrams bearing upon the same subject. I ask that this telegram may be read.

There being no objection, the telegram was read, and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, as follows:

CHEYENNE, WYO., June 18, 1906.

Hon. F. E. WARREN,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

It is of vital importance to stock raisers that we have prompt legislation providing for rigid inspection of packing meat products at Government expense.

R. S. VANASSEL.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. In connection with the telegram just read I desire to state that last night and this morning I received ten or twelve telegrams, very much like the one just read and almost in the same language. I did not think it was necessary to present them to the Senate, but I will simply call attention to the fact that I received such telegrams, so that those who have charge of legislation on the meat question may take notice thereof.

Mr. STONE. I should like to state also that I have received a great number of similar telegrams, which I have not sent to the desk, as I did not consider it necessary; but there is great interest in the matter in my State.

Mr. PENROSE presented a petition of the Civic Club of Philadelphia, Pa., praying for the enactment of legislation to establish national forest reserves in the Southern Appalachian and White Mountains; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of the Civic Club of Philadelphia, Pa., praying that an appropriation be made for a scientific investigation of the industrial conditions of women in the United States; which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Oxford, Nine Points, and Quarryville, Pa., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation providing for the transfer of the education and care of the Indians and Eskimos of Alaska from the Bureau of Education to the governor of that Territory; which was referred to the Committee on Territories.

Mr. KEAN presented the memorials of J. H. Shannon, of Blairstown; Rev. Henry Ward, D. D., Edwin Du Rie, David D. Ackerman, Dr. L. B. Parsell, John Z. Demarest, and A. D. Atwood, all of Closter, in the State of New Jersey, remonstrating against Hon. REED SMOOT, a Senator from the State of Utah, retaining his seat in the Senate; which were ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. PLATT presented memorials of the Wellsville Oil Company; of sundry citizens of Wellsville, N. Y., and of J. T. Jones, Gulfport, Miss., remonstrating against the adoption of a certain amendment to the so-called "railroad rate bill" relative to pipe lines; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented the memorial of Dr. M. T. Greene and E. P. Gordon, of Castile, N. Y., remonstrating against Hon. REED SMOOT, a Senator from the State of Utah, retaining his seat in the Senate; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. KNOX presented the memorial of the Pennsylvania Refining Company, of Oil City, Pa., and the memorial of J. I. Buchanan, of Pittsburg, Pa., remonstrating against the adoption of a certain amendment to the so-called "railroad rate bill" relative to pipe lines; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented petitions of Rev. W. T. Tapscott, of Easton; Antisaloon League, of Pittsburg; Temperance Committee, General Assembly, Presbyterian Church, of Pittsburg; Rev. Charles

E. Dunn, of Philadelphia; D. L. Hufman, of Ashland; G. F. Snyder, of Altoona; Frank Williams, of Ashland; E. B. Killinger, of Ashland; David S. Curry, of York, all in the State of Pennsylvania, praying for the enactment of legislation prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors in National Soldiers' Homes; which were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. MILLARD presented petitions of the Nebraska Stock Growers' Association; of J. H. Norsworthy, of Gothensburg; of the United States National Bank, of Omaha; of the First National Bank of Omaha; of E. D. Gould, of Wolbach; of W. H. Butterfield & Son, of Norfolk, and of H. W. Yates, of Omaha, all in the State of Nebraska, praying for the enactment of legislation providing for a rigid meat inspection at Government expense; which were referred to the Senate conference committee on the agricultural appropriation bill.

Mr. BLACKBURN presented sundry papers to accompany the bill (S. 5267) for the relief of the estate of Solomon Jones, deceased; which were referred to the Committee on Claims.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. SIMMONS, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, to whom was referred the bill (S. 5945) providing for an inspection of certain agricultural products, and for other purposes, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. BERRY, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 19854) to authorize the board of supervisors of Sunflower County, Miss., to construct a bridge across Sunflower River, reported it without amendment.

Mr. KNOX, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (S. 5136) to amend the act creating the Spanish Treaty Claims Commission, approved March 2, 1901, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. McCUMBER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8214) granting an increase of pension to Joseph Slagg, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. SMOOT, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 14211) granting an increase of pension to Deborah J. Pruitt, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. SCOTT, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 19533) granting an increase of pension to Mary A. Hall, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. BURNHAM, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4659) granting an increase of pension to John F. Morris, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. FORAKER, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 12892), granting an honorable discharge to Seth Davis, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

BLANK & PARKS.

Mr. BAILEY. I am directed by the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4580) for the relief of Blank & Parks, of Waxahachie, Tex., to report it with a favorable recommendation, and I submit a report thereon. I ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Blank & Parks, of Waxahachie, Tex., the sum of $400, paid under protest to the collector of internal revenue at Dallas, Tex., said payment having been demanded and payment required under threats of restraint and sale of said Blank & Parks's property in consequence of a technical violation of the internal-revenue laws of the United States.

Mr. SCOTT. I should like the Senator from Texas to explain what the technical violation was. Oftentimes we find the internal-revenue law violated where a still is operated in the mountains, and a man will claim that he did not know but that he had a right to still his own apples and grain, and therefore it was only a technical violation.

Mr. BAILEY. The violation in this case consisted in the firm of Blank & Parks, who were engaged in a marketing business at Waxahachie, Tex., ordering, at the request of a restaurant keeper, 40 pounds of oleomargarine, to be shipped along with an order which they had made from Swift & Co. They turned the oleomargarine over to the restaurant keeper without any profit to themselves or without any thought of profit, he simply paying his portion of the freight and the amount which Blank & Parks had to pay to the packer. Under the law the internal-revenue collector felt called upon to collect from them the tax as a dealer, whereas, as a matter of fact, they were never dealers.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LEGISLATIVE, ETC., APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. CULLOM submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 16472) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 27, 49, 50, 52, 53, 54, 60, 61, 65, 66, 67, 74, 76, 77, 78, 79, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 96, 97, 120, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 135, 138, 139, 141, 149, 152, 154, 155, 179, 191, 192, 197, 200, 201, 202, 204, 205, 208, 209, 210, 211, 220, 221, 227, 228, 237, 247, and 250.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 12, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 26, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 36, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 45, 47, 48, 51, 56, 57, 58, 59, 63, 64, 69, 73, 75, 81, 82, 88, 90, 92, 93, 94, 95, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 125, 133, 134, 136, 137, 144, 145, 146, 147, 151, 153, 157, 158, 159, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 169, 175, 176, 177, 178, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 193, 194, 195, 196, 199, 206, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 222, 223, 224, 226, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 238, 239, 240, 242, 243, 244, 245, and 251; and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 11, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: On page 5 of the bill, in lines 20 and 21, strike out the words "Relations with Cuba" and insert in lieu thereof "Cuban Relations;" and in lines 22 and 23 strike out the words "improvement of the;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 13, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the number proposed insert "twenty-one;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 14, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "thirty-seven thousand eight hundred dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 25, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the number proposed insert "twenty-five;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 35, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "sixty-nine privates, at one thousand and fifty dollars each;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 37, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "seventy-seven thousand six hundred and fifty dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 44, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the matter inserted by said amendment and insert, on page 32 of the bill, after line 14, as a separate paragraph, the following:

"For plans and estimates for a newspaper stack, to be procured by the Joint Committee on the Library, if said committee shall decide such stack to be necessary, two thousand five hundred dollars."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 46, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 2 of said amendment strike out the word "hereafter;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 55, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "two hundred and eight thousand nine hundred and seventy dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 62, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "ten thousand four hundred and twenty dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 68, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: On page 44 of the bill, in lines 12, 13, and 14 strike out the words "two superintendents of technical divisions, at two thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars each" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "superintendent of computing division, two thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 70, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: On page 44 of the bill, in line 16, after the word "dollars," insert the words "chief of inspection division, two thousand five hundred dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 71, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "seventy-three thousand four hundred and sixty dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 72, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "one stenographer and typewriter, one thousand four hundred dollars; one typewriter copyist, one thousand dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 80, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "one hundred and forty-two thousand five hundred and forty dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 89, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the number proposed insert "forty;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 91, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "four hundred and thirty-one thousand three hundred and thirty dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 107, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "forty thousand dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 108, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "one hundred and sixty-five thousand dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 109, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "forty-five thousand dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 110, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: At the end of the matter inserted by said amendment insert "rent of office and quarters in Juneau;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 121, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "one hundred and sixty-four thousand three hundred and eighty-six dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 122, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "two chiefs of division at $2,000 each;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 123, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the words inserted by said amendment insert the words "three clerks;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 124, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$69,380;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 126, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: After the word "For," in said amendment, insert the word "two;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 140, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "one hundred and one thousand three hundred dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 142, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: On page 99 of the bill, in line 25, strike out the word "four" and insert in lieu thereof the word "six;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 143, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "two thousand dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 148, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the number proposed insert "sixteen;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 150, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 2 of said amendment strike out the word "eighteen" and insert in lieu thereof the word "sixteen;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 156, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "three hundred and fifty-three thousand eight hundred and seventy dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 160, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lines 8 and 9 of said amendment strike out the words "sixty-one thousand five hundred dollars" and in lieu thereof insert the following: "namely: twelve clerks, qualified as draftsmen, at one thousand two hundred dollars per annum each; fifty copyists at nine hundred dollars per annum each; and one messenger at six hundred dollars per annum; in all, sixty thousand dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 168, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the number proposed insert "thirty-five;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 170, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,769,750;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 171, 172, 173, and 174, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out all of the amended paragraph and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"For photolithographing or otherwise producing plates and illustrations for the Official Gazette, for work to be done at the Government Printing Office in producing the Official Gazette, including the letter press, the weekly, monthly, bimonthly, and annual indexes therefor, exclusive of expired patents, in all one hundred and thirty thousand dollars."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 180, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"For rent for storage for Patent Office model exhibit, ten thousand dollars or so much thereof as may be necessary; and the Secretary of the Interior shall dispose of a part or all of the models of said exhibit, either by sale, gift, or otherwise."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 198, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "two hundred and twenty-six thousand six hundred and ten dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 203, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "twenty-one thousand nine hundred and ninety dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 207, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Before the words inserted by said amendment insert the words "not more than;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 225, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "seven hundred and seventeen thousand and twenty dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 241, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 3 of said amendment, after the word "expended," insert the words "during the fiscal year nineteen hundred and seven;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 246, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: On page 161 of the bill, after the word "service," at the end of line 16, insert the following: ", and the heads of Departments shall cause this provision to be enforced;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 248, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out all of said amendment after the word "preceding," in line 5;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 249, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: At the end of said amendment, after the word "originate," insert ", in which case such special or additional estimate shall be accompanied by a full statement of its imperative necessity and reasons for its omission in the annual estimates;" and the Senate agree to the same.

S. M. CULLOM,
F. E. WARREN,
H. M. TELLER,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

LUCIUS N. LITTAUER,
L. F. LIVINGSTON,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

JURIES IN NEW MEXICO.

Mr. KNOX. I am directed by the Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 19379) providing for the manner of selecting and impaneling juries in the United States courts in the Territory of New Mexico, to report it favorably with an amendment. I ask for the present consideration of the bill as it involves the procedure of impaneling juries in the Territory of New Mexico.

The Secretary read the bill; and there being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The amendment of the Committee on the Judiciary was, on page 1, line 10, after the words "United States," to insert:

Provided, That no person shall be eligible for jury service in the Territory of New Mexico who does not understand the English language sufficiently, in the opinion of the court, to qualify him for such service.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. In regard to that amendment, I desire to say that I have information to the effect that the juries in the Territory of New Mexico are composed largely and necessarily of Mexicans, and that a great many of those drawn as jurors can not speak the English language. I think it is a matter of common knowledge that in almost all the courts in the Territory it is necessary to have interpreters. I do not know whether the amendment should be adopted or not, because if it is true that a great many of the jurors can not speak the English language they would be disqualified, if the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. KNOX. I regret that the senior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] is not present, as the amendment was proposed in the committee by him, and the committee adopted it upon the statement that it was a habit in the trial of criminal cases in New Mexico to send out the interpreter with the jury. We considered that matter and concluded it was substantially a trial by interpreter instead of a trial by jury, and for that reason the committee came to the conclusion to recommend the amendment.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President——

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Unless the Senator from Pennsylvania is anxious to press the bill, in view of the fact that the Senator from Wisconsin is not present, I suggest to the Senator that the bill be allowed to go over.

Mr. KNOX. I have no objection to its going over.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will go to the Calendar.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. PENROSE introduced a bill (S. 6484) granting an increase of pension to William Cassady; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PROCTOR introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 6485) granting an increase of pension to Samuel Cook (with accompanying papers);

A bill (S. 6486) granting a pension to John Little; and

A bill (S. 6487) granting an increase of pension to Israel Plain.

Mr. PENROSE introduced a bill (S. 6488) authorizing the striking of 200 additional medals to commemorate the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of Benjamin Franklin; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also introduced a bill (S. 6489) for the relief of Laura A. Wagner; which was read twice by its title, and referrel to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. McCREARY introduced a bill (S. 6490) for the relief of A. J. Clark; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Claims.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. PLATT submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $31,000 to pay the day inspectors of customs of the port of New York the difference between the per diem salary of $4 paid them during the months of October, November, and December, 1905, and their proper per diem salary ($5 per diem) for the same period, intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. KEAN submitted an amendment providing for analyses, tests, examinations, or investigations by the Geological Survey of structural materials, fuel, and mineral substances, intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. MALLORY submitted an amendment relative to the appropriation for vehicles and automobiles for the use of the superintendent of the Government Hospital for the Insane, intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment providing that the appropriation made for the Government Hospital for the Insane shall be disbursed under the supervision of the Secretary of the Interior by the disbursing officer of the Department of the Interior, intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. DANIEL submitted an amendment relative to the Jamestown Tercentennial Exposition to be held in Hampton Roads, Va., in 1907, intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment authorizing the Secretary of War to purchase certain lands on the battlefield of Gettysburg, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. PENROSE submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $25,000 for the addition of a new roof and the construction of a new cornice on the public building at Pottsville, Pa., intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

He also submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $11,112.22 to pay the estate of David B. Landis, deceased, of Lancaster, Pa., and also $34,055 to pay the estate of Jacob F. Sheaffer, deceased, of Lancaster, Pa., being amounts found due by the Court of Claims for taxes and penalty collected on distilled spirits that had been destroyed by fire, intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

VOLUNTEER RETIRED LIST.

Mr. PLATT submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 2162) to create in the War Department a special roll, to be known as the "Volunteer retired list," to authorize placing thereon with pay certain surviving officers of the United States Volunteer Army of the civil war, and for other purposes; which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

STATISTICS RELATING TO PASSENGER RATES.

Mr. LODGE. On June 8 I presented to the Senate a letter from Mr. H. T. Newcomb, of Washington, D. C., submitting tables showing comparisons between passenger charges on European railways and those in force for similar distances in the United States, being Senate Document No. 479. The print is entirely exhausted, and I ask for a reprint of the document.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

GEOLOGY OF THE OWL CREEK MOUNTAINS.

On motion of Mr. WARREN, it was Ordered, That there be printed for the use of the Senate 9,000 copies of Senate Document No. 219, Fifty-ninth Congress, first session, with the illustrations.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS—GEN. PHILIP H. SHERIDAN.

On motion of Mr. PENROSE, it was Ordered, That leave be granted to withdraw from the files of the Senate the papers in the case of "A bill to purchase a bust of Gen. Philip H. Sheridan," accompanying Senate bill 1111, Fifty-fourth Congress, first session, copies of the same to be left in the files as provided by clause 2 of Rule XXX.

APPEALS IN CRIMINAL PROSECUTIONS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The morning business is closed.

Mr. NELSON. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 15434) to regulate appeals in criminal prosecutions.

Mr. GALLINGER. It will be observed by referring to the RECORD that unanimous consent was given for the consideration this morning of the bill I reported on yesterday—Senate bill 6147. If that be laid before the Senate, I will be glad to yield to the Senator from Minnesota.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate, in accordance with the unanimous-consent agreement of yesterday, Senate bill 6147.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 6147) authorizing changes in certain street railway tracks within the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

Mr. GALLINGER. If there be no objection, I will yield to the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON], if the bill he wishes to call up does not lead to debate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Minnesota asks for the present consideration of a bill, which will be read.

Mr. NELSON. The bill was unanimously reported from the Committee on the Judiciary.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 15434) to regulate appeals in criminal prosecutions, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That a writ of error may be taken by and on behalf of the United States from the district or circuit courts to the Supreme Court or the circuit courts of appeals, as prescribed in an act entitled "An act to establish circuit courts of appeals and to define and regulate in certain cases the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1891, and the acts amendatory thereof, in all criminal cases, in the following instances, to wit:

From the decision or judgment quashing or setting aside an indictment;

From the decision or judgment sustaining a demurrer to an indictment or any count thereof;

From the decision arresting a judgment of conviction for insufficiency of the indictment;

From the decision or judgment sustaining a special plea in bar, when the defendant has not been put in jeopardy.

In all these instances the United States shall be entitled to a bill of exceptions as in civil cases.

Mr. NELSON. At the suggestion of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER], who is not here, I offer an amendment to come in at the end of line 15 of the committee amendment.

The SECRETARY. After the word "jeopardy," line 15, page 2, insert the following proviso:

Provided, That if on such writ of error it shall be found that error in the ruling of the court during the proceeding or trial and the verdict was in favor of the defendant, such verdict shall not be set aside.

Mr. CULBERSON. The Secretary was interrupted in the reading by a message, and I did not get its full force.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will again read the amendment to the amendment.

The SECRETARY. In one of the cases the committee reported is the following:

From the decision or judgment sustaining a special plea in bar, when the defendant has not been put in jeopardy.

To this the following is offered as an amendment:

Provided, That if on such writ of error it shall be found that error in the ruling of the court during the proceeding or trial and the verdict was in favor of the defendant, such verdict shall not be set aside.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. CLAY. I would be glad if the Senator in charge of the bill would explain it. As I understand the bill, and I only caught it as it was read, it gives the Government of the United States the right of appeal in criminal cases in certain instances, and it is certainly a new departure. I would be exceedingly glad if the Senator would explain it. I have not had time to read the bill carefully, but when the Government undertakes an appeal from the decision of a judge in a criminal case, it is certainly a new departure in the history of judicial trials.

Mr. NELSON. I will say to the Senator that in a great many of the States they allow appeals. This only relates to cases where the defendant has not been put in jeopardy and where he has not been acquitted. If the Senator will read the substitute, he will find that the only cases in which a writ of error can be taken is, first, from the decision or judgment quashing or setting aside an indictment; second, from the decision or judgment sustaining a demurrer to an indictment or any count thereof; third, from the decision arresting a judgment of conviction for insufficiency of the indictment, and, fourth, from the decision or judgment sustaining a special plea in bar, when the defendant has not been put in jeopardy. Then the amendment which I offered on behalf of the senior Senator from Colorado expressly provides that no matter what errors may be found, if the defendant has been acquitted that is the end of it; he will not be tried again. Under the amendment as proposed the defendant can not be put in jeopardy a second time, and if acquitted he can not be tried a second time.

Mr. CLAY. I see on page 2 the bill provides for a writ of error from the decision or judgment quashing or setting aside an indictment. Now, if the defendant is indicted on the criminal side of the court and there is a defect in the indictment and the judge quashes the indictment, there is nothing to do but send it to the grand jury or get a new indictment. That has been the immemorial practice since our Government was organized.

Mr. NELSON. I will say to the Senator that sometimes an indictment is set aside on the ground that the law under which the indictment was found is held to be unconstitutional. The object is to allow the Government to take the case up and get a ruling of the Supreme Court.

Mr. CLAY. I desire to call the Senator's attention to this fact: If a defendant under this bill is indicted and the indictment is quashed for any irregularity or defect, and the Government of the United States desires to take that case to a higher court, the defendant is compelled to employ counsel and follow his case in the higher court before there has been any trial, when under the present law all that would have to be done would be to indict him again, and then he could stand his trial at home and save the necessary expense.

Mr. NELSON. But it may be that if the case goes up to the appellate court and the decision of the appellate court involves the question of the constitutionality of the law under which the defendant is prosecuted, the decision of the appellate court may end the case and there may be no subsequent indictment. This bill was carefully considered by the Judiciary Committee, and every member of that committee agreed to it.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I rose simply to say that I yielded with the understanding that the bill would not be debated, and if it is to be debated I must object to its further consideration.

Mr. CLAY. I would prefer to look into the bill before it passes.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will lie over, retaining its place on the Calendar.

Mr. GALLINGER. I yield to the Senator from Iowa [Mr. DOLLIVER] if the bill he wishes to call up does not lead to debate.

SAC AND FOX INDIANS.

Mr. DOLLIVER. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 10133) to provide for the annual pro rata distribution of the annuities of the Sac and Fox Indians of the Mississippi between the two branches of the tribe, and to adjust the existing claims between the two branches as to said annuities.

The Secretary read the bill; and there being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

VINCENNES UNIVERSITY, INDIANA.

Mr. GALLINGER. I yield to the Senator from Indiana [Mr. HEMENWAY] if the measure he desires to call up does not lead to debate.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution (S. R. 52) authorizing the Secretary of War to donate to the board of trustees of Vincennes University, Vincennes, Ind., such obsolete arms and other military equipments now in possession of said university, to be used in military instruction.

The Secretary read the joint resolution, and by unanimous consent the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LAND GRANTS TO NEW MEXICO.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Mr. President——

Mr. GALLINGER. If there be no objection I will yield to the Senator from North Dakota if his bill does not lead to debate.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. The bill for which I ask consideration is House bill 18600. It has heretofore been read, and there was objection made to it on that occasion by the Senator from Wisconsin, who has since advised me that he withdraws his objection to it. I think there will be no debate upon the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from North Dakota asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of a bill, the title of which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 18600) to amend section 10 of an act of Congress approved June 21, 1898, to make certain grants of land to the Territory of New Mexico, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to amend section 10 of an act of Congress approved June 21, 1898, to make certain grants of land to the Territory of New Mexico, and for other purposes, so as to read as follows:

SEC. 10. That the land reserved for university purposes, including all saline lands, and sections 16 and 36, reserved for public schools, may be leased under such laws and regulations as may be hereafter prescribed by the legislative assembly of said Territory; but until the meeting of the next legislature of said Territory the governor, secretary of the Territory, and the solicitor-general shall constitute a board for the leasing of said lands, and all necessary expenses and costs incurred in the leasing, management, and protection of said lands and leases may be paid out of the proceeds derived from such leases. And it shall be unlawful to cut, remove, or appropriate in any way any timber growing upon the lands leased under the provisions of this act, and not more than one section of land shall be leased to any one person, corporation, or association of persons, except when in the opinion of the Secretary of the Interior the leasing of a larger area is deemed advisable, and no lease shall be made for a longer period than five years, and all leases shall terminate on the admission of said Territory as a State; and all money received on account of such leases in excess of actual expenses necessarily incurred in connection with the execution thereof shall be placed to the credit of separate funds for the use of said institutions, and shall be paid out only as directed by the legislative assembly of said Territory and for the purposes indicated herein. The remainder of the lands granted by this act, except those lands which may be leased only as above provided, may be sold under such laws and regulations as may be hereafter prescribed by the legislative assembly of said Territory; and all such necessary costs and expenses as may be incurred in the management, protection, and sale of said lands may be paid out of the proceeds derived from such sales; and not more than one quarter section of land shall be sold to any one person, corporation, or association of persons, and no sale of said lands or any portion thereof shall be made for less than $1.25 per acre; and all money received on account of such sales, after deducting the actual expenses necessarily incurred in connection with the execution thereof, shall be placed to the credit of separate funds created for the respective purposes named in this act, and shall be used only as the legislative assembly of said Territory may direct, and only for the use of the institutions or purposes for which the respective grants of lands are made: Provided, That such legislative assembly may provide for leasing all or any part of the lands granted in this act on the same terms and under the same limitations prescribed above as to the lands that may be leased only; but all leases made under the provisions of this act shall be subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, and all investments made or securities purchased with the proceeds of sales or leases of lands provided for by this act shall be subject to like approval by the Secretary of the Interior.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NORTHWEST NORMAL SCHOOL AT ALVA, OKLA.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President——

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, the Senator from Kansas has said to me that he has a bill which will not lead to debate, and I will yield to him to ask for its consideration.

Mr. LONG. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of House bill 11787.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Kansas asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill named by him, the title of which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 11787) ratifying and approving an act to appropriate money for the purpose of building additional buildings for the Northwestern Normal School at Alva, in Oklahoma Territory, passed by the legislative assembly of Oklahoma Territory, and approved the 15th day of March, 1905.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN W. WILLIAMS.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Hampshire yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. GALLINGER. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky, who has stated to me that he has a small House bill for which he desires consideration, which will not lead to debate.

Mr. DANIEL. I hope the Senator from New Hampshire will let us introduce a few routine matters.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 3459) for the relief of John W. Williams. I am sure it will lead to no debate.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to John W. Williams, of Powell County, Ky., $200 for one horse purchased by him at Government sale June 3, 1865, and recovered by the legal owner by judicial proceedings, which established a lack of title in the Government and made Williams liable for the value of said horse and cost.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SPANISH TREATY CLAIMS COMMISSION.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. KNOX] informs me that he has a bill in which the Senator from Alabama [Mr. PETTUS] is interested. The Senator from Pennsylvania is about to leave the city, and I will yield to that Senator, if the bill for which he desires consideration does not lead to debate.

Mr. KNOX. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 5136) to amend the act creating the Spanish Treaty Claims Commission, approved March 2, 1901. The bill was reported from the Committee on the Judiciary this morning.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill named by him.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary with amendments; which were, on page 2, line 10, after the word "brought," to insert a comma and the words "or to be hereafter filed;" on page 2, line 12, after the word "cases," to insert a comma and the words "including those heretofore passed on by said Commission;" and in line 21, after the word "Navy," to strike out "not heretofore filed, or which shall not be filed, which are hereby allowed, within six months from the passage of this act shall be forever barred" and to insert "growing out of the destruction of said battle ship, not heretofore filed, may be filed with said Commission within six months from the passage of this act, and if not so filed shall be forever barred."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President, I ask that the title of the bill be again stated.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The title of the bill will be read by the Secretary.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 5136) to amend the act creating the Spanish Treaty Claims Commission, approved March 2, 1901.

Mr. CARTER. From what committee was the bill reported?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It was reported this morning from the Committee on the Judiciary by the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. KNOX].

Mr. CARTER. That, I understand, is the bill which provides for appeals to the Supreme Court of the United States?

Mr. BLACKBURN. No.

Mr. KNOX. This bill does not provide for such an appeal; but provides for a certiorari. It provides practically the same right which exists under the present court of appeals act—that is, the Commission itself, when a question of law arises and it desires the opinion of the Supreme Court on it, can request that opinion; and the Supreme Court, upon such application, if it thinks the question of sufficient importance to challenge its attention, may send for it by writ of certiorari; but there is no appeal granted.

Mr. CARTER. It does not in any respect limit the power of the Commission or provide that it shall have any greater power?

Mr. KNOX. No, sir.

Mr. BURROWS. Has the bill been read, Mr. President?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill has been read, and is now in the Senate.

Mr. BURROWS. I should like to hear it again read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be read as it has been amended.

The Secretary read the bill as amended, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 13 of an act entitled "An act to carry into effect the stipulations of article 7 of the treaty between the United States and Spain concluded on the 10th day of December, 1898," approved March 2, 1901, be amended so that the same will read as follows:

"SEC. 13. That the Commission may, as to any question of law arising upon the facts in any case before them, state the facts and the question of law so arising and certify the same to the Supreme Court of the United States for its decision, and said court shall have jurisdiction to consider and decide the same. In any case heretofore finally determined and decided, or that may hereafter be finally determined and decided, by the Commission created by this act, it shall be competent for the Supreme Court to require, by certiorari, any such case to be certified to the Supreme Court for its review and determination. But such application to the Supreme Court for the writ of certiorari in any such case heretofore decided shall be made within one year from the passage of this act, and in any such case hereafter decided within one year after the final decision of the aforesaid Commission therein: Provided, That the foregoing provisions shall not apply to any case brought, or to be hereafter filed, on account of personal injury or death sustained by reason of the destruction of the battle ship Maine, but that in all such cases, including those heretofore passed on by said Commission, the Commission, except to show the extent of the injuries received, shall not allow or require any testimony other than such as may be deemed necessary to show that the plaintiffs are the parties injured, or their next of kin or legal representatives, and shall make awards as in other cases of such amounts as will in equity and justice compensate the petitioners, such awards to exceed in no case the sum of $4,000; and all claims in favor of officers, sailors, or marines of the United States Navy, growing out of the destruction of said battle ship, not heretofore filed, may be filed with said Commission within six months from the passage of this act, and if not so filed shall be forever barred."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT GREAT FALLS, MONT.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives, returning to the Senate, in compliance with its request, the bill (S. 544) to provide for the purchase of a site for a public building in the city of Great Falls, Mont.

Mr. CARTER. I ask that the motion heretofore entered by my colleague [Mr. CLARK of Montana] to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed be submitted to the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion heretofore submitted by the Senator from Montana [Mr. CLARK] to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CARTER. I move that the bill be referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

The motion was agreed to.

DISTRICT STREET RAILWAYS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 6147) authorizing changes in certain street railway tracks within the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

Mr. GALLINGER. I ask, Mr. President, that the amendments reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia may now be stated.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendments reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia will be stated.

The first amendment was, in section 1, on page 1, after the word "avenue," at the end of line 6, to insert "with such northerly deviation as may be necessary to bring the tracks immediately in front of and adjacent to the main entrance to the Union Station;" so as to make the section read:

That the City and Suburban Railway, of Washington, be, and it hereby is, authorized and required to construct a double-track extension of its lines from New Jersey avenue and G street NW. eastwardly to and along Massachusetts avenue with such northerly deviation as may be necessary to bring the tracks immediately in front of and adjacent to the main entrance to the Union Station to junctions with the existing tracks at Third and D streets NE. and at the northwest corner Stanton square; also to extend its double tracks on North Capitol street southwardly from the intersection of G street to Massachusetts avenue to connect with the tracks of the City and Suburban Railway hereinbefore authorized; also to construct a double-track extension, beginning at the intersection of East Capitol street and First street east, south on First street east to E street south, to the now existing tracks of the Anacostia and Potomac River Railroad Company at E street.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, on page 2, line 14, after the word "authorized," to insert "also a double-track loop on the Union Station plaza connecting with the four tracks provided for in section 6;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 2. That the Washington Railway and Electric Company be, and it hereby is, authorized and required to construct a double-track extension of its line from Delaware avenue and C street northeastwardly along Delaware avenue to Massachusetts avenue, there to connect with the tracks of the City and Suburban Railway, of Washington, hereinbefore authorized; also a double-track loop on the Union Station plaza connecting with the four tracks provided for in section 6.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 3, on page 2, line 22, after the words "Union Station," to strike out "thence across said plaza to Massachusetts avenue" and insert "together with a double-track loop passing in front of the station on said plaza;" and on page 3, line 5, after the words "Florida avenue," to insert "also a double-track extension for connecting its lines from First and B streets northeast southerly along First street to B street southeast;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 3. That the Capital Traction Company of the District of Columbia be, and it hereby is, authorized and required to construct a double-track extension of its lines from C street and Delaware avenue northeast northeasterly along Delaware avenue to the plaza in front of the proposed Union Station, together with a double-track loop passing in front of the station on said plaza, and northwestwardly along Massachusetts avenue to New Jersey avenue, and thence along New Jersey avenue to Florida avenue; thence along Florida avenue to a junction with its present tracks at Seventh street and Florida avenue northwest; also a double-track extension of its line beginning at Seventh and T streets northwest; thence eastwardly along T street to its intersection with Florida avenue; also a double-track extension for connecting its lines from First and B streets northeast southerly along First street to B street southeast.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 5, on page 3, line 16, before the word "years," to strike out "three" and insert "two;" and in line 20, after the word "determine," to strike out "All work to be done in accordance with plans acceptable to and approved by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia;" so as to make the section read:

SEC. 5. That the construction of the aforesaid street-railway lines shall be commenced within one year and completed within two years from the date of the passage of this act; and in default of such commencement or completion within the time in this section specified, all rights, franchises, and privileges granted by this act shall immediately cease and determine.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 6, on page 4, line 6, before the word "tracks," to insert the word "double;" so as to read:

Provided, That there shall be at least two sets of double tracks immediately in front of the main entrance to the Union Station facing Massachusetts avenue, the most northerly rail being not more than 50 feet south of the said main entrance.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, to strike out section 8, as follows:

SEC. 8. That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 4, line 17, to insert as a new section the following:

SEC. 8. That authority is hereby given the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to use such portions of reservation 77 as may in their judgment be necessary for sidewalks and roadways and for street railway use. And authority is hereby given the Commissioners to acquire by purchase or to condemn in accordance with existing law for street purposes so much of square 626 lying north of the north building line of square 567 extended as they may deem necessary, and the cost of acquiring said property as above shall be paid equally by the Capital Traction Company and the City and Suburban Railway Company: Provided, That where a portion of any lot is authorized to be acquired as above the said Commissioners may, in their discretion, acquire the entire lot; the portion thereof, when so acquired, lying south of the north building line of square 567 extended to become the joint property of the said City and Suburban Railway Company and the said Capital Traction Company so soon as the entire cost of acquisition as above specified shall be paid by them.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I wish to say, Mr. President, that that is rather a remarkable amendment. It authorizes the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to acquire property by condemnation, and then turns it over to the corporations. My attention had not been called to the amendment until I heard it read. It seems to me to be rather a strange procedure. I may be wrong about it, but I call the attention of the lawyers of the Senate to the provision.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let the question be taken, Mr. President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee, which has been stated.

Mr. SCOTT. Has the amendment been printed?

Mr. GALLINGER. It is in the bill, I will say to the Senator from West Virginia, and if he will examine the bill he will find it there.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I reserve the right to call attention to this amendment later, after the bill shall have been reported to the Senate.

The next amendment reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia was, on page 5, after line 12, to insert as a new section the following:

SEC. 9. That any and all of the said companies are hereby authorized to construct temporary tracks on plans and along such streets as may be approved by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia from the new Union Station to the intersection of C street with Delaware avenue or North Capitol street, and to operate cars thereon by overhead trolley pending the construction of the permanent tracks herein authorized, said temporary tracks to be removed on the completion of said permanent tracks.

Mr. SCOTT. I ask the Senator from New Hampshire if there ought not to be a time limit on the use of overhead trolleys? It might so happen that the street railways would use that system for years.

Mr. GALLINGER. The time limit for completing these extensions is two years, and the presumption is that they will be completed in a fraction of that time; but, in the event of the permanent improvements not being made, it is manifest that there ought to be an allowance for this little spur to accommodate the traveling public. It will not be kept there any longer than it is absolutely necessary, I assure the Senator.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia was, on page 5, after line 21, to insert as a new section the following:

SEC. 10. That whenever, in the construction of the new tracks herein authorized, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia deem it necessary, in order to reasonably accommodate vehicular traffic, to widen the roadway of any street or streets in which such track or tracks are to be laid the cost and expense of such widening, including the laying of the new sidewalks, the adjustment of all underground construction, and of every public appurtenance, shall be borne by the said railway company, and the said railway company shall deposit with the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia the estimated cost of changing and widening the said street or streets, the work to be done by said Commissioners; and whenever, at any future time, the said Commissioners deem it necessary to widen the roadway of any street or streets occupied by the extensions herein authorized said railway company shall bear one-half the cost of widening and improving such street or streets, to be collected in the same manner as the cost of laying or repairing pavement lying between the exterior rails of the tracks of said street railroad and for a distance of 2 feet exterior to such track or tracks is collectible under the provisions of section 5 of an act entitled "An act to provide a permanent form of government for the District of Columbia," approved June 11, 1878.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 6, after line 20, to insert as a new section the following:

SEC. 11. That whenever in the construction of any of the tracks herein authorized it is necessary, in the opinion of the Commissioners, to improve, by paving or otherwise, the roadway of any street occupied by such track or tracks, said company shall adjust the grade of its tracks to the new grade of the street or streets, the cost thereof to be borne by said company in the same manner as the cost of paving between the exterior of the tracks of the street railroad companies, as referred to in the preceding section.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 7, after line 4, to insert as a new section the following:

SEC. 12. That the arrangement of all tracks herein authorized within the lines of the plaza in front of the Union Railroad Station shall be in accordance with the plans approved by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, and all work of constructing the extensions herein authorized shall be executed in accordance with plans to be approved by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, and under a permit or permits by the said Commissioners.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 7, after line 12, to insert as a new section the following:

SEC. 13. That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I ask the Senator from New Hampshire whether that completes the committee amendments?

Mr. GALLINGER. It does, I will say to the Senator.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk, to be added as a new section.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 7, after line 12, it is proposed to insert as a new section the following:

SEC. 13. That every railway company now authorized by law, or which may hereafter be authorized by law, to operate cars on any of the streets, avenues, or highways of the District of Columbia, and all other public-service corporations of said District, including the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company, Potomac Electric Lighting and Power Company, the Washington Gaslight Company, and the Georgetown Gaslight Company, shall annually pay to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia, as a franchise tax, in addition to the taxes now imposed upon them by law, an amount equal to 12 per cent of their respective net earnings, which said net earnings shall be ascertained by deducting from their respective gross receipts from all sources only the current repairs and expenses for the same year, excluding interest, dividends, sinking fund, cost of betterments, extensions, and enlargement of plant: Provided, That on or before the 1st day of August, 1906, the board of assessors of the District of Columbia are hereby authorized and directed to appraise and assess the personal property of all such public-service corporations, and in making such appraisement the said board shall appraise the value of the franchises of each of said companies and include the same in the said personal property appraisement: Provided further, That any of such corporations as may elect so to do may pay to the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia an amount equal to 1½ per cent of said appraised value, as now provided for by law for general taxation of personal property in said District, which shall be in lieu of the 12 per cent per annum tax on net incomes, as above provided, and of the gross earnings tax now provided by law: And provided further, That the real estate of all said street railway companies in the District of Columbia shall be taxed as other real estate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from North Dakota. [Putting the question.] By the sound the "ayes" have it.

Mr. GALLINGER. I ask that the question be again put, Mr. President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will again put the question. [Putting the question.] By the sound the "noes" have it.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I ask for a division.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let us have the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. WARREN. Am I too late to ask that the amendment be again read?

Mr. GALLINGER. I will let the Senator read it, if he wishes.

Mr. TILLMAN. Other Senators would like to hear it, if the Senator please.

Mr. GALLINGER. Very well; let it be read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be again read.

The SECRETARY. On page 7, after line 12, it is proposed to add as a new section the following——

Mr. SCOTT. I suggest the absence of a quorum. If the amendment is to be again read, I think it would be well for the Senate to hear it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The absence of a quorum being suggested, the Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names.

Allee	Culberson	Hopkins	Perkins
Ankeny	Cullom	Kean	Piles
Benson	Daniel	Kittredge	Rayner
Berry	Dick	La Follette	Scott
Beveridge	Dolliver	Lodge	Smoot
Blackburn	Flint	Long	Stone
Brandegee	Foraker	McCumber	Sutherland
Bulkeley	Frazier	McLaurin	Taliaferro
Burkett	Fulton	Mallory	Tillman
Burnham	Gallinger	Martin	Warren
Burrows	Gamble	Morgan	Whyte
Carter	Hansbrough	Patterson

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Forty-seven Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The Secretary will again read the amendment proposed by the Senator from North Dakota.

The Secretary again read Mr. HANSBROUGH'S amendment.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Mr. President, I had supposed that most of the members of the Senate understood the purport of this amendment, because the matter was up in the Senate some three or four weeks ago and was debated at some length. The bill was subsequently recommitted to the Committee on the District of Columbia on the request of the chairman, for the reason that it appeared that the managers of the public-service corporations of the District desired to be heard on the question of taxation. The bill remained in the committee for some weeks, but was finally reported out, or at least that portion which has been read this morning was reported out.

The amendment which I have proposed, Mr. President, provides for a tax of 12 per cent on the net earnings of the public-service corporations in the District of Columbia. Twelve per cent upon the net earnings of these corporations it is believed will amount on an average to less than the percentage which is now paid by the private citizens of the District. With respect to those corporations that have net earnings, of course the tax will amount to more than they now pay; with respect to those that have no net earnings, they will pay no additional taxes. It is a sort of automatic system, and, in my judgment, the only equitable system of taxation.

Mr. President, it is not proposed to visit any hardship upon these corporations. I think that I am justified in saying that they pay less taxes in the District of Columbia than in any other place in the United States. In my own State of North Dakota I think the taxes are from 4 to 5 per cent. Here in the District of Columbia the rate is 1½ per cent, and the public-service corporations here pay less than 1 per cent.

There is a proviso in this amendment under which, if the public-service corporations should be obliged to pay more than the rate paid by the private citizens, to wit, 1½ per cent, then these corporations may take advantage of the private citizen's rate and pay that rate, instead of 12 per cent on their net earnings; so that there can be no hardship whatever inflicted upon any of these corporations. It can not be said, because it can not be maintained, that they will be required to pay more than the private citizen. If any one can convince me, or convince the Senate, that these corporations should not pay as great a tax as the private citizen, then I have no more to say, but I have never yet heard any satisfactory reason why they should not pay the rate paid by the private citizen.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. GALLINGER. I thought the Senator was through.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will wait until the Senator gets through.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. There is another proviso, Mr. President, to which I desire to call attention, and that is—

Provided, That on or before the 1st day of August, 1906, the board of assessors of the District of Columbia are hereby authorized and directed to appraise and assess the personal property of all such public service corporations, and in making such appraisement the said board shall appraise the value of the franchises of each of said companies and include the same in the said personal property appraisement.

That provision is for the purpose of enabling the proper District officials to arrive at an equitable basis upon which these corporations may be taxed. I have figured out—and I call the attention of the Senate to the figures—as to what would happen under such an adjustment. We find from the returns made by the street-railway corporations that their total funded debt and capitalization amount to $49,489,000. We will suppose that the board of assessors should conclude to assess their property at two-thirds of the funded debt and capitalization, then, in such case, they would pay 1.1 per cent. In other words, if the street-railway corporations should pay on two-thirds of their funded debt and capitalization, they would pay 11 mills, against 15 mills which the private citizen is now paying. So that, Mr. President, under no condition that I can conceive of can it be said that the corporations would be required to pay more than the private citizen, and in order that they may not be required to pay more I have put in the proviso to which I called attention a while ago, to the effect that if they preferred to pay the private-citizen rate rather than the special rate under the gross receipts and net earnings system, then they may elect to pay 1½ per cent, the same as the private citizen pays.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, this matter was discussed at considerable length some time ago, and I do not think we need to occupy much time in discussing it to-day.

The bill that is under consideration is a bill providing for the extension of the existing railway lines to the Union Station, which station will, under the law, be open to the public in a little over a year, and it is the intention to have it open, partially at least, at a considerably earlier period. It is very necessary that when it is opened the traveling public coming to Washington should have an opportunity to get to the various parts of the city on the rapid-transit cars, and the only purpose of this bill is to give the traveling public that opportunity.

The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH] proposes to complicate this matter by adding to it a scheme of taxation, revolutionizing the existing scheme of taxation, which was worked out a few years ago with great care and particularity. I do not know whether——

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Will the Senator allow me?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Hampshire yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. GALLINGER. Oh, yes.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Mr. President, the Senator will not undertake to leave the impression upon the Senate that a scheme of taxation was worked out two years ago?

Mr. GALLINGER. I did not say two years ago.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Or within recent years, which affects these corporations.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, it is not necessary for the Senator to correct me. I know what I am talking about.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Will the Senator allow me?

Mr. GALLINGER. I was one of those who worked it out.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. The Senator does not care to have me make a statement. I will make it in my own time.

Mr. GALLINGER. That is the Senator's privilege.

Now, Mr. President, I do not know whether or not it is desirable to go into this matter of taxation in the District of Columbia. The Senator from North Dakota not only proposes on a bill which is intended to provide means to get the street railroads to the new station to adopt a different system of taxing the railroads of the District, but of the electric light company, the telephone company, and the gas company of the District as well.

I remember that a few weeks ago, when the shipping bill was before the Senate, we proposed to increase the tonnage taxes so as to make foreign vessels pay a larger revenue than they are paying now, and this Chamber thundered with denunciations of that method of providing taxation, saying it was a function which belonged to the House of Representatives primarily, and I withdrew that section of the bill because of the opposition that developed. I will suggest to the Senator from North Dakota that possibly it would be well for him to inquire whether or not we can constitutionally proceed to increase this taxation primarily in this body.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I have not any doubt about it.

Mr. GALLINGER. Well, very distinguished lawyers had doubt about it when it related to the shipping bill, and it is equally applicable to this bill.

Now, Mr. President, as to the question of the taxation of the street railroad companies of Washington, the fact is that they pay 5.54 per cent on their gross receipts in taxes. Now, let us look at the other States. The Senator's State does not appear in the list, because I believe there are only three and a half miles of street railway in North Dakota. Of course, it is a new State. I find that Maryland, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Kentucky, Missouri, Connecticut, Illinois, and New York pay a little higher tax than is paid in the District of Columbia, while the Territories and all the remaining States pay a much less tax. While the District of Columbia pays a tax of 5.54, Alabama pays 2.47; Arkansas, 1.94; California, 4.97; Colorado, 2.42; New Hampshire, 1.29, and so on, the average of all the States being less than that paid by the District of Columbia. I will put the entire list in the RECORD.

So while it may be wise to increase the taxes upon these corporations and other corporations of the District, it is a matter that ought to be examined into with great care, and it ought not to be done in the haphazard way which the Senator from North Dakota proposes in his amendment.

Above all, Mr. President, it does seem to me bordering on the ridiculous to attempt to regulate taxation on electric-light companies and gas-light companies and telephone companies in a bill which proposes to extend the lines of existing street railway companies to the new Union Station.

Of course, if the Senator desires to defeat the bill which is under consideration, no one can find fault with the method he is adopting, because it would, in the nature of things, defeat the purpose that I have in view.

I feel, Mr. President, as chairman of the Committee on the District of Columbia, that I have a responsibility resting upon me in regard to this matter. I should be glad to be relieved of that responsibility; but I apprehend that I would be very severely criticised if I did not make every exertion in my power to secure these extensions before the great Union Station is opened to the general public.

It will be remembered that these street railway corporations will not get a single passenger more because they go to the Union Station than they get now in going to the two stations. This bill requires those companies to expend about $900,000 to make those extensions. Now, is it a reasonable thing, is it a just thing, is it a proper thing for us under those circumstances to undertake to load down this legislation with propositions such as the Senator from North Dakota has injected into the discussion?

Mr. President, I think I have said all I care to say, and I move to lay the amendment on the table.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Mr. President, I hope the Senator will not take that method of procedure until——

Mr. GALLINGER. The matter has been discussed heretofore, Mr. President, and I move to lay the amendment on the table.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President, I will say——

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I do not think the Senator will shut off discussion by this means.

Mr. PATTERSON. I think that is rather snap judgment. I hope the Senator from New Hampshire will not make the motion; at least not at this time.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator from Colorado discussed this very question for more than an hour the other day.

Mr. PATTERSON. Not on this bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The motion to lay on the table is not debatable.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, I rise to ask a question. When I suggested the absence of a quorum, was not the Secretary in the act of calling the roll on this amendment?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The roll call had not been begun.

Mr. PATTERSON. I hope the Senator from New Hampshire will withhold his motion.

Mr. GALLINGER. I withhold it for a little time, but I shall renew it in the near future.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I ask the Senator from Colorado to yield to me just a moment.

Mr. PATTERSON. Certainly.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I simply desire to make a brief statement in regard to the taxes paid by street railway companies elsewhere. I wish to call the attention of the Senate briefly to a pamphlet published by the New England Society of Orange, N. J., entitled "Street Railway and Municipal Franchises." It is a most interesting document. I find in that document, under the heading of "Toronto," a statement to the effect that the street railway companies of Toronto, Canada, upon $1,000,000 gross receipts per year pay 8 per cent. Here in the District of Columbia they pay 4 per cent on $3,300,000.

Mr. GALLINGER. What road was that?

Mr. HANSBROUGH. In Toronto, Canada. On gross receipts amounting to $1,000,000 per year they pay 8 per cent, on gross receipts amounting to $1,500,000 they pay 10 per cent, on gross receipts amounting to $2,000,000 per year they pay 12 per cent, amounting to $3,000,000 per year they pay 15 per cent, and amounting to upward of $3,000,000 per year they pay 20 per cent. In the District of Columbia the gross receipts of the street railways last year were about $3,300,000, and they paid 4 per cent as against 20 per cent in Toronto, Canada.

Now, Mr. President, if the Senator from Colorado will indulge me a moment, the Senator from New Hampshire thought that this amendment would result in the defeat of this measure, or in preventing the measure from becoming a law. I think it will facilitate the passage of the bill, because I have no earthly objection to the street railways going into the Union Station. Indeed, they ought to be allowed to go in there. But I think that this taxation amendment and one other amendment which I intend to propose would greatly facilitate the passage of the bill. I do not know who would help to defeat the bill if these amendments were put on unless it is the public service corporations themselves. I do not think that any Senator or any Member of the House can be so deeply interested in preventing these corporations from paying their just share of taxes as to defeat the bill because we have put the tax amendment upon it.

Mr. PATTERSON addressed the Senate. After having spoken for fifteen minutes,

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which will be stated by the Secretary.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 6191) to provide for the construction of a sea-level canal connecting the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, and the method of construction.

Mr. KNOX rose.

Mr. GALLINGER. Will the Senator from Pennsylvania kindly yield to me for a moment?

Mr. KNOX. Certainly.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will ask unanimous consent that when the debate upon the unfinished business closes to-day the District street railway bill may be further considered.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from New Hampshire asks unanimous consent that when the debate upon the unfinished business closes on to-day the consideration of the bill which has been before the Senate in the morning hour shall be resumed. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. GALLINGER. Now, will the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to me for just one moment further?

Mr. KNOX. Certainly.

Mr. GALLINGER. I desire to state in a very few words that while the taxes on the railway corporations of the District of Columbia are larger than the average tax in the several States and three times as much as in some States, it should be taken into consideration that we have an underground system here, which costs more than twice the cost of the overhead trolley; that we reserve ducts for the District of Columbia and the Government, which is a reservation of great value to the District and to the Government, and that we compel the railways to sell six tickets for 25 cents, instead of getting a straight 5-cent fare, as is given in almost every city of the country. I will add that if these street railways were permitted to collect a 5-cent fare there would be no controversy over the question of taxation, even though it might be very inequitable and unjust.

Mr. President, in addition I desire to put in the RECORD and to have printed as a document some statistics that I have here relating to the taxation of public-utility corporations in the District of Columbia and the several States.

There being no objection, the paper was ordered to be printed as a document and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Statement showing percentage of taxes to gross receipts paid by street-railway companies in the District of Columbia for the year 1905, compiled from Report No. 3792, to accompany Senate bill No. 43.

	Gross receipts, 1905.	Taxes for year 1905.	Per cent.
Washington Rwy. and Electrical Co. and subsidiary railway companies	$1,810,744.33	$104,795.99	5.79
Capital Traction Co	1,500,956.59	79,001.06	5.26
Washington, Alexandria and Mount Vernon Rwy	28,297.59	1,131.90	4.00
Total	3,339,998.51	184,928.95	5.54

JUNE 6, 1906.

Statement showing percentage of taxes to gross receipts payable by street-railway companies in the District of Columbia for the year 1905 under proposed law imposing additional tax of 12 per cent on net earnings, compiled from Report No. 3792, to accompany Senate bill No. 43.

	Gross receipts, 1905.	Taxes for year 1905.	Per cent.
Washington Rwy. and Electric Co. and subsidiary railway companies	$1,810,744.33	$222,019.61	12.26
Capital Traction Co	1,500,956.59	196,630.37	13.10
Washington, Alexandria and Mount Vernon Rwy	28,297.59	a1,131.90	4.00
Total	3,339,998.51	419,781.88	12.57

a Does not include 12 per cent tax on net earnings.

JUNE 7, 1906.

List of States in which the percentage of taxes to gross receipts is higher than in the District of Columbia.

	Per cent.
Maryland	8.21
Louisiana	6.88
Massachusetts	6.81
Pennsylvania	6.08
Tennessee	6.08
Kentucky	6.06
Missouri	6.06
Connecticut	6.00
Illinois	5.94
New York	5.63

List of States in which the percentage of taxes to gross income is lower than in the District of Columbia.

	Per cent.
Arizona, District of Columbia, Idaho, and New Mexico combined	5.34
New Jersey	5.28
California	4.97
Indiana	4.86
Rhode Island	4.75
Georgia	4.67
Wisconsin	3.82
Ohio	3.62
Minnesota	3.52
Michigan	3.50
South Carolina	3.23
Washington	3.08
Utah	2.85
Montana	2.84
Virginia	2.81
Delaware	2.79
West Virginia	2.54
Alabama	2.47
Nebraska	2.46
North Carolina	2.44
Colorado	2.42
Texas	2.37
Florida	2.35
Kansas	2.27
Iowa	2.25
Arkansas	1.94
Maine	1.89
Vermont	1.78
Mississippi	1.74
Oregon	1.69
New Hampshire	1.29

JUNE 6, 1906.

Statement showing percentage of taxes to gross receipts for street and interurban railways in the United States, compiled from Special Report of the Census Office on Street and Electric Railways, 1902.

State.	Gross income.	Total taxes.	Percentage of taxes to gross income.
Alabama	$1,497,351	$37,047	2.47
Arkansas	371,560	7,213	1.94
California	9,967,838	495,179	4.97
Colorado	2,227,760	78,264	2.42
Connecticut	4,355,775	261,445	6.00
Delaware	500,559	13,973	2.79
Florida	529,743	12,439	2.35
Georgia	2,375,224	110,846	4.67
Illinois	25,020,257	1,488,359	5.94
Indiana	3,813,076	185,014	4.86
Iowa	2,403,834	54,115	2.25
Kansas	370,481	8,401	2.27
Kentucky	2,933,800	177,775	6.06

Statement showing percentage of taxes to gross receipts for street and interurban railways in the United States, etc.—Continued.

State.	Gross income.	Total taxes.	Percentage of taxes to gross income.
Louisiana	$2,910,244	$200,156	6.88
Maine	1,571,582	29,704	1.89
Maryland	4,868,627	402,223	8.21
Massachusetts	23,633,410	1,610,341	6.81
Michigan	6,521,173	228,538	3.50
Minnesota	3,727,648	131,128	3.52
Mississippi	258,654	4,501	1.74
Missouri	10,734,692	646,682	6.06
Montana	492,023	13,975	2.84
Nebraska	1,148,994	28,252	2.46
New Hampshire	604,131	7,822	1.29
New Jersey	8,176,923	431,912	5.28
New York	60,881,780	3,428,461	5.63
North Carolina	442,467	10,791	2.44
Ohio	16,590,851	601,142	3.62
Oregon	1,042,895	17,622	1.69
Pennsylvania	30,357,727	1,844,880	6.08
Rhode Island	2,964,260	140,814	4.75
South Carolina	653,736	21,109	3.23
Tennessee	1,866,835	113,573	6.08
Texas	1,547,846	36,919	2.37
Utah	586,611	16,702	2.85
Vermont	249,228	4,427	1.78
Virginia	1,667,022	46,845	2.81
Washington	2,542,906	78,239	3.08
West Virginia	1,102,171	28,030	2.54
Wisconsin	3,923,884	150,059	3.82
All other States and Territories	3,021,063	161,418	5.34
All States	250,504,627	13,366,335	5.34

NOTE.—Gross income is the sum of gross earnings from operation (Table No. 37) and income from other sources (Table No. 37). Total taxes is the sum of taxes, operating companies (Table No. 38) and taxes, nonoperating companies (Table No. 39).

JUNE 5, 1906.

Statement showing percentage of taxes to gross receipts for electric-lighting companies in the United States, compiled from Special Report of the Census Office on Central Electric Light and Power Stations, 1902.

State.	Gross income.	Total taxes.	Percentage of taxes to gross income.
Alabama	$340,289	$6,970	2.05
Arizona	298,066	6,344	2.16
Arkansas	382,278	6,350	1.66
California	4,937,444	124,284	2.52
Colorado	1,646,979	70,765	4.30
Connecticut	1,273,613	26,099	2.05
Florida	191,637	4,206	2.19
Georgia	225,795	6,261	2.77
Idaho	186,554	5,045	2.70
Illinois	5,578,012	152,076	2.73
Indiana	1,604,099	55,425	3.46
Indian Territory	94,346	1,115	1.18
Iowa	1,297,589	29,614	2.28
Kansas	588,138	16,997	2.89
Kentucky	787,700	17,040	2.16
Louisiana	894,240	35,355	3.95
Maine	678,250	18,402	2.71
Maryland	928,062	26,477	2.85
Massachusetts	6,070,643	296,444	4.88
Michigan	1,855,714	54,580	2.94
Minnesota	1,448,084	40,991	2.83
Mississippi	245,788	5,762	2.34
Missouri	2,121,604	79,161	3.73
Montana	1,009,763	28,996	2.87
Nebraska	540,859	16,322	3.02
Nevada	44,549	1,550	3.48
New Hampshire	829,072	23,621	2.85
New Jersey	3,378,651	121,131	3.58
New Mexico	135,307	2,787	2.06
New York	16,631,802	719,669	4.33
North Carolina	154,407	3,112	2.02
North Dakota	143,205	4,157	2.90
Ohio	3,729,339	99,936	2.68
Oklahoma	171,179	2,250	1.31
Oregon	670,262	20,080	2.99
Pennsylvania	9,057,503	294,181	3.25
Rhode Island	1,017,630	56,675	5.57
South Carolina	338,219	8,018	2.37
South Dakota	179,114	4,073	2.27
Tennessee	828,189	26,420	3.19
Texas	1,957,568	37,607	1.95
Utah	711,483	18,882	2.65
Vermont	433,392	8,392	1.94
Virginia	154,806	2,873	1.86
Washington	635,443	14,596	2.29
West Virginia	265,276	4,607	1.74
Wisconsin	1,166,533	34,515	2.96
Wyoming	159,216	3,439	2.17
All other States	722,809	11,263	1.56
All States	78,735,500	2,654,885	3.37

NOTE.—Gross income is from Table No. 67, and total taxes is from Table No. 72.

Statement showing percentage of taxes to gross receipts paid by electric lighting companies within the District of Columbia for the year 1905, compiled from Report No. 3792, to accompany Senate bill No. 43.

Potomac Electric Power Company:

Gross receipts, 1905	$663,558.83
Taxes for year 1905	$34,590.92
Per cent	5.21

Statement showing percentage of taxes to gross receipts payable by electric lighting companies within the District of Columbia for the year 1905 under proposed law imposing additional tax of 12 per cent on net earnings, compiled from Report No. 3792, to accompany Senate bill No. 43.

Potomac Electric Power Company:

Gross receipts, 1905	$663,558.83
Taxes for year 1905	$93,759.78
Per cent	14.1

JUNE 8, 1906.

Mr. GALLINGER. I thank the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. PATTERSON. I will simply say that I will notice what the Senator from New Hampshire has said when the debate on this bill may be resumed.

Mr. BURNHAM. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. KNOX. I do.

Mr. BURNHAM. Just a moment. I desire to give notice that I shall call up the Alaska railroad bill at the conclusion of the consideration of the District railway bill, and I ask unanimous consent that the Senate will agree at that time to consider the Alaska bill, of which I gave notice yesterday evening.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from New Hampshire asks unanimous consent that the Alaska railway bill be taken up for consideration after the bill reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia that has been under consideration shall have been disposed of.

Mr. BERRY. I object.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

Mr. BURNHAM. I shall ask unanimous consent, and I shall ask for a vote of the Senate on proceeding to the consideration of the bill notwithstanding the objection.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bill and joint resolution:

S. 1649. An act providing for the retirement of petty officers and enlisted men of the Navy; and

S. R. 66. Joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to receive for instruction at the Military Academy at West Point, Mr. José Martin Calvo, of Costa Rica.

The message also announced that the House had disagreed to certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 18537) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, agrees to the amendment of the Senate numbered 29, with an amendment, asks a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. WADSWORTH, Mr. SCOTT, and Mr. LAMB managers at the conference on the part of the House.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

S. 4184. An act to ratify, approve, and confirm an act duly enacted by the legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, to authorize and provide for the construction, maintenance, and operation of a telephone system on the island of Oahu, Territory of Hawaii; and

H. R. 10292. An act granting to the town of Mancos, Colo., the right to enter certain lands.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 18537) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, agreeing to amendment No. 29 with an amendment, and requesting a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

Mr. PROCTOR. In view of the importance of one amendment made by the House, I ask that the bill lie upon the table, and that the amendment of the House to Senate amendment numbered 29, which is in the nature of a substitute and is quite lengthy, be printed.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request made by the Senator from Vermont? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

PANAMA CANAL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 6191) to provide for the construction of a sea-level canal connecting the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, and the method of construction.

Mr. KNOX. Mr. President, if it were not for what I regard as a real obligation upon my part to myself, to the Senate, and to the gentlemen upon the Committee on Interoceanic Canals, with whom I am in accord upon the subject of the type of the proposed canal, I would not feel justified in taking the time of the Senate this afternoon. But I do feel that I owe it to myself, to the Senate, and to my associates upon that committee to state the reasons which have led me to the conclusion that the lock type of canal, as recommended by the minority of the Board of Consulting Engineers, is the most practicable, useful, and cheapest canal that the Government can construct.

Mr. President, in June, 1902, the Congress of the United States passed an act, commonly known as the "Spooner Act," providing for the connection of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans by means of a canal at the Isthmus of Panama. A more comprehensive and yet concise piece of legislation it has not been my fortune to inspect. The authority conferred upon the President of the United States is found in very brief paragraphs and it is plain and simple and easily understood. After providing that the President of the United States shall, if he finds that he will be able to obtain a good title therefor, purchase from the Panama Canal Company all of its property upon the Isthmus of Panama, all its stock in the Panama Railway Company, and all its archives in the city of Paris, the act provides as I shall read, and it is the execution of this act that the President is now engaged in, and it is the manner of the execution of this act which we are now considering. The act provides that—

> The President shall then, through the Isthmian Canal Commission hereinafter authorized, cause to be excavated, constructed, and completed, utilizing to that end, as far as practicable, the work heretofore done by the New Panama Canal Company, of France, and its predecessor company, a ship canal from the Caribbean Sea to the Pacific Ocean. Such canal—> shall be of sufficient capacity and depth as shall afford convenient passage for vessels of the largest tonnage and greatest draft now in use, and such as may be reasonably anticipated, and shall be supplied with all necessary locks and other appliances to meet the necessities of vessels passing through the same from ocean to ocean.

The act provides—

So, Mr. President, if the Congress of the United States is of the same mind that it was in June, 1902, the thing that it desired is that the President of the United States shall proceed to the execution of this act by constructing a canal which shall be of sufficient capacity and depth to afford convenient passage for the largest vessels now in use and those which can be reasonably anticipated.

For the execution of this work the Congress made three separate and distinct appropriations in this act. The first is found in section 5. Section 5 provides:

> That the sum of $10,000,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, toward the project herein contemplated by either route so selected.

Further in section 5 it is provided as follows:

> And the President is hereby authorized to cause to be entered into such contract or contracts as may be deemed necessary for the proper excavation, construction, completion, and defense of said canal, harbors, and defenses, * * * . Appropriations therefor shall from time to time be hereafter made, not to exceed in the aggregate the additional sum of $135,000,000 should the Panama route be adopted, or $180,000,000 should the Nicaragua route be adopted.

So, then, it was contemplated by Congress at the time of the passage of this act that the sum of $135,000,000, plus the sum of $10,000,000 appropriated in the first paragraph of section 5, which I have read, plus the sum of $40,000,000 which was appropriated for the purchase of the property of the New Panama Canal Company of France, that that total of $185,000,000 should secure that property and execute the work.

Mr. President, it is wholly unnecessary for me to recite to the Senate what has been done up to the present time. We are familiar with the fact that, on account of the agitation in the public press, the question arose as to the type of the canal, which seems to me to have been contemplated by the act to have been a lock canal, or such a canal as could have been built within the limits of the appropriation. But for the reason that I have pointed out, or for some other one equally good, the President of the United States convened not long since a board of consulting engineers, calling together the highest engineering talent of all the earth, and submitted to them the question as to whether or not, in their judgment, a lock canal should be constructed at Panama or a sea-level canal.

Mr. CLAY. I should like to ask the Senator a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SCOTT in the chair). Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. CLAY. If the Senator is clear that the act contemplated that a lock canal should be built and the President so understood and he was executing that act, why was it that the President summoned a board of engineers and held a consultation to ascertain whether he would build a sea-level canal or a lock canal?

Mr. KNOX. I have just endeavored to explain that to the Senator by saying that because of the public agitation as to the type of the canal the President deemed it wise to submit that question to Congress, which he did in a message transmitting the report of the Board of Engineers. As to my own personal judgment, from the language of the act of 1902, that "such canal shall be of sufficient capacity and depth as shall afford convenient passage," etc., "and shall be supplied with all necessary locks and other appliances," and that it shall be built within the sum of $135,000,000 plus $10,000,000, I think it contemplated clearly that a lock canal should be constructed.

However, it is not my purpose to discuss the provisions of the act, but to discuss this proposition as it finds itself now before the Congress of the United States.

Mr. TALIAFERRO. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. KNOX. Certainly.

Mr. TALIAFERRO. Would it interrupt the Senator from Pennsylvania if I should ask him to advise the Senate as to the views of the President on the type of the canal at the time he assembled the Board of Consulting Engineers?

Mr. KNOX. It would be wholly impossible for me to answer such a question as that.

Mr. TALIAFERRO. The President delivered a speech to the Board, which is contained in the report of the engineers and to which I thought the Senator from Pennsylvania might readily refer.

Mr. KNOX. The President's views were expressed to Congress in the message by which he transmitted the report of the Commission and the report of the Board of Consulting Engineers. Whether he had any views outside of that, of course I know not, and I do not regard it as material to anything I propose to discuss.

Mr. TALIAFERRO. I simply wanted to call the Senator's attention to the fact that the President of the United States in submitting this question to the Board of Consulting Engineers distinctly spoke in favor of a sea-level canal, if a sea-level canal were found to be feasible and practicable.

Mr. KNOX. That would be very persuasive evidence with me that the President of the United States had reached a view which was not conclusive. I am speaking of my own views upon the type of canal based upon diligent attention and the testimony of engineers and others who were called before our committee, and diligent study of the subject made since.

Mr. President, the fact is that the Board of Consulting Engineers disagreed. The majority of them reported in favor of a sea-level canal and a minority in favor of a lock canal. I have had drawn a map, which is upon the wall in this corner, to which I shall take occasion to refer, because from that map there will be seen at a glance the difference between the lock canal and the sea-level canal in that respect. It shows the difference between those two canals in respect to the ability of the one as against the other to accommodate the commerce which will pass across the Isthmus of Panama. At this point [indicating] it is proposed to construct the Gatun lock. The construction of the Gatun dam will gather the waters of the Chagres River and its tributaries, which flow through this portion of the country, into a lake which will extend from the dam at Gatun practically to Obispo, a distance of some 25 miles. The area of this lake is 110 square miles. I have had this map drawn, not for the purpose of showing the perimeter of that lake, but for the purpose of showing in blue only such portions of the lake as contain 45 feet of water, so that Senators by merely glancing at this map will observe the area of navigable waters of the depth of 45 feet. I would ask Senators to make a special note of what I say, that all they see before them in blue is navigable water 45 feet deep, and that the largest vessels that have ever been constructed can penetrate into those portions of this lake and find safe and navigable water of that depth.

As against this, Mr. President, if the eye will define this red line [indicating] drawn from the middle of the Gatun dam and following this line, it will see what is proposed as the sea-level canal, which at no place is to exceed 200 feet in width and at portions of it, I think about 15 miles, will be 150 feet in width.

So, Mr. President, if there is no difficulty in the way of constructing this dam at Gatun, there could hardly be any question as to which of these propositions would be the best for the accommodation of the commerce of the world—the blue space disclosing, as I have said, navigable water 45 feet deep, and this at 40 feet only 200 feet in width.

That brings me to the proposition which I propose to discuss, and practically the only one, except that I shall generalize on some practical features of the case: Is there any difficulty in constructing that canal which will give this great area of navigable water, and is there any difficulty in respect to the works that are proposed in connection with this project by the minority of the committee?

Mr. President, the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER], when the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. KITTREDGE] spoke on this subject, asked him a question which it seems to me can furnish a text or the key of the inquiries which I am making. Reading from page 7724 of the RECORD, the Senator from New Hampshire made the following inquiry:

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS] lays stress upon the depth it will be necessary to go to find rock foundations for these small dams. Am I correct, I will ask the Senator from South Dakota, in supposing that the enormous dam at Gatun that will be necessary if we have a lock canal, a mile and a half long, half a mile wide, and I have forgotten how high, will necessarily be built upon a mud foundation?

To which the Senator from South Dakota replied:

Mr. KITTREDGE. The Senator is absolutely correct, as I will later show.

Mr. President, it seems to me that this is the key of the whole situation; and as that is the key to the whole project, so is the accuracy of the answer of the Senator from South Dakota the key of the argument which I propose to make. Senators will observe that there was no qualification of this answer; Senators will observe that the answer was, "The Senator is absolutely correct."

Mr. President, in my deliberate judgment, the answer is not correct. The answer is correct in this sense, and in this sense alone: It depends altogether upon what Senators and what engineers may choose to call the substance upon which that proposed dam will rest. There is not any doubt as to what it is, borings having been made, but the only doubt is what it shall be called. Witnesses appeared before the committee who said it was mud; witnesses appeared before the committee who said it was indurated clay, and witnesses appeared before the committee who said it was rock. There are many things that we can learn from engineers; there are many things that we must accept from scientists; we must take a great deal in this world upon faith; but I contend that the question as to whether a given material is mud, indurated clay, or rock is a question that the Senate can decide for itself.

Mr. President, I will produce, for the inspection of such Senators as care to examine them, borings taken from different places along the site of this Gatun dam, and Senators may see for themselves whether these substances, which I hold in my hands, are rock, mud, or indurated clay.

Mr. KITTREDGE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. KNOX. Certainly.

Mr. KITTREDGE. Will the Senator tell us at what point beneath the proposed Gatun dam these borings were made?

Mr. KNOX. The number of the bore hole is plainly marked on the specimens.

Mr. KITTREDGE. And where located?

Mr. KNOX. Yes, sir; and where located.

The length of the proposed dam across the valley at Gatun——

Mr. KITTREDGE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. KNOX. Certainly.

Mr. KITTREDGE. Will the Senator kindly give the marks upon these borings?

Mr. KNOX. I will pass these specimens around, if the Senator from South Dakota does not mind, as I prefer to go on now with my remarks, and let Senators examine them for themselves.

Mr. KITTREDGE. Very well.

Mr. PATTERSON. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania intend to explain these specimens and under what headings they will come?

Mr. KNOX. Yes, sir; I will later on.

The length of the proposed dam across the valley at Gatun will be about 7,700 feet. The width, or thickness, at the top, 100 feet; at the top of water resting against it, 374 feet; at the bottom of the dam, 2,625 feet, or one-half mile. The extreme height of the dam will be 135 feet, or everywhere 50 feet higher than the water in the lake. The dam will contain about 22,000,000 cubic yards of material, principally clay, all put in by sluicing or hydraulic process, and will weigh about 30,000,000 tons. It will weigh sixty-three times as much as the entire pressure against it from the water in the lake.

The character of the foundation upon which this artificial mountain is to rest was determined by borings. The borings across the entire length of the dam site show that the rock comes everywhere nearly to the surface—excepting at two places, one about 1,000 feet in width, where the rock was found at varying depths, the greatest being 200 feet. In the other case, for a width of about 750 feet, rock was found at varying depths, the blanket of impervious clay and fine sand being not less than 200 feet in thickness. In the case of the latter depression, coarse sand and fine gravel, containing some water, were found in the extreme bottom for a thickness of from 50 to 58 feet.

It is not believed, as the result of careful experiments made by eminent hydraulic engineers during the last few years, that any artificial preparation of the foundation of this dam would be necessary other than to remove the top soil and alluvial material from the space to be occupied by the same, thus allowing it to rest directly on the heavy impervious strata of clay and fine sand lying on top of the rock. However, to place the matter entirely outside of the realm of speculation or criticism, it is proposed to put down a large number of additional drill holes, and then, if conditions would seem to indicate the slightest necessity for such precaution, to either drive steel sheet piling or to force down cement grout, probably the latter, to render any water-carrying material absolutely impervious, the cost of such possible work having been provided for in the estimate. Thus the foundation of the Gatun dam is clearly shown to be an impervious stratum of clay and fine sand, through which water will not penetrate, from 20 to 200 feet in thickness, resting everywhere on rock. It is not mud in any sense of the word.

I will insert in my remarks a table showing in the thirteen bore holes across the two depressions the situation as regards the presence of water. There were thirteen borings, and water flowed from only one of them at a depth of 32 feet. Of the other twelve it did not flow from six at any depth, and from the remaining six it flowed only at a much greater depth than 32 feet. There is not the slightest basis for the statement that at all depths below 32 feet the material is freely water bearing.

Number of bore hole.	Depth of bottom of hole below sea level.	Remarks.
16 86	−103	No water is reported to have flowed from pipe at any depth.
1915	−204	Do.
2081	−190	At 32 feet water flowed over top of casing and continued to −62 feet. Also flowed at −170 feet over top of casing.
22 40	−173	No water reported until a depth of −124 feet was reached, when water flowed over top of casing.
23 37	−180	No water reported until a depth of −72 feet was reached, when water flowed over top of casing.
27 30	−182	No water reported until a depth of −151 feet was reached, when water flowed over top of casing and continued to flow to 170 feet.
29 75	− 62	No water flowed from pipe at any depth.
31 50	− 53	Do.
32 92	− 57	Do.
50 58	−116	Do.
52 67	−218	At −41 feet water flowed over top of casing and continued to flow to −214 feet.
54 51	−260	No water reported until depth of −192 feet was reached, when water flowed over top of casing and continued to flow to −229 feet.
56 48	−197	No water reported until depth of −118 feet was reached, when water flowed slightly and continued to −131 feet.

It is proposed to construct this Gatun dam entirely by the hydraulic or water-sluicing process, the material taken largely from the prism of the canal, between the dam and Limon Bay, being largely clay with some fine sand. This material will be moved in barges up through the old French canal, and then handled by pumping plants directly into the dam. This process results in the solidest and most stable bank that can be made of earthen materials, and would become sedimentary rock were it subjected to heavy pressure. Owing to the excellent character of the material and to the process of depositing it in the work, the result will be an enormous mass, over sixty times as massive, as shown above, as any force that can be exerted against it, one that will be absolutely impervious to water, even with the pressure of the lake; and a dam which will be 50 feet higher than the water surface of the lake it will create.

The face or upstream side of the dam, as shown by the profile in blue, where the water rests against it will be riprapped or covered with large stones, to prevent any wave wash, and the extreme toe or lower wedge end at the downstream side will be made of large rock, to prevent any very improbable filtration of water from any source or cause from carrying away any portion of the material.

Careful investigations and experiments have been conducted which show that even if the entire section of the material in the foundations of this dam, in the two depressions spoken of above, were pervious to water—or, in other words, if water could percolate it—the result would be a total of water thus escaping of but 10 cubic feet per second—an entirely negligible quantity.

Mr. President, in my judgment, based upon the testimony which I have heard and the examinations which I have made, there can be no doubt as to the safe and entirely reliable character of the foundations of this dam; once built and in service. The only wonder will be why it was ever criticised. The whole structure will be as solid and eternal as the hills and mountains inclosing the Chagres Valley, and when the latter are destroyed, then, and only then, will the Gatun dam fail of its intended purpose.

Now, Mr. President, having described the physical features of the Gatun dam and the character of its foundation to show that it rests not upon mud throughout its entire length, but upon rock, let me direct the attention of Senators to the following quotation from the speech of the Senator from South Dakota on May 28, 1906. The Senator asserted that the majority of the Board of Consulting Engineers questioned the stability of the Gatun dam. He said (RECORD, p. 7731):

> The majority of the Board—eight to five—strenuously opposed the idea of a dam and locks at Gatun on two grounds: First, that the introduction of locks in the treatment of the question was objectionable from many points of view, and, second, that the maintenance of a summit level by means of an earth dam of immense magnitude to control the flood waters of this river introduces an element of great danger.

Mr. President, this statement is not supported by the report of the Board of Consulting Engineers, and I propose to show that even the majority of that Board did not question the stability of the Gatun dam.

Mr. Frederic P. Stearns testified before the Committee on Interoceanic Canals (page 1889) that it was at least six weeks after the first description of this dam was presented to the Board before any criticism was made unfavorable to the safety of the dam, and it was then made by only one member of the Board, who did not criticise it at all in detail, but stated that it was an engineering guess to which he would not subscribe his name.

In the testimony before the Committee on Interoceanic Canals Professor Burr, of the majority of the Board of Consulting Engineers, has testified as to the danger of such a dam, while Mr. Parsons, in oral testimony, and Mr. Hunter, in a letter, both of the majority, have expressed an opinion in favor of the stability of the dam.

Mr. President, permit me to read a portion of that testimony, Mr. Parsons being on the stand. I read from page 404:

> Senator TALIAFERRO. Have you taken up the question of the dams, Mr. Parsons?
> Mr. PARSONS. Not in any detail; no, sir.

I ask Senators to note that answer, because I shall refer to it later on in my argument. When asked if he had taken up the question of the dam, Mr. Parsons replied, "Not in detail; no, sir."

> Senator TALIAFERRO. Do you consider the dam as proposed by the minority at Gatun, is it not——
> Mr. PARSONS. At Gatun; yes.
> Senator TALIAFERRO (continuing). Do you consider that a safe dam?

To which Mr. Parsons replied:

> Mr. PARSONS (after a pause). Yes; I consider it as a safe dam. I do not particularly like a dam at that point, but I think that dam would stay. I would rather have a dam in which I knew the water of percolation to be cut off. You are going to get water percolating beneath that dam, and some questions are going to arise. Some of our friends think those questions are very very serious. I do not know that I quite go to the length that some of them do; but when you have a question mark opposite the key detail of your whole structure one naturally hesitates.

These matters of detail were conjectured by him, because he replied that he had not taken up the subject of the dam in detail. But in reply to that portion of the question which may be considered a general question as to the stability of the dam, he replied that he thought that that dam would be safe. Reading further from the testimony (p. 419):

> Senator KNOX. Right in that connection, because it is a part of the same subject, is there a sufficient amount of water, in your judgment, flowing through those channels to affect the stability of the dam?
> Mr. PARSONS. As I said yesterday, Senator, I believe that dam will be stable, even under those conditions. It is a dam that I would rather not build, but if it was the only way to build the Panama Canal I would build the dam that has been proposed by the minority. I do not believe in the arrangement of the dam, and the most objectionable feature is the one I explained yesterday in connection with the three locks.
> Senator KNOX. I understand that view thoroughly. I only wanted to be satisfied in my own mind about the question of stability.
> Mr. PARSONS. I believe that the dam will be stable. It is somewhat conjectural, but I believe that with proper care the dam would be stable——

The published report of the majority of the Board of Consulting Engineers nowhere specifically states that the Gatun dam is unsafe.

Mr. KITTREDGE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. KNOX. Certainly.

Mr. KITTREDGE. I will ask the Senator if it is not a fact that when the majority report was written, the minority report proposing a lock plan had not yet been formulated?

Mr. KNOX. Exactly; I am coming to that in a moment.

As I had just observed, Mr. President, the published report of the majority of the Board of Consulting Engineers nowhere specifically states that the Gatun dam is unsafe, although there are many suggestions as to the unstability of earth dams of many kinds, but these suggestions necessarily include the dams proposed by the majority as well as by the minority.

The reason for this peculiar phraseology of the report is not difficult to understand on the assumption that nearly all the members of the majority believe the Gatun dam to be a stable structure.

The foreign members left this country before the draft of the report was made, as is stated in the minutes of the proceedings of the Board of Consulting Engineers, and after it had been drafted and printed the report was taken to Europe by the chairman for the signature of the five European members. It was so well known that these members regarded the Gatun dam as a stable structure that in drafting the report care was evidently taken not to make any statement that this dam was unsafe, as such statement would undoubtedly have been stricken out before the additional signatures were appended. I believe that this accounts fully for the absence of any expression of opinion with regard to the Gatun dam which does not also apply to other dams.

Mr. President, regarding the possibilities and probabilities of the situation, knowing as we did know, knowing as the most ordinary layman would know, that the whole scheme of the lock system depended upon the stability of the dam at Gatun, if those consulting engineers had a defined and settled opinion to the effect that that dam was unsafe, they would have branded it as unsafe in no mistaken terms, and they need not have gone further with their criticism of that scheme, because that in itself would have been sufficient to eliminate it.

Mr. KITTREDGE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. KNOX. Certainly.

Mr. KITTREDGE. Perhaps my inquiry was not understood by the Senator from Pennsylvania. I understand the fact to be—and I ask the Senator if I am not correct—that the report of the majority of the Board of Consulting Engineers was written and in the hands of the minority of the Board of Consulting Engineers, who favored the lock plan, before they proposed the lock plan now suggested by the minority of the Committee on Interoceanic Canals. Is not that the fact?

Mr. KNOX. Mr. President, I do not know how that may be. I did not understand the Senator's previous question. I repeat, I do not know how that may be, and I do not think it is at all material to anything for which I am now contending.

The Senator from South Dakota, in his speech, endeavored to make the following general statement applicable to the Gatun dam. He said (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, p. 7731): "In this connection I will read a few sentences from the report of the Board of Consulting Engineers upon the subject of the Gatun dam." Then he quoted the following paragraph, by reading which it will be seen that it is not a statement upon the subject of the Gatun dam, but is a general statement relating to all dams. It is as follows:

> The United States Government is proposing to expend many millions of dollars for the construction of this great waterway, which is to serve the commerce of the world for all time, and the very existence of which would depend upon the permanent stability and unquestioned safety of all dams.

And, Senators, note that the sea-level scheme depends for its integrity upon four dams that impound an area of water of over 44 square miles. It depends upon dams, not for the purpose of facilitating transportation along the line of the canal, but it depends upon dams to prevent the destruction of the canal. The radical distinction between the lock system and the sea-level system is this: That under the lock system we impound the water at Gatun and make that lake the canal, whereas the impounded area of over 44 square miles by the four dams of the sea-level system is not utilized at all for the purposes of navigation.

Mr. KITTREDGE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. KITTREDGE. I do not wish to interrupt the Senator if it at all disturbs him.

Mr. KNOX. I would not infer that the Senator did, but I will yield.

Mr. KITTREDGE. Of course, I do not wish to disturb the Senator, but I should like to ask the Senator one more question.

Mr. KNOX. Certainly.

Mr. KITTREDGE. I should like to ask him whether all the dams proposed by the sea-level scheme had not the full approval of all the members of the Board of Consulting Engineers, minority as well as majority?

Mr. KNOX. Mr. President, I do not know how that may be. But I do not want to be misunderstood. I am not contending here that it is not possible to build a sea-level canal, and I do not think any intelligent engineer has ever contended that it was not possible to build a lock canal. The question here is, Which is the better of the two under all the circumstances? If the Senator from South Dakota will permit me to proceed, I think many of the things to which his mind would naturally be directed will be anticipated in my remarks. However, I do not wish to indicate that a question annoys me in the slightest degree.

Continuing the quotation from the report of the Board of Consulting Engineers:

> The Board is therefore of opinion that the existence of such costly facilities for the world's commerce should not depend upon great reservoirs held by earth embankments resting literally upon mud foundations or those of even sand and gravel. The Board is unqualifiedly of opinion that no such vast and doubtful experiment should be indulged in, but, on the contrary, that every work of whatever nature should be so designed and built as to include only those features which experience has demonstrated to be positively safe and efficient.

Senators will note that this is a general statement. It makes the broad statement that it is the opinion of the Board that the canal should not depend upon great reservoirs held by earth embankments, and yet the report of the majority favoring a sea-level canal proposes to build four great reservoirs held by such embankments.

Now, let us for a moment consider these dams and reservoirs in connection with the opinion contained in the above quotation, that the work "should be so designed and built as to include only those features which experience has demonstrated to be positively safe and efficient."

The plans of the minority of the Board of Consulting Engineers provide for the formation of two great reservoirs, one of them retained by the Gatun dam, with a depth of water against it of 85 feet, and the other retained by three dams at the Pacific end of the canal, with a depth of water against them of 55 feet.

The sites of these dams have been carefully examined by the Board of Consulting Engineers; there have been numerous borings showing the character of the foundation, and they have been designed with care by the best engineering authorities on the construction of dams with a view to making them safe without regard to the cost of the work.

The testimony discloses that the proposed dams are well within the limits of actual experience, as earth dams of much smaller mass and with a pressure of water against them as great as that against the Gatun dam have not only successfully held water for the last forty years near San Francisco, but these same dams, with the reservoirs behind them full, have successfully withstood the recent earthquake shocks at that place, and, notwithstanding the fact that the main fault, or fissure line, of the earthquake, which extends continuously for 50 miles or more, passes directly by the end of one of these dams, and the ground at this place was so severely shaken that trestles and other structures were wrecked, the dams remain intact. These dams have not more than one-sixth of the mass or of the resisting power that will be possessed by the proposed Gatun dam.

There is another dam, also shaken by the California earthquake, which has against it a depth of water of 115 feet, 30 feet greater than that proposed against the Gatun dam, and this also, although shaken by the earthquake, was not affected.

The closest precedent for the Gatun dam is a great earth dam built in connection with the Wachusett reservoir of the Metropolitan Water Supply, of Massachusetts. This is one-third longer than the Gatun dam, will have 20 feet less depth of water against it, and it rests on fine material, where borings showed a maximum depth of rock of 286 feet, while the maximum depth to rock at Gatun is 258 feet. It is similar in general design, as its thickness at the highest place is one-third of a mile, while the thickness of the dam at Gatun is one-half of a mile.

Mr. Stearns tells us the character of the material under the Wachusett dam, which is locally known as the "North dike of the Wachusett reservoir," is more permeable than that indicated by the borings at Gatun. The water pressure is now against it, although the reservoir is not full, and the quantity percolating beneath the dam is so small that it is evident that it will be negligible even when the reservoir is entirely filled.

We know that the construction of dams on alluvial foundations is no novelty. All of the levee systems of the Mississippi River are built upon alluvial foundations, and some of these levees which cross crevasses are high, yet no engineer connected with the levee system would doubt his ability, with sufficient funds, to construct safe levees at such places. The famous dikes of the Netherlands, which prevent the encroachment of the sea, rest on material which has been deposited in water, often to some extent containing mud, so that it will settle.

These comparisons, Mr. President, show that the dams of the lock canal are well within the limits "which experience has demonstrated to be positively safe and efficient."

Let us for a moment next examine the character of the dams proposed in connection with a sea-level plan. There are four of them—the same number as required in the plan for a lock canal.

The greatest dam is that at Gamboa, for the purpose of holding back the waters of the Chagres River. The Board recommended at this place "either an earth dam with a heavy masonry core carried down to bed rock, or an all masonry structure founded at the same depth and upon the same material" (Report, p. 47), in this way giving their approval to an earth dam with a masonry core wall at this place.

The highest flow line of this reservoir is 130 feet above the river bed and 170 feet above the bed rock, which at this place is at sea level. The lake formed by the dam would have an area of 29½ square miles. In other words, Mr. President, the vessels which would have to navigate the sinuous windings of this 200-foot-wide canal would have impending over them at a height of 170 feet, held back by an earthen dam with a masonry core, a lake 24 miles in area; a lake which for its integrity not only depended upon the dam which held back its waters, but likewise depended upon the integrity of the three other dams which dammed up the tributaries of the Chagres River.

In approving an earth dam of this height with a core wall the Board has gone directly contrary to their unqualified opinion that "no vast and doubtful experiment should be indulged in," and that the works should "include only those features which experience has demonstrated to be positively safe and efficient." I make this statement because no earth dam of any kind has been constructed to retain water to a greater height than about 115 feet, which is held by the California dam already referred to, and no earth dam with a concrete core wall has ever been in use in which the height of the core wall has exceeded 125 feet, while in this dam it would require a height of 170 feet.

The Board, in the consideration of the subject of dams (Report, p. 46), states:

> The earth dams which have already been built for the retention of large bodies of water, some of them exceeding 100 feet in height, show that this type of structure may give satisfactory results when properly designed and constructed, but the character of the foundation material on which such dams are built and the means for preventing dangerous seepage underneath or through such foundations must always be carefully considered.

The report then proceeds to recommend three dams, respectively, across the rivers Gigante, Gigantito, and Cano Quebrado, without giving any designs, without any engineer having looked at the sites of these dams to determine whether they were favorable or not, and without any borings at their sites to show the character of the material or the depth to rock. That these dams can be built at these places is merely a matter of conjecture, based upon the rough topographical surveys of a large section of territory made by the French before the canal came into the possession of the United States.

Notwithstanding the statement of the majority above quoted, that the character of the foundation material on which such dams are built and the means for preventing dangerous seepage beneath or through such foundations must always be carefully considered, they have, without any such consideration, recommended as a vital part of their project that these dams be built to hold back great reservoirs of water, which, although not so large as that to be held back by the Gatun dam, are, nevertheless, such great reservoirs that if the water were to be let loose by the failure of the dams the destruction of the canal would inevitably result.

All three of these proposed dams—I am speaking of the three proposed dams of the sea-level type outside of the Gamboa dam—will have a height of about 75 feet above the surface of the ground. That required to close the Gigante will be 2,800 feet long, that to close its main tributary, the Gigantito, will be about 490 feet long, and that to close the Cano about 820 feet long. The lakes which they form have an aggregate area of ground of upward of 10 square miles.

As to the effect of the destruction of dams holding back so great a body of water, it is well to note that the damage done by the Johnstown flood resulted from letting loose the water from a reservoir having an area of only two-thirds of a square mile.

Mr. President, in this connection I want to observe that the failure of that dam was caused not by any weakness in the foundation, although it was nothing but an earth dam, not by any pressing out or washing away of the dam from the pressure of water which it held back, but because of the enormous precipitation of the night before, when the waters of the dam rose with such rapidity that the sluiceway, or spillway, was not able to carry them off, and they rushed over the top of the dam, cutting out the outer surface, thereby causing the failure. In that connection I wish to call attention to the fact that in this proposed lock at Gatun, supported by the dam of which I have been speaking, the crest of the dam rises 50 feet above the normal height of the lake, and the lake is so vast in area that it will gather upon its bosom the waters of the Chagres and all its tributaries and so scatter them that at high flood the waters will not rise more than 2 or 3 feet, leaving an absolute margin of safety of from 45 to 47 feet.

The Senator from South Dakota (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, p. 7733) quoted at length and asked to have incorporated in his remarks a statement from the address of Mr. William R. Hill, the engineer in charge of the Croton dam, the great water reservoir for the city of New York. He quoted, speaking of the Croton dam:

> Such a structure can not be regarded as anything but an experiment. It is abnormal and unprecedented in all of its dangerous features. The engineer might apply in vain for science to aid in computing the efficiency of such a structure; he could get no light, for he could find not even the slightest guaranty of safety in a structure so built.

It is unfortunate for the Senator's cause that the remarks which he has quoted apply to the Croton dam, which was an earth dam with a masonry core wall, such as the majority of the Board of Consulting Engineers propose to build at Gamboa, and does not apply in the least to the type of dam proposed in connection with the lock canal at Gatun.

Mr. KITTREDGE. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. KNOX. Certainly.

Mr. KITTREDGE. I will ask one more question of the Senator from Pennsylvania. Do not the plans of the majority of the Board of Consulting Engineers contemplate the construction of a masonry dam, or an earth dam with a masonry core wall?

Mr. KNOX. Yes; that is correct—either a masonry dam or an earth dam with a masonry core wall.

Mr. KITTREDGE. I merely wished to call the Senator's attention to that fact.

Mr. KNOX. Yes; I will refer to that later on. It is absolutely correct—either one or the other.

Mr. Hill, the engineer whom the Senator from South Dakota quoted with approval, in almost the next sentence of the address quoted from, stated that the "core wall cracked in five places within a length of 100 feet."

Further, after calling attention to the great height of this core wall, which was 200 feet, or only 30 feet higher than one of the alternatives, I will add, proposed by the majority of engineers to the dam at Gamboa, Mr. Hill says:

> Considering the height of the wall, and this in artificially placed earth, it could be but an experimental structure, inasmuch as it would be about twice the height of any heretofore built.

Mr. President, in reviewing the dams proposed in connection with the lock canal and with the sea-level canal it can be confidently asserted that the dams of the lock canal have been designed by engineers of the highest reputation in this branch of engineering after a careful examination of their sites and after extended borings to show the character of the material beneath them, and that they do not go beyond the limits of actual practice, except in being made more massive and stronger than any dams heretofore constructed to retain the same depth of water. On the other hand, it can be confidently asserted that three out of the four dams of the sea-level canal have not yet been designed; that their sites have not been examined; that the character of the material or the depth to rock at the sites is entirely unknown, and that the fourth dam is far beyond the limits of any actual practice.

The difference in the degree of detail with which the sea-level and lock-canal plans are presented by the majority and minority of the Board of Consulting Engineers is very marked, and should be carefully considered and given great weight in drawing conclusions concerning their respective merits. The structural features of the lock plan, and their locations, are described in such detail that intelligent investigation and criticism can be applied to all of them, while, on the other hand, the intentions of the majority in the presentation of similar parts of the sea-level plan are so vaguely and indefinitely expressed as to evade the scrutiny and exact knowledge necessary before safe conclusions can be reached as to their practicability, cost, and stability.

Mr. President, it required the unanimous consent of the foreign engineers upon that Board to make this majority, and when I have gone over the report they have made and seen the lack and want of detail, it seems to me that these gentlemen practically opened their arms and walked away and said it can be done, but not how it can be done; and it is for us to work out the execution of their scheme, and if we fail it is our failure.

As I have said, the principal structures in the sea-level plan are the Gamboa dam and controlling sluices, the four dams across the Giante, Giantito, Cano, and Agua Benita rivers, the spillway for the lake formed by these dams, the structures for the control of the other tributaries of the Chagres, and the tide lock at the Pacific end.

Those in the lock plan are the Gatun dam, the three dams forming Lake Sosa, and the several locks.

Reviewing in detail the consideration and information concerning these works given in the two reports submitted by the majority and minority of the Consulting Board, we find a remarkable difference. Taking first the sea-level report, information concerning the keystone of the project is limited to the following statement:

> At the site of the Gamboa dam, 30 miles from Colon, the river bed has an elevation of about 50 feet above mean sea level, but the deepest rock is at practically sea level, making it necessary to sink the foundations of a dam to a maximum depth of only 53 or 54 feet below water at the low stages of the river before finding material on which to form a suitable foundation bed. At the proposed site of the dam the high hills approach each other within 2,020 feet at an elevation of 180 feet and within 1,170 feet at the bottom of the valley. The earth overlying the rock is of moderate depth, so that the conditions are favorable for the construction of any type of dam which may be adopted.
>
> The consideration of these and other reasons have prompted the Board to recommend at Gamboa—

I am still reading from the report—> either an earth dam with a heavy masonry core carried down to bed rock or an all-masonry structure founded at the same depth and upon the same material.

Mr. President, no further description is given, nor is any design submitted for a dam, which is both the most important structure in the canal and one of the largest dams ever proposed. There is nothing said about the design of the controlling sluices or the method by which their discharge is to be conducted into the canal. We also look in vain for designs or descriptions of the four dams and spillway to control the four tributary rivers on the left bank before mentioned. We know of the French surveys that their accuracy is inversely as their distance from the canal, and it may be assumed that these structures, vital to the construction and operation of the canal, are in a region where the maps are largely based on sketch work. No examination for the purpose of locating dams and spillways has ever been made nor any borings for foundations. We are only informed that these dams are to be built, while their dimensions and underlying foundations are unknown. It was impossible, therefore, to make a design or to state whether they were to be of earth or masonry or of a combination of these materials. It can, however, be stated that they are of very considerable dimensions, holding a head of water above sea level of probably 70 feet, or nearly the same as the Gatun dam, and probably aggregating in length a mile or more. Such an all-pervading lack of study and exact information does not inspire much confidence in the practicability of the plan, and still less in the estimates.

Still more unfortunate is the absence of design in the proposition to deal with the other tributary streams, both in their treatment during construction and in their final introduction into the prism of the canal. Of these streams there are fifteen or twenty of sufficient importance to require costly work of great stability, as many of them descend from considerable heights in a short distance with a rapid and violent fall.

The discharge of all these streams, and of the Chagres, is, during construction, to be carried to an outfall through diversion channels on either side of and at considerable height above the canal. These channels will therefore require a capacity, or sectional area and fall, proportioned to the combined discharge at all times of the Chagres and its tributaries below Gamboa if the canal is to be protected during construction from the incursion of these streams, in order that the work may be free from interruptions and damage. It is not apparent in the majority report that adequate provision is made for this.

Concerning the final disposal of these waters we are told in the report—and I quote from that document:

> The tributary streams, whose beds at point of junction with the canal are considerably above the prism of the latter, will be discharged over masonry-stepped aprons or through metallic discharge pipes, or these beds will be sloped and lowered so as to prevent objectionable currents at junction points. The means for the accomplishment of these results are such as are in common use on nearly all important canals.

No preference is given to either of these schemes, although the last two seem impracticable, while the first involves construction work of great cost and strength. It must be remembered that the height from which these streams descend ranges up to 150 feet and the flood discharge to 3,000 second-feet. Yet for these important structures, on whose stability and success the uninterrupted operation of the canal depends, no design or description beyond that already quoted is given.

It seems incredible that the sum allowed in the estimate for the sea-level canal for the foregoing work, amounting only to $3,500,000, viz, the four dams and spillway on the left bank, the temporary works for river control, and the final regulated admission of these waters into the canal prism, is at all adequate.

On the other hand, the minority of the Consulting Board make their presentation of a lock canal with a fullness of description and design that gives a firm basis for conclusions and for estimate. Its detail gives information and inspires confidence.

The Gatun dam with the spillway are carefully worked out, leaving no doubt of what is intended and how it is to be accomplished. The information of location, of foundation, and of method of construction is full and satisfactory. It is so thorough that no further information or explanation is required for the dams forming Lake Sosa, at the Pacific end. A sufficient outline is given of the locks for all necessary information concerning their location, dimensions, arrangement, and stability. Whatever information we may have of the tide lock of the Pacific end of the sea-level canal can only be inferred from the minority report concerning the high-level canal locks.

This marked difference in the fullness of information and detail marks the two reports throughout. The candor of the one inspires a confidence which is missing in the other.

Mr. President, I recapitulate the reasons that have induced me to favor the lock proposition as follows:

First. In view of the fact that the overshadowing engineering problem to be solved in either case is that of control of the flood waters of the Chagres and other streams. I favor the lock type because it affords absolute control of these and involves no uncertain features, no danger of collapse of any part of the work or works embraced in the proposition, and avoids all deposits of silt, rock, timber, or other obstructions in or near the navigable channel, which, on the other hand, in the case of currents and obstructions are unavoidable in the sea-level type.

Second. Because of the marked superiority of width of channels and depth of water of the lock type, as compared with the sea-level. The longitudinal currents are not to be avoided in the sea-level plan, and the cross currents made by many small streams which must be brought directly into the navigable prism of the sea-level canal, the fall of which varies from 10 to 160 feet, would endanger ships navigating the sea-level canal under their own steam, owing to the great amount of curvature and narrow channel.

Third. Because it will be an impossibility, in case the necessity arises during the transit of war vessels, to turn such vessels in a sea-level canal in case of a change of orders requiring a different movement of the ships, whereas in a lock-level canal such turning could be accomplished in over two-thirds of the length of the canal, and because the speed of all ships in a sea-level canal of 200 feet or 100 feet, or 50 feet, as it is for a great portion of the distance, necessarily would be the speed of the slowest ship making the transit.

Fourth. Because I am not impressed by the alleged danger to locks or ships in passing ships through the locks in flights, and think it largely is imaginary. Ships would not be handled by their own power or crews, but they would be handled by lock crews especialy trained to the business, and would be easily handled by stationary power, which would entirely obviate the danger from the transmission of wrong signals and wrong movements.

Fifth. Because it is amply proven by a great number of borings, 110 in all, which have been made on the exact site of the proposed Gatun locks, many of them to a depth of 60 feet below sea level, that the material afforded for the foundation of these locks is rock, and not only can these locks be constructed with the dimensions proposed, namely, 95 feet wide and 900 feet in length, but it is possible to construct locks fully 250 feet longer than the dimensions called for above, with a corresponding increase in width if necessary; that these borings have proven beyond question that there is ample room for three additional locks in duplicate, and also for an additional similar installation of locks alongside, in case they will ever be required.

Sixth. Because there are no problems connected with the lock type which have not been fully and thoroughly considered and the details worked out, and that such is not the case with the sea-level type; that many of the most important propositions connected with the sea-level type have been guessed at, as, for instance, the plans for the Gamboa dam, the location, the foundations, the character of the four dams to impound the waters of other streams, some of them aproaching almost in size and importance the Gatun dam as proposed in the lock type, and no intelligent plan has been even suggested for taking care of the small streams, which it is proposed to divert directly into the narrow channel of the sea-level canal.

Seventh. Because the consideration of time and cost are much greater in the sea-level than in the lock type.

The depth to which excavation must be made for the sea-level type opens up many dangers of great difficulties from unknown geological faults, possibly involving serious complications in expensive material to be removed, and also a great amount of excavation to be removed below sea-level in case of the sea-level type, for which no competent engineering authority has been or is able to fix an intelligent estimate of cost. On the other hand, the excavation of Culebra cut is not carried to a depth in the lock type sufficient to justify any belief that more than ordinary construction contingencies will be encountered.

Eighth. Because I do not believe that any intelligent criticism can justly be directed against either type, as regarding the results from earthquake shocks. The Gamboa dam, the tidal lock at Sosa, the very high excavation through the summit of Culebra cut, in the sea-level type, are equally vulnerable with the Gatun and Sosa locks, and vastly more so than the immense earthen dam proposed at Gatun, in the lock type. I believe that in the case of either type the damage from earthquake shocks is a purely negligible quantity. It does not seem to me, Mr. President, that we should be shaken in our understanding or unduly alarmed because of the recent disaster at San Francisco, because it appears to me the two things that were absolutely proven by that catastrophe were, first, that it did not occur at Panama, and, second, that earthen dams were not affected by the vibration of the earth at San Francisco.

Ninth. Because the lock type of canal can, if the necessity ever arises, be transformed into a true sea-level canal, one of from five to six hundred feet in width, and 50 feet or more in depth of water. The lock type, if constructed, will handle from 60,000,000 to 70,000,000 tons of freight per annum, or vastly more than will probably ever be reached during the next fifty years, and the amount of water required for this large tonnage can be supplemented to take care of at least 20,000,000 of tons additional per year, at a small cost by the construction of additional water reservoirs.

The difference in cost of construction between the lock type and the sea-level type as proposed, compounded at 2 per cent for a period of fifty years, added to the saving in fifty years in fixed charges, will amount to about $500,000,000, a sum which will be available at the end of fifty years to transform the lock canal into a true sea-level canal, if the necessity for it exists.

Tenth. Because I believe that owing to the inflowing of silt and other matter into the narrow and depressed channel of the sea-level type it would require the constant maintenance and operation of a number of dredges to keep the channel open for navigation for any class of ships, and, further, that even with this channel open it would be found a practical impossibility to force a ship, say, 800 feet long by 80 feet beam and drawing 35 feet of water through such a channel.

Eleventh. Because I believe the safety of the proposed earthen dam at Gatun can not be intelligently attacked. The 200 feet or more blanket of clay and other similar materials beneath it, the construction which will give a weight of sixty-three times the extreme pressure which can come against it, and the great height—50 feet—to which it is proposed to carry this dam above the water's surface, renders it absolutely safe from destruction by any known forces of nature; and this point is emphasized by consideration of the proposed method of construction, namely, that this earth is not to be deposited loosely, but to be put in by sluicing with water, which will render the whole structure of the dam almost as solid as sedimentary rock.

Twelfth. And, finally, Mr. President, because a lock canal furnishes better commercial facilities for half the expenditure of time and money.

Mr. KITTREDGE. I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

DISTRICT STREET RAILWAYS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Under the unanimous-consent agreement the Chair lays before the Senate Senate bill 6147.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 6147) authorizing changes in certain street-railway tracks within the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator from Colorado [Mr. PATTERSON] had the floor, and I presume he desires to continue.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President, the public has always been more deeply interested in matters of taxation than in any other. Taxation has led to more discussion, more trouble, and greater dissatisfaction than almost any other subject connected with public administration. There is one thing the public usually insists upon, and that is equality in taxation; and it should be the first aim of legislative bodies, when taxation is found to be unequal, to change the inequality and make it just and fair for all.

There is no question but that the taxes levied on and paid by the public utility corporations of Washington are wholly insufficient compared with the value of their holdings, and measured by the taxes that are assessed upon the property of individuals and other corporations the tax is wholly unequal and falls far below the rates which all the rest are compelled to pay.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. PATTERSON. Certainly.

Mr. GALLINGER. The taxes paid by the street railways in this District are 5.54 on the gross earnings. If 12 per cent on their net earnings were added, they would be paying 12.57 on their gross receipts. The State of Colorado pays 2.42.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Will the Senator allow me just a word?

Mr. PATTERSON. Certainly.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I wish to say that the street railway companies charge up a great many things to taxes in this District that do not belong to taxes. I have the exact figures of the taxes that they pay over signatures of the tax collector and the assessor. The amount of taxes they pay is 4.5.

Mr. GALLINGER. I simply beg to say that the Senator is wrong; that is all.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President, the best answer to any criticism made upon the amendment of the Senator from North Dakota is the amendment itself. The provisions of the amendment are so inherently just that it is difficult to understand how an objection can be made to them. It is true it mentions 12 per cent of the net proceeds of these corporations, but there is contained in the amendment a substitute for that, that if these corporations are disinclined to pay the tax upon net receipts they may be relieved from paying that as well as the percentage they already pay upon gross receipts by paying one and one-half per cent upon the appraised value of their property, as do other property holders in the District.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. PATTERSON. Certainly.

Mr. GALLINGER. More than one-half of the street railways in the District of Columbia are not earning a dollar profit; in fact, they are not paying their operating expenses. Does the Senator think that they ought to be burdened very much in addition to what they are now paying in taxes?

Mr. HANSBROUGH. They would not pay any additional tax in that case.

Mr. PATTERSON. The Senator from New Hampshire is presenting obstacles that do not exist, and is raising objections that are not justified. When a citizen is taxed upon his personal property and real estate, the taxing power does not inquire whether his business is good or bad, or whether he is solvent or insolvent. The value of his property is determined, and the assessment is made upon the basis of that valuation. I understand that the assessment is 1½ per cent on all personal property in the District. What the per cent is on real estate I do not know.

Now, Mr. President, if the property of all others in the District is taxed upon the same uniform basis, is it aught but fair to all other taxpayers that the property of the utility corporations, consisting of tracks, cars, buildings, machinery, and franchises, shall be appraised by the same body that values all other property for taxation, and that upon that valuation a levy of 1½ per cent shall be made? What would that be, Mr. President, but taxing the utility corporations of the District precisely as the individual is taxed upon his property and as other corporations are taxed upon theirs?

When an amendment is offered that proposes a special tax and, in addition, proposes that if the bodies to be taxed prefer, in lieu of the special tax, they may pay the tax that owners of other property in the District are required to pay, the proposition can not be out of time. There is not a single element of justice that is lacking in the proposition, and to refuse to accept it seems to me to be willing to wantonly perpetuate a wrong upon the great body of the tax-paying community.

Mr. President, I haven't the slightest idea that this amendment will be adopted. The alacrity with which the bill reported by the Senator from North Dakota the other day was recommitted to the Committee on the District of Columbia, and the decided vote by which it was recommitted, prove that this body is unwilling at this time to place any additional tax upon the corporations, however just it may be.

I have no objection to the bill that is reported from the District Committee being passed, because by the system under which these utilities are operated it is quite necessary that it should be passed, for the traveling public will be afforded no other facilities of travel to and from the new depot when it shall be completed.

But, Mr. President, there never will be any change in the system until the matter of the taxation of public utilities is discussed more generally and earnestly than it has been heretofore, and until more correct information is disseminated, and the bodies that have such matters committed to them shall have a better understanding of the true principle upon which the taxation of public-utility corporations rests.

I also believe, Mr. President, that the mere matter of taxation will never bring the reform that is inseparably associated with the true relation of these public utilities to municipal governments. It is almost impossible that taxation should be fair and just as applicable to them, because the property they own, the franchises they secure, the monopoly that is inherent in their business, place their assets, tangible and intangible, upon a basis quite different from that upon which other property rests.

It is largely for that reason that another system of dealing with these utilities has taken root not only in this country, but in foreign countries. Instead of turning the ownership and management of these public utilities over to private corporations, the municipalities themselves are undertaking their operation. It is only by municipal ownership and operation that the city populations can secure from them all the benefits the public is entitled to have.

Mr. President, Washington, above every other city in the country, should own its own utilities. Washington should own its street railways and its lighting plants. It does, I understand, own its own water supply. Many other cities are not quite so favorably situated as Washington in that regard, because a number as yet do not even own their own water supply. But quite a large number of cities have wholly freed themselves from the trammels of all these private corporations, now owning and operating their own water, light, and street transportation systems.

The great social and political problem in the United States to-day is that of city government. The concentration of great masses of people in the towns and cities, the problems that these people are engaged in solving, the necessity for the utmost economy that the mass may be able to live in any degree of comfort, the necessity for the increase of compensation for labor, for the lessening of the tax burden, for the betterment of all public facilities in city life is growing stronger every day, and all over the country more attention is now being given to problems of this character than has ever been given before.

We see the politics of New York revolutionized at an election held within a year through the interest in municipal ownership. We see the issue distinctly made in Chicago and the municipal-ownership proposition prevailing by a decided majority. We notice cities that were Democratic and cities that have been Republican, in Ohio and other States, now governed by practically nonpartisan administrations by reason of the deep hold municipal ownership has taken on the minds of voters.

The fact that municipal ownership sentiment is spreading so rapidly, its growth is so phenomenal, with no backward step noted in any direction, with the reform advancing, growing in might and power, should be sufficient to induce the Committee on the District of Columbia to calmly and deliberately take up the matter for consideration and to determine whether the capital of the nation shall not be made the very leader among cities in adopting and advancing the reform.

Mr. President, those who have studied city life and the influences that operate in municipalities for good or evil do not hesitate to declare that public-utility corporations are the source of greater corruption in city life than any other element. And why? The owners of these utilities are, as a rule, men of the largest wealth. They are men of the widest social influence. By reason of their wealth and social standing they are sought out for their influence and feared for their power. These men, in their desire to secure these great franchises for the corporations they control, do not hesitate to corrupt the electorate of cities by whatever means may be necessary.

Show me a city of a quarter million people or of a hundred thousand with street railways, water, and light plants owned by private corporations and I will show you cities in which these corporations unqualifiedly control the politics. They control nominating conventions and dictate the nominees for the parties, and they spend their money lavishly to secure the election of the men whom they regard as most devoted to their service; and I will also show you cities in which these municipal corporations control the councils and rule their mayors, and obtain control of them either at the election or by purchase afterwards; all to the end of acquiring and holding the franchises for these utilities. Their aim is also to escape their proper share of taxation and to secure renewal of franchises when they are about to expire.

It is idle, Mr. President, for any political party in a State dominated by the utility and other corporations to struggle for honest conventions or honest elections; and honest city administrations are an impossibility. The vast wealth of the men who control these utilities, their social standing, the extremes to which they go to maintain their supremacy in city affairs, override and overawe all combinations that attempt to combat them. One of the great troubles is that only men outside of their class—only the poorer, the weaker, and the less influential of the public—are, as a rule, willing to come out into the open to join issue with these corporations.

[At this point Mr. PATTERSON was interrupted by the expiration of the morning hour, and he resumed and concluded his speech later in the day.]

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President, when I was interrupted with the unfinished business, I was talking about the evil influences of these utility corporations upon city life; their control for evil of the politics of the cities; their control of elections, of city councils, of police forces, of boards of public works. Wherever these corporations are they dominate political conventions, nominate tickets, elect candidates, and control city councils, and the people of the cities seem powerless to combat them.

Municipal ownership of these utilities means a change in the conditions to which I have called attention. I suggested the wealth, the social influence, and power of the men who, as a rule, control these corporations, and that their influences are for evil by reason of their selfish interests and the great value of the franchises they hold and the control of which they are always struggling to retain. Municipal ownership will change these men into instruments for good instead of for evil.

City ownership of street railways and great water and light plants involves city management of properties of such vast value that all, rich and poor, are interested in their good management—they become interested in cheap water rates, cheap light rates, and cheap street transportation, and for these reasons all tax-paying citizens desire honest, good, and efficient government. So we would have the controlling influence in our great cities lined up upon the side of economy, honesty, and justice, instead of combatting these conditions.

But the change, Mr. President, will not only give us better city life in most of its phases, it will also give to the public cheaper light and water and street transportation. These are all in the nature of taxes, of fixed charges upon everybody who lives within a city. The owner of a home must not only confront interest upon his investment and taxes for the maintenance of city government, but he must take into consideration the cost of water, of light, and of street-car service; and these charges are as much fixed on the home owner in a city as are the taxes that he pays into the city treasury. If by municipal ownership these charges can be reduced and better and more efficient service be secured, the palpable wisdom of municipal ownership reform stands out too prominently to be ignored.

Mr. President, this reform has gotten very considerable headway in Great Britain. It has been worked out there much more largely than here. The Secretary of Commerce and Labor, recognizing this fact, sent a commissioner over to Great Britain to examine into the problem and to report the result of his investigation. I have here in a volume issued only last January from the Department of Commerce and Labor the result of as well as most of the details of the investigation that was made by the commissioner.

The claim is set up by a great many that municipal ownership is a socialistic idea or development. Such, Mr. President, is not the case, and it was not found to be the case by our commissioner when he went abroad. I would call the attention of the Senate to something upon that subject at the very opening of this report. The commissioner shows most conclusively that municipal ownership came from the commercial, the manufacturing, and the taxpaying classes of Great Britain generally, rather than from any phase of the socialistic cult. Upon this subject he says:

> In its beginnings municipal ownership was not socialistic; it was not even an outgrowth of the labor movement; it came rather from the mercantile or commercial classes. The councils of several boroughs, notably West Ham and Battersea, are controlled by labor representatives, but the larger cities and county boroughs are in the hands of business men, who, with the more public-spirited of the leisure class, make up the personnel of municipal administration.

Again, he says:

> In its present stage of development municipal ownership is inspired by no ideal of a changed social order, and the movement is likely to continue to be one for improved service, for business thrift, for the relief of the taxpayer from the burdens of taxation, and for increased revenue for the community.

Then referring to the motives which led to the efforts for municipal ownership, the commissioner, Professor Howe, says:

> These facts—

Facts that he referred to in previous paragraphs of his report—

> These facts explain in a measure why municipal ownership has proceeded with so much rapidity within recent years. Other causes are also operative on public opinion. The general reasons assigned in Great Britain for this growth may be classed under four heads, as follows:
>
> First. A desire for better and more efficient service. It was felt that private ownership, interested, as it was, only in dividends, could not be relied upon to operate enterprises so as to produce the largest social results. With this was the belief that under public ownership rates and charges could be reduced to the consumer and that the earnings could be used for the betterment of the service or the lowering of its cost.

I will read now, because I do not desire to quote too extensively from the report, a summing up of his investigations. He recites that—

> The literature of municipal ownership is found in municipal reports, in parliamentary returns, and the daily press. The justification of the extension of municipal activities, as set forth by its advocates in these writings, as well as in the comments of officials and the people, may be summarized under six general heads, as follows:
>
> First. That municipal ownership stimulates public spirit, promotes good citizenship, and arouses a sense of local patriotism growing out of the services which the city extends to the citizen.
>
> Second. That public operation is alone consistent with the best interests of the community. It permits city administration to be coordinated, and the service of the tramways, electricity, gas, and water undertakings to be made to serve one another and the community.
>
> Third. That public ownership has greatly cheapened the cost of service, whether in water, gas, electricity, or transportation. The same is true of telephones.
>
> Fourth. That municipal ownership has proved a financial success; already in many cities it has out of its earnings paid off a part of its indebtedness, and in many instances contributed to the reduction of the local taxes.
>
> Fifth. That municipal ownership has improved the condition of labor by increasing wages, shortening hours, and establishing cordial relations between the public and its servants.
>
> Sixth. That in addition to this, public operation is subject to public opinion; that every voter is a critic and can make his influence felt upon service and conditions; that this makes the industry responsive to the needs of the community in a way that is never true of private operation.

Then, speaking more directly on street railways, he says:

> The tramways, coming in close and intimate touch with the people, stimulate an interest in the city that is almost universal. The change from private to public operation has apparently always been followed by a marked increase in their use by the community. The most agressive, the most active, and the best-governed cities from the point of view of the average Englishman are the cities that have gone in for municipal ownership. Glasgow, Liverpool, Manchester, Sheffield, Bradford, Leeds, and Birmingham are examples. The London county council also has been most aggressive in the enlargement of its functions and activities.

I will conclude quotations from this report by the author's statement of the benefits the change from private to public ownership wrought. He says:

> An examination of the water, gas, tramway, electricity, and telephone undertakings, in so far as the latter have been municipalized, shows that the change from private to public operation has resulted in—

1. Marked reduction in rates and charges to consumers.
2. Greater economy in operation through lower interest charges, and great extension of use.
3. In many instances a considerable relief to the burden of taxation.
4. A coordinated municipal policy by which the city and its undertakings are made to work together and with one another. This is true as to health and cleanliness, in policing and lighting, in the administration of the streets and public places, in the unification of all departments working through the common body—the town council. Friction is eliminated, and one department is made to serve another and the public.

Passing over others—

7. The condition of the employees has been greatly improved. Thousands of men have been raised to a fair wage, and relieved from the fear of capricious dismissal. Their service has been dignified, and their standard of living improved, not only by better wages, but by shorter hours.

Mr. President, if such are the results of municipal ownership in Great Britain—if the cost for street-car service has been lessened, if the wages of the employees have been increased and their hours of labor have decreased, if it has banished to a very large extent corruption from the government of English cities—I may ask is it any wonder that the example is being followed by American cities and that the movement for municipalization of the utilities has taken such mighty strides?

Mr. President, municipal ownership of public utilities does not in any sense mean city ownership or management of any other industry or business. It only includes such public service as in their very nature are monopolies; service that can not be exercised without public grants of privileges or franchises, and service that supplies the people with things that have become necessaries of life. Water is a necessary of life; light has become one of the great necessities of life and adds inconceivably to its comfort. Street transportation has become as much a necessity in city life as has light and heat. Through the extension of lines of street railways, city boundaries have been enlarged; the congestion of human life in city centers has been dissipated; life has been made more comfortable and beautiful. You may select at random ninety persons out of every hundred and you will find that those ninety people are compelled to use street transportation as a necessity of their daily business and existence.

These businesses can not be conducted except by special grants from the municipality, and these special grants of franchises are of immense value, and when they are owned by private corporations they are used so as to earn the greatest profit for the corporation and give the poorest service to the public that will be submitted to. But should the cities own and operate them, they would be operated for the benefit of all, without reference to profits for private companies. Then why should not Washington lead in such a reform? Washington could manage these utilities to much greater advantage than could any other American city. It would have fewer obstacles to overcome. Its government is altogether in the hands of Congress. I am glad that in Washington private corporations, from the very nature of the District government, can not exercise the same evil influences which they do in the government of other cities. The standard of government in Washington is created by the President and approved by the Senate; for the President appoints its Commissioners and the Senate approves them. The Board of Commissioners of Washington stand in lieu of the mayor and the common council in other cities; the President and the Senate stand in lieu of the voter; and for these reasons alone, the government of Washington can the more readily and with the fewer obstacles secure the reforms that municipal ownership brings.

Mr. President, what do we find in the British cities that have adopted municipal ownership? The Senator from New Hampshire spoke about the street railways of Washington selling six tickets for a quarter. The average fare in Great Britain, where street railways are municipalized, is a fraction less than 2 cents. Compare a 2-cent fare in British cities with a 4-cent fare in Washington, and it means that transportation to every family in the cities of Great Britain costs but one-half what American families must pay in Washington, and it costs less than one-half of what fares cost the people of cities where the fare is 5 cents straight.

In addition, Mr. President, the statistics show that where the 2-cent fare prevails the profits to the companies amount to very nearly one-half of the gross receipts; and it is only when you study the statistics that are contained in the report made by Professor Howe that you can comprehend the immense profits that are associated with the operation of these public utilities by private corporations. You can then understand how it is that the street railways of Washington pay their interest upon $17,000,000 worth of bonds, or thereabouts, and how they pay heavy dividends upon their immense capitalization, and how their stock sells upon the market at something in the neighborhood of 50 per cent above par.

The bonded indebtedness of these companies represents the full amount of their entire investment.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. PATTERSON. With pleasure.

Mr. GALLINGER. Is the Senator aware of the fact that there are $9,000,000 of bonds out on these street railways which are selling at 89 on the market to-day?

Mr. PATTERSON. No.

Mr. GALLINGER. There are $9,000,000 of those 4 per cent bonds; and if the Senator will go to the evening paper he will find they are quoted at either 88 or 89, and the Senator can buy them all at that price.

Mr. PATTERSON. I am not aware, Mr. President, of what the bonds of all of these street railway companies may be selling for. I do know that by market quotations the stocks of some of them are selling at about 50 per cent above par, and I know that such would not be the case if the interest upon the bonds was not regularly paid, and if large dividends, after paying all the interest, were not assured to the investors.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, a very considerable part of the common stock of the street railways of Washington can be bought at 40, and those street railways have never paid a dividend from the time they were built to the present.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President——

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Will the Senator from Colorado yield to me?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. PATTERSON. With pleasure.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. The statement made by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] in regard to these stocks, dividends, etc., applies to a few small roads that are controlled by what is known as the Washington Railway and Electric system.

Mr. GALLINGER. It applies to the consolidated roads, I will say to the Senator.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. The Washington Railway and Electric Company owns all the roads to which I have referred. There are five street railways in operation controlled by the Washington Railway and Electric Company, which is a paying institution; but the other four are not.

Now, as to the Capital Traction Company——

Mr. GALLINGER. But, if the Senator from Colorado will permit me——

Mr. PATTERSON. Certainly.

Mr. GALLINGER. The common stock of that consolidated road, which is known as the "Washington Railway and Electric Company," can be bought at 40. It has never paid a dividend.

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes; but the Senator should add to that, that the preferred stock of that company is selling for about 90, and is paying 5 per cent.

Mr. GALLINGER. It is indeed; and it would be a very remarkable circumstance if the preferred stock did not sell at a hundred when the company was paying a dividend.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. In addition to that, I want to say, if the Senator from Colorado will allow me——

Mr. PATTERSON. With pleasure.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. That the stock of the Capital Traction Company is selling for about 140, and has sold, I believe, as high as 150, its par value being 100. I think that company pays 5 per cent regularly. I am not sure but that it pays 6 per cent. It pays 5 per cent anyway.

Mr. PATTERSON. I notice that the stock of the latter company, mentioned by the Senator from North Dakota, was quoted within the last few weeks at 146 and a fraction. I can well understand how, by a consolidation of a splendidly paying line of road with a number of outlying ill-paying ones, that the stock of such a combination might be low upon the market, while its bonds would be gilt edged, and the future would insure a very heavy return upon every dollar put into them.

The Senator from New Hampshire must always bear in mind, when he is quoting the stocks and bonds of these utility corporations, that the bonds usually represent the amount that is invested in the physical property and the stock represents simply the franchise; and when the bonds are at par and the stock selling at 50 cents on the dollar, it means that the stock at 50 cents is velvet in the enterprise, and it does not indicate in any degree that there is not a splendid profit being returned to those who happen to own them.

The benefits, Mr. President, from this class of property are that as soon as the franchise in a reasonably large and thrifty city is granted, the grantee may, as a rule, upon the security of the franchise alone, borrow money enough to construct the lines of railway and put them in operation. The bonds they issue are paid out of the profits of the roads, and when the bonds are paid the owners possess great lines of street railway that did not cost them a dollar. The money that was borrowed upon the franchise constructed the road; the bonds were paid off out of the profits, and the owners have remaining all the visible property, the lines with the franchise, which stand the original promoters practically nothing.

Those profits, Mr. President, should belong to the cities themselves. If the city were to own the lines of street railway in Washington, there would be no necessity to pay out to the stockholders a quarter or a half million dollars as dividends each year. The money that would go to the stockholders would go into the city treasury to pay the expenses of the city government. The street railways, as well as the gas and electric lighting companies, would all be run for the benefit of the people, the profits going to the people either in cheaper service or directly into the treasury, thereby lessening the tax burden, while the people would have a vastly improved service.

Mr. President, if we can not have municipal ownership in Washington at this time—and I am frank to admit that information on the subject is not sufficiently diffused to expect it now—then the District should at least have the corporations owning these utilities taxed to the same degree that the people themselves are. I can not understand how, when a Senator proposes a reform that will compel these corporations to pay only the amount of taxes paid by all other citizens upon their property in the District, anyone can be found with nerve enough to object. The proposition is one that does not need any very long time for investigation. To state the proposition is to establish the justice of it; and what is it? Either that these utility corporations shall pay an additional 12 per cent upon their net receipts—and, of course, if there are no net receipts, there will be no additional taxes—or if the companies regard the percentage of net receipts as burdensome, then to have their property appraised and pay upon its appraised value the same rate that every private citizen is required to pay to carry on the government of the District.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. PATTERSON. Certainly.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator's argument interests me. The Senator is a very influential man in his home city. He owns one or two great newspapers. Has the Senator advocated the adoption in Denver of this system of taxation which he suggests?

Mr. PATTERSON. Indeed I have. I have been advocating municipal ownership for many years.

Mr. GALLINGER. Municipal ownership—I understand that; but the people of Denver do not agree with the Senator on that proposition. But as to this system of taxation the Senator is so eloquent over, the fact is that the public-utility corporations of Denver pay only about one-half in taxes what similar corporations pay in the city of Washington. Why does not charity begin at home?

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President, I have been, in my weak way and with whatever instrumentalities I possess for molding public opinion in Colorado, engaged now ever since 1895—a period of more than ten years—attempting to induce the city of Denver to adopt the very system that I am advocating here. The reason we have failed, Mr. President, is because the utility corporations of Denver are so powerful that the people have been powerless against them.

Mr. President, the utility corporations of Denver hold the executive committees of both political organizations in a grip of iron. The Republican executive committee is but a pliant tool of those corporations, and the Democratic executive committee of Denver is even more pliant, if that were possible. The recent election in Denver, upon the one side the two old party political organizations, with five or six corporations aligned with them, endeavoring to secure as many franchises as possible from Denver at the election, and upon the other side the people of Denver—and with what result, Mr. President?

The Senator from New Hampshire says that we failed in the last election. Well, Mr. President, in four weeks we organized a people's movement under the head of municipal ownership; the ticket it put up was defeated by but about 1,000 votes. Three of the franchises were defeated, and the two greatest were carried apparently, but by such narrow majorities that contests have been inaugurated against them. Within less than a week after the election we unearthed the issuance of more than 1,000 fraudulent tax receipts, with which tax-paying voters were manufactured. They were given to those who did not own a dollar's worth of property that they might qualify to vote for these franchises.

Nay, more, Mr. President, we found a judge brave and independent enough to call a grand jury. Realizing that the sheriff, the district attorney, and others of the officials of the city were wholly under the control of these utility corporations, the district judge set them aside. From that action an appeal was taken, and pending the decision of the supreme court the investigation of the grand jury is suspended.

Mr. President, it is by reason of experiences such as these, realizing that party organizations are as a rule, where these public-utility corporations are in the saddle, mere shams, that there can be no such thing as an honest political fight and no fair show for the people, that I here and elsewhere, wherever the occasion may arise, do what I can to change the iniquitous private-ownership system.

Mr. President, as I have suggested, if we can not now have municipal ownership in Washington, if Congress is not ready for it, there should at least be fair and equal taxation of their property; and I ask the Senator from New Hampshire whether the proposition to require these corporations to be assessed 1½ per cent upon the valuation of their property is or is not just?

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I will answer the Senator by saying that I do not know whether it is or not. That is a matter that would need investigation, and that I have not made.

Mr. PATTERSON. Let me ask the Senator another question.

Mr. GALLINGER. I want to answer the first one. I think if a street railway company is bankrupt it ought not to be taxed as a profitable, well-paying corporation is taxed. In my State we exempt from taxation many corporations, and we think it good public policy.

Mr. PATTERSON. Let me ask the Senator this question: The assessed valuation of any corporation's property should depend, as a rule, should it not, upon its real value?

Mr. GALLINGER. It will depend somewhat on that; yes.

Mr. PATTERSON. Very well. If the street-railway property is assessed at its real value, what has that got to do with the insolvency of the corporation? If the street railways are assessed at the real value of their property they will be required to pay only that which every other taxpayer must pay upon the assessed value of his property. Why is not that just? I want to ask the Senator when the District assessor assesses the value of a lot and building, does he inquire as to the solvency or the insolvency of the owner?

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator has entered upon a novel theory. There is not a city on earth that taxes its corporations upon the basis the Senator suggests. I say to the Senator that it is a matter which ought to be investigated. I do not know but that it might be good policy; but it is an untried scheme, and the Senator will not get me to commit myself either one way or the other on the proposition he has presented until I have looked into it.

Mr. PATTERSON. The Supreme Court of the United States has decided time and time again that franchises, rights, and privileges are as much property as the cars that run upon the rails; that their value may be determined by the taxing power, and that it is the duty of the Government to assess such franchises and privileges at their value as is other property.

Mr. GALLINGER. I am trying not to give the Senator a new text, because I hope to get a vote on this bill to-night; but I will suggest to the Senator that if we adopt a system of taxation in lieu of that method, as we have done in Washington and in every other city in the country, then his citations do not apply to this case.

Mr. PATTERSON. I will not longer take up the time of the Senate, Mr. President. I simply want to reasseverate that the proposition contained in the amendment of the Senator from North Dakota is so fair, so just, and is so free from criticism that no person, in my opinion, should object to it. The proposition in the amendment now discussed is one that requires no investigation. I do not understand what halo surrounds a public-utility corporation to place it in a different class in the matter of taxation from any other corporation.

The taxation of private-utility corporations does not, however, meet the evil. I advocate the municipalizing of all utilities and the operation of them for the benefit of all the public and not for the benefit of private stockholders. Through city ownership we will have a better city life, a purer electorate, cheaper water, light, and street transportation, and, at the same time, the public will have the direct benefit of the large profits that are now distributed among the stockholders of these utility companies.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Mr. President, I have a tabulated statement on this subject that I think would be quite interesting if Senators had an opportunity to examine it. I ask that it may be inserted in the RECORD.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered. The table referred to is as follows:

Company.	Gross receipts.	Tax last year.	Per cent of tax on gross receipts.	Net earnings.	Tax under proposed law.	Total tax under proposed law.	Per cent of tax on gross receipts under proposed law.	Funded indebtedness.
Capital Traction Co	$1,500,956.59	$68,552.06	4.5	$980,244.23	$117,629.31	$186,181.37	12.4	$1,080,000.00
Washington Rwy. and Electric Co. and controlled lines	1,810,744.33	81,944.99	4.5	976,863.59	117,223.62	199,168.61	10.9	17,364,100.00
Total	3,311,700.92	150,497.05	----------	1,957,107.82	234,852.93	385,349.98	----------	18,444,100.00
Washington Rwy. and Electric Co	1,133,439.17	52,416.21	4.6	683,311.21	81,997.35	134,413.56	11.9	12,647,100.00

Company.	Capitalization.	Dividends.	Interest on funded debt.	Total interest and dividend.	Funded debt and capitalization.	Rate of tax under proposed law on two-thirds bonds and stocks.	Amount that would accrue under 1¼ per cent rate.
						Per cent.
Capital Traction Co	$12,000,000.00	$720,000.00	$43,200.00	$763,200.00	$13,080,000.00	2.1	$130,000.00
Washington Rwy. and Electric Co. and controlled lines	19,044,990.00	425,000.00	868,205.00	1,293,205.00	36,409,090.00	.8	364,090.80
Total	31,044,990.00	1,145,000.00	911,405.00	2,056,405.00	49,489,090.00	a1.1	494,890.80
Washington Rwy. and Electric Co	15,000,000.00	425,000.00	632,355.00	1,057,355.00	27,647,100.00	.7	276,471.00

a Average.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Mr. President, I should also be glad if the Senator from New Hampshire would withdraw his motion to lay the amendment on the table, so that the Senate may vote directly on the question whether they want the street railway companies in the District of Columbia, that can afford to pay something approaching the tax paid by private citizens, to be given an opportunity to do that. I should like to have a vote taken directly on the amendment, if the Senator will withdraw his motion, and I will agree not to say anything further on the subject.

Mr. GALLINGER. Is the Senator ready to take a vote now?

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I am ready to take a vote now.

Mr. GALLINGER. Then I withdraw my motion to lay the amendment on the table.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I understand the yeas and nays were ordered on the amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The yeas and nays were ordered on the amendment proposed by the Senator from North Dakota. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MALLORY (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR]. As he is not present, I withhold my vote.

Mr. SCOTT (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Florida [Mr. TALIAFERRO]. I do not see him in the Chamber. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

Mr. SIMMONS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. CLAPP], who is out of the Chamber.

Mr. STONE (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CLARK]. I do not see him in the Chamber, and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. TILLMAN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. DILLINGHAM]. I do not see him in the Chamber, and therefore withhold my vote. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. WARREN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. MONEY], and therefore withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. BAILEY. I announce my pair with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. ELKINS]. As I do not know how he would vote if he were present, I withhold my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 13, nays 21, as follows:

YEAS—13.

Benson	Daniel	La Follette	Patterson
Berry	Dolliver	McCumber
Burkett	Fulton	Nelson
Carter	Hansbrough	Overman

NAYS—21.

Aldrich	Clay	Hemenway	Perkins
Allee	Dick	Kean	Piles
Blackburn	Foraker	Lodge	Wetmore
Brandegee	Foster	Long
Bulkeley	Gallinger	Martin
Burnham	Hale	Millard

NOT VOTING—55.

Alger	Cullom	Knox	Rayner
Allison	Depew	Latimer	Scott
Ankeny	Dillingham	McCreary	Simmons
Bacon	Dryden	McEnery	Smoot
Bailey	Dubois	McLaurin	Spooner
Beveridge	Elkins	Mallory	Stone
Burrows	Flint	Money	Sutherland
Carmack	Frazier	Morgan	Taliaferro
Clapp	Frye	Newlands	Teller
Clark, Mont.	Gamble	Nixon	Tillman
Clark, Wyo.	Gearin	Penrose	Warner
Clarke, Ark.	Heyburn	Pettus	Warren
Crane	Hopkins	Platt	Whyte
Culberson	Kittredge	Proctor

The VICE-PRESIDENT. A quorum has not voted. The Secretary will call the roll.

Mr. SCOTT. In order to make a quorum, I shall take the liberty of voting in the absence of my pair.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It is too late. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aldrich	Carter	Kean	Perkins
Allee	Clay	La Follette	Piles
Bailey	Cullom	Lodge	Scott
Benson	Daniel	Long	Simmons
Berry	Dick	McCumber	Stone
Blackburn	Foraker	Mallory	Tillman
Brandegee	Foster	Martin	Warren
Bulkeley	Fulton	Millard	Wetmore
Burkett	Gallinger	Nelson
Burnham	Hansbrough	Overman
Burrows	Hemenway	Patterson

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Forty-one Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is not present.

Mr. HALE entered the Chamber and answered to his name.

Mr. ALDRICH. I move that the Sergeant-at-Arms be directed to request the attendance of absent Senators.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. SMOOT entered the Chamber and answered to his name.

Mr. GALLINGER. Would it be in order to ask for a call of the absentees?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It is in order.

Mr. GALLINGER. I should like to have that done.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the names of the absentees.

The Secretary proceeded to call the names of absent Senators.

Mr. CLAY (when Mr. BACON's name was called). My colleague [Mr. BACON] has necessarily been called to Georgia on account of the recent death of a Member of the House, Mr. Lester, from my State, and he is absent by order of the Senate.

Mr. SCOTT (when Mr. ELKINS's name was called). My colleague [Mr. ELKINS] is unavoidably detained at his home in Elkins.

Mr. PERKINS (when Mr. FLINT's name was called). I will state that my colleague [Mr. FLINT] is quite ill at his home.

Mr. GEARIN and Mr. KITTREDGE answered to their names when called.

Mr. BLACKBURN (when Mr. MCCREARY's name was called). My colleague [Mr. MCCREARY] is necessarily absent from the city.

Mr. STONE (when Mr. WARNER's name was called). My colleague [Mr. WARNER] is absent by order of the Senate, in attendance at the funeral of the late Representative Lester, of Georgia.

The call of the names of absent Senators was concluded.

Mr. ANKENY entered the Chamber and answered to his name.

Mr. NELSON. My colleague [Mr. CLAPP] is absent by order of the Senate, attending the funeral of the late Congressman Lester.

Mr. KEAN. My colleague [Mr. DRYDEN] is necessarily absent from the city.

Mr. CARTER. I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. CLARK of Montana] is unavoidably absent.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Forty-six Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. Without objection, further proceedings under the call will be suspended.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let the roll be called on agreeing to the pending amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. HANSBROUGH].

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MALLORY (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the senior Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR].

Mr. SCOTT (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Florida [Mr. TALLIAFERRO]. Not knowing how he would vote, I, of course, withhold my vote. I should vote "yea" if he were here.

Mr. KEAN. I suggest to the Senator from West Virginia to transfer his pair to the junior Senator from Michigan [Mr. ALGER].

Mr. SCOTT. I will transfer my pair to the junior Senator from Michigan [Mr. ALGER]. I vote "yea."

Mr. SIMMONS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. CLAPP].

Mr. STONE (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the senior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CLARK].

Mr. TILLMAN (when his name was called). I again announce my pair with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. DILLINGHAM].

Mr. WARREN (when his name was called). If agreeable to the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN], we will arrange a transfer of pairs, so that the Senator from Vermont [Mr. DILLINGHAM] will stand paired with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. MONEY].

Mr. TILLMAN. Very well.

Mr. WARREN. I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. TILLMAN. I vote "yea."

Mr. LONG. I inquire if the Senator from Idaho [Mr. DUBOIS] has voted?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. He has not voted.

Mr. LONG. I will transfer my pair with the Senator from Idaho to the junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. DRYDEN], and vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. BAILEY. In order to make a quorum, notwithstanding my pair with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. ELKINS], I will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. MALLORY. I understand that one vote is very much needed. I will, therefore, vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. MCLAURIN. I desire to state on behalf of my colleague [Mr. MONEY] that he is paired with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN]. That pair has, I understand, been transferred to the Senator from Vermont [Mr. DILLINGHAM].

The result was announced—yeas 17, nays 29, as follows:

YEAS—17.

Bailey	Daniel	La Follette	Scott
Benson.	Dolliver	McEnery	Tillman
Berry	Fulton	McLaurin
Burkett	Gearin	Overman
Carter	Hansbrough	Patterson

NAYS—29.

Aldrich	Clay	Kittredge	Perkins
Allee	Cullom	Lodge	Piles
Ankeny	Dick	Long	Smoot
Blackburn	Foraker	Mallory	Warner
Brandegee	Foster	Martin	Wetmore
Bulkeley	Gallinger	Millard
Burnham	Hemenway	Nelson
Burrows	Kean	Penrose

NOT VOTING—43.

Alger	Depew	Hopkins	Proctor
Allison	Dillingham	Knox	Rayner
Bacon	Dryden	Latimer	Simmons
Beveridge	Dubois	McCreary	Spooner
Carmack	Elkins	McCumber	Stone
Clapp	Flint	Money	Sutherland
Clark, Mont.	Frazier	Morgan	Talliaferro
Clark, Wyo.	Frye	Newlands	Teller
Clarke, Ark.	Gamble	Nixon	Warren
Crane	Hale	Pettus	Whyte.
Culberson	Heyburn	Platt

So Mr. HANSBROUGH's amendment was rejected.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, while it is evident that after considerable effort a voting quorum may be obtained, I am quite well satisfied that the pending bill can not be gotten through this evening, and I will venture to ask unanimous consent that it be taken up immediately after the routine morning business to-morrow.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from New Hampshire asks unanimous consent that the pending bill be taken up for consideration immediately after the routine business to-morrow. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. CULLOM. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After thirty-five minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 15 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, June 20, 1906, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate June 19, 1906.

ENVOY EXTRAORDINARY AND MINISTER PLENIPOTENTIARY.

Herbert H. D. Peirce, of Massachusetts, now Third Assistant Secretary of State, to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to Norway, to fill an original vacancy.

THIRD ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF STATE.

Huntington Wilson, of Illinois, now secretary of the legation at Tokyo, Japan, to be Third Assistant Secretary of State, vice Herbert H. D. Peirce, nominated to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Norway.

RECEIVER OF PUBLIC MONEY.

C. Frost Liggett, of Colorado, to be receiver of public moneys at Lamar, Colo., his term having expired February 20, 1906. (Reappointment.)

REGISTER OF LAND OFFICE.

John A. Williams, of Colorado, to be register of the land office at Lamar, Colo., his term having expired March 10, 1906. (Reappointment.)

CONFIRMATION.

Executive nomination confirmed by the Senate June 19, 1906.

POSTMASTER.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

John E. Hipple to be postmaster at Pierre, in the county of Hughes and State of South Dakota.

WITHDRAWAL.

Executive nomination withdrawn June 19, 1906.

Albert W. Brickwood, jr., of Arizona, to be consul of the United States of class 8 at Nogales, Mexico.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, June 19, 1906.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I submit a report from the Committee on Agriculture on the agricultural appropriation bill, with Senate amendments.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York submits a report from the Committee on Agriculture on the agricultural appropriation bill. The Clerk will report the title.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 18537) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

EFFICIENCY OF THE MILITIA.

Mr. MORRELL. Mr. Speaker, I desire to move to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill 1442 in lieu of House bill 7136.

The SPEAKER. Is the Senate bill on the Speaker's table or in the committee?

Mr. MORRELL. The Senate bill has passed the Senate and is on the Speaker's table.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania moves to suspend the rules and pass the following Senate bill, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1442) to increase the efficiency of the militia and promote rifle practice.

Be it enacted, etc., That section 1661 of the Revised Statutes, as amended by the acts of February 12, 1887, and June 6, 1900, is hereby amended and reenacted so as to read as follows:

"SECTION 1. That the sum of $2,000,000 is hereby annually appropriated, to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose of providing arms, ordnance stores, quartermaster stores, and camp equipage for issue to the militia, such apropriation to remain available until expended."

SEC. 2. That section 2 of the act of February 12, 1887, is hereby amended and reenacted so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 2. That said apropriation shall be apportioned among the several States and Territories, under the direction of the Secretary of War, according to the number of Senators and Representatives to which each State respectively is entitled in the Congress of the United States, and to the Territories and District of Columbia such proportion and under such regulations as the President may prescribe: Provided, however, That no State shall be entitled to the benefits of the appropriation apportioned to it unless the number of its regularly enlisted, organized, and uniformed active militia shall be at least 100 men for each Senator and Representative to which such State is entitled in the Congress of the United States. And the amount of said appropriation which is thus determined not to be available shall be covered back into the Treasury: Provided also, That the sums so apportioned among the several States and Territories and the District of Columbia shall be available for the purposes named in section 14 of the act of January 21, 1903, for the actual excess of expenses of travel in making the inspections therein provided for over the allowances made for same by law; for the promotion of rifle practice, including the acquisition, construction, maintenance, and equipment of shooting galleries and suitable target ranges; for the hiring of horses and draft animals for the use of mounted troops, batteries, and wagons; for forage for the same and for such other incidental expenses in connection with encampments, maneuvers, and field instruction provided for in sections 14 and 15 of the said act of January 21, 1903, as the Secretary of War may deem necessary."

SEC. 3. That section 3 of the act of February 12, 1887, is hereby amended and reenacted as follows:

"SEC. 3. That the purchase or manufacture of arms, ordnance stores, quartermaster stores, and camp equipage for the militia under the provisions of this act shall be made under the direction of the Secretary of War, as such arms, ordnance and quartermaster stores, and camp equipage are now manufactured or otherwise provided for the use of the Regular Army, and they shall be receipted for and shall remain the property of the United States, and be annually accounted for by the Governors of the States and Territories and by the commanding general of the National Guard of the District of Columbia, for which purpose the Secretary of War shall prescribe and supply the necessary blanks and make such regulations as he may deem necessary to protect the interests of the United States."

SEC. 4. That section 4 of the act of February 12, 1887, is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 4. That whenever any property furnished to any State or Territory, or the District of Columbia, as hereinbefore provided, has been lost or destroyed, or has become unserviceable or unsuitable from use in service, or from any other cause, it shall be examined by a disinterested surveying officer of the organized militia, to be appointed by the governor of the State or Territory, or the commanding general of the National Guard of the District of Columbia, to whom the property has been issued, and his report shall be forwarded by said governor or commanding general direct to the Secretary of War, and if it shall appear to the Secretary of War from the record of survey that the property has been lost or destroyed through unavoidable causes, he is hereby authorized to relieve the State from further accountability therefor; if it shall appear that the loss or destruction of property was due to carelessness or neglect or that its loss could have been avoided by the exercise of reasonable care, the money value thereof shall be charged against the allotment to the States under section 1661 of the Revised Statutes as amended. If the articles so surveyed are found to be unserviceable or unsuitable, the Secretary of War shall direct what disposition, by sale or otherwise, shall be made of them, except unserviceable clothing, which shall be destroyed, and if sold the proceeds of such sale shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States."

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. PAYNE. I demand a second, Mr. Speaker, in order to have an explanation of the bill, and I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The gentleman from Pennsylvania is entitled to twenty minutes and the gentleman from New York to twenty minutes.

Mr. PAYNE. I would like to ask the gentleman what change this bill makes in existing law. First, as to the annual appropriation, and if this amount is a permanent annual appropriation, how much?

Mr. MORRELL. It changes the annual appropriation from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000. The present annual appropriation made by the United States is $1,000,000 as against $4,500,000 which is contributed by the States themselves. In other words, it provides for the maintaining of 122,000 officers and men of the militia of the different States, $5,500,000. Under the old proportion, the United States Government paid, as near as can be calculated, $8 per year per man as against $37 per year per man paid by the States themselves.

Mr. PAYNE. What necessity is there for doubling this appropriation now?

Mr. MORRELL. In answer to that, I would like to have the Clerk read a letter from the Secretary of War.

The Clerk read as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT, January 18, 1906.

Respectfully returned to the chairman Committee on the Militia, House of Representatives, with the information that the annual appropriation for the support of the militia has been found inadequate for its development along the lines proposed by the Department, and consequently the favorable consideration of Congress is urged for the increase in appropriation herein proposed. This measure also removes certain limitations upon the use of the appropriation which have proved unreasonably restrictive, and provides for its use in the promotion of rifle practice, which is a most important feature in promoting the efficiency of the militia, and which has heretofore received neither recognition or provision for its development. The remaining sections remedy defects in the law governing the accountability of State authorities for militia supplies issued by the United States, and provides an adequate means of properly enforcing accountability therefor.

This measure has the unqualified indorsement of the Interstate National Guard Association, and the Department heartily recommends favorable action by Congress with a view to promote the efficiency of the militia.

WM. H. TAFT, Secretary of War.

Mr. MORRELL. I have also here letters from the adjutant-general of the State of New York—in fact letters from the adjutant-generals of all the States directed to different Members of Congress of the different State delegations calling attention to the importance of this bill, particularly as far as promotion of rifle practice is concerned.

Mr. TAWNEY. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. MORRELL. Certainly.

Mr. TAWNEY. What is the necessity for making this a permanent definite appropriation?

Mr. MORRELL. For the reason that the object for which this money will be expended will be necessary to be carried on in the following years.

Mr. TAWNEY. What is the necessity for this appropriation being a permanent definite appropriation, greater than the necessity would be for a permanent definite appropriation for the maintenance of the Army of the United States? The Secretary of War must submit his estimates for the maintenance of the Army annually. Now, why can not he, and why should he not, submit his estimates for the militia establishment just the same as he submits his estimates for the Army, so that Congress may have some control and supervision over the expenditure?

Mr. MORRELL. I will yield to the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. HULL. The reason for it is to my mind very plain. The Army is created by Federal law and maintained from year to year on estimates submitted by the War Department. The militia is primarily a State force, organized by the State governments. It is incorporated into what we call the second line of defense only in time of war, so that the Government can only call upon it at that time. It is primarily the police force of the State, but for all time the Government has borne part of the expense of the maintenance of the organized militia of the State. However until only within the last few years there was but little money appropriated, but there was a large appropriation for arms.

Now, we have adopted a plan of a small standing army. With over 80,000,000 people our standing army amounts to only about 60,000 men all told. It is supposed that by having a well-trained militia force the expense of the regular military establishment will be decreased and the necessity for increasing the number, except in time of war, beyond the 60,000 will be obviated. It would be impossible, these being State organizations, for the War Department to submit estimates to Congress in time for action each year. If you attempted that, you would have to appropriate specifically for each State. This bill gives the Department the power to apportion among the States, so that each State gets the proportion of the money that it is entitled to by the efficiency of the guard that it maintains. No State can arrange its expenditures for the guard if it is not known in advance the amount to be contributed permanently for the maintenance of the guard by the Federal Government.

Mr. TAWNEY. Will the gentleman permit me to interrupt him?

Mr. HULL. Yes.

Mr. TAWNEY. Why would it not be just as competent for Congress to annually appropriate the aggregate amount Congress deems necessary for the militia, and make the allotment on the recommendation of the Secretary of War, as it is to appropriate annually for the Army? Then we would obviate the poor, if not dangerous, policy of permanent definite appropriation.

Mr. HULL. This Congress can not bind any of its successors, and whenever Congress desires, it can cut off this appropriation; but by making it annual until Congress otherwise orders, you increase the efficiency of the militia and help to develop this strong arm of national defense. To depend on annual appropriations would work badly. I hope the bill will pass.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds voting in the affirmative) the rules were suspended, and the bill passed.

By unanimous consent, the corresponding House bill was ordered to lie on the table.

PUBLIC LANDS IN CALIFORNIA.

Mr. SMITH of California. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 1031) granting to the State of California 5 per cent of the net proceeds of the cash sales of public lands in said State.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there be, and is hereby, granted to the State of California 5 per cent of the net proceeds of the cash sales of the public lands which have been heretofore made by the United States since the admission of said State, or may hereafter be made in said State, to aid in the support of the public or common schools of said State; and the sum of money necessary to pay said 5 per cent to said State is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I demand a second.

Mr. SMITH of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California asks unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California is entitled to twenty minutes, and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] is entitled to twenty minutes.

Mr. SMITH of California. Does the gentleman from Missouri desire to ask any question?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I want to know what this bill is about, and the reasons for such an extraordinary proposition.

Mr. SMITH of California. I will state, Mr. Speaker, that from the time of the admission of Ohio into the Union, in 1802, down to the admission of Oklahoma, last week, every State in the Union, with the single exception of California, has received, in its enabling act, 5 per cent of the cash sales of the public lands within the State. Some of them have had various subsequent acts, giving all the way from 10 to 26 per cent. Now, the reason California did not receive her share was because she never was a Territory. She came to us from Mexico; and without any preliminary action of Congress she prepared and adopted a constitution, elected her Senators and Representatives, and sent them here to Washington.

Mr. TAWNEY. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. SMITH of California. Yes.

Mr. TAWNEY. I think I shall have to correct the gentleman's statement that California is the only State that has not received this payment. The State of Minnesota has not received it.

Mr. GILBERT of Kentucky. Nor has the State of Kentucky.

Mr. TAWNEY. And there is a bill now pending before Congress for the purpose of making that payment to the State of Minnesota.

Mr. SMITH of California. Minnesota, by an act of Congress, found in the fifth volume of the Statutes at Large, at page 73, received her 5 per cent; that was in 1857. Again, in 1858, she was given another 5 per cent. The gentleman probably has in mind the land that was covered by military bounty warrants. That question is unsettled in a great many States, including California also.

Mr. TAWNEY. The act of 1857 preceded the admission of the Territory into the Union.

Mr. SMITH of California. Certainly. That was the enabling act.

Mr. TAWNEY. Yes; that was the enabling act, I suppose. The State was admitted in 1858.

Mr. SMITH of California. This 5 per cent is generally authorized in the enabling act, just as it was in the Oklahoma case last week. We gave Oklahoma 5 per cent, and $5,000,000 beside. California alone is the only State that has never received any share of the cash sales of the public lands.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the gentleman if this tax is retroactive and undertakes to get 5 per cent of all the lands that are sold?

Mr. SMITH of California. Yes, sir.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. What have Californians been doing for fifty-four years if they haven't got it before?

Mr. SMITH of California. Since 1879 California has been trying as industriously as she could to get this money. The bill has passed the Senate ten times and never received an unfavorable report in either branch of Congress. It now passes the Senate unanimously as a matter of course, because they have heard it discussed until they know exactly what it means.

Mr. HULL. How much will it carry?

Mr. SMITH of California. In the neighborhood of $900,000; that is, according to the statement which the Auditor of the Treasury made to Senator Bard a year or two ago.

Mr. HULL. It carries 5 per cent on all public lands that have been sold.

Mr. KAHN. Yes; since 1857.

Mr. SMITH of California. On all cash sales. When California was admitted, you must remember that she was a long way off and the East knew practically nothing about her conditions. There were reports about the Spanish grants, and things of that kind, and Congress declared that it could not take care of this question at that time, but would await further information. But in 1851 they appointed a commission to investigate the boundary of the Spanish grants, and in the meantime withdrew the public lands from entry, and it wasn't until 1857 that they were restored; and immediately after that, in 1858, the legislature of California memorialized Congress to take care of this question.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Did the homestead act ever apply in California?

Mr. SMITH of California. Yes; it does yet.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Does this bill undertake to mulct the Government in 5 per cent of the lands that have been homesteaded?

Mr. SMITH of California. No; it does not touch the homestead or military bounty entries, and does not touch anything except the cash entries. The bill is reported favorably by the Public Lands Committee.

Mr. HINSHAW. In addition to the $900,000 directly appropriated, it will hereafter take 5 per cent of any lands that are sold?

Mr. SMITH of California. Yes; the same as all other States.

Mr. HINSHAW. How much public land have you out there?

Mr. SMITH of California. I don't know; there is a large amount of desert and mountain land that is not going on the market very fast. There is a large part of California in the forest reserve, and much of the balance is desert land that is not going at any price.

Mr. RUCKER. How much would the bill carry for the land already sold?

Mr. SMITH of California. I have already stated—about $900,000.

Mr. RUCKER. How much public land have you yet in California?

Mr. SMITH of California. I stated a moment ago that I was not able to state exactly. There is a very large amount of it in forest reserve and parks, and still more of it rough land—mountainous land and desert lands.

Mr. TAWNEY. Does this admit of the payment for lands that were located under the military warrants?

Mr. SMITH of California. No, sir.

Mr. TAWNEY. It would apply only to the cash sales?

Mr. SMITH of California. Yes, sir.

Mr. TAWNEY. Five per cent of the cash sales?

Mr. SMITH of California. Yes; the bill specifically mentions cash sales. There is another bill pending here involving the military bounty question in which California is interested, but it is not involved in this bill.

Mr. GILBERT of Kentucky. I would like to know the difference between California in this proposition and Kentucky and Vermont and other States which were admitted prior to 1802. What is the difference in the public land question?

Mr. SMITH of California. I am not familiar with the Kentucky question.

Mr. GILBERT of Kentucky. Is it not true that Vermont and Kentucky and a number of other States admitted into the Union prior to 1802 were in the same attitude California is?

Mr. SMITH of California. This statement shows that Kentucky has been allowed 10 per cent.

Mr. GILBERT of Kentucky. What about Vermont?

Mr. SMITH of California. It is in the same category; it has been allowed 5 per cent, I think.

Mr. GILBERT of Kentucky. Kentucky never had any public lands; she never was a Territory.

Mr. SMITH of California. There was a blanket act, I think, in 1841, giving all of the States 10 per cent, and that was in addition to many 5 per cent grants which they had had on coming into the Union. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I now yield five minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BURNETT].

Mr. BURNETT. Mr. Speaker, I desire only to use about two or three minutes. I wish to say that as I understand this bill—and the committee investigated it pretty carefully—it simply puts California on the same footing as to the 5 per cent fund as the other States that have been admitted into the Union. It is not 5 per cent on homestead entries; and as I understood the bill it is 5 per cent on the cash sales. It is simply what Alabama and Missouri and the other States which came into the Union since the date the gentleman from California refers to received. All of them which have come in since that time have come in on that footing. The mere fact that it is retroactive does not deprive it of the equity that it has, simply because California waited for fifty years to get that which they were entitled to, and which other States got. That certainly is no argument against their having it at this time. I think that the bill is just. The fact is that a great many of us think that there is a good deal more coming to other States from this 5 per cent arising from other sales of land. There is a bill pending, and it has been reported by the Public Lands Committee, giving it to the other States in addition to this 5 per cent fund. But this bill does not embrace that. This simply stands flat-footed on the proposition that California asks for just what the rest of us have gotten. It seems to me that it is equitable and they should have it.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. RUCKER].

Mr. RUCKER. Mr. Speaker, I would like very much to agree with my colleague on the committee and support this bill, but I can not do it. This bill is predicated upon the fact that the Government owes the State of California $900,000, which is sought to be obtained here under suspension of the rules in a very few minutes' time without adequate debate, while I know and many of my associates know that in the case of individual claims and demands against the Government it is very difficult to secure action. I personally have a bill pending now for relief of an old gentleman who is aged and infirm, and who may not live to see another session of Congress, which I am not permitted to call up. His bill is so just and equitable that no one will oppose it. Everyone who has any knowledge of it concedes it absolute merit, it has been unanimously reported, but I can not get consideration of it. It is only for $200 or $300, but that is to an individual. But when it comes to paying eight or nine or ten hundred thousand dollars to a great State on an assumed liability, legal or equitable, of the Government for past transactions, the House will pass it under suspension of the rules. I can not give my approval to it.

Mr. KAHN. Is it not a fact that Missouri has received 20 per cent of the sales of her public lands?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. No; that is not true.

Mr. RUCKER. I am not prepared to say. I do not think so. I know one thing, that Missouri has not received any more than she is entitled to, and I am sure of another thing, that Missouri has nobody here asking the Congress of the United States to grant her one dollar she ought not to have. If the gentleman says she has received 20 per cent, I will assume that it is true, because I know the gentleman would not make a statement unless it is true.

Mr. KAHN. Is not California by the same rule entitled to her share?

Mr. RUCKER. If California is entitled to it, the question is, Why hasn't she had it? The gentleman says that since 1879 she has been seeking it.

Mr. KAHN. Members of Congress from that State have succeeded in passing such a bill through one or the other House constantly since that time. There has never been an adverse report, so that everybody has conceded the justice of the claim.

Mr. RUCKER. Mr. Speaker, I want to say I was not present in the committee when this bill was considered, therefore I do not pronounce against the justice of the bill. It may be just, but so far as I am personally concerned, I can not support it for the reasons just stated.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SMITH of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL].

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, this is a particularly appropriate time to do this act of justice to the people of California. The legislation proposes to give to the State and the people of California that proportion of the proceeds of the cash sales of public lands that all of the other public-land States have received. I sympathize with the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. RUCKER] in view of the fact that he has not up to this time been able to bring his meritorious proposition up for consideration, but I submit that that is no argument against doing this act of simple justice to California. It is not proposed by this legislation to do more for California than has been done for the people of all the other public-land States of the Union, and at this time, when that great State is still under the shadow of an overwhelming catastrophe, it is, as I said, most proper and opportune that we should give to the State these sums to which she has been so long entitled.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I have not half as much objection to this particular bill as I have to this way of legislating. Here the gentleman comes in under suspension of the rules with a claim for $900,000, and there is not a man in the House who has time enough to investigate the facts and find out whether it is a just claim or not.

I remember one time I was objecting to Speaker Reed in a private conversation about the strictness with which he demanded that he should investigate bills to know what was in them himself before he would recognize me or anybody else to call one of them up under unanimous consent. This arrangement is very close kin to the unanimous-consent business. He said that on the face of it it looked like the fairest way in the world to pass a bill was to call it up by unanimous consent, but as a matter of fact that it was the most dangerous way that legislation was ever adopted by this House, and I believe that that is true. We have not time to investigate what these other States got and under what kind of acts they got them.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Yes.

Mr. MONDELL. The gentleman knows that the committee has very carefully examined this matter, and the members of the committee have assured the gentleman that 5 per cent of the cash sales of the public lands has been paid to all the public-land States, and a number of the public-land States—I think including the gentleman's own State—received a larger amount.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I want to take that as an illustration, the proposition that you do not know what you are doing. It says, "Missouri, 2 per cent, February 28, 1859." Two per cent on what in 1859? "Missouri, 3 per cent, May 3, 1822." Three per cent on what?

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Wait a minute until I get through. "Missouri, 10 per cent, September 4, 1841." Ten per cent on what?

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield I think I can inform him.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Well, that is what I want.

Mr. MONDELL. These sums have all been paid on the basis of cash sales—2½ per cent, 3 per cent, or 10 per cent, as the case might be, on the amount of cash sales of land within the borders of the State. Now, all of the States have received at least 5 per cent on cash sales; all of them have received that. Some of the States have had special legislation whereby, in addition, they have received 5 or 10 per cent on certain classes of sales of land not sold for cash, figured on a cash basis of $1.25 an acre. Now, we are not proposing to give California the grant that a number of other States have had over and above the uniform amount of 5 per cent on cash sales, but every State in the Union has received at least 5 per cent on the cash sales of their public lands, and California is certainly entitled to that amount.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Let me ask a question. How does it happen Missouri, for instance—I take that because it is my own State—has not received any per cent on public lands sold since 1841?

Mr. MONDELL. On the contrary, I want to say to the gentleman——

Mr. SMITH of California. Those acts were of a continuing nature; they were to continue as long as there were public lands.

Mr. MONDELL. And Missouri has received every year and is receiving now and will receive this year 5 per cent on the cash sales of her public lands, and every other State in the Union save California alone.

Mr. SMITH of California. May I make an explanation with reference to the 2 per cent feature? I have not examined that particular State, but I have followed through a great many, and in the case of Alabama, you see, when she came into the Union she was given 3 per cent for a few years, and then Alabama was given 2 per cent——

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Two per cent to start on, and then 3.

Mr. SMITH of California. Yes; and now the act admitting Alabama provided this: That 5 per cent of the sales of public lands of Alabama should be set aside for the benefit of the State; that 3 per cent, or 2, should be expended by the State of Alabama on her highways and on river improvements, and the other should be spent by the Federal Government for her benefit; and then a few years later an act of Congress was passed turning over that to the State also, and she got the benefit of the full 5 per cent from the beginning. Congress disposed of a portion of it at first, and then turned it all over to her.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. If it turns out that the statements of the gentleman from California and the gentleman from Wyoming are correct——

Mr. MONDELL. I assure the gentleman the statements are correct.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Then California is only getting what she is entitled to.

Mr. SMITH of California. That is all we are asking for.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. But if the act authorizing this to Missouri and the rest of these States is not a continuing act, and they have not all got this percentage to which they are entitled under these various acts, then in the next Congress every State in the Government, except California, will be back in here with a bill to give them what California has gotten, and, like the fellow with his bread and molasses, it will never come out even.

Mr. MONDELL. If the gentleman will yield again, I want to assure the gentleman that every member of the Committee on Public Lands, and a great many Members of the House, are familiar with this situation. Every State in the Union is receiving, and has received since its admission, 5 per cent, at least, of the cash sales of the public lands.

Mr. PAYNE. I would like to ask the gentleman if he has any knowledge of the amount received by each State? For instance, how much did New York receive? The report says 10 per cent, and 10 per cent is about the only money received by the State of New York that I know of, and that was the loan made to the State in 1840 and 1841. That loan was made to New York and to other States based not upon the sale of lands, but upon the population. Now, if our quota was detained from the sale of land, it would hardly be enough, in my judgment, to send the children to school, let alone giving $1,000,000 to California at one fell swoop.

Mr. MONDELL. I can not tell the gentleman at this moment what the actual amount paid to each State has been, but each State has received 5 per cent of the amount received in cash from the sale of lands within her borders belonging to the United States.

Mr. PAYNE. It looks to me like a very inequitable distribution.

Mr. SMITH of California. Let me ask a question. The deposit which was made in the various States was outside and entirely independent of this 5 per cent, or whatever it was, that was given out of the proceeds of the sale. It was absolutely a gift from the public Treasury—that is, a deposit which has resulted in a gift.

Mr. PAYNE. I am a little curious to know what New York got at the rate of 10 per cent of the sale of public lands in the State of New York.

Mr. MONDELL. They probably would not get much at this time.

Mr. PAYNE. If I had had information that this bill was coming up, I would have looked into it. If the committee had wanted to give full information to the House, they probably would have put that into the report.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Here is the act of 1841:

That from and after the 31st day of December, A. D. 1841, there be allowed and paid to each of the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Alabama, Missouri, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, and Michigan, over and above what each of the said States are entitled to by the terms of the compact entered into between them and the United States upon their admission into the Union, the sum of 10 per cent on the net proceeds of the sales of the public lands which, subsequent to the day aforesaid, shall be made within the limits of each of the said States, respectively.

That seems to be a continuing act.

Mr. SMITH of California. Yes, sir; it is.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I have done my duty by the House by calling their attention to this slipshod way of legislating here.

Mr. PAYNE. I call my friend's attention to the fact that New York is not included in the act of 1841.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I made a mistake because the memorandum is wrong in the report of the committee.

Mr. PAYNE. I am inclined to think that the whole thing is a mistake. Inasmuch as the report does not include those States, it looks as if some one had made a mistake in making up the report.

Mr. SMITH of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LACEY].

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Speaker, I will ask leave to insert in my remarks, for the convenience of the House, a copy of the enabling acts relating to this matter in the States of Ohio, Louisiana, Indiana, Mississippi, Illinois, Alabama, Missouri, and down to and including Wyoming. There was no preceding enabling act for the State of California, and consequently California did not get the 5 per cent that was given to the other public-land States. I will give the act of Missouri as an illustration, for the benefit of my friend from Missouri [Mr. CLARK]. Missouri got 5 per cent of the net proceeds of the land for making public roads, canals, improving the navigation of rivers, three-fifths of which was to be applied in the State under the direction of the legislature, and two-fifths to the making of a road or roads leading to the State under the direction of Congress. At that time it was a hard matter to get a wagon road over into Missouri, so that the people could go there, and two-fifths of the money was to be spent by Congress to get a road into that then distant State.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. That was the old Cumberland road.

Mr. LACEY. That was the original proposition; but after that road was built and joined with the other roads leading to Missouri, and after Missouri needed no more such roads she still continued to get the 5 per cent, and has been getting it ever since, and has been building her own roads. Now, as to the State of Missouri, the consideration that she gave for this grant was this: She provided "no taxes should be imposed on lands the property of the United States within the State, and the navigable waters within the State shall remain public streams, and that without any tax, duty, or impost." Most of the States added one other condition providing that there should be no tax upon public lands sold by the United States for five years after they had been sold, exempting the property of the private citizen who purchased such land from the United States from taxation for five years. The condition varies a little as to the purpose for which the money was to be used in the different enabling acts, but all the different States had an enabling act, with the exception of the State of California.

Gentlemen who are familiar with the history of that time will recall the fact that there was a great struggle between the free States and the slave States; and the question was about the admission of California into the Union, doing it immediately, without an enabling act, and passing a fugitive-slave law, and a number of things became part of the general compromise, and California was rushed into the Union without a previous enabling act; and therefore it had never set apart the 5 per cent of the proceeds of the public lands that all the other new States had. She has been calling for it ever since I have been a Member of Congress; and the Committee on Public Lands have made a favorable report in nearly every Congress of which I have been a Member to give to them the same as was given to Missouri, Arkansas, and Kansas. There is no reason why California should not be put on the same footing. There is no provision in this bill as to what should be done with the money. I apprehend that California will take care of that. I suggest that it might be wisest to turn it over to the relief of San Francisco——

Mr. SMITH of California. California will give it to the benefit of public schools.

Mr. LACEY. There being no enabling act. There was a different proposition in the other States applying to the conditions surrounding each separate enabling act as the enabling act was passed. I ask to insert as a part of my remarks these different enabling acts.

There was no objection.

The enabling acts are as follows:

PUBLIC LAND STATES.

Dates of admission to the Union.

State.	Date.	United States Statutes.
Ohio	Apr. 30, 1802	Vol. 2,	p. 175
Louisiana	Feb. 20, 1811	2,	641
Indiana	Apr. 19, 1816	3,	290
Mississippi	July 4, 1836 / Mar. 3, 1857	3,	349
Illinois	Apr. 18, 1818	3,	430
Alabama	Mar. 2, 1819 / Mar. 2, 1855	3,	389
Missouri	Mar. 6, 1820	3,	545
Arkansas	June 23, 1836	5,	58
Michigan	do	5,	59
Iowa	Mar. 3, 1845	5,	790
Florida	do	5,	790
Wisconsin	Aug. 6, 1846	9,	58
Minnesota	Feb. 26, 1857	11,	167
Oregon	Feb. 14, 1859	11,	384
Kansas	May 4, 1858	12,	127
Nevada	Mar. 16, 1864	13,	30
Nebraska	Apr. 19, 1864	13,	47
Colorado	Mar. 3, 1875	13,	34
California	Sept. 9, 1850	9,	453

OHIO.

[5 per cent.]

* * * * * * * *

SEC. 7. 3d. That one-twentieth part of the net proceeds of the lands lying within the said State sold by Congress, from and after the thirtieth day of June next, after deducting all expenses incident to the same, shall be applied to the laying out and making public roads leading from the navigable waters emptying into the Atlantic, to the Ohio, to the said State, and through the same, such roads to be laid out under the authority of Congress, with the consent of the several States through which the road shall pass:

Provided always, That the three foregoing propositions herein offered are on the conditions that the convention of the said State shall provide, by an ordinance irrevocable without the consent of the United States, that every and each tract of land sold by Congress from and after the thirtieth day of June next, shall be and remain exempt from any tax laid by order or under authority of the State, whether for State, county, township, or any other purpose whatever, for the term of five years from and after the day of sale. (U. S. Stats., vol. 2, p. 175.)

LOUISIANA.

[5 per cent.]

* * * * * * * *

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That five percentum of the net proceeds of the sales of the lands of the United States after the first day of January, shall be applied to laying out and constructing public roads and levees in the said State, as the legislature thereof may direct.

SEC. 3. * * * And provided also, That the said convention shall provide by an ordinance, irrevocable without the consent of the United States, that the people inhabiting the said territory do agree and declare that they forever disclaim all right or title to the waste or unappropriated lands lying within the said territory; and that the same shall be and remain at the sole and entire disposition of the United States; and, moreover, that each and every tract of land sold by Congress shall be and remain exempt from any tax laid by the order or under the authority of the State, whether for State, county, township, parish, or any other purpose whatever, for the term of five years from and after the respective days of the sales thereof; and that the lands belonging to citizens of the United States residing without the said State shall never be taxed higher than the lands belonging to persons residing therein; and that no taxes shall be imposed on lands the property of the United States; and that the river Mississippi and the navigable rivers and waters leading into the same or into the Gulf of Mexico shall be common highways and forever free, as well to the inhabitants of the said State as to other citizens of the United States, without any tax, duty, impost, or toll therefor imposed by the said State. (U. S. Stats., vol. 2, p. 641.)

INDIANA.

[5 per cent.]

* * * * * * * *

SEC. 6. 3d. That five per cent of the net proceeds of the lands lying within the said Territory, and which shall be sold by Congress from and after the first day of December next, after deducting all expenses incident to the same, shall be reserved for making public roads and canals, of which three-fifths shall be applied to those objects within the said State, under the direction of the legislature thereof, and two-fifths to the making of a road or roads leading to the said State, under the direction of Congress.

FIFTH. * * * And provided always, That the five foregoing provisions herein offered are on the conditions that the convention of the said State shall provide, by an ordinance irrevocable without the consent of the United States, that every and each tract of land sold by the United States from and after the first day of December next shall be and remain exempt from any tax laid by order or under any authority of the State, whether for State, county, or township, or any other purpose whatever, for the term of five years from and after day of sale. (U. S. Stats., vol. 3, p. 290.)

MISSISSIPPI.

[5 per cent.]

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That five per cent of the net proceeds of the lands lying within the said Territory, and which shall be sold by Congress from and after the first day of December next, after deducting all expenses incident to the same, shall be reserved for making public roads and canals, of which three-fifths shall be applied to those objects within the said State, under the direction of the legislature thereof, and two-fifths to the making of a road or roads leading to the said State, under the direction of Congress.

SEC. 4. * * * And provided also, That the said convention shall provide, by an ordinance irrevocable without the consent of the United States, that the people inhabiting the said Territory do agree and declare that they forever disclaim all right or title to the waste or unappropriated lands lying within the said Territory, and that the same shall be and remain at the sole and entire disposition of the United States; and, moreover, that each and every tract of land sold by Congress shall be and remain exempt from any tax laid by the order or under the authority of the State, whether for State, county, township, parish, or any other purpose whatever, for the term of five years from and after the respective days of the sales thereof, and that the lands belonging to citizens of the United States residing without the said State shall never be taxed higher than the lands belonging to persons residing therein; and that no taxes shall be imposed on lands the property of the United States, and that the river Mississippi, and the navigable rivers and waters leading into the same, or into the Gulf of Mexico, shall be common highways, and forever free, as well to the inhabitants of the said State as to other citizens of the United States, without any tax, duty, impost, or toll therefor imposed by the said State. (U. S. Stats., vol. 3, p. 349.)

ILLINOIS.

[5 per cent.]

* * * * * * * *

SEC. 6. 3d. That five per cent of the net proceeds of the lands lying within such State, and which shall be sold by Congress from and after the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, after deducting all expenses incident to the same, shall be reserved for the purposes following, viz: Two-fifths to be disbursed, under the direction of Congress, in making roads leading to the State, the residue to be appropriated by the legislature of the State for the encouragement of learning, of which one-sixth part shall be exclusively bestowed on a college or university.

FOURTH. * * * Providing always, That the four foregoing propositions herein offered are on the conditions that the convention of the said State shall provide, by an ordinance irrevocable without the consent of the United States, that every and each tract of land sold by the United States from and after the first day of January, one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, shall remain exempt from any tax laid by order or under any authority of the State, whether for State, county, or township, or any other purpose whatever, for the term of five years from and after the day of sale: And further, That the bounty lands granted, or hereafter to be granted, for military services during the late war, shall, while they continue to be held by the patentees or their heirs, remain exempt, as aforesaid, from all taxes for the term of three years from and after the date of the patents, respectively; and that all the lands belonging to the citizens of the United States residing without the said State shall never be taxed higher than lands belonging to persons residing therein. (U. S. Stats., vol. 3, p. 430.)

ALABAMA.

[5 per cent.]

* * * * * * * *

SEC. 6. 3d. That five per cent of the net proceeds of the lands lying within the said Territory, and which shall be sold by Congress from and after the first day of September, in the year one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, after deducting all expenses incident to the same, shall be reserved for making public roads, canals, and improving the navigation of rivers, of which three-fifths shall be applied to those objects within the said State, under the direction of the legislature thereof, and two-fifths to the making of a road or roads leading to the said State, under the direction of Congress.

4th. * * * And provided, always, That the said convention shall provide by an ordinance, irrevocable without the consent of the United States, that the people inhabiting the said Territory do agree and declare that they forever disclaim all right and title to the waste or unappropriated lands lying within the said Territory, and that the same shall be and remain at the sole and entire disposition of the United States; and, moreover, that each and every tract of land sold by the United States after the first day of September, in the year one thousand eight hundred and nineteen, shall be and remain exempt from any tax laid by the order or under the authority of the State, county, township, parish, or any other purpose whatever, for the term of five years from and after the respective days of the sales thereof; and that the lands belonging to citizens of the United States residing without the said State shall never be taxed higher than the lands belonging to persons residing therein; and that no tax shall be imposed on lands the property of the United States; and that all navigable waters within the said State shall forever remain public highways, free to all citizens of said State and of the United States, without any tax, duty, impost, or toll therefor imposed by the said State. (U. S. Stats., vol. 3, p. 489.)

MISSOURI.

[5 per cent.]

* * * * * * * *

SEC. 6. 3d. That five per cent of the net proceeds of the sale of land lying within the said Territory or State, and which shall be sold by Congress from and after the first day of January next, after deducting all expenses incident to the same, shall be reserved for making public roads and canals, of which three-fifths shall be applied to those objects within the State, under the direction of the legislature thereof, and the other two-fifths in defraying, under the direction of Congress, the expenses to be incurred in making of a road or roads, canal or canals leading to the said State.

FIFTH. * * * Provided, That the five foregoing propositions herein offered are on the condition that the convention of the said State shall provide by an ordinance, irrevocable without the consent of the United States, that every and each tract of land sold by the United States from and after the first day of January next shall remain exempt from any tax laid by order or under the authority of the State, the patentees, or their heirs, remain exempt as aforesaid from taxation for the term of five years from and after the day of sale: And further, That the bounty lands granted, or hereafter to be granted for military services during the late war, shall, while they continue to be held by the patentees, or their heirs, remain exempt as aforesaid from taxation for the term of three years from and after the date of the patents, respectively. (U. S. Stats., vol. 3, p. 545.)

ARKANSAS.

[5 per cent.]

* * * * * * *

THIRD. That five per cent of the net proceeds of the sale of lands lying within said State, and which shall be sold by Congress from and after the first day of July next, after deducting all expenses incident to the same, shall be reserved for making public roads and canals within the said State, under the direction of the general assembly thereof.

FIFTH. * * * Provided, That the five foregoing propositions herein offered are on the condition that the general assembly or legislature of the said State, by virtue of the powers conferred upon it by the convention which framed the constitution of said State, shall provide, by an ordinance irrevocable without the consent of the United States, that the said general assembly of said State shall never interfere with the primary disposal of the soil within the same by the United States, nor with any regulation Congress may find necessary for securing the title of such soil to the bona fide purchasers thereof; and that no tax shall be imposed on lands the property of the United States, and that in no case shall nonresident proprietors be taxed higher than residents; and that the bounty lands granted, or hereafter to be granted, for military services during the late war, shall, whilst they continue to be held by the patentees or their heirs, remain exempt from any tax laid by order or under the authority of the State, county, township, or any other purpose, for the term of three years from and after the date of the patents, respectively. (U. S. Stats., vol. 5, p. 58.)

MICHIGAN.

[5 per cent.]

* * * * * * *

FIFTH. That five per cent of the net proceeds of the sales of all public lands lying within the said State which have been or shall be sold by Congress from and after the first day of July, eighteen hundred and thirty-six, after deducting all the expenses incident to the same, shall be appropriated for making public roads and canals within the said State, as the legislature may direct: Provided, That the five foregoing propositions herein offered are on the condition that the legislature of the said State, by virtue of the powers conferred upon it by the convention which framed the constitution of the said State, shall provide, by an ordinance irrevocable without the consent of the United States, that the said State shall never interfere with the primary disposal of the soil within the same by the United States, nor with any regulations Congress may find necessary for securing the title in such soil to the bona fide purchasers thereof; and that no tax shall be imposed on lands the property of the United States; and that in no case shall nonresident proprietors be taxed higher than residents; and that the bounty lands granted, or hereafter to be granted, for military services during the late war, shall, whilst they continue to be held by the patentees or their heirs, remain exempt from any tax laid by order or under the authority of the State, whether for State, county, township, or any other purpose, for the term of three years from and after the date of the patents, respectively. (U. S. Stats., vol. 5, p. 59.)

IOWA AND FLORIDA.

[5 per cent.]

* * * * * * *

5th. That five per cent of the net proceeds of sales of all public lands lying within the said State which have been or shall be sold by Congress from and after the admission of said State, after deducting all the expenses incident to the same, shall be appropriated for making public roads and canals within the said State, as the legislature may direct: Provided, That the five foregoing propositions herein offered are on the condition that the legislature of the said State, by virtue of the powers conferred upon it by the convention which framed the constitution of the said State, shall provide, by an ordinance irrevocable without the consent of the United States, that the said State shall never interfere with the primary disposal of the soil within the same by the United States, nor with any regulations Congress may find necessary for securing the title in such soil to the bona fide purchasers thereof; and that no tax shall be imposed on lands the property of the United States; and that in no case shall nonresident proprietors be taxed higher than residents; and that the bounty lands granted, or hereafter to be granted, for military services during the late war, shall, while they continue to be held by the patentees or their heirs, remain exempt from any tax laid by order or under the authority of the State, whether for State, country, township, or any other purpose, for the term of three years from and after the date of the patents, respectively. (U. S. Stats., vol. 5, p. 790.)

WISCONSIN.

[5 per cent.]

* * * * * * *

5th. That five per cent of the net proceeds of sales of all public lands lying within the said State which have been or shall be sold by Congress from and after the admission of said State into the Union, after deducting all the expenses incident to the same, shall be paid to the said State for the purpose of making public roads and canals in the same, as the legislature shall direct: Provided, That the foregoing propositions herein offered are on the conditions that the said convention which shall form the constitution of said State shall provide, by a clause in said constitution, or an ordinance, irrevocable without the consent of the United States, that said State shall never interfere with the primary disposal of the soil within the same by the United States, nor with any regulations Congress may find necessary for securing the title in such soil to bona fide purchasers thereof; and that no tax shall be imposed on lands the property of the United States; and that in no case shall nonresident proprietors be taxed higher than residents. (U. S. Stats., vol. 9, p. 58.)

MINNESOTA.

[5 per cent.]

* * * * * * *

SEC. 5. 5th. That five per cent of the net proceeds of sales of all public lands lying within said State which shall be sold by Congress after the admission of the said State into the Union, after deducting all the expenses incident to the same, shall be paid to said State for the purpose of making public roads and internal improvements, as the legislature shall direct: Provided, The foregoing propositions herein offered are on the condition that the said convention which shall form the constitution of said State shall provide, by a clause in said constitution, or an ordinance, irrevocable without the consent of the United States, that said State shall never interfere with the primary disposal of the soil within the same by the United States, or with any regulations Congress may find necessary for securing the title in said soil to bona fide purchasers thereof; and that no tax shall be imposed on lands belonging to the United States; and that in no case shall nonresident proprietors be taxed higher than residents. (U. S. Stats., vol. 11, p. 167.)

OREGON.

[5 per cent.]

* * * * * * *

SEC. 4. 5th. That five per centum of the net proceeds of sales of all public lands lying within said State which shall be sold by Congress after the admission of said State into the Union, after deducting all the expenses incident to the same, shall be paid to said State for the purpose of making public roads and internal improvements, as the legislature shall direct: Provided, That the foregoing propositions hereinbefore offered are on the condition that the people of Oregon shall provide, by an ordinance irrevocable without the consent of the United States, that said State shall never interfere with the primary disposal of the soil within the same by the United States, or with any regulations Congress may find necessary for securing the title in said soil to bona fide purchasers thereof; and that in no case shall nonresident proprietors be taxed higher than residents.

6th. And that the said State shall never tax the lands or the property of the United States in said State. (U. S. Stats., vol. 11, p. 384.)

KANSAS.

[5 per cent.]

* * * * * * *

SEC. 3. 5th. That five per centum of the net proceeds of sales of all public lands lying within said State which shall be sold by Congress after the admission of said State into the Union, after deducting all the expenses incident to the same, shall be paid to said State for the purpose of making public roads and internal improvements, or for other purposes, as the legislature may direct: Provided, That the foregoing propositions hereinbefore offered are on the condition that the people of Kansas shall provide, by an ordinance irrevocable without the consent of the United States, that said State shall never interfere with the primary disposal of the soil within the same by the United States or with any regulations Congress may find necessary for securing the title in said soil to bona fide purchasers thereof.

6th. And that the said State shall never tax the lands or the property of the United States in said State. (U. S. Stats., vol. 12, p. 127.)

NEVADA.

[5 per cent.]

* * * * * * *

SEC. 10. * * * That five per centum of the proceeds of the sales of all public lands lying within said State which shall be sold by the United States subsequent to the admission of said State into the Union, after deducting all the expenses incident to the same, shall be paid to the said State for the purpose of making and improving public roads, constructing ditches or canals, to effect a general system of irrigation of the agricultural land in the State, as the legislature shall direct.

SEC. 4. 3rd. That the people inhabiting said Territory do agree and declare that they forever disclaim all right and title to the unappropriated public lands lying within said Territory, and that the same shall be and remain at the sole and entire disposition of the United States; and that the lands belonging to citizens of the United States residing without the said State shall never be taxed higher than the land belonging to the residents thereof; and that no taxes shall be imposed by said State on lands or property therein belonging to or which may hereafter be purchased by the United States. (U. S. Stats., vol. 13, p. 30.)

NEBRASKA.

[5 per cent.]

* * * * * * *

SEC. 12. * * * That five per centum of the proceeds of the sales of all public lands lying within said State which have been or shall be sold by the United States prior or subsequent to the admission of said State into the Union, after deducting all expenses incident to the same, shall be paid to the said State for the support of common schools.

SEC. 4. 3rd. That the people inhabiting said Territory do agree and declare that they forever disclaim all right and title to the unappropriated public lands lying within said Territory, and that the same shall be and remain at the sole and entire disposition of the United States; and that the lands belonging to citizens of the United States residing without the said State shall never be taxed higher than the lands belonging to residents thereof; and that no taxes shall be imposed by said State on lands or property therein belonging to or which may hereafter be purchased by the United States. (U. S. Stats., vol. 13, p. 47.)

COLORADO.

[5 per cent.]

* * * * * * *

SEC. 10. * * * That five per centum of the proceeds of the sales of all public lands lying within said State which shall be sold by the United States subsequent to the admission of said State into the Union, after deducting all expenses incident to the same, shall be paid to the said State for the purpose of making and improving public roads, constructing ditches or canals, to effect a general system of irrigation of the agricultural land of the State, as the legislature shall direct.

SEC. 4. 3rd. That the people inhabiting said Territory do agree and declare that they forever disclaim all right and title to the unappropriated public lands within said Territory, and that the same shall be and remain at the sole and entire disposition of the United States, and that the land belonging to citizens of the United States residing without the said State shall never be taxed higher than the land belonging to residents thereof; and that no taxes shall be imposed by said State on lands or property therein belonging to or which may hereafter be purchased by the United States. (U. S. Stats., vol. 13, p. 34.)

CALIFORNIA.

[5 per cent.]

* * * * * * *

Be it enacted, * * * That the State of California shall be one, and is hereby declared to be one, of the United States of America, and admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States in all respects whatever.

SEC. 3. * * * That the said State of California is admitted into the Union upon the express condition that the people of said State, through their legislature or otherwise, shall never interfere with the primary disposal of the public lands within its limits, and shall pass no law and do no act whereby the title of the United States to, and right to dispose of, the same shall be impaired or questioned; and that they shall never lay any tax or assessment of any description whatsoever upon the public domain of the United States; and in no case shall nonresident proprietors who are citizens of the United States be taxed higher than residents; and that all the navigable waters within the said State shall be common highways and forever free, as well to the inhabitants of said state as to the citizens of the United States, without any tax, impost, or duty therefor. (U. S. Stats., vol. 9, p. 453.)

NORTH DAKOTA, SOUTH DAKOTA, MONTANA, AND WASHINGTON.

[February 22, 1889, 25 Stats., sec. 13, p. 676.]

IDAHO.

[July 3, 1890, 26 Stats., sec. 7, p. 215.]

WYOMING.

[July 10, 1890, 26 Stats., sec. 7, p. 222.]

* * * That five per centum of the proceeds of the sales of public lands lying within said States, which shall be sold by the United States subsequent to the admission of said States into the Union, after deducting all the expenses incident to the same, shall be paid to the said States to be used as a permanent fund, the interest of which only shall be expended for the purpose of common schools within said States, respectively.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the Senate bill.

The question was taken; and in the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended, and the bill was passed.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I offer the following motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

I move to suspend the rules, discharge the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union from the consideration of the Senate amendments to the agricultural appropriation bill, disagree to all the Senate amendments except No. 29, to concur in amendment 29, with the amendment recommended by the Committee on Agriculture, and ask a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing vote.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. LAMB. I demand a second.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I would like to ask the gentleman from New York if he can not agree upon a few minutes additional time beyond that allowed under the rule when a second is ordered?

Mr. WADSWORTH. I think the subject is so well understood by the House that twenty minutes on a side will be sufficient, which we are granted on a motion to suspend the rules.

The SPEAKER. Is unanimous consent given that a second be considered as ordered?

Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota. I would like to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman object to a second being considered as ordered?

Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota. For the present I would like to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota. Under the proceedings contemplated is it the intention that an amendment may be offered to the committee substitute?

The SPEAKER. A motion to suspend the rules and pass a bill covers the bill and such matters as are covered by the motion, and nothing else. Is a second considered as ordered?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent. Has the matter of a second been disposed of?

The SPEAKER. The Chair is trying to see.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I will wait until it is.

The SPEAKER. Is unanimous consent granted that a second may be considered as ordered? [After a pause.] The Chair hears no objection. The gentleman from New York is entitled to twenty minutes and the gentleman from Virginia to twenty minutes.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Now, Mr. Speaker, I wish to submit a request for unanimous consent, that there may be forty minutes' debate on each side.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I hate to be discourteous, Mr. Speaker, but I shall have to object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York objects. Without objection, the committee amendment proposed by way of substitute for the Senate amendment will be read, not to be taken out of anyone's time.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. What was the statement of the Chair?

The SPEAKER. That if there be no objection the proposed amendment, recommended by the House committee, will be read.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. We want to have it read.

The SPEAKER. It is also printed in bill form. The Clerk will read.

Mr. WADSWORTH. So that there may be no confusion, I want to say to the House that the print of June 19, 1906—today—is the print from which the Clerk will now read. It is found on page 15, and it is amendment numbered 29 to the agricultural appropriation bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

That for the purpose of preventing the use in interstate or foreign commerce, as hereinafter provided, of meat and meat food products which are unsound, unhealthful, unwholesome, or otherwise unfit for human food, the Secretary of Agriculture, at his discretion, may cause to be made, by inspectors appointed for that purpose, an examination and inspection of all cattle, sheep, swine, and goats before they shall be allowed to enter into any slaughtering, packing, meat-canning, rendering, or similar establishment, in which they are to be slaughtered and the meat and meat food products thereof are to be used in interstate or foreign commerce; and all cattle, swine, sheep, and goats found on such inspection to show symptoms of disease shall be set apart and slaughtered separately from all other cattle, sheep, swine, or goats, and when so slaughtered the carcasses of said cattle, sheep, swine, or goats shall be subject to a careful examination and inspection, all as provided by the rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture as herein provided for.

That for the purposes hereinbefore set forth the Secretary of Agriculture shall cause to be made by inspectors appointed for that purpose, as hereinafter provided, a postmortem examination and inspection of the carcasses and parts thereof of all cattle, sheep, swine, and goats to be prepared for human consumption at any slaughtering, meat-canning, salting, packing, rendering, or similar establishment in any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia for transportation or sale as articles of interstate or foreign commerce; and the carcasses and parts thereof of all such animals found to be sound, healthful, wholesome, and fit for human food shall be marked, stamped, tagged, or labeled as "Inspected and passed;" and said inspectors shall label, mark, stamp, or tag as "Inspected and condemned," all carcasses and parts thereof of animals found to be unsound, unhealthful, unwholesome, or otherwise unfit for human food; and all carcasses and parts thereof thus inspected and condemned shall be destroyed for food purposes by the said establishment in the presence of an inspector, and the Secretary of Agriculture may remove inspectors from any such establishment which fails to so destroy any such condemned carcass or part thereof, and said inspectors, after said first inspection shall, when they deem it necessary, reinspect said carcasses or parts thereof to determine whether since the first inspection the same have become unsound, unhealthy, unwholesome, or in any way unfit for human food, and if any carcass or any part thereof shall, upon examination and inspection subsequent to the first examination and inspection, be found to be unsound, unhealthful, unwholesome, or otherwise unfit for human food, it shall be destroyed for food purposes by the said establishment in the presence of an inspector, and the Secretary of Agriculture may remove inspectors from any establishment which fails to so destroy any such condemned carcass or part thereof.

The foregoing provisions shall apply to all carcasses or parts of carcasses of cattle, sheep, swine, and goats, or the meat or meat products thereof which may be brought into any slaughtering, meat-canning, salting, packing, rendering, or similar establishment, and such examination and inspection shall be had before the said carcasses or parts thereof shall be allowed to enter into any department wherein the same are to be treated and prepared for ment food products; and the foregoing provisions shall also apply to all such products which, after having been issued from any slaughtering, meat-canning, salting, packing, rendering, or similar establishment, shall be returned to the same or to any similar establishment where such inspection is maintained.

That for the purposes hereinbefore set forth the Secretary of Agriculture shall cause to be made by inspectors appointed for that purpose an examination and inspection of all meat food products prepared for interstate or foreign commerce in any slaughtering, meat-canning, salting, packing, rendering, or similar establishment, and for the purposes of any examination and inspection said inspectors shall have access at all times, by day or night, whether the establishment be operated or not, to every part of said establishment; and said inspectors shall mark, stamp, tag, or label as "Inspected and passed" all such products found to be sound, healthful, and wholesome, and which contain no dyes, chemicals, preservatives, or ingredients which render such meat or meat food products unsound, unhealthful, unwholesome, or unfit for human food; and said inspectors shall label, mark, stamp, or tag as "Inspected and condemned" all such products found unsound, unhealthful, and unwholesome, or which contain dyes, chemicals, preservatives, or ingredients which render such meat or meat food products unsound, unhealthful, unwholesome, or unfit for human food, and all such condemned meat food products shall be destroyed for food purposes, as hereinbefore provided, and the Secretary of Agriculture may remove inspectors from any establishment which fails to so destroy such condemned meat food products: Provided, That, subject to the rules and regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture, the provisions hereof in regard to preservatives shall not apply to meat food products for export to any foreign country and which are prepared or packed according to the specifications or directions of the foreign purchaser, when no substance is used in the preparation or packing thereof in conflict with the laws of the foreign country to which said article is to be exported; but if said article shall be in fact sold or offered for sale for domestic use or consumption then this proviso shall not exempt said article from the operation of all the other provisions of this act.

That when any meat or meat food product prepared for interstate or foreign commerce which has been inspected as hereinbefore provided and marked "Inspected and passed" shall be placed or packed in any can, pot, tin, canvas, or other receptacle or covering in any establishment where inspection under the provisions of this act is maintained, the person, firm, or corporation preparing said product shall cause a label to be attached to said can, pot, tin, canvas, or other receptacle or covering, under the supervision of an inspector, which label shall state that the contents thereof have been "inspected and passed" under the provisions of this act; and no inspection and examination of meat or meat food products deposited or inclosed in cans, tins, pots, canvas, or other receptacle or covering in any establishment where inspection under the provisions of this act is maintained shall be deemed to be complete until such meat or meat food products have been sealed or inclosed in said can, tin, pot, canvas, or other receptacle, or covering under the supervision of an inspector, and no such meat or meat food products shall be sold or offered for sale by any person, firm, or corporation in interstate or foreign commerce under any false or deceptive name; but established trade name or names which are usual to such products and which are not false and deceptive and which shall be approved by the Secretary of Agriculture are permitted.

The Secretary of Agriculture shall cause to be made, by experts in sanitation or by other competent inspectors, such inspection of all slaughtering, meat canning, salting, packing, rendering, or similar establishments in which cattle, sheep, swine, and goats are slaughtered and the meat and meat food products thereof are prepared for interstate or foreign commerce as may be necessary to inform himself concerning the sanitary conditions of the same, and to prescribe the rules and regulations of sanitation under which such establishments shall be maintained; and where the sanitary conditions of any such establishment are such that the meat or meat food products are rendered unclean, unsound, unhealthful, unwholesome, or otherwise unfit for human food, he shall refuse to allow said meat or meat food products to be labeled, marked, stamped, or tagged as "inspected and passed."

That the Secretary of Agriculture shall cause an examination and inspection of all cattle, sheep, swine, and goats, and the food products thereof, slaughtered and prepared in the establishments hereinbefore described for the purposes of interstate or foreign commerce to be made during the nighttime as well as during the daytime when the slaughtering of said cattle, sheep, swine, and goats, or the preparation of said food products, is conducted during the nighttime.

That on and after October 1, 1906, no person, firm, or corporation shall transport or offer for transportation, and no carrier of interstate or foreign commerce shall transport or receive for transportation from one State or Territory or the District of Columbia to any other State or Territory or the District of Columbia, or to any place under the jurisdiction of the United States, or to any foreign country, any carcasses or parts thereof, meat, or meat food products thereof which have not been inspected, examined, and marked as "inspected and passed," in accordance with the terms of this act and with the rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture: Provided, That all meat and meat food products on hand on October 1, 1906, at establishments where inspection has not been maintained, or which have been inspected under existing law, shall be examined and labeled under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of Agriculture shall prescribe, and then shall be allowed to be sold in interstate or foreign commerce.

That no person, firm, or corporation, or officer, agent, or employee thereof, shall forge, counterfeit, simulate, or falsely represent, or shall without proper authority use, fail to use, or detach, or shall knowingly or wrongfully alter, deface, or destroy, or fail to deface or destroy, any of the marks, stamps, tags, labels, or other identification devices provided for in this act, or in and as directed by the rules and regulations prescribed hereunder by the Secretary of Agriculture, on any carcasses, parts of carcasses, or the food product, or containers thereof, subject to the provisions of this act, or any certificate in relation thereto, authorized or required by this act or by the said rules and regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture.

That the Secretary of Agriculture shall cause to be made a careful inspection of all cattle, sheep, swine, and goats intended and offered for export to foreign countries at such times and places and in such manner as he may deem proper, to ascertain whether such cattle, sheep, swine, and goats are free from disease.

And for this purpose he may appoint inspectors who shall be authorized to give an official certificate clearly stating the condition in which such cattle, sheep, swine, and goats are found.

And no clearance shall be given to any vessel having on board cattle, sheep, swine, or goats for export to a foreign country until the owner or shipper of such cattle, sheep, swine, or goats has a certificate from the inspector herein authorized to be appointed, stating that the said cattle, sheep, swine, or goats are sound and healthy, or unless the Secretary of Agriculture shall have waived the requirement of such certificate for export to the particular country to which such cattle, sheep, swine, or goats are to be exported.

That the Secretary of Agriculture shall also cause to be made a careful inspection of the carcasses and parts thereof of all cattle, sheep, swine, and goats, the meat of which, fresh, salted, canned, corned, packed, cured, or otherwise prepared, is intended and offered for export to any foreign country, at such times and places and in such manner as he may deem proper.

And for this purpose he may appoint inspectors who shall be authorized to give an official certificate stating the condition in which said cattle, sheep, swine, or goats, and the meat thereof, are found.

And no clearance shall be given to any vessel having on board any fresh, salted, canned, corned, or packed beef, mutton, pork, or goat meat, being the meat of animals killed after the passage of this act, or except as hereinbefore provided for export to and sale in a foreign country from any port in the United States, until the owner or shipper thereof shall obtain from an inspector appointed under the provisions of this act a certificate that the said cattle, sheep, swine, and goats were sound and healthy at the time of inspection, and that their meat is sound and wholesome, unless the Secretary of Agriculture shall have waived the requirements of such certificate for the country to which said cattle, sheep, swine, and goats or meats are to be exported.

That the inspectors provided for herein shall be authorized to give official certificates of the sound and wholesome condition of the cattle, sheep, swine, and goats, their carcasses and products as herein described, and one copy of every certificate granted under the provisions of this act shall be filed in the Department of Agriculture, another copy shall be delivered to the owner or shipper, and when the cattle, sheep, swine, and goats or their carcasses and products are sent abroad, a third copy shall be delivered to the chief officer of the vessel on which the shipment shall be made.

That no person, firm, or corporation engaged in the interstate commerce of meat or meat food products shall transport or offer for transportation, sell or offer to sell any such meat or meat food products in any State or Territory or in the District of Columbia or any place under the jurisdiction of the United States, other than in the State or Territory or in the District of Columbia or any place under the jurisdiction of the United States in which the slaughtering, packing, canning, rendering, or other similar establishment owned, leased, operated by said firm, person, or corporation is located unless and until said person, firm, or corporation shall have complied with all of the provisions of this act.

That any person, firm, or corporation, or any officer or agent of any such person, firm, or corporation, who shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished on conviction thereof by a fine of not exceeding $10,000 or imprisonment for a period not more than two years, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

That the Secretary of Agriculture shall appoint from time to time inspectors to make examination and inspection of all cattle, sheep, swine, and goats, the inspection of which is hereby provided for, and of all carcasses and parts thereof, and of all meats and meat food products thereof, and of the sanitary conditions of all establishments in which such meat and meat food products hereinbefore described are prepared; and said inspectors shall refuse to stamp, mark, tag, or label any carcass or any part thereof, or meat food product therefrom, prepared in any establishment hereinbefore mentioned, until the same shall have actually been inspected and found to be sound, healthful, wholesome, and fit for human food, and to contain no dyes, chemicals, preservatives, or ingredients which render such meat food product unsound, unhealthful, unwholesome, or unfit for human food; and to have been prepared under proper sanitary conditions, hereinbefore provided for; and shall perform such other duties as are provided by this act and by the rules and regulations to be prescribed by said Secretary of Agriculture; and said Secretary of Agriculture shall, from time to time, make such rules and regulations as are necessary for the efficient execution of the provisions of this act, and all inspections and examinations made under this act shall be such and made in such manner as described in the rules and regulations prescribed by said Secretary of Agriculture not inconsistent with the provisions of this act.

That any person, firm, or corporation, or any agent or employee of any person, firm, or corporation who shall give, pay, or offer, directly or indirectly, to any inspector, deputy inspector, chief inspector, or any other officer or empolyee of the United States authorized to perform any of the duties prescribed by this act or by the rules and regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture any money or other thing of value, with intent to influence said inspector, deputy inspector, chief inspector, or other officer or employee of the United States in the discharge of any duty herein provided for, shall be deemed guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine not less than $5,000 nor more than $10,000 and by imprisonment not less than one year nor more than three years; and any inspector, deputy inspector, chief inspector, or other officer or employee of the United States authorized to perform any of the duties prescribed by this act who shall accept any money, gift, or other thing of value from any person, firm, or corporation, or officers, agents, or employees thereof, given with intent to influence his official action, or who shall receive or accept from any person, firm, or corporation engaged in interstate or foreign commerce any gift, money, or other thing of value given with any purpose or intent whatsoever, shall be deemed guilty of a felony and shall, upon conviction thereof, be summarily discharged from office and shall be punished by a fine not less than $1,000 nor more than $10,000 and by imprisonment not less than one year nor more than three years.

That the provisions of this act requiring inspection to be made by the Secretary of Agriculture shall not apply to animals slaughtered by any farmer on the farm and sold and transported as interstate or foreign commerce, nor to retail butchers and retail dealers in meat and meat food products, supplying their customers: Provided, That if any person shall sell or offer for sale or transportation for interstate or foreign commerce any meat or meat food products which are diseased, unsound, unhealthful, unwholesome, or otherwise unfit for human food, knowing that such meat food products are intended for human consumption, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000 or by imprisonment for a period of not exceeding one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment: Provided also, That the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to maintain the inspection in this act provided for at any slaughtering, meat-canning, salting, packing, rendering, or similar establishment notwithstanding this exception, and that the persons operating the same may be retail butchers and retail dealers or farmers; and where the Secretary of Agriculture shall establish such inspection then the provisions of this act shall apply notwithstanding this exception.

That there is permanently appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $3,000,000, for the expenses of the inspection of cattle, sheep, swine, and goats and the meat and meat food products thereof which enter into interstate or foreign commerce and for all expenses necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this act relating to meat inspection, including rent and the employment of labor in Washington and elsewhere, for each year. And the Secretary of Agriculture shall, in his annual estimates made to Congress, submit a statement in detail, showing the number of persons employed in such inspections and the salary or per diem paid to each, together with the contingent expenses of such inspectors and where they have been and are employed.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, on yesterday, at the request of the Committee on Agriculture, the agricultural appropriation bill, with the amendments thereto, was recommitted to the Committee on Agriculture for the purpose of making certain slight amendments thereto. Those amendments have been incorporated in the copy which the Clerk has just read. All of them, with two exceptions, are mere verbiage. These two exceptions are the clause eliminating the "civil-service provision," and what might be called the "appeal or review clause."

I want, first, to call the attention of the House to just a few of the changes in the verbiage of the "inspection" clauses. In the amendment on page 31, at the end of line 11, you will read these words:

> And all carcasses and parts thereof thus inspected and condemned shall be destroyed for food purposes by the said establishment in the presence of an inspector, and the Secretary of Agriculture may remove inspectors from any such establishment which fails to so destroy any such condemned carcass or part thereof.

In the original bill which we reported we covered all that by saying:

> And all carcasses or parts thereof thus inspected and condemned shall be destroyed for food purposes, and an inspector shall personally superintend such destruction.

I think the House will admit that that is simply verbiage. There is no new idea or thought contained in it.

This verbiage is repeated three times in the bill.

You will find the next amendment on page 32, at the bottom, line 25. I want to read the clause, because some dispute has taken place about it:

That for the purposes hereinbefore set forth the Secretary of Agriculture shall cause to be made by inspectors appointed for that purpose an examination and inspection of all meat food products prepared for interstate or foreign commerce in any slaughtering, meat-canning, salting, packing, rendering, or similar establishment, and for the purposes of any examination and inspection said inspectors shall have access at all times to every part of said establishment.

Now, we have added the words:

By day or night, whether the establishment be operated or not.

That, it must be admitted, is simply verbiage.

Now, on page 36, in line 16, we provide:

That all meat and meat food products on hand on October 1, 1906—

The original provision was "on the passage of this bill." I think October 1 is better at establishments where inspection has not been maintained or which have been inspected under existing law—shall be examined and labeled under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of Agriculture shall prescribe, and then shall be allowed to be sold in interstate or foreign commerce.

The original bill had it—

That all meat and meat food products on hand at the passage of this bill, at establishments where inspection has not been maintained or which have been inspected under existing law, shall be examined and labeled under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of Agriculture shall prescribe.

You will observe that we have simply added—and shall then be allowed to be sold in interstate or foreign commerce.

Mr. KEIFER. Will the gentleman yield for a question as to that clause of the bill?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Yes; with pleasure.

Mr. KEIFER. I want to inquire why it is provided that the meats or meat food products on hand on October 1, 1906, at establishments where inspection has not been maintained or which have been inspected under existing law, after being inspected and labeled, are required to be sold, whether fit for food or not? This is the only provision in the bill that requires the sale of all labeled goods which may be on hand October 1, 1906. It is true it is to be inspected under rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture, but after it is inspected it is provided that then it shall be allowed to be sold in interstate and foreign commerce, which I think is an extraordinary provision in a bill intended to get pure food into foreign commerce.

Mr. WADSWORTH. In answer to the gentleman I can only say that that will be left to the rules and regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture. If after the inspection these goods are labeled "condemned," they will not be allowed to go outside of the factories. If they are labeled and "passed," they will be allowed to be sold in interstate commerce.

Mr. KEIFER. The provision is that they shall then, after being inspected, be sold in interstate and foreign commerce?

Mr. WADSWORTH. Allowed to be sold.

Mr. KEIFER. Allowed to be sold, no matter how the inspection resulted?

Mr. WADSWORTH. That is not the intent. I think that is a stretch of the meaning of the words. Of course under the rules and regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture they would not be allowed to be sold unless labeled and passed as fit for food.

Mr. HULL. Not allowed to be sold as a food product?

Mr. KEIFER. The language is, "after being labeled under direction of the Secretary of Agriculture they are then allowed to be sold in interstate and foreign commerce," regardless of how they are labeled.

Mr. WADSWORTH. If there is any doubt about that, the conferees would be very glad to receive any suggestion or amendment, but I do not think it is necessary.

Mr. OLMSTED. I would like to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. OLMSTED. I wish to make a suggestion to the gentleman, which may or may not be worthy of his attention. On page 36 it is especially provided that no carrier of interstate or foreign commerce shall transport any meat or meat product unless it is stamped "inspected and passed." And he is subject to fine and imprisonment if he does. Now, on page 42 you provide, and very properly, that this shall not apply to animals slaughtered on a farm or at a retail butcher's shop, which may be transported by interstate commerce to customers. How is the interstate carrier or railroad officer to know, how is he to determine between a carcass slaughtered by a farmer or a retail butcher and shipped when slaughtered somewhere else, and how dare he carry it for a farmer or a retail butcher unless it is inspected and passed?

Mr. WADSWORTH. That clause was put in to exempt the farmer and retail butcher—the small dealer who might be located near the State line and who, in the course of his business, peddling from a wagon or cart, passes over a State line.

Mr. OLMSTED. I think it is a very proper provision.

Mr. WADSWORTH. But that clause does not apply to anybody shipping by common carrier, but to a dealer in meat products supplying consumers.

Mr. OLMSTED. It says "sold and transported as interstate and foreign commerce."

Mr. WADSWORTH. What line is the gentleman reading from?

Mr. OLMSTED. Page 42, lines 19 and 20.

Mr. WADSWORTH. That does not apply to the farmer.

Mr. OLMSTED. My point is, How is the interstate carrier going to know whether the carcass came from a farmer or butcher, or anybody else?

Mr. WADSWORTH. It is not necessary to know when he receives it from a farmer or a retail dealer.

Mr. OLMSTED. How is the shipping agent going to know a farmer?

Mr. WADSWORTH. If the gentleman will read the language, I think he will have no difficulty about it.

Mr. OLMSTED. My point is that a railroad company would not dare to carry the product of a farm or a butcher without it was inspected.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, how much time have I consumed?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has consumed ten minutes.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Now, on page 35, line 16, the language in the original bill is "products are rendered unsound, unhealthful, unwholesome, or otherwise unfit for human food." We thought we had adjectives enough; but the word "unclean" was suggested, and it was put in. Now, Mr. Speaker, I think I have shown examples enough. So, speaking generally in regard to all these small changes and verbiage, if, like Mrs. Winslow's soothing sirup, they soothe, pacify, and quiet, let them all go in. No one objects to them. [Laughter and applause.]

We have eliminated the so-called "civil-service clause." We put it in the bill originally in order to expedite its operations, in order that the Secretary of Agriculture might not only get his inspectors through the civil service, but also from the outside. There is absolutely no objection to its going out if the House, in its wisdom, sees fit.

Now I come, Mr. Speaker, to the review clause, and after consultation with some of the ablest lawyers in the House it was decided that the court-review clause was unnecessary, if the entire paragraph allowing the appeal from inspector to inspector and so on to the Secretary of Agriculture and then to the court was eliminated. The paragraph in the original Senate amendment made the judgment of the Secretary of Agriculture mandatory and final. That clearly was unwise and injudicious, if not unconstitutional, and the committee, in order to make matters entirely fair and just, inserted in the bill a clause giving the right to resort to the courts, which the ablest lawyers on the floor claim is granted now under the Constitution and the existing general laws. Therefore, the clause was entirely eliminated in the bill just read by the Clerk, and the packers and slaughterers in Chicago, if they consider any of the rights of their property are injured in any way by the operations of this law, can invoke the jurisdiction of a United States judge in Chicago; and I know of no difference between the honesty and integrity of a United States judge in Chicago and the honesty and integrity of a United States judge in St. Louis, Kansas City, Fort Worth, St. Joe, or any other place where these slaughtering and canning establishments are located. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, in conclusion I simply want to assure this House on behalf of the Committee on Agriculture that the provisions of this bill will insure to the public a rigid meat and meat food inspection law. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. PADGETT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has eight minutes of his time remaining.

Mr. WADSWORTH. And, Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York reserves the remainder of his time.

Mr. PADGETT. Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the gentleman from New York a question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia is recognized.

Mr. LAMB. Mr. Speaker, at this stage of the proceedings I shall ask unanimous consent, and I hope my colleague from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH] will not object to it, to extend this discussion forty or fifty minutes, renewing the request made by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS]. I pause for an answer.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, I shall have to object. I objected once, and I shall have to do so again.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia is recognized for twenty minutes.

Mr. LAMB. Mr. Speaker, I congratulate the Committee on Agriculture and this House upon the fact that after considering this measure for more than a week and offering various amendments to the Beveridge bill they have come into this House and adopted every feature, save one, that was contended for by the seven minority members of the Committee on Agriculture. Time will not permit now to go through with the features of this bill as has been done in part by the chairman of this committee. On those features, save one, this committee stood unanimous. The members of the minority disagreed with the majority on the question of paying the cost of inspection. The minority committee report is familiar to Members of the House. Their reasons for putting at least a part of this cost for inspection on the packers, who have produced the conditions that now confront us, are set forth in that report. It says:

We might be willing that that part of the cost of inspection which has heretofore been paid by the Government, amounting to about $800,000, shall be continued, although strong objections thereto can be urged upon principle and precedent, but we are opposed—to an addition of more than $2,000,000 for inspection of canned goods and meat food products generally, the sole benefit of which operates for a particular industry to correct a wrong done by them. We believe this to be class legislation of an indefensible character. For the payment of inspection fees in cases of this character there is abundant precedent. The national banks now are required to pay the cost of their own examinations. Te same is true of renovated butter, steamboat inspection, the immigration head tax, and other cases that might be mentioned.

And I hope this House will be opposed—

Mr. Speaker, if the rule under which we are proceeding here allowed it, the minority would offer an amendment to the last paragraph of this bill that would cover this case completely and would make this bill, in my humble judgment, about as perfect a measure as human skill and human ingenuity can make it. I shall ask to have read in my time by the Clerk the amendment which I would offer if I could, and I invite the careful attention of the House to the same.

The Clerk read as follows:

And there shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, by the proprietor of any slaughtering, packing, meat-canning, rendering, or similar establishment, for whom inspection is maintained, an inspection fee of 5 cents for each bovine inspected under the terms of this act, an inspection fee of 3 cents for each sheep or goat inspected under the terms of this act, and an inspection fee of 3 cents for each head of swine inspected under the terms of this act. The fund thereby created shall be subject to the requisition of the Secretary of Agriculture, as if appropriated by Congress, and shall be in addition to the appropriations by Congress for the necessary expenses of carrying out the provisions of this act, and shall continue permanently available until used, and all the provisions of existing law relating to the collection of the revenue shall, in so far as they are applicable, apply to the collection of the fees provided for by this act.

Mr. LAMB. Mr. Speaker, if any amendment were permitted here and this House could take a vote, it would be wise legislation to substitute the one I have had read for this provision in the bill that saddles an annual appropriation on this Government of over three millions of dollars with which to pay for the inspection of meat and canned foods to gratify the wishes and carry out the edict, I may say, of these packers—middlemen who stand between the consumer and the producer. I need not stop here to discuss the question of whether these people will recoup from the cattlemen or from the consumer. Possibly they would do as they have been doing for the last decade or more and recoup from both parties. That is very likely what they would try to do, but this charge is so small that they would not be able, in my judgment, to do this. The packers have produced this condition by their own neglect, by their own methods, and we claim that the people of the United States who do not use their products, the 30 per cent of our population, the farmers on the farms in this country who kill their own cattle and raise their own produce, should not be saddled with a tax to pay for this inspection. Much more might be said, but the time is too short to discuss such a question.

I now yield five minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi, [Mr. WILLIAMS].

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, we have been for some time in apprehension of a very serious and interesting, if not sensational, discussion, between the two gentlemen from New York—one at the other end of the Avenue and one in this House; but to-day everything seems to be in a smiling condition. We might quote Shakespeare's utterance:

Now is the winter of our discontent
Made glorious summer by these sons of New York.

[Laughter and applause.]

Of course, this legislation could not be defeated if I wanted to defeat it, and I do not, because, as I understand, the two real ruling authorities under this boasted American form of free government have consulted together about it and determined upon and here prescribed just exactly what shall be done, to wit, the President of the United States and the Speaker of the House of Representatives. [Applause.] Whenever those two gentlemen meet in amity, after a few days of blusterous discussion of one another, and of various and sultry thunderings in the index not following up later on, why, of course, we know that "the winter of our discontent has been made glorious summer."

There might be some objections to this legislation cured by amendment that I would offer, Mr. Speaker, if a helpless individual Member of the House of Representatives, or if the House itself, even, could consider an amendment, but we can not. We must, under the rules of the House, vote this proposed legislation up just as it comes to us, nursed by the Speaker and the President, and approved of by the committee, because the Committee on Agriculture could not well do anything except approve after these two great ruling authorities had spoken. We must, I say, either vote it up or vote it down. There has been some thundering in the index at the other end of the line of Pennsylvania avenue that was likewise not followed up, but we must remember, Mr. Speaker, you and I—even you, much more I—that men of iron, like other products of iron, are subject to expansion and contraction by the effect of the weather. [Applause and laughter.] As a broad general principle, Mr. Speaker, all sanitary legislation ought to be paid for by the public. The reason for that rule is that nobody is, as a rule, responsible for insanitary conditions. When the bubonic plague or yellow fever invade the country, everybody knows that nobody wants to be the vehicle of the transfer of those dangerous diseases. Nobody wants to catch them for the purpose of giving them to other people. That is the reason of the rule that the public ought to pay the expense, but the very reason points out the exception. Sometimes an insanitary condition is brought about by the voluntary action of evil doers. Whenever that is the case, then the expense of curing the condition which has been brought about by their acts ought to be borne by them. [Applause.] And I for one had hoped that the White House thundering in the index about making the evil doers stand the expense of curing the condition brought about by their own evil doing, would be followed up more strenuously than it has been. But here we are. We are faced with this precise resolution, and being faced with it, it is about as good an outcome as could have been expected, and I for one shall vote for the legislation, even though deprived of the power to try to better it by amendment lodging the burden on the shoulders of the evil doers.

Mr. SCOTT. I would like to ask the gentleman a question——

Mr. WILLIAMS. In a moment. Now, Mr. Speaker, I wish to add this: There has been some muck raking that has been going on in connection with this matter, and I want to pay my individual tribute to a Member of this House—the gentleman from New York, Mr. WADSWORTH. I think that in this particular legislation he has been mistaken, especially upon the point of not making the evil doers pay for curing the evil condition brought about by their own action. There has been some muck raking in which there has been a disposition to charge all sorts of wrong motives upon the gentleman from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH], the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture. I served with him for eight or ten years upon a committee of this House. I have known him to cast more votes against his own interests than almost any man in this House. [Applause.] He is a worthy son of a noble sire [applause], and an honest man, if God makes honest men [applause], and I believe He does. If the abbreviated disturbance between the two gentlemen from New York had come off, my conviction and my reasoning would have been with the other gentleman from New York, the one who occupies the White House, but my affections and feelings would have been with this gentleman from New York. [Applause.] I think we have had entirely too much tolerance for the idea that whenever men honestly differ about a public measure their motives are to be impugned and their integrity to be attacked. Now I yield to the gentleman from Kansas. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi has expired.

Mr. SCOTT. Will the gentleman from Virginia yield another minute to the gentleman from Mississippi, that I may ask him a question?

Mr. LAMB. Yes.

Mr. SCOTT. The gentleman bases his argument for charging the cost of this inspection upon the packers upon the ground that the packers are responsible for the condition which makes this legislation necessary.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes; for this condition. These packers have been poisoning our wives and our children, or, at any rate, the wives and children of the poor and all sorts of people.

Mr. SCOTT. I presume he would admit that the railroads are responsible for the condition which makes railroad rate legislation necessary. Would he, therefore, argue that the railroads should pay the expense of enforcing the requirements of the rate bill?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. SCOTT. Is it not a parallel case?

Mr. WILLIAMS. No; far from it. The rate bill was passed not in the interest of the railroads, nor can the effect of it be in the benefit of the railroads except in the safety of their property and stability of institutions brought about by right legislation, but this is totally a different thing from that.

The railroads may have extorted, and they have. The railroads may have charged too much or discriminated, and they have; but the railroads have not entered into our families with poison. And this legislation differs in this respect, too, that it will mainly result in benefit to the very evil doers themselves, who, without some legislation of this sort, can have neither a foreign nor an interstate market for their products. This market they have lost by greed and selfishness. They ought to pay for the inspection, which by reinspiring confidence will restore it. That is the difference.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. LAMB. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DE ARMOND].

Mr. DE ARMOND. Mr. Speaker, I venture at the outset of my very brief remarks to attempt a homely, but I think a deserved, tribute to some other persons engaged in this legislation who have have not yet been mentioned with approval. The main question of difference now between the two elements of the committee is as to who shall pay for the inspection. Not as to how the inspectors shall be paid, but as to whether or not the packers shall be taxed something to make a fund in whole or in part to meet the expense to be taken out of the Treasury to pay these inspectors. I find, upon looking over the papers in the case after they had been changed and presented and withdrawn, and as they now exist, that there are three gentlemen here—the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. LAMB] and the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. CANDLER] and the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BOWIE]—who, it seems to me, in the tossing of bouquets ought to have at least a whiff of the pleasant odor going about through the House at this time. [Applause.]

These gentlemen, according to my conception, have demonstrated in connection with this matter a devotion to public duty as well as a comprehension of it which will entitle them to the gratitude of their constituents and to the good wishes of the people of the United States in general. They have been consistent enough and honest enough and bold enough and independent enough to take the position and to hold the position that those for whose benefit this inspection is to be made ought to contribute to the public fund out of which the inspectors are to be paid.

The proposed amendment read in the time of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. LAMB], but of course not possible to be voted upon in this House at this time, or perhaps at any time, would impose upon these packers a tax of 5 cents for each animal of the bovine species inspected and 3 cents for each hog, sheep, and goat; and yet, against this extortion, against this great exaction, against this tremendous draft upon the exchequers of the rich packers, there is found in the majority of the committee, and will perhaps be found in a majority of the House, that deep and tender sense of justice and that profound regard for the defenseless packers that would reach into the Treasury of the United States and take out nobody knows how many millions annually in order that that great 5 and 3 cent tax may be saved to the coffers of these rich packers! Somebody says that the packers will throw it back upon the stock raisers. Imagine the spectacle of a man with a steer that, at the lowest price that cupidity and combination and monopoly and wrong can impose upon the seller, will command, we will say, a price of $40, standing helpless as that sum is scaled down 5 cents! The truth about it is that this inspection tax which it is proposed to lay upon the packers would, as nearly as it is possible for the masses of the people to get anything out of the monopolists who ride over them, booted and spurred, be paid by the packers themselves. Now, to this great committee, at the head of which is our distinguished friend from New York [Mr. WADSWORTH], distinguished not only as an agriculturist, but also lately distinguished in the realms of literary achievement [applause], to this committee, to these gentlemen, there appears awful injustice, terrible, threatened, impending outrage in compelling millionaire packers—through whose establishments the Presidential agents lately went, and had to go with their noses swathed and saturated with disinfectants—in a ruthless, unfeeling, outrageous way to put up 5 cents for the inspection of a beef and 3 cents for a hog or sheep in order that their products may go through interstate and foreign commerce and be made salable! What an outrage! [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. LAMB. Mr. Speaker, how much time have I remaining?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has three minutes remaining.

Mr. LAMB. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. DAVIS].

Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, in the exceedingly short space of time allotted to me for discussion of this very important measure I will of necessity be very brief. Since this matter was presented to the Committee on Agriculture, of which I have the honor of being a member, it has been my earnest desire to secure the passage of a bill that would insure the best possible inspection of all the meats and meat food products which are used and consumed by our people and to provide ample funds at all times in order that a sufficient number of competent inspectors would be employed in this work. With this end in view I have thrown aside all partisan feeling and worked earnestly for the common good.

In the beginning of our investigations there were many divergent views of the various members of the committee, but at all times I was willing to yield my judgment whenever presented with facts showing that I might be mistaken, and I will say at this time that the present substitute of the committee for the so-called "Beveridge amendment" in many respects is very commendable and will, I trust, insure better inspection of all meats and meat food products hereafter produced by the large slaughtering and packing establishments of our country. The former amendment heretofore submitted to the House by our committee did not contain many of the present important provisions now set forth in the present bill. All of these important amendments, I am pleased to say, were strenuously contended for by the seven minority members, of which I was one, notably of which amendments I allude to the broad court review clause, which we of the minority desired to have eliminated and which has now been accomplished. Also, the present substitute does not nullify the civil-service law in regard to the appointment of inspectors who are to carry out the provisions of this bill, the former substitute of the committee having a provision expressly providing for the suspension of the civil-service law in this regard for one year. Again, the minority members urgently insisted that violations of some of the provisions of the proposed law should not only be declared to be a felony, but that the punishment therefor should be by both fine and imprisonment, and I am pleased to say that the committee's substitute contains such provisions, so that the willful violator shall now be punished, as he justly deserves, by both an adequate fine and a suitable term of imprisonment. We have always contended that ample funds should be supplied, either by the Government direct or otherwise, to carry into successful operation all of the provisions of the proposed law, and that such funds should be at all times available, in order that the Department of Agriculture, through its Bureau of Animal Industry, might not at any time be hampered for the necessary money to protect our people from all possible danger in consequence of any negligence, carelessness, or misconduct of those engaged in the manufacturing of meat food products.

There was and still is a great diversity of opinion among the members of the committee as to who should pay the cost of this inspection, some contending that it should be borne exclusively by the Government by direct appropriation out of the Treasury, and others that an inspection fee should be charged upon each animal slaughtered, while others considered that it would be more equitable that the Government should bear a part and the packers a reasonable share. In this connection I will say that the minority members were in sympathy with an amendment which they desired to have incorporated into the proposed law, and which they would earnestly support, as follows: Insert after the word "year," in line 24 on page 43 of the pending committee substitute, the following:

Provided, That for the purpose of reimbursing the Treasury of the United States for the expenses incurred under the provisions of this act in the inspection, labeling, marking, stamping, or tagging of all meat and meat food products prepared or manufactured in any and all of the slaughtering, meat canning, salting, packing, rendering, or similar establishments hereinbefore mentioned, out of and from the carcasses, or parts thereof, of all animals or carcasses inspected under the provisions of this act, the Secretary of Agriculture is directed to ascertain, prescribe, and fix a reasonable fee, to be paid upon each carcass or part thereof so used in the preparation and manufacture of said meat and meat food products, which fee shall be fixed by the Secretary of Agriculture at a rate which, as nearly as possible, will serve only to defray the cost and expense of said inspection of said meat and meat food products, and such fees shall be uniform throughout the United States. The Secretary of Agriculture shall collect said fees from the person, company, or corporation preparing or manufacturing said meat and meat food products, and which fees, when collected, shall be deposited in the Treasury. A schedule of such fees, together with the rules and requirements relating to the collection thereof, shall be set forth in regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Mr. Speaker, this amendment I intended to offer upon the floor of the House whenever opportunity presented, but at this time the parliamentary situation is such that no amendments whatever can be offered to the pending measure. Hence, I will have to be content by merely presenting to the House our good intentions. I will say, however, that this parliamentary situation was forced upon the minority and against their protest.

Cattle raising in the United States is one of its greatest industries and is one of the great sources of our food supply. It is also our judgment that one duty of government is to aid in keeping that food supply pure and wholesome. Therefore, it is proper that the contemplated appropriation of $3,000,000 should be made for this purpose and the whole or so much thereof as may be necessary shall be used to accomplish this end. This proposed amendment contemplates that after the Government has caused all animals which are to be slaughtered to be thoroughly inspected while alive, and that as soon as killed the carcass shall be thoroughly subjected to a rigid post-mortem examination, thus insuring that the meat of this carcass is pure and wholesome for human food, that thereafter in case any person, company, or corporation shall in any manner manufacture this carcass into different meat food products which shall require further inspection as to their purity, wholesomeness, or fitness for human food, the cost and expense of this subsequent inspection shall be borne by the persons, company, or corporation so transforming the pure carcass into other and different products. The justness of this proposition is apparent. The stock raiser should not be subjected to any tax or charge when he offers for sale the product of his farm. The Government is willing to separate the diseased from the sound animal and see that only sound ones are slaughtered for human food. This being accomplished, is it not right, is it not justice that the man or set of men who seek to transform the carcass of this animal into the many forms of food products should be compelled to pay for any expense caused by his own acts?

From the hearings recently had before the Committee on Agriculture it was ascertained that about 92 per cent of the meat products of this country is disposed of and consumed as fresh meat; that the remaining 8 per cent is manufactured into various forms of meat food products, and that all or nearly all of this 8 per cent of the finished products require inspection, owing to the fact that various ingredients are used in the manufacture thereof. Now, it is to this portion of the meat food products and the expense of the proper inspection thereof, that the contemplated amendment, which I have proposed, is intended to provide for, and to compel the manufacturer thereof to pay the expense of inspecting the same. Or, in other words, the Government having in the first instance appropriated all the money to pay for all inspection contemplated under the proposed bill, that the manufacturer should pay back into the Treasury a sufficient sum to reimburse the Government for all expense which he has directly caused to be incurred.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota. May I have one-half minute?

Mr. WADSWORTH. The gentleman will have to ask it on the other side.

Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota. Will the gentleman from Virginia yield me half a minute?

Mr. LAMB. I have no time; my time has expired.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I yield one minute to the gentleman from Colorado.

Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. BROOKS of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I had intended to submit some remarks on the action of the committee in eliminating that particular feature of the bill which gave to the Secretary of Agriculture the power to make a final conclusive decision on all questions of fact or law. I think that elimination was the most important thing we have done. I do not care to take the time of the House now, but I rise to ask, on behalf of myself and a great many others who wish the same privilege, the right to extend remarks in the RECORD on this subject.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Colorado asks unanimous consent for general leave to print on this subject.

Mr. SHERLEY. If the request is limited to the gentleman, I shall not object; but if this request is extended to all Members of the House, inasmuch as we have not been given opportunity to have any consideration of the bill, I shall object. I do not think these speeches that are never delivered ought to go in the RECORD, as if there had been a real consideration of this important bill.

Mr. BROOKS of Colorado. Then I separate the request for myself.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. BROOKS of Colorado. Now, I renew my request on behalf of the House.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. ADAMS].

Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. That has already been granted.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, the live-stock industry is one in which one-third of our people are engaged more or less directly, and the proper preparation of meat food products is of such vast importance that it is now engaging not only the attention of this body, but that of all the American people and those of Europe as well.

The Twelfth Census of the United States shows that never in any country has such marvelous development in any industry been witnessed as that which has taken place in America in the one now under discussion during the past fifty years. In the last half century the development of this industry has been phenomenal. The settlement of the western country and the consequent expansion of territory devoted to stock raising; the extension of railroads and the increased facility of communication; the methods devised to insure the preservation of meats, such as improved methods of curing and the introduction and improvement of mechanical and chemical processes of refrigeration, rendering summer packing possible; the utilization of every part of the animal, and the adoption of labor-saving devices are among the factors that have contributed to its growth.

In fifty years the number of establishments have increased from 185 to 929, and the capital invested from $3,482,500 to $237,699,440; the number of wage-earners from 3,276 to 74,132; the wages paid from $1,231,536 to $40,447,574; the cost of materials from $9,451,096 to $805,856,969, and the value of products from $11,981,642 to $913,914,624.

The average amount of capital invested per establishment grew from $18,824 in 1850 to $205,427 in 1900. The average yearly earnings of the wage-earners grew from $376 to $488, and the average value of products per establishment rose from $64,766 to $852,945. During the ten years covered by the English census, taken in 1860, the center of the meat industry was at Cincinnati and in the Ohio Valley.

The average amount of capital per establishment increased from $18,824 to $39,221, or 108.4 per cent, while the average value of products per establishment increased from $64,766 to $113,675, or 75½ per cent.

In the decade from 1860 to 1870 a greater relative growth is shown. The number of establishments increased 509, or 196½ per cent. The sum of $14,066,330 was added to the investment, 3,308 wage-earners more than formerly found employment, and the benefit to the stock raiser is shown in the increase of $38,109,591, or 161.7 per cent, paid for materials used. The value of the product increased $46,384,724, or 157½ per cent.

The refrigerator car was invented in 1869. The first cargo of dressed beef was shipped from Chicago to Boston.

To the improvement of various refrigerating processes is due in a large measure the development of the trade from 1870 to 1880, because of which summer packing on a large scale became possible.

But 505,500 hogs were killed during the summer of 1872–73. Summer packing from that time on continued to increase until in the season of 1879–80, 4,051,248 hogs were killed and packed.

The summer packing in 1872–73 amounted to 8½ per cent of the pack for the entire year, while in 1879–80 it grew to 37¾ per cent. During the same period winter packing grew from 5,410,314 hogs in 1872–73 to 6,950,451 hogs in 1879–80. Winter packing increased 28½ per cent, while summer packing increased 701.6 per cent.

This latter growth shows the influence that refrigeration had on the growth of the meat trade. Up to 1875 the dressed-beef trade had been of minor importance except for local consumption, but with the introduction of the refrigerator car it assumed large proportions. The beginning of the export of fresh beef dates from 1876. The canning of beef was attempted in 1860, but it was not until 1879 that it was taken up on a large scale.

From 1880 to 1890 the capital invested and the wages had nearly the same growth per cent, although the total amount of wages was a little more than one-fifth of the capital invested. The value of the products increased $258,049,255, or 85 per cent. The average amount of capital per establishment increased from $56,673, an increase of 44.3 per cent. This decade is the only one in which the growth per cent in the value of the product exceeded the growth per cent in the cost of materials used. This was due to the fact that the packer began to use the waste that was formerly thrown away.

The capital invested per establishment in 1900 had increased to $205,427, compared with $104,551 in 1890, or an increase of 96½ per cent. The miscellaneous expenses in 1890 were but 2.8 per cent of the value of the product, while these expenses had reached 3.1 per cent in 1900.

Until within comparatively late years little attempt was made to utilize the waste products of the abattoir. To-day nothing is allowed to go to waste. The horns, hoofs, bones, sinews, hide trimmings, and other so-called "waste materials" are now utilized in the manufacture of glue, gelatin, brewers' isinglass, curled hair, bristles, wool felt, hair felt, laundry soap, and soap powders, toilet soaps, glycerin, ammonia, fertilizers, bone meal, cut bones, poultry food, albumen, neat's-foot oil, pepsin, knife handles, and many other things. Each large establishment has its chemical laboratory, where expert chemists are constantly seeking for new combinations to render more valuable and extensive the already long list of by-products.

It must be apparent to everyone that an industry putting out a product in a single year of over $913,000,000 is of the utmost importance to the people of the country. It is essentially western in its location and growth. The largest establishments are located in the Mississippi Valley. The States leading in the production of live stock for slaughter are west of the Mississippi. The territory devoted to the raising of hogs on a large scale is coextensive with the corn belt. The corn crop, the hay crop, and the grasses take on an added value when converted into the form of meat products. The corn crop is the foundation upon which depends the live-stock industry, and this industry is coming more and more to be a question of corn supply. The greater the cattle market the better the price of corn. A great cattle market enables the consumption of the surplus corn and a restriction of the cattle market will lower the price of corn.

From this western stock-raising territory the movement is northward and eastward to Chicago, Kansas City, South Omaha, St. Louis, South St. Joseph, and the other great slaughtering centers. The geographical movement of the slaughtering and packing area furnishes a view of the settlement and development of the West.

The advantages of the transportation facilities possessed by Chicago, backed with the wide area devoted to stock raising, spreading westward from Lake Michigan to the Rocky Mountains, give that city the lead in this industry. The tendency, however, is for the slaughtering centers to move still nearer the corn belt. The rise within recent years of Kansas City and South Omaha, and more lately of South St. Joseph, may be traced directly to this factor and to the improved railroad facilities that followed any enlargement of the territory devoted to corn production.

Another comparatively new development is the extension of the feeding or fattening operations for market. The conversion of the surplus corn into beef, pork, and mutton yields a large profit to the feeder. Poor-grade stock is bought in the fall, fattened during the winter, and later is sent back to market to be sold at a considerable advance.

The Union Stock Yards at Chicago present a monument to the opportunity and good business sense of the American people.

To the stranger entering the yards for the first time the scene is novel. He enters the main entrance beneath an iron arch bearing an inscription that informs him that the territory within is the "Union Stock Yards, chartered 1865." Once within, factories, pens, and viaducts surround him on every side. Noise and confusion reign everywhere, but the apparent confusion is well ordered, and considering the immense number of animals that are constantly being handled, the wonder is that they are handled with so much facility.

The stock arrives at the yard in the night or early morning, often after a long, hard ride of hundreds of miles. As soon as possible after the arrival at the yard the herds are driven to pens, fed, and watered, and after that the selling begins. Owners, buyers, sellers, agents of the packing houses, and commission men mingle in the excitement of the market. An official statement of the weight is given the seller. The animals are then driven to the slaughterhouses. The worry and exhaustion of the cattle, occasioned by the long ride, have heated them so much that a period, generally of about twenty-four hours, is given to allow their temperature to cool to the normal point. Hogs, however, are not allowed this respite, but are sprinkled and immediately driven to a large solid wheel, with chains fastened at intervals along the rim. The wheel revolves, slowly raising the squealing porker. As he gets near the top, the hog is detached automatically from the wheel, and a hook attached to a sloping rail carries the victim to the butcher. With a swift motion, almost mechanical because of its long practice, the throat is cut lengthways and the carcass is run along a short distance to allow the blood to drain out, which is drawn off and used largely in the manufacture of fertilizers. After a short time has been allowed for this draining, the carcass is plunged into a bath of scalding water. It is then brought automatically to a table, across which it is dragged through a scraping machine by an endless chain. This machine does the work better than it could be done by hand, leaving the bristles in much better condition. It does its work very thoroughly, its blades being mounted on cylinders coming in contact with every part of the body. To insure perfect results the body is then gone over by hand scrapers, after which the carcass is thoroughly washed with a hose. Next the head is nearly severed, the gambrels are cut, and the body suspended by them from the rail.

The body is then opened and dressed, the leaf lard is removed, the head is taken off, the tongue removed, and lastly, the body is split in two. All this is done at the rate of twenty hogs per minute. Thence the two halves go to the chill room, where they remain about twenty-four hours, until after the animal heat has left the body and it is thoroughly chilled. After this the sides are run to the cutting tables.

A hog dresses about 80 per cent of its live weight, about 20 per cent being offal. Fresh meat comprises about 10 per cent of the dressed hog and the other 90 per cent is cured. From the cutting room the various parts intended for curing are sent by chutes to the curing rooms, where some cuts lie for at least sixty days in dry salt, and the shoulders, sides, hams, etc., intended for smoking lie for a like period in vats of sweet pickle. After these pieces intended for smoking have lain in pickle for five to eight weeks—the time required and the strength of the pickle varying according to the size of the cut—they are removed to the soaking tank and soaked for about twenty-four hours in order that the heavier salting toward the surface of the cut may be brought to a uniformity with the center. From there the hams go to the trimming table, whence they are taken to the smokehouse, where they are smoked for about twenty-four hours. They then go to the storeroom or the department where the hams and bacon are branded and labeled, and some are covered with canvas.

After the cattle are cooled the body is shackled by the hind legs, hoisted and hooked to a rail along which it slides to the butcher, who, with a quick thrust, severs the large vein of the neck. A pan is quickly shoved in to collect the blood, and the floor is arranged so that whatever quantity of the blood may escape the pan is drained into a large tank. Next the carcass is headed, lowered to the floor, and adjusted in such manner that the hide may be removed most easily. In this operation the division of labor is carried to a high degree. Each workman engaged in removing the hide cuts only a certain portion, and the amount done by each is surprisingly small, but this is compensated for in the additional quickness with which the work is accomplished. Next the beef is sent to the chill room, where it is refrigerated about forty-eight hours, when that which is intended for sale as fresh meat is run to the loading platforms, divided into fore and hind quarters, and loaded into refrigerator cars for shipment to all parts of the United States and to foreign countries. The killing of sheep differs little from the killing of cattle.

The meat used in canning is generally cow beef and of an inferior grade. It is cooked in huge kettles and is handled with pitchforks. As soon as cooked it is pressed into cans, which are capped, soldered, sealed, and inspected by steaming to ascertain if any air holes remain. These holes are closed and the cans are washed, painted, and labeled, when they are ready for shipment to any climate, since, being air-tight, they are proof against climatic changes.

We recognize the fact that the reputation of American meats in the markets of the world depends upon the care and thoroughness with which the meat is inspected. This inspection is conducted by the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Department of Agriculture, and the cost of the work is borne by the Government.

On arrival at the stock yards all animals intended for slaughter are subjected to an ante-mortem examination by a Government inspector. Any animal that is found to be diseased or not fit for human food is condemned, and marked by having a metal tag stamped "U. S., condemned," placed in its ear.

These condemned animals are killed under the supervision of an employee of the Bureau of Animal Industry, whose duty it is to see that the products of such animals are rendered in such manner that they shall not be fit for human food. At the time of slaughter all animals are again examined, and if found to be diseased the carcass is marked with a yellow condemnation tag and removed and rendered so that no part of it can be placed on sale for food. Provision is made to insure the proper rendering of the condemned carcasses by requiring the return to the inspector of a numbered stub removed from the tag of condemnation at the time the rendering is done. This always insures the proper rendering of the carcasses. Only those carcasses and meats are inspected that are intended for interstate and export trade.

Each article of food made from inspected carcasses must bear a label, on which appears the official number by which the establishment is known to the Department of Agriculture and a statement to the effect that the article has been inspected according to law. A copy of this label is filed with the Department of Agriculture at Washington, to serve as a mark of identification that the products to which it has been attached were properly inspected. Each package shipped has stenciled upon it "For export" or "Interstate trade," as the case may be, and further, the official number of the establishment, the number of pieces or pounds in the package, and the trade-mark of the firm. Upon such packages the official of the Department pastes meat-inspection stamps, which are immediately canceled, certifying to the wholesomeness of the product and its fitness for food. These stamps must be obliterated as soon as the package is opened.

To say that the meat prepared in an establishment of this country under such regulations is not clean and wholesome is to say that which it is hard to believe. The development of the business has been so rapid and its growth so enormous that difficulty may have been experienced in keeping pace with the constantly growing improvements.

But that the meat has been and is being prepared under conditions fully equal to those prevailing in any country of the world no one can deny. That some improvements should be made in the sanitary conditions all will agree; that more rigid inspection might be of benefit does not admit of two opinions. The farmer, the middleman, and the packer all join in the desire for the most rigid regulations in order that their product may have the stamp of approval of those who in authority have the right to exercise a supervisory control over its preparation, and to that end the bill before the House at this time providing for a system of inspection greatly in advance of that heretofore existing and following the product from the hoof to the can should be enacted into law and rigidly enforced.

Value of live stock in the United States January 1, 1905, as shown in Yearbook of the Department of Agriculture.

Cattle (p. 704)	$661,571,308
Sheep (p. 708)	127,331,850
Hogs (p. 714)	283,254,987
Total	1,072,158,136
Value of milch cows (see same page)	483,272,203
Total milch cows, other cattle, sheep, and hogs	1,554,430,339

Live-stock markets for 1900.

	Cattle.	Hogs.	Sheep.
Chicago	2,729,046	8,696,097	3,548,885
St. Louis	795,800	2,156,972	434,133
Kansas City	1,969,718	3,094,139	644,177
Omaha	828,204	2,300,926	1,376,775
HOW USED.
Chicago:
Shipped	934,649	1,452,183	487,254
Slaughtered	1,794,397	7,243,914	3,061,631
St. Louis:
Shipped	207,998	513,561	65,199
Slaughtered	587,802	1,643,411	368,934
Kansas City:
Shipped	853,303	223,963	216,272
Slaughtered	1,116,415	2,870,176	644,177
Omaha:
Shipped	274,479	36,996	552,234
Slaughtered	553,725	2,163,930	724,541

Cattle shipped for 1900.

Chicago	934,649
St. Louis	207,998
Kansas City	853,303
Omaha	274,479
Total	2,270,429

Cattle slaughtered for 1900.

Chicago	1,794,397
St. Louis	587,802
Kansas City	1,116,415
Omaha	553,725
Total	4,052,339

Hogs shipped for 1900.

Chicago	1,452,183
St. Louis	513,561
Kansas City	223,963
Omaha	36,996
Total	2,226,703

Hogs slaughtered for 1900.

Chicago	7,243,914
St. Louis	1,643,411
Kansas City	2,870,176
Omaha	2,163,930
Total	13,921,431

Sheep shipped for 1900.

Chicago	487,254
St. Louis	65,199
Kansas City	216,272
Omaha	552,234
Total	1,320,959

Sheep slaughtered for 1900.

Chicago	3,061,631
St. Louis	368,934
Kansas City	644,177
Omaha	724,541
Total	4,799,283

Grand total:
Animals shipped	5,818,091
Animals slaughtered	22,773,053

That is to say, in the year 1900, in the cities of Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, and Omaha, out of a total of 28,591,144 cattle, hogs, and sheep brought into market, 22,773,053 were slaughtered and only 5,818,091 shipped away. This gives a faint idea of the size of the packing plants and the meat trade six years ago, the date of the last obtainable Government reports.

According to Census Bulletin 217, Twelfth Census, printed June 30, 1902, page 9, Chicago produced a value in packing-house products in 1900 of $256,527,949, or 32.7 per cent of the total value of the United States.

Kansas City stood second with a total of $73,787,771, a gain during the decade of $33,860,579, or 84.9 per cent. In 1900 Kansas City furnished of the total product of the United States 9.4 per cent.

South Omaha in 1900, $67,889,749, or 8.6 per cent of the total product of the United States.

New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, and Newark showed a decrease; not on account of consumption, but the importance of western dressed meats in eastern markets. Boston shows a decrease, while Baltimore gained in number of establishments and value of product.

South St. Joseph and St. Joseph furnished 3.8 per cent of the total value of the product for the United States.

In 1900 the list of the thirteen States in their order as to the prominence of packing-house products, etc., was as follows:

Illinois	$287,922,227
Kansas	77,411,883
Nebraska	71,280,366
New York	57,431,293
Indiana	43,862,273
Missouri	43,040,885
Massachusetts	$31,633,483
Iowa	25,695,044
Pennsylvania	25,238,772
Ohio	20,660,780
California	15,717,712
New Jersey	14,046,217
Wisconsin	13,649,750

The preliminary summary of the statistics of slaughtering and meat packing for the calendar year 1904, forming a part of the census of manufactories of 1905 taken in conformity with the act of 1902, issued by the Bureau of Animal Industry April 10, 1906, shows, among other things:

Number of packing houses	929
Capital	$237,699,440
Salaried officials and clerks	12,075
Salaries	$13,377,908
Wage-earners (average number)	74,132
Wages	$40,447,574
Miscellaneous expenses	$30,623,108
Material used, total cost	$805,656,969
Animals slaughtered:
Beeves	289,040,930
Sheep	44,359,804
Hogs	329,763,430
Calves	12,666,942
All other	61,905
All other materials	129,963,958
Products, total value	$913,914,624
Beef, sold fresh	247,135,029
Beef, canned	7,697,815
Beef, salted or cured	8,107,952
Mutton, sold fresh	36,880,453

Products—Continued.
Veal, sold fresh	$12,856,369
Pork, sold fresh	91,779,323
Pork, salted	116,626,719
Hams, smoked	132,210,611
Sausage, fresh or cured	25,056,331
All other meat, sold fresh	9,579,718
Refined lard	74,116,991
Natural lard	8,423,973
Oleomargarine oil	10,201,911
Other oils	2,595,951
Fertilizers	4,397,626
Hides	44,137,802
Wool	5,229,521
All other products	76,880,536

Number of slaughtering and meat-packing houses in the United States, year 1900.

Number of establishments	921
Capital	$189,198,264
Salaried officials, clerks, etc	10,227
Salaries	$10,123,247
Wage-earners (average number)	68,534
Total wages	$33,457,013
Miscellaneous expenses	$24,060,412
Cost of materials used	$683,583,577
Value of product	$785,562,433

Reports and figures compiled from governmental and private, but equally reliable sources show that the great volume of export dressed beef from America to Europe is to-day over 100,000,000 pounds less than it was five years ago and is gradually diminishing, while shipments from Argentina to Europe during the same period have increased almost 200 per cent and are still growing.

In 1905 the shipments of dressed beef from Argentina to England exceeded the shipments from the United States by over 38,000,000 pounds. Five years ago the United States shipped to England 70 per cent of the total imports of dressed beef and Argentina 17 per cent.

For 1905 the proportion from the United States was 44 per cent and from Argentina over 51 per cent. The United States is compelled to compete in European markets with Argentina beef and the Argentina cattle are sold for about 60 per cent of what the American producer gets.

If the export trade is further hampered and the present tendency continues it is easy to see that the American trade in cattle, meat, and meat products will become a thing of the past.

It is needless to say that the past twelve months show the largest losses to the American shipper on shipments of any twelve months. And the situation has not been bettered in the last month.

The average animal imports into Great Britain from all countries were, during 1895–1897, 293,000,000—223,000,000 contributed by this country (75 per cent); 1898–1900, 412,000,000—296,000,000 contributed by this country (72 per cent); 1901–1903, 462,000,000—305,000,000 contributed by this country (66 per cent); 1904, 487,000,000—268,000,000 contributed by this country (55 per cent). Argentina has furnished during the same period—1895–1897, 6,000,000 pounds, or 2 per cent; 1898–1900, 25,000,000 pounds, or 6 per cent; 1901–1903, 106,000,000 pounds, or 23 per cent; 1904, 188,000,000 pounds, or 39 per cent.

The United States in 1904 imported into thirteen European countries and Cuba $153,429,026 worth of packing-house products, to say nothing of imports into other quarters of the globe.

The immensity of the meat trade in its ramifications is absolutely beyond comprehension. The amounts of money involved are fabulous. The trade furnishes a livelihood to millions of people. Even the small farmer sends his surplus cattle and hogs to market now, instead of killing them at home, as was the custom. By so doing he gets a good price for the animals, and buys from local meat dealers the cuts of meat he needs for family use, getting the highest price for such parts of the animal as he can not use.

The trade in the United States in tinned meats and preparations other than those denominated "fresh" is simply marvelous. Every general store, butcher shop, grocery, delicatessen, bakery, lunch room, and even the little country store at the crossroads carries a stock of tinned goods, smoked meats, sausage, tongues, and, in fact, every character of meat product. A line of these goods is as essential to the stock of the store as any of the other staples, sugar, or coffee. Many of these merchants and butchers, too, sell pressed corned beef by the pound. The trade carries a fair profit, and as the goods do not deteriorate from age, they are staple in every way, classed and invoiced as such.

Let us pass such legislation as will meet every demand for clean, wholesome meat food products—make it sufficiently stringent to insure confidence on every hand and encourage a greater use of meat food products at home and abroad. But let it be understood that no unworthy motive now or ever has prompted the sale of this commodity, and that though we favor a more rigid inspection than has heretofore prevailed, we still challenge the world to show that any meat in any form which was unfit for food has ever been placed upon the market.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that every Member of this House who wants to extend his remarks in the RECORD on this subject be permitted so to do. It is evident that many gentlemen wish to do so.

Mr. SHERLEY. I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky objects.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] has told the truth, and it is idle to disguise it, that the President of the United States and the Speaker of this House have agreed with reference to the bill which is now before you. The gentleman from Mississippi, with his characteristic intellectual integrity, manifested in this instance, as it has been in many others, accepts the situation, says it is a good bill, and makes no complaint because the President of the United States and the Speaker of this House agree with him.

Now, Mr. Speaker, what has happened? The Secretary of Agriculture sent a committee to Chicago to investigate the conditions under which the packing-house industry of that city was carried on. That committee submitted an elaborate and complete report, covering every building, covering every room—a report which was simple, direct, concise, evidently prepared without passion and without prejudice, telling the exact truth; and the exact truth was that in the great center of the meat-handling industry of the United States conditions existed which threatened the character and integrity of the meat products of the United States. That report was submitted to the President. In order to confirm it, or not confirm it, he selected two men in whom he had confidence, who did not claim to be experts, who were ordinary, intelligent citizens, having the judgment of ordinary, intelligent citizens, and sent them there to make such an investigation as you and I would make. The report of those two gentlemen confirmed the report that was made to the Secretary of Agriculture. The President of the United States, understanding, as you and I understand, that meat is something which goes into the consumption of every family, knowing, as you and I know, that the great meat industry of the United States exports to foreign lands $200,000,000 worth of meat a year, knowing the importance of this subject, communicated the facts to Congress. Why? In order that public sentiment might be stirred all over the United States, and that the legislative judgment of this body and the other across the Capitol might be stirred to enact into law a provision for governmental inspection, which should insure the healthfulness, the wholesomeness, the cleanliness, the purity, and perfection of American meat products. [Applause.] That is all there is of it.

A bill passed the Senate, passed without consideration, a provision conceived by a gentleman who wished to do good things, who was moved by a good purpose. That bill was imperfect. It came over here and was sent to the Committee on Agriculture. Hearings were had. Representatives of the packers were heard; representatives of the Agricultural Department were heard; the men who went to Chicago to investigate were heard. The committee gave ample consideration to the representatives of all these interests; and I want to say to you, gentlemen, with reference to the truth of the charges which have been made, that when Mr. Wilson, the representative of the packers of Chicago, who came there and very modestly and very clearly stated what he deemed the conditions to be in Chicago, and then, in response to questions, admitted that every solitary conclusion of Mr. Neill and Mr. Reynolds in their report should be carried out, he confessed judgment on the essential points in this controversy. [Applause.] And when the board of health of Chicago sent their representative, under the spur of public feeling that has been applied in this case, into the packing-house district and started to work there, in nearly every establishment the truth of the charges was again sustained. There is no question about it. The committee took up that bill in the utmost good faith, every man actuated with the desire to draw and present to this House a measure which should compel rigid and, in so far as human judgment could make it, perfect inspection of meat, to give us a bill which should not only be just to the producing interests of the United States, but also fair and just to those great manufacturing interests which are handling hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of the meat products of this country. The committee worked in absolute good faith. They have no pride of opinion. There was but one purpose among the members of that committee, and that was to make the bill right. I disagreed with the majority in the first report which came here, providing for a court review. I do not believe that every time the Congress of the United States draws a law, under the power which it has over interstate commerce, to regulate some particular kind of business, we must provide in that particular bill for some particular kind of court review. That provision has gone out of the bill.

It is true that I have consulted with the President. It is true that the Speaker of this House has taken hold of this thing as a Member of the House and as an American citizen, and has worked with Mr. Roosevelt. Neither has shown any pride of opinion, but a simple desire to yield nonessentials in order that the executive branch of the Government and the legislative branch of the Government and the American people, all of whom want a good law, may have it. [Applause.]

Mr. HINSHAW. Mr. Speaker, in view of the large stock interests in my country, I ask leave to extend remarks in the RECORD along this subject.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HENRY of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend remarks in the RECORD upon this subject.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Connecticut asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KENNEDY of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the report of the committee of the Omaha Commercial Club on the condition of the Omaha packing houses.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska asks unanimous consent to print in the RECORD the matter to which he refers. Is there objection?

Mr. DE ARMOND. I object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is demanded.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the motion of Mr. WADSWORTH was agreed to.

Mr. LILLEY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend remarks in the RECORD upon the agricultural appropriation bill.

Mr. HAY. I object.

SUBDIVISION OF LANDS UNDER RECLAMATION ACT.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer the conference report on the bill (H. R. 18536) providing for subdivision of lands under the reclamation act, to be printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The report and statement will be printed under the rule.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PARKINSON, its reading clerk, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 6355. An act concerning licensed officers of vessels;

S. 6406. An act to authorize the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to accept donations of money and land for the establishment of a branch library in the District of Columbia, to establish a commission to supervise the erection of a branch library building in said District, and to provide for the suitable maintenance of said branch;

S. 4965. An act authorizing the appointment of Harold L. Jackson, a captain on the retired list of the Army, as a major on the retired list of the Army;

S. 6444. An act to authorize the Wichita Mountain and Orient Railway Company to construct and operate a railway through the Fort Sill Military Reservation, and for other purposes;

S. 6365. An act granting a pension to Edward S. Bragg; and

S. 6268. An act granting a pension to Helen G. Hibbard.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with deep sensibility the announcement of the death of Hon. RUFUS E. LESTER, late a Representative from the State of Georgia.

Resolved, That a committee of seven Senators be appointed by the presiding officer to join a committee appointed on the part of the House of Representatives to attend the funeral of the deceased, at Savannah, Ga.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased the Senate do now adjourn.

And that the Vice-President, in compliance with the foregoing, had appointed, under the second resolution, Mr. BACON, Mr. CLAPP, Mr. CLAY, Mr. WARNER, Mr. FOSTER, Mr. FULTON, and Mr. OVERMAN as the committee on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments bills of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

H. R. 15513. An act to declare and enforce the forfeiture provided by section 4 of the act of Congress approved March 3, 1875, entitled "An act granting to railroads the right of way through the public lands of the United States;"

H. R. 14396. An act to incorporate the Lake Erie and Ohio River Ship Canal, to define the powers thereof, and to facilitate interstate commerce;

H. R. 16290. An act to postpone until 1937 the maturity of $250,000 of 4 per cent United States bonds held in trust for the benefit of the American Printing House for the Blind; and

H. R. 16785. An act giving preference right to actual settlers on pasture reserve No. 3 to purchase lands leased to them for agricultural purposes in Comanche County, Okla.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 18536) providing for the subdivision of lands entered under the reclamation act, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had further insisted upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 18750) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, and for other purposes, disagreed to by the House of Representatives, had agreed to the further conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. HALE, Mr. PERKINS, and Mr. TILLMAN as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bill of the following title:

H. R. 10292. An act granting to the town of Mancos, Colo., the right to enter certain lands.

PHILIPPINE MERCHANDISE.

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 19756) to amend section 3844 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and to provide for an authentication of invoices of merchandise shipped to the United States from the Philippine Islands.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section No. 2844 of the Revised Statutes of the United States is hereby amended by adding thereto the following: "Provided, That the authentication may be made by the collector or a deputy collector of customs in the case of merchandise shipped to the United States from the Philippine Islands."

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

There was no demand for a second.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

ADDITIONAL ASSOCIATE JUSTICE FOR SUPREME COURT OF ARIZONA.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I move to discharge the Committee on the Judiciary from further consideration of S. 948, to amend section 1 of the act approved March 3, 1905, providing for an additional associate justice of the supreme court of Arizona, and for other purposes, and to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act providing for an additional associate justice of the supreme court of Arizona, and for other purposes, approved March 3, 1905, be so amended that the first section thereof shall read as follows:

"That hereafter the supreme court of the Territory of Arizona shall consist of a chief justice and four associate justices, any three of whom shall constitute a quorum, but three justices must concur in order to reverse a judgment or other determination of a district court, except that in cases where two of the five justices are now or hereafter may be disqualified from sitting in such case or cases the justices not disqualified shall constitute a quorum and a majority thereof may reverse or affirm such case or cases."

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

There was no demand for a second.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

EFFICIENCY OF THE REVENUE-CUTTER SERVICE.

Mr. ESCH. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill S. 3044. I am further directed by the committee to move to amend by striking out section 4 and inserting section 7, which is the committee amendment in lieu thereof, section 4 having been enacted into law by a previous act.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That on and after the passage of this act the number of officers on the active list in the grade of third lieutenant in the Revenue-Cutter Service shall not exceed thirty-seven: Provided, That until such time as the grade of third lieutenant shall be filled as provided in this act there may be advanced to that grade any cadet of the line who has served not less than two years as such cadet, and is recommended for advancement by the Secretary of the Treasury.

SEC. 2. That hereafter the number of cadets of the line allowed in the Revenue-Cutter Service shall be such as to provide for filling the vacancies that may occur in the grade of third lieutenant in said

Service: Provided, That a person to be eligible for appointment as a cadet of the line shall produce satisfactory evidence of good moral character, shall be not less than 18 nor more than 24 years of age at the time of appointment, and shall pass a satisfactory physical examination by a board of officers of the Public Health and Marine-Hospital Service, and a satisfactory educational examination, which must in all cases be written and strictly competitive, by a board of commissioned officers of the Revenue-Cutter Service, both examinations to be conducted under such regulations as shall be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided, That no person who has been dismissed or compelled to resign from the Military Academy or from the Naval Academy of the United States for hazing, or for any other improper conduct, shall be eligible for appointment as a cadet in the Revenue-Cutter Service: Provided, That no person shall become a cadet of the line who does not obligate himself, in such manner as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, to serve at least four years as an officer in said Service after graduation, if his services be so long required: And provided further, That the Secretary of the Treasury may summarily dismiss from the Service any cadet who, during his probationary term, is found unsatisfactory in either studies or conduct, or may be deemed not adapted for a career in the Service.

SEC. 3. That hereafter appointments into the grade of second assistant engineer in the Revenue-Cutter Service shall be as at present, except that, before being commissioned, the candidate who has successfully passed the required examinations shall serve a probationary term of not less than six months as a cadet engineer to determine his fitness for a commission in said Service, and during which probationary term he shall receive a salary of $75 per month and one ration per day: Provided, That no person shall be commissioned a second assistant engineer who is less than 21 or more than 26 years of age, nor until he shall have served the probationary term herein required.

SEC. 4. That hereafter it shall not be necessary for any commissioned officer of the Revenue-Cutter Service to make oath to his pay accounts.

SEC. 5. That a chief engineer of the Revenue-Cutter Service, to be selected for his special ability in naval construction from the present list of chief engineers by the Secretary of the Treasury, may be commissioned a constructor for engineering duty in said Service with the rank, pay, and emoluments now provided by law for a chief engineer: Provided, That the vacancy created in the list of chief engineers by such transfer shall not be filled by promotion or otherwise, but the number of chief engineers now authorized by law shall be reduced by one, and that no additional expense shall be incurred by reason of commissioning such chief engineer a constructor.

SEC. 6. The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to employ two civilian instructors in the Revenue-Cutter Service, one at a salary of $2,000 per annum and one at a salary of $1,800 per annum.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

There was no demand for a second.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

NAVAL MILITIA.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 10858) to establish a Naval Militia and define its relations to the General Government.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That of the organized militia as set forth in the act to promote the efficiency of the militia, and for other purposes, approved January 21, 1903, such part of the same as each State may elect shall constitute a Naval Militia.

SEC. 2. That all sections of the said act which define the relations between the organized militia and the United States Government shall be applicable to the Naval Militia as part of the organized militia of the several States, Territories, and the District of Columbia, and the duties therein named for the Secretary of War shall, so far as the Naval Militia is concerned, devolve upon the Secretary of the Navy.

SEC. 3. That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered, upon the request of the governor of any State or Territory, or of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, having an organized Naval Militia, to appoint an officer or officers to inspect, instruct, examine, and train such Naval Militia at such times and places as may be appointed by any of said governors or Commissioners, and also for the purpose of formulating standard regulations for the organization, discipline, training, armament, and equipment of said Naval Militia, and for the professional examination of the officers, petty officers, and men composing the same, with a view to producing uniformity among the Naval Militia of the various States and assimilating them to the standard of the United States Navy.

SEC. 4. That the Naval Militia, when called into the actual service of the United States, shall be governed by the same rules and articles as the Regular Navy.

SEC. 5. That such appropriations as may from time to time be made by the Congress for the benefit of the Naval Militia of the several States, Territories, and the District of Columbia shall be distributed between them according to equitable proportions to be determined by the Secretary of the Navy and applied to the uses and necessities of each organization: Provided, That no part of the money appropriated from time to time to carry out the provisions of the act approved January 21, 1903, shall be allotted to that part of the organized militia of any State that is now or may hereafter be designated as Naval Militia.

SEC. 6. That all laws and sections of laws conflicting with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. THOMAS of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second for the purpose of asking a question.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois is entitled to twenty minutes and the gentleman from North Carolina is entitled to twenty minutes.

Mr. THOMAS of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I would ask the gentleman from Illinois if this is a unanimous report from the Committee on Naval Affairs?

Mr. FOSS. Yes.

Mr. THOMAS of North Carolina. I would further ask the chairman if this bill is satisfactory to the Naval Militia?

Mr. FOSS. Yes; it is.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT, UNITED STATES ARMY.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I am instructed by the Committee on Military Affairs to move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 1540) to increase the efficiency of the Ordnance Department of the United States Army, as amended by the committee, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Ordnance Department shall consist of one chief of ordnance with the rank of brigadier-general; six colonels, nine lieutenant-colonels, nineteen majors, twenty-five captains, twenty-five first lieutenants, and the enlisted men, including ordnance sergeants, as now authorized by law.

SEC. 2. That details to the Ordnance Department under the provisions of the act of February 2, 1901, may be made from the Army at large from the grade in which the vacancy exists, or from the grade below: Provided, That no officer shall be so detailed except upon the recommendation of a board of ordnance officers, and after at least one examination, which shall be open to competition: And provided further, That officers so detailed in grades below that of major shall not be again eligible for such detail until after they shall have served for at least one year out of that department.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded? [After a pause.] No second having been demanded, the question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill as amended.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

RETIREMENT OF PETTY OFFICERS AND ENLISTED MEN OF THE NAVY.

Mr. DAWSON. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 1649) providing for the retirement of petty officers and enlisted men in the Navy, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in computing the necessary thirty years' time for the retirement of petty officers and enlisted men of the Navy all service in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps shall be credited.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded? [After a pause.] No second being demanded, the question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

BRIDGE ACROSS MISSISSIPPI RIVER AT ST. LOUIS.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 20210) to authorize the city of St. Louis, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Missouri, to construct a bridge across the Mississippi River, together with committee amendments thereto, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the city of St. Louis, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Missouri, be, and is hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a railroad, wagon, and foot-passenger bridge, and approaches thereto, across the Mississippi River at St. Louis, Mo., in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. HUNT. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BARTHOLDT] is entitled to twenty minutes, and his colleague, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HUNT], is entitled to twenty minutes.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Mr. Speaker, in explaining this bill I desire to say that the people of the city of St. Louis on last Tuesday voted for a proposition to issue bonds to the amount of $3,500,000 for the purpose of constructing a free municipal bridge across the Mississippi River, to be owned and controlled by the municipality for all time to come. The vote of the people was about 52,000 to 6,400, and in accordance with that verdict I have introduced this bill, the passage of which I now ask.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HUNT. Mr. Speaker, the bill under consideration is practically the same as House bill (20206) introduced by myself. In fact the phraseology is the same as contained in my bill. But, Mr. Speaker, above and beyond any personal pride of mine I see the city of St. Louis asking for the necessary Federal permission to construct a municipal highway across the Father of Waters, in short, to enable her to prepare the way for the million or more of people who will take up their homes in the greatest city of the greatest State of these United States. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I hope that no objection will be made to the passage of this bill. [Loud applause.]

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PARKINSON, its reading clerk, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the following titles:

H. R. 18600. An act to amend section 10 of an act of Congress approved June 21, 1899, to make certain grants of land to the Territory of New Mexico, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 11787. An act ratifying and approving an act to appropriate money for the purpose of building additional buildings for the Northwestern Normal School at Alva, in Oklahoma Territory, and approved the 15th of March, 1905.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 18750) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, and for other purposes.

Also that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 16472) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, and for other purposes.

H. R. 10133. An act to provide for the annual pro rata distribution of the annuities of the Sac and Fox Indians of the Mississippi between the two branches of the tribe, and to adjust the existing claims between the two branches as to said annuities;

H. R. 4580. An act for the relief of Blank & Parks, of Waxahachie, Tex.; and

H. R. 3459. An act for the relief of John W. Williams.

S. 5136. An act to amend the act creating the Spanish Treaty Claims Commission, approved March 2, 1901.

S. R. 52. Joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to donate to the board of trustees of Vincennes University, Vincennes, Ind., such obsolete arms and other military equipments now in possession of said university, to be used in military instruction.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate bills of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and referred to their appropriate committees, as indicated below:

S. 4965. An act authorizing the appointment of Harold L. Jackson, a captain on the retired list of the Army, as a major on the retired list of the Army—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

S. 6268. An act granting a pension to Helen G. Hibbard—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

S. 6355. An act concerning licensed officers of vessels—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

S. 6406. An act to authorize the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to accept donations of money and land for the establishment of a branch library in the District of Columbia, to establish a commission to supervise the erection of a branch library building in said District, and to provide for the suitable maintenance of said branch—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

S. 6365. An act granting a pension to Edward S. Bragg—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

OBSOLETE ORDNANCE.

Mr. MOUSER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 19814) authorizing the issue of obsolete ordnance and ordnance stores for use of State and Territorial educational institutions and to State soldiers and sailors orphans' homes, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to issue, at his discretion and under proper regulations to be prescribed by him, without cost of transportation to the United States, such obsolete ordnance and ordnance stores as may be available to State and Territorial educational institutions and to State soldiers and sailors orphans' homes, for purposes of drill and instruction.

And the Secretary of War shall require from such institutions or homes a bond in each case in double the value of the property issued, for the care and safe-keeping thereof and for the return of the same to the United States when required: Provided, That the issues herein provided for shall be made only to institutions upon recommendation of the governors of States and Territories and shall not be made in any case to any educational institution to which issues of such stores are allowed to be made under provisions of existing law.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded? [After a pause.] No second having been demanded, the question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended, and the bill was passed.

FORT CLINCH RESERVATION, FLA.

Mr. CLARK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 1697) confirming to certain claimants thereto portions of lands known as Fort Clinch Reservation, in the State of Florida, with committee amendments, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all of the right, title, claim, and interest of the United States in and to the several lots of land in the old town of Fernandina, Nassau County, Fla., located on lot 2 of section 14, in township 3 north of range 28 east of Tallahassee principal meridian, which were granted by Spain to certain persons prior to the cession of Florida to the United States, and afterwards confirmed by the United States to such persons, their heirs, representatives, and assigns, prior to the issuance of the order creating the Fort Clinch Military Reservation, shall be, and the same are hereby, confirmed, granted, released, and relinquished to the said several persons to whom said lots were so granted by Spain and confirmed by the United States, respectively, and their respective heirs, representatives, and assigns; and that all the right, title, claim, and interest of the United States at the date of the patent to Yulee and of the swamp-land selection by Florida hereinafter referred to in and to lots 1 and 2 of section 14, in township 3 north of range 28 east of said meridian, except the said lots granted by Spain to certain persons and confirmed by the United States as above mentioned, and except the block of the old town of Fernandina known as the Plaza, bounded by Estrada, White, Marine, and Somuerelos streets, and except also the Military Road from said town to Fort Clinch, be, and the same are hereby, released and relinquished to the several persons and corporations, respectively, now claiming or holding the same under a patent issued by the United States to David L. Yulee, dated the 5th day of September, 1853, to said lot 2, and under an approval and certification by the Secretary of the Interior of the United States to the State of Florida of said lot 1, as swamp and overflowed lands, under an act of Congress dated the 28th day of September, 1850: Provided, however, That titles to that portion of said lands which are now held by said town of Fernandina for public purposes, whether claimed under the act of Congress of June 15, 1844 (5 Stat., p. 667), or otherwise, shall be, and hereby are, confirmed, granted, released, and relinquished to said town of Fernandina: And provided further, That the said town of Fernandina shall hold the lands hereby confirmed and relinquished to it only on condition that the said town shall keep open and maintain the said Military Road from said town to Fort Clinch without expense to the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. CLARK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Florida asks unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and the gentleman from Florida [Mr. CLARK] is entitled to twenty minutes, and the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. LACEY] is entitled to twenty minutes.

Mr. CLARK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, this bill has been recommended by the Interior Department and by the War Department both. The Committee on Private Land Claims made a unanimous report in its favor, and I do not know how I can better explain than to read briefly from the report. It says:

Your committee have made a very careful examination of the papers submitted with this bill and are thoroughly satisfied with the views taken by the Department of the Interior of the equities of the claimants. An additional fact showing that the Government ought to recognize the equities of the parties who claim under the Yulee patent we have ascertained by causing the records of the General Land Office to be searched. The United States still retains in the Land Office the consideration paid by Yulee for the land patented to him September 5, 1853, as is shown by the letter from the Assistant Commissioner of the General Land Office, under date of May 12, 1906, addressed to Hon. Hilary A. Herbert, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, GENERAL LAND OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., May 12, 1906.

SIR: In reply to your personal inquiry of this date, I have to advise you that, as shown by the records of this Office, lots 2 and 3, sec. 14, T. 3 N., R. 28 E., containing 204.73 acres, were located August 4, 1851, by David L. Yulee, by surveyor-general's certificate No. 2, in part satisfaction of the scrip issued under the provisions of the eleventh section of the act of May 26, 1824 (4 Stat. L., 52), in satisfaction of the Arredondo grant of 38,000 acres. Said location was patented September 5, 1853. The location and the patent issued thereon are intact upon the records of this Office, and the scrip surrendered in payment for the land is on file with the entry papers. At date of location said land was in the St. Augustine district, Florida.

Very respectfully,
J. H. FIMPLE, Assistant Commissioner.

Hon. HILARY A. HERBERT,
419 G Street NW., Washington, D. C.

Then, omitting some of the report, it further says:

This is a bill to quit and relinquish title to occupants who, with their predecessors, have been in possession of certain lands for over sixty years, claiming title under the United States. The bill as it passed the Senate was prepared in the General Land Office, and approved by the Secretary of the Interior. As some of the lands are covered by a United States military reservation, it was recommended by the Commissioner of the General Land Office that the bill as prepared there should be referred to the War Department. This reference was made, and from that Department the bill was returned with the statement that there was no objection to the passage of the bill.

I think, Mr. Speaker, with that explanation——

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman from Florida one further question. In the reading of the bill or report something was said about some of this land being swamp or overflowed land.

Mr. CLARK of Florida. Yes, sir.

Mr. LACEY. Would not that particular portion of the land have been the property of the State rather than the United States and have been included in the swamp-land grant?

Mr. CLARK of Florida. Yes; and this is to settle the title as to purchasers from the State as well as——

Mr. LACEY. The State has already parted with its title to these same parties whom the Government would now quiet title in this bill.

Mr. CLARK of Florida. Yes, sir; the Government simply relinquishing its title. One of the lots went to the State as swamp and overflowed land; the other was purchased by Mr. Yulee.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

JOINT COMMITTEE ON REVISION AND CODIFICATION OF LAWS.

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the suspension of the rules and the passage of the following concurrent resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That a joint special committee be appointed, consisting of four Senators to be appointed by the Vice-President and five Members of the House of Representatives to be appointed by the Speaker, to examine, consider, and submit to Congress recommendations upon the revision and codification of laws prepared by the statutory revision Commission heretofore authorized to revise and codify the laws of the United States; and that the said joint committee be authorized to sit during the recess of Congress and to employ necessary clerical and other assistance; to order such printing and binding done as may be required in the transaction of its business, and to incur such expense as may be deemed necessary, all such expense to be paid in equal proportions from the contingent funds of the Senate and House of Representatives.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania whether the Senate has passed a resolution similar to this which has gone to the Committee on Revision of the Laws?

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. I have no knowledge, Mr. Speaker, that the Senate has passed a similar resolution. I can only say we have had a conference with the Committee on Revision of Laws of the Senate and it was in obedience to their suggestion and in harmony with it that this joint resolution is submitted.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second; I want to get the hang of this thing.

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. What is this proposition?

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. It is simply to appoint a joint committee of the Senate and House, to sit during the recess, in order to receive and take up the work that is reported to us from the Commission to revise and codify the laws of the United States, get it in form, and present it to the House and Senate at their meeting next December.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Was that resolution reported by Mr. HOAR the other day to discharge this Commission the 1st of December carried?

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. Yes, sir; that was carried.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. And all this does is to appoint a joint commission of the House and Senate to examine the work and report to the House and Senate in December?

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. Yes, sir.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. How much is it going to cost?

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. Well, I would not suppose it would cost anything very much. We simply ask clerical assistance. I could not exactly state that to the gentleman, but I should suppose the expense would be a very moderate one.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Are you going to get through with it by December or is it going to be another continuous performance?

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania. I say that is our object and purpose. We are willing to sit during the recess of Congress intending to do that thing. I want to say our committee and the Senate committee, so far as we have talked with them, are exceedingly anxious to get this work forwarded, and we are willing to give our time for that purpose.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I suppose, Mr. Speaker, that is the easiest way to get rid of this whole business.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the joint resolution was passed.

FORT ROBINSON MILITARY RESERVATION.

Mr. KINKAID. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 19181) to grant a certain parcel of land, part of Fort Robinson Military Reservation, Nebr., to the village of Crawford, Nebr., for park purposes, with committee amendments thereto, and which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby granted to the village of Crawford, a duly incorporated municipality under the statutes of the State of Nebraska as a village, situated in the county of Dawes, in the State of Nebraska, one certain parcel of land, being now a part of the Fort Robinson Military Reservation, the property of the United States, situated in the said county of Dawes, in the State of Nebraska, described as follows: Beginning at a point at the northeast corner of said Fort Robinson Military Reservation and running thence due west 1,584 feet; running thence due south 3,696 feet; running thence due east 1,584 feet; running thence due north 3,696 feet to the point of beginning (134.4 acres): Provided, That the said tract shall be used for park and water-power purposes only: And provided further, That the village of Crawford shall erect and maintain a suitable fence to separate the said tract from the military reservation: Provided further, That if the said village of Crawford shall cease to use the said land for park and water-power purposes the title hereby vested in it shall immediately revert to the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. GILBERT of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. KINKAID. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. GILBERT of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I am willing that the unanimous consent may go and may be considered as waived. I do not care to avail myself of the twenty minutes. However, I want some information about this bill. Why should the Government of the United States donate that tract of land to this village?

Mr. KINKAID. Mr. Speaker, there is plenty of land in that locality, and there will be a great deal to spare after this may have been disposed of in this particular way. There are about 15,000 acres contained in this military reservation, and this particular parcel which this bill will grant, if the bill is enacted, is near the village of Crawford, and the village of Crawford has used it for many years, by a license granted by the Secretary of War, for park purposes.

However, the village has never deemed it wise to make permanent improvements, because it felt it would not be warranted in doing so on account of the uncertainty that the license might at any time be terminated. But all this time, the War Department being advised by different commanders of the post that this was not needed at all for military purposes, the license has run, and the village has been allowed to use this particular parcel, or nearly one-third more than this particular parcel, for park purposes. Now that prospects for the growth of the village have become somewhat improved, it seeks to have the title granted to itself, conditioned that it may be used for park and water-power purposes only, and that it revert to the Government when it shall cease to be so used. It seeks this in order that it may proceed with safety in the making of improvements of a permanent character and which are necessary for the full enjoyment of the land for park purposes.

Mr. GILBERT of Kentucky. Why should the Government donate that tract of land to that municiplaity?

Mr. KINKAID. It would be just as well as to maintain it as part of the reservation, because it is of no use for reservation purposes. It is a rough piece of land, particularly adapted to park purposes on account of its scenic character, and also it has water-power facilities which have been utilized by the village, and the village needs the water for different purposes. It is in a dry country. It is but a short distance from there to the eastern line of the State of Wyoming. It is in the semiarid region.

Mr. GILBERT of Kentucky. I will withdraw my objection, with a mental reservation that you are not entitled to the property at all.

Mr. KINKAID. All right; I yield you the mental reservation in consideration of 134¼ acres of the military reservation. I want the property.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KINKAID. Yes, sir.

Mr. MANN. You say the village needs the water. Now, may not the Government need water on the reservation?

Mr. KINKAID. It has at another place an abundance of water on much higher ground, and that is right near where the post is situated—that is, the post buildings. It is as good water as there is in the United States. They would not use this water, for they have water which is so much better.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman stated what of course is common knowledge, that this is in a dry country.

Mr. KINKAID. Usually dry.

Mr. MANN. Is he sure that the Government will never need this water which you propose to give away to the village?

Mr. KINKAID. I can answer that question very authoritatively, because the Secretary of War ordered that an Army officer be detailed to make a thorough examination of the proposition, and an officer was detailed for the purpose. Now, the post commanders at this post had previously recommended that this grant be made, but the Secretary of War was not content with that, and it was perfectly agreeable to me that a very careful and scrupulous investigation be made, which was done; and instead of recommending the granting of 196 acres, the amount asked for, this officer reported that there would be no question about the safety of the Government in making the grant if it were reduced to 134½ acres. That reduction was made by a committee amendment, which I have moved that the House adopt, so that there is nothing remaining in the parcel which this bill will grant that the Government will ever possibly need.

Mr. MANN. Is this reservation an original reservation from the public domain?

Mr. KINKAID. Yes, sir; it is an original reservation from the public domain.

Mr. MANN. No ground that the Government has purchased?

Mr. KINKAID. No, no.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Never cost the Government anything?

Mr. KINKAID. No.

Mr. DE ARMOND. What does the Secretary of War say about it?

Mr. KINKAID. The Secretary of War recommends it; nobody has objected to it. [Cries of "Vote!"]

The question was taken; and in the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

CANAL AND POWER STATIONS, WHITE RIVER, ARKANSAS.

Mr. MACON. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby given to the Batesville Power Company, a corporation created and organized under a charter granted by the State of Arkansas, its successors or assigns, to erect, construct, operate, and maintain inlet and outlet races, canals, or other structures and a power station or stations at or near Lock and Dam No. 1, upper White River, Arkansas, and to make such other improvements as may be necessary for the development of water power from Pool No. 1, and the transmission or application of the same: Provided, That the constructions hereby authorized are not built on any lands belonging to the United States and do not in any way impair the usefulness of any improvement made by the Government for the benefit of navigation: Provided further, That in the operation of the aforesaid constructions the withdrawal of water from the river shall at all times be under the direction and control of the Secretary of War, and that until the plans and location of the works herein authorized, so far as they affect the interests of navigation, have been approved by the Secretary of War, the improvements shall not be commenced or built, and the Secretary of War is authorized and directed to fix from time to time reasonable charges to be paid by said company for the use of said power.

SEC. 2. That unless the work herein authorized be commenced within one year and completed within three years from the date hereof the privileges hereby granted shall cease and be determined.

SEC. 3. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is expressly reserved.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. MANN. I demand a second. I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

Mr. MACON. I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. The Chair hears no objection. The gentleman from Arkansas is entitled to twenty minutes and the gentleman from Illinois is entitled to twenty minutes.

Mr. MANN. I just wish to ask the gentleman briefly, first, what committee reports upon this bill?

LOCK AND DAM, WHITE RIVER, ARKANSAS.

Mr. MACON. Mr. Speaker, I have a companion piece here that I should like to have considered now. It will only take a moment. I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 18596) to enable the Secretary of War to permit the erection of a lock and dam in aid of navigation in the White River, Arkansas, and for other purposes, with the committee amendments.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered to grant permission to J. A. Omberg, jr., to build and construct a lock and dam across the White River at such point above Lock No. 3, now built or being built by the United States, as may be approved by the Secretary of War, the said lock and dam to be constructed under his direction, supervision, and control, and in accordance with and conformity to the plans and designs as may be approved by the Chief of Engineers of the United States Army: Provided, That the plans and designs of the said structure shall be prepared by the said contracting party at his own expense; and the said contracting party shall purchase and pay for all lands on either side of the river that may be necessary to the successful construction and operation of said lock and dam, including flowage rights and rights of way for ingress and egress from public highways, and deed the same to the United States, and make all excavations, erect all stone, concrete, and timber work, furnish all materials of every character, and pay for all labor employed in the construction of said lock and dam, and give said lock and dam to the United States completed, free of all cost, expense, claims, or charges of any kind whatsoever.

SEC. 2. That the said individual undertaking the construction of said work shall begin the building of said lock and dam within eighteen months from the passage of this act, and the same shall be completed within two years from the date of beginning the construction, the right being reserved to the United States to enter on the construction of said lock and dam, if deemed advisable, at any time before the work is commenced by said contracting party; or if begun and not carried on in strict accordance with the directions of the Secretary of War, then the United States may assume the further construction and completion of said work at its option, the cost of such further construction and completion to be paid by the said contracting individual.

SEC. 3. That the deed to the United States to the land to be purchased and donated to the same, as mentioned in the first section of this act, shall be executed and delivered within twelve months after the passage of this act; and, further, that the Secretary of War shall determine from time to time whether the work is being properly done, and may require an increase in force to be employed by the contractor, so as to force the work to completion within the limit mentioned in the act.

SEC. 4. That in consideration of the construction of said lock and dam free of cost to the United States except as provided in section 1 of this act, the United States hereby grants to the person constructing said lock and dam under the provisions of this act such rights as it possesses to use the water power produced by said dam and to convert the same into electric power or otherwise utilize it for a period of ninety-nine years: Provided, That he shall furnish the necessary electric current while his power plant is in operation to move the gates and operate the locks and to light the United States buildings and grounds free of cost to the United States: Provided further, That the said person shall operate and maintain the said locks, affording passage to all boats and craft desiring to use the same, but the Secretary of War, in the interest of navigation, may relieve him of this obligation: And provided further, That the plans for the necessary works and structures to utilize said water power shall be approved by the Secretary of War, and that nothing shall be done in the use of the water from said dam or otherwise to interfere with or in any way impede or retard the proper and complete navigation of the river at all times, nor in any way to interfere with the use and control of the same by the United States for the purposes of navigation: And provided further, That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to prescribe regulations to govern the use of the said water power and the operations of the plant and force employed in connection therewith; and no claim shall be made against the United States for any failure of water power resulting from any cause whatever.

SEC. 5. That in case of failure on the part of said J. A. Omberg, jr., his heirs and assigns, for a period of twelve months to formally notify the Secretary of War of his intention to proceed with the construction of the lock and dam as herein provided, then it shall be lawful for the Secretary of War to contract with any private corporation, company, firm, or persons for the construction of said lock and dam on the terms and in the manner herein provided: Provided, That the Secretary of War may require the contracting party to execute a bond, with proper sureties, before the commencement of the work, in such amount as he may consider necessary, not exceeding $100,000, to insure the commencement, prosecution, and completion of the work herein authorized and compliance with the terms, conditions, and requirements of this act; and in case of failure to comply with the requirements of said bond the said contracting party shall forfeit to the United States the full amount thereof.

SEC. 6. That the right is expressly reserved in the United States to revoke by act of Congress the rights, privileges, and benefits conferred by this act; but in the event of such revocation the United States shall pay to the corporation, company, firm, or persons who may erect said lock and dam under the provisions of this act as full compensation the reasonable value, exclusive of the franchise hereby conferred, of all properties erected and lands purchased by them necessary for the enjoyment of the benefits conferred upon them by the provisions of this act, such value to be determined by mutual agreement between the Secretary of War and the owners of said properties; and in case they can not agree, then by proceedings instituted in the United States circuit court for the condemnation of said property, such proceedings to conform as nearly as may be to the laws of the State of Arkansas in respect of condemning land for the right of way for railroad purposes: Provided, That to insure compliance with the terms of the contract or of this act, or to protect the interests of navigation, the Secretary of War shall have power at any time, before or after the completion of the work, to order a suspension of all privileges granted by this act: And provided further, That compliance with such order of suspension may be enforced by the injunction of the circuit court of the United States exercising jurisdiction in the district in which the work is situated, and proper proceedings to this end shall be instituted by the Attorney-General upon request of the Secretary of War.

SEC. 7. That nothing in this act shall be construed as in any way interfering with the exclusive jurisdiction over and control by the United States of the White River and the lock and dam therein to be erected for the purpose of navigation, nor as repealing or modifying any of the provisions of law now existing in reference to the protection of navigation.

Mr. MACON. The Rivers and Harbors Committee unanimously reported the bill, after a full hearing and due consideration; and the report will show that the committee thinks it is in the interest of the Government that the bill pass.

Mr. MANN. Is this a dam to be built by private parties?

Mr. MACON. It is to be built by an individual, and it is to be under the control of the Government at all times.

Mr. MANN. Is this in connection with locks already constructed by the Government?

Mr. MACON. No, sir; it is an independent matter. The River and Harbor Committee decided to abandon the construction of locks and dams in White River after the completion of Lock No. 3. This is to be constructed above Lock 3.

Mr. MANN. It is customary for these bills with reference to dams to go to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. It does not make any difference to me what committee it goes to; but if one committee adopts one proposition in reference to bills going before it it sometimes happens that people manage to get a bill referred to another committee. Now, I know the gentleman would not do that.

Mr. MACON. No, sir; I beg to assure the gentleman that in the construction of this project it is intended to follow the policy adopted by the Committee on Rivers and Harbors on the subject. The Rivers and Harbors Committee decided after the railroad was constructed that paralleled White River up into the mountainous country in Arkansas, that it was not necessary to construct locks and dams farther up the stream. Then this party asked that he be permitted to construct lock and dam No. 4. The Rivers and Harbors Committee had hearings, investigated the matter thoroughly, and decided after due consideration that it was entirely feasible and largely in the interest of the Government that he be permitted to construct it. I do not think the Rivers and Harbors Committee, in doing what it did in the premises, assumed or usurped any of the power of any other committee of the House.

Mr. MANN. It has been the practice in the House to refer to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors a bill, if the dam were to be constructed in connection with river and harbor work.

Mr. MACON. Yes, sir; I think that has been the practice.

Mr. MANN. But where it was a dam across a river, not connected with river and harbor work, the practice has been to refer the bill to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Mr. MACON. I will say to my good friend that I think this is a river and harbor project. It is carrying out the policy that had formerly been planned by the River and Harbor Committee; but when the railroad was constructed the committee felt that it was not in the interest of the Government to expend $160,000 for the construction of this particular lock and dam, and after the committee decided that it was not proper for the Government to do this work, then it was that Mr. Ormberg asked that he be permitted to construct the lock and dam at his own expense.

Mr. MANN. Very well.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded? If not, the question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and two-thirds voting in the affirmative, the rules were suspended, and the bill passed.

LEGISLATIVE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. LITTAUER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit a conference report on the bill H. R. 16472—the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill—to be printed in the RECORD under the rule.

The SPEAKER. The report and statement will be printed under the rule.

CONFEREES ON AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER. The Chair announces as conferees on the agricultural appropriation bill Mr. WADSWORTH, Mr. SCOTT, and Mr. LAMB. The Chair will state that the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. LEVER] came to the Chair and requested to be excused from service upon the conference committee.

ELECTRIC RAILWAY ON NATIONAL CEMETERY ROAD, VICKSBURG, MISS.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill H. R. 14811 as amended by the committee.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That permission is hereby given to George T. Houston and Frank B. Houston, their associates, successors, and assigns, to erect, construct, operate, and maintain an electric railway over and along the national cemetery road at Vicksburg, Miss., from said city of Vicksburg northward to the northern boundary of the Government right of way for said road: Provided, That a minimum width of 30 feet of the roadway, over and above that used by the railway tracks, be left all along said road for a driveway, sidewalk, and gutters; that the licensees, their associates, successors, and assigns, shall repair all damage done to the Government roadway by the construction of their line of railway, and shall maintain their railway and said roadway within the tracks and for 2 feet on each side of the tracks in proper state of repair thereafter: And provided further, That said electric railway shall be constructed, operated, and maintained according to plans and specifications to be submitted to and approved by the Secretary of War, and under such regulations as may be prescribed by him.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. NEEDHAM. I demand a second, and ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi has twenty minutes, and the gentleman from California [Mr. NEEDHAM] has twenty minutes.

Mr. NEEDHAM. I do not desire that much time. Is this bill reported by a committee?

Mr. WILLIAMS. It is reported unanimously by the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. NEEDHAM. Was it referred to the Secretary of War?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes.

Mr. NEEDHAM. I wish to say to the gentleman that in the various national parks of the country, for instance, the Yosemite, the Yellowstone, and other national parks, the policy of the Government has been not to permit electric lines to enter them.

Mr. WILLIAMS. This is not within the park at all. It is upon the road from Vicksburg out to the gates of the park. The Government owns the road.

Mr. NEEDHAM. Why is this legislation necessary?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Because the Government owns the road.

Mr. NEEDHAM. And it is not intended that the electric railway shall enter the confines of the park itself?

Mr. WILLIAMS. No.

Mr. HULL. It will be entirely outside?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Entirely outside.

Mr. MANN. Is any control reserved in this bill over the fare to be charged?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Absolute control. I will read to the gentleman the exact language.

And provided further, That said electric railway shall be constructed, operated, and maintained according to plans and specifications to be submitted to and approved by the Secretary of War, and under such regulations as may be prescribed by him.

Mr. MANN. Does the gentleman think that language sufficient to enable the Secretary of War to require a reasonable charge?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I think so. The language seems to be sufficient, and the Secretary thinks so.

The question was taken; and two-thirds voting in the affirmative, the rules were suspended and the bill passed.

COMMITTEE ON EXPENDITURES IN THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Expenditures in the Department of Agriculture is hereby authorized to sit during the recess of this Congress.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The resolution was agreed to.

DONATING GUN CARRIAGE TO RIPLEY, TENN.

Mr. GARRETT. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass House joint resolution (H. J. Res. 160) authorizing the Secretary of War to furnish a certain gun carriage to the mayor of the city of Ripley, Lauderdale County, Tenn.

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and is hereby, authorized to deliver to the mayor of the city of Ripley, Lauderdale County, Tenn., if the same can be done without detriment to the public service, one 10-inch carriage for Rodman gun now at New York Arsenal, Governors Island, New York Harbor, the same to be used for the mounting thereon of a 10-inch columbiad cannon recovered from the ruins of Fort Pillow, Lauderdale County, Tenn., by the said municipal corporation of Ripley and the county of Lauderdale, Tenn., acting through their respective agents and officers, to be used and mounted as a monument in the court-house yard or on the public square in said town of Ripley: Provided, That the donation shall be without expense to the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

There was no demand for a second.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

BRIDGE ACROSS TUG FORK OF SANDY RIVER.

Mr. GAINES of West Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 19312) to authorize the Mingo-Martin Coal Land Company to construct a bridge across Tug Fork of Big Sandy River at or near the mouth of Wolf Creek.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Mingo-Martin Coal Land Company, a corporation organized under the laws of West Virginia, its successors and assigns, be, and they are hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a railroad and foot bridge and approaches thereto across the Tug Fork of Big Sandy River at or near Wolf Creek, in the State of Kentucky, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

There was no demand for a second.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

JOSÉ MARTIN CALVO, OF COSTA RICA.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I am authorized by the Committee on Military Affairs to move to suspend the rules and pass Senate joint resolution (S. R. 66) authorizing the Secretary of War to receive for instruction at the Military Academy at West Point Mr. José Martín Calvo, of Costa Rica.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to permit Mr. José Martín Calvo, of Costa Rica, to receive instruction at the Military Academy at West Point: Provided, That no expense shall be caused to the United States thereby: And provided further, That in the case of the said José Martín Calvo the provisions of sections 1320 and 1321 of the Revised Statutes shall be suspended.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. HULL. I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

There was objection.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I want to say to the gentleman I thought there was an agreement sometime ago that this business was to be shut off.

Mr. HULL. I know of no such agreement.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. My understanding is that the gentleman from Iowa was the one who suggested it.

Mr. HULL. I think the gentleman from Missouri is mistaken. This is simply the ordinary courtesy that has never been denied to a South American republic. The only contest I have ever known was in regard to the admission of Chinese to the Military Academy.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Are they shut out?

Mr. HULL. They are all shut out unless Congress by affirmative action gives permission.

Mr. PAYNE. I think what the gentleman from Missouri has in mind is a bill that passed the House the other day that cut off the right of any government to send its students here without the consent of Congress in each case, either cadets to West Point or to the Military Academy.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I knew there was some kind of an agreement.

Mr. HULL. They have no absolute rights here unless the Congress gives permission.

The question was taken; and, two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

BRIDGE ACROSS COLDWATER RIVER, MISSISSIPPI.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 20097) to authorize the board of supervisors of Coahoma County, Miss., to construct a bridge across Coldwater River.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the board of supervisors of Coahoma County, Miss., be, and they are hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a drawbridge and approaches thereto across the Coldwater River at or near the point where said river intersects the dividing line between Coahoma County and Quitman County, in the State of Mississippi, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

There was no demand for a second.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE MONONGAHELA RIVER IN THE STATE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 19850) "to authorize the Monongahela Connecting Railroad Company to construct a bridge across the Monongahela River in the State of Pennsylvania."

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Monongahela Connecting Railroad Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, its successors and assigns, be, and they are hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Monongahela River at Pittsburg, from a point on the north shore between Hazlewood avenue and the Glenwood highway bridge to a point on the south shore in the township of Baldwin or the township of Lower St. Clair, in Allegheny County, in the State of Pennsylvania, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed, and read a third time, and it was read the third time, and passed.

BRIDGE OVER THE OHIO RIVER.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 19566) "to authorize the Coraopolis Bridge Company to construct a bridge over the Ohio River," with the committee amendments.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Coraopolis and Osborne Bridge Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, its successors and assigns, be, and they are hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Ohio River from a point on Fourth avenue, near Watt street, in the borough of Coraopolis, to a point on Beaver street or road (about five-eighths of a mile southeast of the line of Sewickley Borough), in the borough of Osborne, all in Allegheny County, in the State of Pennsylvania, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

There was no demand for a second.

The question was taken; and, two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

BRIDGE ACROSS RED RIVER OF THE NORTH.

Mr. STEENERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 20119) to authorize the village of Oslo, Marshall County, Minn., to construct a bridge across the Red River of the North, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the village of Oslo, a municipal corporation organized under the laws of the State of Minnesota, its successors and assigns, be, and they are hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a pontoon bridge and approaches thereto across the Red River of the North at a point in said village to a point opposite in the State of North Dakota, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded? [After a pause.] No second having been demanded, the question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and, two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

UNIVERSITY PREPARATORY SCHOOL, TERRITORY OF OKLAHOMA.

Mr. McGUIRE. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 17186) granting to the Territory of Oklahoma, for the use and benefit of the University Preparatory School of the Territory of Oklahoma, section 33, in township No. 26 north of range No. 1 west of the Indian meridian, in Kay County, Okla., which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all of section No. 33, in township No. 26, north of range No. 1 west of the Indian meridian, in Kay County, Okla., same being a portion of the lands reserved to said Territory for public building purposes, be, and the same is hereby, granted to the Territory of Oklahoma for the use and benefit of the University Preparatory School of said Territory of Oklahoma, to be and become the property of the said University Preparatory School for building purposes, but no indemnity shall be allowed for this section: Provided, That the board of regents of the said University Preparatory School may set apart any part of said section of land as a campus for said school, and may sell and dispose of and convey the residue of said section of land, either by proper subdivisions or platting the same into town sites as an addition to the said town of Tonkawa, or otherwise, and at public or private sale, as the said board of regents of the said University Preparatory School may deem best, and all money arising from the sale of any of said lands shall be used and expended by the board of regents of said University Preparatory School only for the erection of buildings for the use of said school.

SEC. 2. That the leases to the present tenants thereon, made by the board for leasing school lands of the Territory of Oklahoma, shall remain in full force and effect until their respective expirations, and that the governor of the Territory of Oklahoma shall appoint, on the application of the board of regents of said University Preparatory School, three disinterested freeholders of said county to appraise the value of the improvements on said lands belonging to the lessees thereof, and such improvement shall be appraised at the fair, reasonable value thereof, and the said appraisers shall give ten days' notice of the time when such appraisement shall be made by posting the same in a conspicuous place on each quarter section of said lands, and shall take an oath fairly and impartially to appraise the improvements of the said lessees on said lands at the fair, reasonable value thereof, and shall make report of such appraisement and file the same with the governor of the Territory of Oklahoma with such oath, and the board of regents of said University Preparatory School shall immediately pay the amount so fixed to the treasurer of the Territory of Oklahoma for the use of such lessees and have immediate possession of said lands: Provided further, That if either the board of regents of said University Preparatory School or said lessees shall feel themselves aggrieved by the valuation of such appraisers they may, within thirty days from the filing of such report with the governor of the Territory, appeal to the district court of said county by filing notice with the governor of said Territory and filing a bond to be approved by the governor, conditioned that such person or said board of regents will prosecute such appeal to effect and without unnecessary delay, and pay all costs and judgments that may be awarded against them in said proceeding. And the governor of said Territory shall immediately cause a copy of the application of said board and the appointment and oath and report of said appraisers, together with the bond aforesaid, to be filed with the clerk of the district court of said Kay County, whereupon the question of the amount of damages sustained by such lessees shall be tried de novo by a jury: And provided further, That the board of regents of said University Preparatory School are hereby vested with full authority on behalf of said Territory to settle and adjust the difference between said University Preparatory School and the lessees of such lands and make such settlements as the board of regents may deem just and proper: And provided further, That when said Territory shall become a State the governor of said State shall be the successor of the governor of said Territory under the provision of this act.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second, and ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois demands a second, and asks unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. McGUIRE] is entitled to twenty minutes, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] is entitled to twenty minutes.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second for the purpose of having a brief explanation of this bill.

Mr. McGUIRE. Mr. Speaker, this bill relates to section 33 of lands of Oklahoma reserved by the Federal Government for public buildings for the future State of Oklahoma. This land lies adjacent to the city of Tonkawa. At that city is located the Preparatory University of Oklahoma. The school is badly in need of additional land. When we become a State this land could not be granted to this institution, for the reason that it is reserved here for a specific purpose. This bill is indorsed by the governor of Oklahoma, the Territorial secretary, the chairman of the school land board of Oklahoma, and the Secretary of the Interior, and is reported here by the committee.

Mr. MANN. What does this bill do?

Mr. McGUIRE. It gives to the Preparatory University of Oklahoma for school purposes a section of land adjacent to the land now owned by the institution. It simply donates it for school purposes.

Mr. MANN. This is in addition to the other land which has been donated for school purposes?

Mr. McGUIRE. Yes; this is in addition to the land donated for school purposes in Oklahoma.

Mr. MANN. Does not the admission bill provide very liberally for land for school purposes in the new State?

Mr. McGUIRE. No; the admission bill does not. Formerly the land reserved in Oklahoma was abundant. The two sections for school purposes were sufficient.

Mr. MANN. What is the value of this land?

Mr. McGUIRE. I only give this by way of general information, but I think it is probably twelve or fifteen thousand dollars. The real purpose of it is to give additional land for campus purposes for the institution.

Mr. MANN. Devotes the whole section, does it?

Mr. McGUIRE. Yes.

Mr. MANN. That is a large amount for campus purposes.

Mr. McGUIRE. Yes; it is more than they will need for campus purposes, and that in excess of what is needed for campus purposes will be sold and the proceeds given to the institution.

Mr. MANN. Will this be a State university?

Mr. McGUIRE. This is now a preparatory university. In addition to this there is a university proper. This will be a State preparatory university.

Mr. MANN. Will it be maintained by the State of Oklahoma?

Mr. McGUIRE. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Who maintains it now?

Mr. McGUIRE. The Territory of Oklahoma.

Mr. MANN. Out of the public treasury?

Mr. McGUIRE. Yes; out of the funds of the Territory.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BEALL].

Mr. BEALL of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask one or two questions of the gentleman from Oklahoma. I understood the gentleman to say that it would not be possible after the Territory of Oklahoma becomes a State for that State to make this disposition of those lands.

Mr. McGUIRE. That is what I said.

Mr. BEALL of Texas. Is the gentleman sure that that is correct? Why would it not be possible?

Mr. McGUIRE. I feel very confident of it as a proposition of law.

Mr. BEALL of Texas. Why wouldn't it be possible, with this land in the control of the State of Oklahoma, for that State to make whatever disposition it might desire to make with respect to this land?

Mr. McGUIRE. This land was given for a specific purpose, and as long as the Government controls the Territory it can control this; but it is my judgment that if the land is given to the Territory for a specific purpose it must be used for that purpose after we become a State. That is simply my judgment as a matter of law.

Mr. BEALL of Texas. For the information of the House, Mr. Speaker, I desire to say this, that the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. McGUIRE] has introduced a number of bills having the same general purpose that this bill has—that is, to divert a section or quarter section of land from the purposes for which it was originally intended and devoting that land to some other and different purpose. And I notice this, Mr. Speaker, that in every one of these bills the quarter section of land that is proposed to be donated to some purpose other than that for which it was originally intended is a very valuable quarter section of land. In this case it is an entire section of land located very near a thriving town, and its value is rapidly increasing. There are several bills here like this proposing to take quarter sections of land now belonging to the school fund of Oklahoma and devoting them to the educational interests of particular towns in that Territory. In some of these instances the quarter sections of land are worth thirty or forty thousand dollars. Now, Mr. Speaker, when this matter was in the hands of the subcommittee, of which the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. KLEPPER] was chairman, there were referred down to the Department three separate and distinct bills, of which this bill was one, and the recommendation or report of the Department upon each one of those bills was to the effect that if Oklahoma was to be admitted to statehood at this session of Congress, then it ought to be left to the people of Oklahoma to determine whether or not they want any juggling with these trust funds. I consider it, Mr. Speaker, a very dangerous precedent. While it may have been established in the past, it is a very dangerous thing for Congress to do after having once donated this land to such purposes——

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. BEALL of Texas. Yes, sir.

Mr. MANN. I understood the gentleman from Oklahoma to state that this land was not included in the land which would belong to the State of Oklahoma—was not included in the land set apart for educational purposes.

Mr. BEALL of Texas. It is land donated by Congress to the public-building fund of the Territory of Oklahoma, and when Oklahoma comes in as a State, in my judgment, Oklahoma will have the right to control not only the building-fund land, but the university land, the land for public school purposes, all the land in the State of Oklahoma, unless specially forbidden to do so. I do not believe that the gentleman from Oklahoma is correct in his contention that when Oklahoma comes in as a State she comes in gagged and tied and bound, without the right and without the power to dispose of her lands as she sees fit to do. In fact, in the act admitting Oklahoma to statehood there is this provision:

> That section 33 and all lands heretofore selected in lieu thereof * * * for charitable and penal institutions and public buildings shall be apportioned and disposed of as the legislature of said State may prescribe.

The Department said that if Oklahoma was to come in as a State, then Oklahoma should be given the right to determine for herself whether these trust funds should be tampered with. Now, Mr. Speaker, here are lands that have been solemnly set apart by Congress for a particular purpose, which purpose has been confirmed by the recent statehood act, and now these bills propose to divert these lands from purposes for which they were originally intended and to dedicate them to different purposes. A few days ago this Territory was admitted to statehood. Within a very few months' time all the machinery of her government will be in operation. If the million and a half people of Oklahoma, after they have secured statehood, then desire to tamper with these trust funds, upon them rests, where it should rest, the responsibility for doing so; but I do not believe that this House now, with the meager information that it has before it, with its membership having no special interest in the matter, ought to take away from the people of Oklahoma the right to do with these lands as they may want to do with them after they have secured the right to statehood. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, we have just passed the bill to create the State of Oklahoma. These are lands which will belong to the new State, set apart heretofore for a particular purpose. If the State of Oklahoma desires to have that land used for some other purpose, let the State signify its desire in the matter. There certainly can be no need of haste in setting apart 640 acres for a campus for a preparatory school in that Territory at present. Let the State express its wish. It may be the State will want to use this land for the purpose for which it was originally designed instead of transferring it for a campus. Of course everyone in the House knows that there is no need of this ground for a campus. If this preparatory school shall make use of the ground, it will be for other purposes. Whether that will be for the purpose of sale in order to raise money, we are not informed, but it seems to me the gentleman from Oklahoma ought to be willing to let the new State express its desire after it has organized, as to whether it wishes this land to be used for one purpose in preference to another purpose. I can understand how the people in charge of the school may want to get the additional land, but that is not our concern. It ought to be left to the new State's officials to determine their wish, and if then they need any action of Congress it is easily procured after the State speaks.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and in the opinion of the Chair, two thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

Mr. McGUIRE. Mr. Speaker, I am a little afraid that the gentlemen do not understand the purpose of this bill. Not only does the school desire the land and believe it to be an equitable proposition, but the people of Oklahoma fully understand the bill. It has been indorsed by the press of Oklahoma; it has been indorsed by the governor of Oklahoma; it has been indorsed by the school-land board of Oklahoma, and it seems to me that it is a fair and equitable proposition. In addition to that, this donation is for educational purposes, and the amount of land set apart for building purposes in that Territory is immense in quantity. We will not need it for building purposes. That institution is in need of this land at this time for this purpose, and it is indorsed by those who are on the ground and are most conversant with the situation.

Mr. BEALL of Texas. Would the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. McGUIRE. Yes, sir.

Mr. BEALL of Texas. Near what town is this land—Tonkawa?

Mr. McGUIRE. Tonkawa.

Mr. BEALL of Texas. How large is the town?

Mr. McGUIRE. About 3,000 inhabitants.

Mr. BEALL of Texas. How far is this from the town?

Mr. McGUIRE. The institution?

Mr. BEALL of Texas. Yes.

Mr. McGUIRE. It is adjacent to the city.

Mr. BEALL of Texas. This land is adjacent to a town of about 3,000 people?

Mr. McGUIRE. Yes, sir. As I understand it, a part of it lies adjacent to the town and part adjacent to the holdings of this institution.

Mr. BEALL of Texas. What do you think is a reasonable value of this section of land?

Mr. McGUIRE. The value of this land, I am advised, would be twelve thousand or fifteen thousand dollars, if sold in a body, but if this bill should pass and the land should be platted and sold in smaller quantities for town-lot purposes, it would bring probably three times that much; so you have increased the value of this land for educational purposes if this bill passes.

Mr. BEALL of Texas. In other words, it is located close enough to the town to be platted into lots and sold in that way?

Mr. McGUIRE. It is.

Mr. BEALL of Texas. How much of this land do you want for campus purposes?

Mr. McGUIRE. I do not know just what the regents of the university desire. I have not heard them say. Probably 40 acres, anyway.

Mr. BEALL of Texas. That would leave about 600 acres?

Mr. McGUIRE. About 600 acres.

Mr. BEALL of Texas. That you want to divert from the purpose for which it was intended and use it for a different purpose.

Mr. McGUIRE. I beg the gentleman's pardon. I do not understand.

Mr. BEALL of Texas. That will leave about 600 acres that you intend to sell and use for a purpose different from that originally intended.

Mr. McGUIRE. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. BEALL of Texas. How many bills of this kind have you pending before Congress now diverting lands from one purpose to another?

Mr. McGUIRE. I have introduced two bills that have been reported from the committee that I will press, one for the preparatory university and one for the university proper.

Mr. BEALL of Texas. How many bills that you want pressed?

Mr. McGUIRE. Two.

Mr. BEALL of Texas. Chandler?

Mr. McGUIRE. Chandler and Shawnee.

Mr. BEALL of Texas. And Enid?

Mr. McGUIRE. Enid has not been reported from the committee.

Mr. BEALL of Texas. I mean that have not been reported.

Mr. McGUIRE. I do not think that I have introduced any for Enid. In order that the House may understand the purpose of the gentleman's interrogatories, I will say that there are a number of sections of land adjacent to cities of this kind, and there has been something of a pressure where the cities could not build schools by reason of the fact that they could not vote to exceed 4 per cent under the Federal law, and they have been driven almost to exasperation because in many of the cities the children are out of school. So I introduced a few other bills of this kind for this reason.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Is that in Indian Territory?

Mr. McGUIRE. Oklahoma. We are under what is known as the "Harrison Act," and for that reason we can not vote to exceed the 4 per cent, and we have not been able to construct school buildings. That is the reason I introduced other bills of this character, and while I take the position that they are meritorious I am not pressing them at this time.

Mr. JAMES. Will you offer the other two bills at the next session?

Mr. McGUIRE. I do not know.

Mr. JAMES. You are compromising by introducing two at this session?

Mr. McGUIRE. The gentleman can call it anything he desires—compromise or not.

Mr. BEALL of Texas. Let me ask the gentleman another question. If Congress permits the diversion of land dedicated to one purpose to another purpose in the case of Oklahoma, why can not the same thing be done in respect to Arizona and New Mexico?

Mr. McGUIRE. I do not see why it can not. I have not taken the position it can not. It is absolutely in the hands of Congress that it can do with it just as it pleases. That is true. If it is a wise thing, I do not see why it should not be a wise thing for New Mexico and Arizona.

Mr. BEALL of Texas. Then it is likely to occur very frequently in the future?

Mr. McGUIRE. No; I think not.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

Mr. BEALL of Texas. I ask for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 95, noes 47.

Mr. BEALL of Texas. I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 124, noes 58.

So, two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

DAMS BETWEEN ST. PAUL AND MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

Mr. BURTON of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and take from the Speaker's table the bill S. 6451 and pass the same.

The bill was read, as follows;

Be it enacted, etc., That a commission is hereby created to examine and report to the Secretary of War, for transmission to Congress, concerning the use of the surplus water which shall not be needed for the purposes of navigation flowing over the dams now under construction by the United States in the Mississippi River between the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn.

That such commission shall be composed of one officer of the Corps of Engineers of the United States Army, one officer of the Quartermaster's Department of the United States Army, both of whom shall be designated by the Secretary of War, and one official of the Treasury Department, who shall be an expert in electrical engineering, who shall be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury.

SEC. 2. That this commission shall examine and report upon the following propositions:

First. Whether there will be any surplus water flowing over said dams not needed for the purposes of navigation which might be available for mechanical or commercial power.

Second. Whether such power, or any part thereof, could be economically utilized for furnishing the light and power now needed or which hereafter may be needed in the buildings and property of the United States at St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Fort Snelling, Minn., and, if so, to what extent and what proportion or amount of the available power could be so utilized by the United States or disposed of in any manner to the advantage of the United States.

Third. If it shall appear to said commission feasible and economical for the United States to use or dispose of such power or any part thereof, then said commission shall report a plan or plans, with terms and conditions for such use or disposition, and an estimate of the cost thereof to the United States.

SEC. 3. That the said commission shall meet at such time and place as may be directed by the Secretary of War, and shall transmit said report within two years after the passage of this act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. OLMSTED). Is a second demanded?

No second being demanded, in the opinion of the Chair two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the bill was taken from the Speaker's table and passed.

Mr. BURTON of Ohio. I move that House bill 17138, which is identical in language, lie on the table.

There was no objection.

HARBOR IMPROVEMENTS AT THE EXPENSE OF PERSONS.

Mr. BURTON of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill H. R. 20266.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That an act entitled "An act authorizing the condemnation of lands or easements needed in connection with works of river and harbor improvement at the expense of persons, companies, or corporations," approved May 16, 1906, be amended so as to read as follows:

"That whenever any person, company, or corporation, municipal or private, shall undertake to secure any land or easement therein, needed in connection with a work of river and harbor improvement duly authorized by Congress, for the purpose of conveying the same to the United States free of cost, or for the purpose of constructing, maintaining, and operating dams for use in connection therewith, and shall be unable for any reason to obtain the same by purchase and acquire a valid title thereto, the Secretary of War may, in his discretion, cause proceedings to be instituted in the name of the United States for the acquirement by condemnation of said land or easement, and it shall be the duty of the Attorney-General of the United States to institute and conduct such proceedings upon the request of the Secretary of War: Provided, That all expenses of said proceedings and any award that may be made thereunder shall be paid by the said person, company, or corporation, to secure which payment the Secretary of War may require the said person, company, or corporation to execute a proper bond in such amount as he may deem necessary before said proceedings are commenced."

SEC. 2. That the said act of May 16, 1906, be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

No second being demanded, in the opinion of the Chair two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

IMMUNITY FROM PROSECUTION.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and take from the Speaker's table the bill S. 5769, and pass the same as amended, by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 5769) to declare the true intent and meaning of parts of the act entitled "An act in relation to testimony before the Interstate Commerce Commission," and so forth, approved February 11, 1893, and an act entitled "An act to establish the Department of Commerce and Labor," approved February 14, 1903, and an act entitled "An act to further regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the States," approved February 19, 1903, and an act entitled "An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1904, and for other purposes," approved February 25, 1903.

Be it enacted, etc., That under the immunity provisions in the act entitled "An act in relation to testimony before the Interstate Commerce Commission," and so forth, approved February 11, 1893, in section 6 of the act entitled "An act to establish the Department of Commerce and Labor," approved February 14, 1903, and in the act entitled "An act to further regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the States," approved February 19, 1903, and in the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1904, and for other purposes," approved February 25, 1903, immunity shall be extended only to a natural person who, as a witness on the part of the Government in any proceeding authorized by any of said statutes, testifies on oath or in obedience to a subpœna produces relevant evidence.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. MANN. I demand a second.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The gentleman from Maine is entitled to twenty minutes and the gentleman from Illinois to the same.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I have just a word only to say. This is a Senate bill.

Mr. MANN. I hope the gentleman will explain it.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. The Senate bill is a draft made by the Department of Justice for the purpose of establishing a definite standard under which immunity will be granted witnesses. The amendment is the same bill, reported unanimously from the Judiciary Committee on the part of the House, with some changes of phraseology, which in our judgment more adequately accomplishes the result. Our amendment practically defines the circumstances under which immunity would be granted. As, first: That when the witness testifies on the part of the Government on oath; and, second, when he produces evidence under a subpœna duces tecum—that is, documentary evidence, or otherwise, which in our judgment is more accurate and scientific than the provision contained in the Senate bill. The two bills intend to accomplish precisely the same purpose; but we believe ours is the more adequate. It is the unanimous report of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman will permit, as I understand it, the law as construed by Judge Humphrey—and his construction probably went beyond the construction that would be made by the Supreme Court—anyone who gives any information at all is immune from prosecution. Now, the original interstate-commerce act, as amended by the act of 1893—that is the act as I remember—was intended to provide such an order, that the Commission might obtain information both from railroad companies and from shippers so as to ascertain whether or not the law was being observed or violated. And it is a very common thing with the Commission to obtain information not by calling people as witnesses, but by sending their representatives to the railroad offices and examining the books; and in the rate bill which we expect will become a law it is provided that the inspectors shall have the right to examine the books of the railroad companies. Now, it is perfectly plain, I take it—I should like the gentleman's judgment on that—that we can not forcibly examine the books of the railroad company unless the persons who produce the books for examination are given immunity from prosecution.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. The gentleman is perfectly right about that.

Mr. MANN. Now, if we pass a law providing that nobody shall have immunity from prosecution unless called as a witness, how are we going to obtain our information before we commence our prosecution?

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. There is no trouble at all, so far as the Interstate Commerce Commission is concerned, or the Department of Commerce and Labor, or the Commissioner of Corporations. Each of them has power to summon witnesses, although no case is pending. They have the power under the statute to compel the attendance of witnesses. Of course, if they make an inquiry, and the party inquired of does not see fit to testify unless he is formally summoned and gives testimony on oath, it would establish a legal standard that would protect him and place the Government in a position where they would know what they were doing. He would have a perfect right to insist on that formality being observed. Now, the Attorney-General is of the opinion that under the existing conditions immunity is granted under a great many circumstances when neither party perhaps expected any such result to follow. I make no criticism whatever upon the decision of the judge in Chicago, but the Attorney-General is very firmly of the opinion that the Department of Justice is bound to be very seriously embarrassed in the enforcement of this legislation unless this definite and specific standard is established by Congress.

Perhaps I ought to say that, in my judgment, the legislation upon which Judge Humphrey largely based his ruling was not the act relating to interstate commerce, under which the Interstate Commerce Commission acts, nor the act creating the Bureau of Corporations, under which the Commissioner of Corporations acts, but probably the resolution appropriating $500,000, which contained a very broad and loosely drawn provision in relation to immunity. I am not authorized to say upon what the judge based his decision; but having read what he did say, it is rather my judgment that he was controlled in his conclusion very largely by the language contained in that appropriation, which was, in my judgment, very much broader than is found in the interstate-commerce act or in the act creating the Department of Commerce and Labor.

Now, I can see no practical difficulty. The Attorney-General sees none. The Interstate Commerce Commission, as I understand it, does not apprehend any, and the Commissioner of Corporations does not apprehend any, provided we have this definite legal standard, so that the Government shall know when it confers immunity, and so that the people who give this testimony or appear in court or produce written evidence shall know when they are entitled to immunity. Under existing conditions it is a very uncertain and doubtful proposition.

Mr. SOUTHARD. Under what conditions is immunity granted in this bill?

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. This does not grant any immunity. The immunity is granted first in the interstate-commerce act, next in the act creating the Department of Commerce and Labor and the Bureau of Corporations, and, thirdly, in the appropriation of $500,000 for the purpose of enforcing the antitrust laws. Those are the three bases of the legislation undertaking to give immunity. Now, this act simply defines what is the legal standard under which the immunity is granted and to which the party testifying can appeal.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Will the gentleman allow a question or two?

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Certainly.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I gather from the reading of the substitute that the immunity applies only where a witness testifies on behalf of the United States?

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Yes; that is the intention.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. In obedience to a subpœna or furnishes documentary evidence in pursuance of a subpœna duces tecum. Now, would an investigation by the Chief of the Bureau of Corporations, the issuing of a subpœna by him or a summons by him compelling a witness to come before him and give testimony and furnish records be testimony on behalf of the United States within the meaning of the substitute which the gentleman proposes?

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. The committee believe that it would accomplish that result. I will say frankly to the gentleman that it has been suggested to members of the committee since we reported our bill, and since the Senate passed the bill which is now before us for amendment, that there might be some question about that, and if this amendment is adopted and the matter gets into conference it is proposed to work it out so that the examination by the Commissioner of Corporations will be the basis for the immunity.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Of course it also includes all kinds of compulsory processes.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Yes; it is so intended.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. And it ought to be made broad enough to include that. It is very apt to be the case where we undertake to remedy one evil that we perhaps inadvertently create a much worse one.

Now, in an investigation of the question before the Interstate Commerce Commission the suit by a private individual, in a complaint, for instance, as to illegal or unjust regulations, the United States is not a party, the testimony given there is not for or on behalf of the United States, and yet it is compulsory. It may be that there are provisions in the interstate-commerce law prohibiting the use of any testimony that a witness may give against a witness in a criminal prosecution. If there is not, there ought to be.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. We do not intend that any person shall have the power to offer immunity to a witness except the Government of the United States or some officer acting in behalf thereof. Now, the hope is, if this bill does not cover that, that we can work it out in conference, so that any witness summoned on behalf of the Government in any criminal prosecution under any of these statutes, or summoned by the Interstate Commerce Commission, although a case may not be pending—that is, an indictment pending—or by the Commissioner of Corporations, summoned by him under authority given him by law, that these witnesses will be entitled to immunity when they testify under compulsion.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Well, that may be the purpose, and I have no doubt that before the bill becomes a law it will be safeguarded. I hope it will. But I know, as a matter of fact, that the practice of the administration of the Department of Justice is in many instances to authorize post-office inspectors to make arrangements with men under indictment for crime that if they will testify for the Government they shall not be prosecuted. There is no law for it.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. That is a different proposition from this.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That is another question, I know; but I know where that practice has been greatly abused.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I imagine that may be so. I will say that this amendment is broader than the bill originally drawn by the Department of Justice.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, if I remember correctly, the first legislation granting immunity was an act passed nearly half a century ago, providing that persons should be immune from prosecution who testified before committees of Congress. Subsequently that was enlarged to provide immunity to those who testified in United States courts in behalf of the Government. After the Interstate Commerce Commission was established, in 1888, it was ascertained that the Commission could not obtain the testimony, because under the law as it then stood, and under the law as it will stand after the rate bill becomes a law, it is made a misdemeanor for railroad officials and for shippers to do certain acts.

In 1893 Congress passed a law providing that persons who testified, who should give information in behalf of the Government, should not be subject to prosecution. The first act was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, and thereupon Congress passed the act increasing the immunity granted from prosecutions. The first act which we passed provided that they should not be prosecuted for what they had testified to, and then we provided that a witness who was called should not be prosecuted for anything relating to the subject-matter. Under that act the Interstate Commerce Commission is now engaged with considerable effect in prosecuting people, both railroad people and shippers, who violated the law. The Department of Justice, smarting under the defeat which it had at Chicago before Judge Humphrey, not willing to confine itself to exercising the prerogative of every defeated litigant in a case in court of "cussing" the court, now not only wants to "cuss" the court, but to change the law. It is a change for the worse. It is a change which will prevent the Interstate Commerce Commission from obtaining testimony to enforce the rate bill which will soon become a law.

Now, the Bureau of Corporations was given certain powers to call witnesses. The Commissioner of Corporations never exercised the power given to him to call witnesses. If he had proceeded under the law that was intended for him to proceed under, he would have had no difficulty about the packers at Chicago, but he thought he knew more than Congress as to how he should proceed, and started upon another method not intended or provided, and the court held—I agree with the President that the court held erroneously, but I do not agree with the President that it is our duty to condemn the judiciary because we do not always agree with their opinions.

But this, now, is to restrict the authority which we have given to this Commission. This bill is taking away the power under which the Interstate Commerce Commission has operated in ferreting out the violations of law, because under this bill no one is immune unless called as a witness. You can not send your inspector to inspect the books if anyone refuses. You have no right to compel a witness to give testimony against himself unless you grant him immunity. While on the one hand we are seeking to increase our power over the books of railroad companies, on the other hand we are taking away our right to do that, and I predict that if this bill becomes a law it will not be three years before the gentleman from Maine [Mr. LITTLEFIELD], either in this body or the one at the other end of the building, is fathering and favoring a measure to give the very power which he is now taking away.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment may be again reported.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. OLMSTED). Without objection, the amendment will again be reported.

There was no objection; and the Clerk again reported the amendment.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Mr. Speaker, only just a word. I feel bound to say to the House that I think my distinguished friend from Illinois [Mr. MANN] is unduly apprehensive about the consequences of this legislation. I do not feel called upon to enter upon a discussion of the conduct of the judge in the recent trials in Chicago. I don't know that it is incumbent upon me to either censure or approve. Perhaps I may say that I think there was some opportunity for that judge to hold as he did under the uncertain condition of the existing law. The amendment that is suggested here follows the line followed by the Attorney-General in his argument, and I have not the slightest question but that this legislation is necessary in order that we may have hereafter an orderly and judicious administration of the law. The Commissioner of Corporations, who is the man principally involved in the circumstances that perhaps give rise to this necessary legislation, I do not understand to be disturbed because any of his functions are to be impaired by this bill. I do not understand that the Interstate Commerce Commission have any feeling of disturbance upon that ground whatever.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Certainly.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Does the gentleman from Maine [Mr. LITTLEFIELD] entertain any doubt whatever that either the Chief of the Bureau of Corporations or the agents of the Interstate Commerce Commission may go into an office or the offices of corporations, if no objection is made, and examine books under the authority they now have under the law, without granting immunity to the care takers of those books or to the persons who made the entries in the books?

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I doubt very much under the existing law whether they would have authority to go in at all if the corporations object. The law confers upon the Commissioner of Corporations authority to issue subpœnas and compel the production of books. I doubt very much, if the people object, whether the Bureau has any such authority at all without compulsory process.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I am asking the question upon the assumption that there was no objection. Now, then, if the officers I have named secure those books by a subpœna duces tecum in a proper proceeding, will the immunity extend to any other than the person to whom the subpœna was directed?

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Certainly not.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. The corporation will not be granted immunity?

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Not the slightest in the world.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Nor any of its officers or agents?

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Not the slightest.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Except alone the one who brought in the books.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. And the purpose of this legislation is simply to have a definite legal record, so that the Government may know when it is giving immunity and so that the party who is getting immunity may know when he is entitled to it. It never ought to be left to the infirmity, to put it no stronger, of the human recollection as to whether a man is or is not entitled to immunity, or whether he has or has not made a statement that bars the Government from prosecuting him for the commission of a crime. The Department of Justice insists that unless they can have this definite standard, the administration of the criminal law is substantially and dangerously embarrassed, and may in many instances be absolutely defeated. If the House, under these circumstances, wants to vote down the amendment, the committee, so far as they are concerned, have not the slightest earthly concern in it. It comes from the Judiciary Committee with an absolutely unanimous report, every man on the committee believing that it is necessary in order to have a due administration of the criminal law.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I have read very carefully the Senate bill and the amendment offered by the gentleman from Maine [Mr. LITTLEFIELD] as a committee amendment, and I see very little difference between the two. Will the gentleman explain the difference between the two? About the only distinction I see in the two measures is that the Senate bill provides that where one testifies under oath he shall be granted immunity, while the House provision provides that he must testify in a relevant proceeding, having been subœnaed.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. No. Here is the one great distinction: The Senate bill extends it only to a natural person, who, in obedience to a subpœna, testifies or produces evidence. The House bill extends it to a natural person who, as a witness on the part of the Government, etc. Under the law the Interstate Commerce Commission, upon the application of either party, issues subpœnas, so that with the Senate bill, although they did not so intend it, the defendant might come in and apply for a subpœna, and call whoever it liked as a witness under oath, and give them immunity, and thus defeat the law. Now, the Government ought to have the power to say whether immunity shall or shall not be granted. That is the view of the House committee and that is the great distinction between the two measures.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I appreciate the difference in favor of the House committee amendment and am heartily in favor of the House provision.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I yield five minutes now to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. MARTIN].

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. Speaker, I have been out of the room for a few minutes, and consequently have not heard what has preceded me in this discussion, but I certainly hope that the bill which is now before the House will pass without opposition. I have some doubt as to the relative merits of the two bills—the one that comes from the Senate and the one which is on the House Calendar—but the suggestion of the gentleman from Maine [Mr. LITTLEFIELD] will at least bring the matter into conference and solve the question to the satisfaction of all. The necessity for this legislation is very apparent. The circuit courts of the United States are in direct opposition in their efforts to interpret our immunity statutes, Judge Humphrey, in the celebrated beef-trust case, as it is known, holding to a liberal construction in the interest of the packers that is an innovation upon the law, to say the very least. It is a greater protection to the defendant under the statute than he could have had under the Constitution before the statute. A different view has been taken by at least two other judges of circuit courts since, and it is therefore very proper that Congress should make a legislative interpretation of the intention of Congress in relation to these immunity provisions.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I call for the question, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is upon suspending the rules, taking the bill from the Speaker's table, and passing the same as proposed to be amended.

The question was taken; and two thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. BARNES, one of his secretaries, announced that the President of the United States had approved and signed bills and joint resolutions of the following titles:

On June 11:

H. R. 239. An act relating to liability of common carriers in the District of Columbia and Territories and common carriers engaged in commerce between the States and foreign nations to their employees;

H. R. 11543. An act to correct the military record of Benjamin F. Graham;

H. R. 13917. An act to remove the order of dismissal from the military record of Robert W. Liggett;

H. R. 18502. An act to empower the Secretary of War, under certain restrictions, to authorize the construction, extension, and maintenance of wharves, piers, and other structures on lands underlying harbor areas and navigable streams and bodies of waters in or surrounding Porto Rico and the islands adjacent thereto;

H. J. Res. 118. Joint resolution accepting the recession by the State of California of the Yosemite Valley grant and the Mariposa Big Tree Grove, and including the same, together with fractional sections 5 and 6, township 5 south, range 22 east, Mount Diablo meridian, California, within the metes and bounds of the Yosemite National Park, and changing the boundaries thereof;

H. J. Res. 170. Joint resolution to supply a deficiency in the appropriation for assistant custodians and janitors of public buildings; and

H. R. 4546. An act ceding to the city of Canon City, Colo., certain lands for park purposes.

H. R. 14397. An act making appropriation for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907.

On June 12:

H. R. 1982. An act granting a pension to Ada Collins;

H. R. 5911. An act granting a pension to Edward D. Lockwood, alias George E. McDaniel;

H. R. 6120. An act granting a pension to Harriet M. Smithers;

H. R. 6533. An act granting a pension to Horace Salter;

H. R. 6878. An act granting a pension to Lucy Brown;

H. R. 13824. An act granting a pension to Noah Myers;

H. R. 14678. An act granting a pension to James A. Boggs;

H. R. 16272. An act granting a pension to William D. Willis;

H. R. 16595. An act granting a pension to James R. Hicks;

H. R. 16918. An act granting a pension to Matilda J. Williams;

H. R. 17340. An act granting a pension to Julia Walz;

H. R. 17940. An act granting a pension to Rhetta Florence Tilton;

H. R. 18034. An act granting a pension to Mary A. Montgomery;

H. R. 18052. An act granting a pension to John Lewis Bernard Breighner;

H. R. 18426. An act granting a pension to Elizabeth Hathaway;

H. R. 18460. An act granting a pension to Benjamin F. Tudor;

H. R. 18966. An act granting a pension to John W. Ward;

H. R. 19005. An act granting a pension to Gideon M. Burriss;

H. R. 612. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. Kohler;

H. R. 1034. An act granting an increase of pension to John Logan;

H. R. 1178. An act granting an increase of pension to Herman Buckthal;

H. R. 1247. An act granting an increase of pension to Columbus Botts;

H. R. 1438. An act granting an increase of pension to Oliver T. Smith;
H. R. 1614. An act granting an increase of pension to Jacob H. Lynch;
H. R. 1650. An act granting an increase of pension to Frank B. Watkins;
H. R. 1736. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles A. Walker;
H. R. 1788. An act granting an increase of pension to William C. Christy;
H. R. 2092. An act granting an increase of pension to Franklin M. Hill;
H. R. 2237. An act granting an increase of pension to Martin Pool;
H. R. 2247. An act granting an increase of pension to Anthony Sanspeur;
H. R. 2265. An act granting an increase of pension to Hudson J. Van Scoter;
H. R. 2785. An act granting an increase of pension to Margaret Bonynge;
H. R. 3243. An act granting an increase of pension to John H. Anderson;
H. R. 3351. An act granting an increase of pension to George King;
H. R. 3488. An act granting an increase of pension to Egbert J. Olds;
H. R. 3495. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles F. Tower;
H. R. 3572. An act granting an increase of pension to William L. Riley;
H. R. 3588. An act granting an increase of pension to William H. Riggin;
H. R. 4161. An act granting an increase of pension to Robert Beatty;
H. R. 4241. An act granting an increase of pension to David B. Coleman;
H. R. 4597. An act granting an increase of pension to Martin Ellison;
H. R. 4715. An act granting an increase of pension to John H. Whiting;
H. R. 4956. An act granting an increase of pension to James C. Bryant;
H. R. 5040. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph Montgomery;
H. R. 5560. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry Chubb;
H. R. 6059. An act granting an increase of pension to Elias Hanes;
H. R. 6205. An act granting an increase of pension to Lucy E. Engler;
H. R. 6208. An act granting an increase of pension to William D. Conner;
H. R. 6422. An act granting an increase of pension to Anthony Van Slyke;
H. R. 6505. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary C. Chapman;
H. R. 6596. An act granting an increase of pension to Alex O. Huffman;
H. R. 6774. An act granting an increase of pension to John Platt;
H. R. 7147. An act granting an increase of pension to Bronson Rothrock;
H. R. 7244. An act granting an increase of pension to Christopher S. Guthrie;
H. R. 7402. An act granting an increase of pension to Edwin M. Todd;
H. R. 7535. An act granting an increase of pension to John L. Moore;
H. R. 7836. An act granting an increase of pension to Alexander G. Patton;
H. R. 8155. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry E. Seelye;
H. R. 8232. An act granting an increase of pension to James M. Jared;
H. R. 8722. An act granting an increase of pension to Arthur M. Lee;
H. R. 8736. An act granting an increase of pension to Lowell M. Maxham;
H. R. 8795. An act granting an increase of pension to Orrin A. A. Gardner;
H. R. 8817. An act granting an increase of pension to Calvin M. Latham;
H. R. 8852. An act granting an increase of pension to Frederick W. Clark;
H. R. 9243. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph A. Barnard;
H. R. 9531. An act granting an increase of pension to Eliza Rogers;
H. R. 9609. An act granting an increase of pension to Jesse M. Auchmuty;
H. R. 9828. An act granting an increase of pension to John Broughton;
H. R. 9844. An act granting an increase of pension to John J. Erick;
H. R. 9862. An act granting an increase of pension to William B. Warren;
H. R. 10794. An act granting an increase of pension to Jacob Schultz;
H. R. 10828. An act granting an increase of pension to Michael Lennon;
H. R. 10865. An act granting an increase of pension to Alexander Caldwell;
H. R. 11057. An act granting an increase of pension to Lewis J. Post;
H. R. 11152. An act granting an increase of pension to Theodore S. Currier;
H. R. 11161. An act granting an increase of pension to Michael Aaron;
H. R. 11260. An act granting an increase of pension to James H. Van Camp;
H. R. 11457. An act granting an increase of pension to Cyrus Van Matre;
H. R. 11855. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary Ann Shelly;
H. R. 12184. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph Sprauer;
H. R. 12330. An act granting an increase of pension to Hester A. Van Derslice;
H. R. 12336. An act granting an increase of pension to Margaret A. Montgomery;
H. R. 12418. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas P. Crandall;
H. R. 12879. An act granting an increase of pension to Catharine Myers;
H. R. 12971. An act granting an increase of pension to Matthew H. Brandon;
H. R. 13069. An act granting an increase of pension to Friend S. Esmond;
H. R. 13149. An act granting an increase of pension to Ida L. Martin;
H. R. 13443. An act granting an increase of pension to James E. Hammontree;
H. R. 13594. An act granting an increase of pension to Jonathan Snook;
H. R. 13993. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph Watson;
H. R. 14264. An act granting an increase of pension to John H. Eversole;
H. R. 14661. An act granting an increase of pension to John B. Bussell;
H. R. 14702. An act granting an increase of pension to Christian Schlosser;
H. R. 14729. An act granting an increase of pension to David Ford;
H. R. 15056. An act granting an increase of pension to James Ramsey;
H. R. 15104. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas E. Owens;
H. R. 15126. An act granting an increase of pension to William K. Trabue;
H. R. 15288. An act granting an increase of pension to Benjamin F. Finical;
H. R. 15613. An act granting an increase of pension to William W. Combs;
H. R. 16005. An act granting an increase of pension to Hezekiah J. Reynolds;
H. R. 16073. An act granting an increase of pension to John Ginther;
H. R. 16109. An act granting an increase of pension to Jacob Cline;
H. R. 16252. An act granting an increase of pension to Adam Dixon;
H. R. 16441. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph J. Goode;
H. R. 16492. An act granting an increase of pension to John M. Logan;
H. R. 16496. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas Dailey;

H. R. 16525. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary Amanda Nash;

H. R. 16565. An act granting an increase of pension to George H. Gordon, alias Gorton;

H. R. 16662. An act granting an incerase of pension to Van Buren Beam;

H. R. 16682. An act granting an increase of pension to William Hammond;

H. R. 16812. An act granting an increase of pension to Dudley McKibben;

H. R. 16842. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas H. Thornburgh;

H. R. 16915. An act granting an increase of pension to Orange Bugbee;

H. R. 16977. An act granting an increase of pension to Isabel Newlin;

H. R. 16998. An act granting an increase of pension to Elijah Curtis;

H. R. 17170. An act granting an increase of pension to Jackson D. Turley;

H. R. 17171. An act granting an increase of pension to David H. Parker;

H. R. 17210. An act granting an increase of pension to Daniel M. Vertner;

H. R. 17309. An act granting an increase of pension to John W. Chase;

H. R. 17346. An act granting an increase of pension to Newton S. Davis;

H. R. 17374. An act granting an increase of pension to Isom Wilkerson;

H. R. 17388. An act granting an increase of pension to Patrick McCarthy;

H. R. 17390. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary Sheehan;

H. R. 17445. An act granting an increase of pension to William H. Farrell;

H. R. 17466. An act granting an increase of pension to James P. Hall;

H. R. 17476. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry Ballard;

H. R. 17542. An act granting an increase of pension to John Cain;

H. R. 17590. An act granting an increase of pension to Jacob Woodruff;

H. R. 17637. An act granting an increase of pension to Gardiner K. Haskell;

H. R. 17678. An act granting an incerase of pension to Alexander Moore;

H. R. 17772. An act granting an increase of pension to John W. Henry;

H. R. 17825. An act granting an increase of pension to Bolivar Ward;

H. R. 17872. An act granting an increase of pension to Allen D. Metcalfe;

H. R. 17891. An act granting an increase of pension to Eliza M. Buice;

H. R. 17920. An act granting an increase of pension to Sallie E. Blanding;

H. R. 17922. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas D. Adams;

H. R. 17934. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas J. Byrd;

H. R. 17935. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew C. Woodard;

H. R. 17938. An act granting an increase of pension to Clarissa L. Dowling;

H. R. 17999. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel Yehl;

H. R. 18038. An act granting an increase of pension to Erastus W. Briggs;

H. R. 18039. An act granting an increase of pension to John W. Stephens;

H. R. 18041. An act granting an increase of pension to William R. Hiner;

H. R. 18073. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary McFarlane;

H. R. 18076. An act granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth Bartley;

H. R. 18105. An act granting an increase of pension to John A. Lyle;

H. R. 18106. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Patterson;

H. R. 18121. An act granting an increase of pension to John W. Jones;

H. R. 18132. An act granting an increase of pension to John W. Blanchard;

H. R. 18184. An act granting an increase of pension to John J. Howells;

H. R. 18239. An act granting an increase of pension to Bryant Brown;

H. R. 18243. An act granting an increase of pension to Jacob S. Rickard;

H. R. 18249. An act granting an increase of pension to Hiram G. Hunt;

H. R. 18262. An act granting an increase of pension to John H. Broadway;

H. R. 18308. An act granting an increase of pension to Clay Riggs;

H. R. 18310. An act granting an increase of pension to Virgil A. Bayley;

H. R. 18319. An act granting an increase of pension to Newton Kinnison;

H. R. 18355. An act granting an increase of pension to Rachel A. Webster;

H. R. 18356. An act granting an increase of pension to William A. Custer;

H. R. 18357. An act granting an increase of pension to William E. Starr;

H. R. 18367. An act granting an increase of pension to John Wilkinson;

H. R. 18378. An act granting an increase of pension to Martha A. Dunlap;

H. R. 18399. An act granting an increase of pension to Pauline Bietry;

H. R. 18400. An act granting an increase of pension to Elmira M. Gause;

H. R. 18402. An act granting an increase of pension to Lucy W. Powell;

H. R. 18447. An act granting an increase of pension to Elijah G. Gould;

H. R. 18449. An act granting an increase of pension to Hannah R. Jacobs;

H. R. 18467. An act granting an increase of pension to Rudolph W. H. Swendt;

H. R. 18469. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel C. Dean;

H. R. 18486. An act granting an increase of pension to William F. Walker;

H. R. 18505. An act granting an increase of pension to M. Belle May;

H. R. 18509. An act granting an increase of pension to Ellen L. Stone;

H. R. 18510. An act granting an increase of pension to Hugh R. Rutledge;

H. R. 18524. An act granting an increase of pension to Julius Rector;

H. R. 18539. An act granting an increase of pension to Angeline R. Lomax;

H. R. 18542. An act granting an increase of pension to Sarah Ann Day;

H. R. 18551. An act granting an increase of pension to William D. Brown;

H. R. 18560. An act granting an increase of pension to John Hamilton;

H. R. 18572. An act granting an increase of pension to Allamanza M. Harrison;

H. R. 18573. An act granting an increase of pension to John M. Quinton;

H. R. 18605. An act granting an increase of pension to William Lawrence;

H. R. 18627. An act granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth A. Anderson;

H. R. 18628. An act granting an increase of pension to William E. Chambers;

H. R. 18633. An act granting an increase of pension to Jennie F. Belding;

H. R. 18651. An act granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth Thomas;

H. R. 18654. An act granting an increase of pension to Robert D. Gardner;

H. R. 18655. An act granting an increase of pension to Leander Gilbert;

H. R. 18678. An act granting an increase of pension to Evans P. Hoover;

H. R. 18696. An act granting an increase of pension to Louisa C. Gibson;

H. R. 18697. An act granting an increase of pension to Martha L. Beesley;

H. R. 18702. An act granting an increase of pension to Edward B. Prime;
H. R. 18724. An act granting an increase of pension to Alfred Gude;
H. R. 18730. An act granting an increase of pension to William C. Mahaffey;
H. R. 18746. An act granting an increase of pension to Isaac Howard;
H. R. 18747. An act granting an increase of pension to William H. Colegate;
H. R. 18794. An act granting an increase of pension to William C. McRoy;
H. R. 18795. An act granting an increase of pension to James E. Raney;
H. R. 18821. An act granting an increase of pension to Eliza Jane Witherspoon;
H. R. 18822. An act granting an increase of pension to Sophie S. Parker;
H. R. 18862. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph H. Weaver;
H. R. 18887. An act granting an increase of pension to Alexander W. Carruth;
H. R. 18910. An act granting an increase of pension to Philo E. Davis;
H. R. 18930. An act granting an increase of pension to Eliza J. Mays;
H. R. 18935. An act granting an increase of pension to Minna A. Boswell;
H. R. 18959. An act granting an increase of pension to Albert G. Packer;
H. R. 18976. An act granting an increase of pension to Nelson S. Preston; and
H. R. 19001. An act granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth A. McKay.

On June 12:

H. R. 14184. An act to extend the irrigation act to the State of Texas.

On June 13:

H. J. Res. 172. Joint resolution to supply a deficiency in an appropriation for the postal service;
H. R. 14604. An act forbidding the importation, exportation, or carriage in interstate commerce of falsely or spuriously stamped articles of merchandise made of gold or silver or their alloys, and for other purposes;
H. R. 15692. An act granting a pension to Frank M. Dooley;
H. R. 3005. An act granting an increase of pension to Jacob C. Shafer;
H. R. 10395. An act granting an increase of pension to Stephen Cundiff;
H. R. 13828. An act granting an increase of pension to John M. Carroll;
H. R. 16878. An act granting an increase of pension to James B. Adams
H. R. 18116. An act granting an increase of pension to Green Evans;
H. R. 18135. An act granting an increase of pension to Benedict Sutter; and
H. R. 18561. An act granting an increase of pension to Jonathan Skeans.

On June 14:

H. J. Res. 166. Joint resolution providing for payment for dredging the channel and anchorage basin between Ship Island Harbor and Gulfport, Miss., and for other purposes;
H. J. Res. 162. Joint resolution authorizing the construction and maintenance of wharves, piers, and other structures in Lake Michigan adjoining certain lands in Lake County, Ind.;
H. R. 8410. An act to authorize the Charleston Light and Water Company to construct and maintain a dam across Goose Creek in Berkeley County, in the State of South Carolina; and
H. R. 17455. An act permitting the building of a dam across the Mississippi River at or near the village of Clearwater, Wright County, Minn.

On June 15:

H. R. 4478. An act to amend section 64 of the bankruptcy act; and
H. R. 16946. An act releasing the right, title, and interest of the United States to the piece or parcel of land known as the Cuartel lot to the city of Monterey, Cal.

On June 16:

H. R. 12707. An act to enable the people of Oklahoma and of the Indian Territory to form a constitution and State government and be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States; and to enable the people of New Mexico and of Arizona to form a constitution and State government and be admitted into the Union on an equal footing with the original States;
H. R. 17983. An act providing for the erection of a monument on Kings Mountain battle ground commemorative of the great victory gained there during the war of the American Revolution on October 7, 1780, by the American forces;
H. R. 17881. An act permitting the building of a dam across the Crow Wing River between the counties of Morrison and Cass, State of Minnesota;
H. R. 19264. An act making appropriations for the diplomatic and consular service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907; and
H. R. 17663. An act to extend the provisions of the act of March 3, 1901, to officers of the Navy and Marine Corps advanced at any time under the provisions of sections 1506 and 1605 for eminent and conspicuous conduct in battle.

On June 18:

H. R. 17982. An act to grant to Charles H. Cornell, his assigns and successors, the right to abut a dam across the Niobrara River on the Fort Niobrara Military Reservation, Nebr., and to construct and operate a trolley or electric railway line and telegraph and telephone lines across said reservation;
H. R. 19150. An act to change and fix the time for holding the circuit and district courts of the United States for the middle district of Tennessee, in the southern division of the eastern district of Tennessee at Chattanooga, and the northeastern division of the eastern district of Tennessee at Greeneville, and for other purposes; and
H. R. 1160. An act granting an increase of pension to Eliza Swords.

On June 19:

H. R. 19642. An act to regulate the keeping of employment agencies in the District of Columbia where fees are charged for procuring employment or situations.

SALE OF CERTAIN PUBLIC LANDS.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and put upon its passage the bill (S. 4190) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend section 2455 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, approved February 26, 1895," with an amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act of February 26, 1895, entitled "An act to amend section 2455 of the Revised Statutes of the United States," be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"It shall be lawful for the Commissioner of the General Land Office to order into market and sell, at public auction at the land office of the district in which the land is situated, for not less than $1.25 per acre, any isolated or disconnected tract or parcel of the public domain not exceeding one quarter section which, in his judgment, it would be proper to expose for sale after at least thirty days' notice by the land officers of the district in which such land may be situated: Provided, That this act shall not defeat any valid right which has already attached under any pending entry or location."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second in order to ask the gentleman a question. I do not know I have any objection to the bill, but I want to ask the gentleman a question. In 1883 there was a law passed by Congress removing from sale all the mineral lands in Alabama, because it was the policy of the people there not to have those lands disposed of for speculation, but they wanted to have them reserved for school purposes. That law is still on the statute books. It is not desired to have this land put where it could be offered for sale. Some of them were valuable lands, where they would be taken up for speculation. Now, I would like to ask the gentleman in charge of the bill whether this bill if it passes will interfere with the operation of the statute in reference to that matter?

Mr. JENKINS. Well, I will say to the gentleman from Alabama that I am not prepared to answer that question. I yield to the chairman of the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Speaker, I will say, in answer to the gentleman from Alabama, that a bill has been introduced to authorize a reexamination of those lands and find what portion of them, if any, are not mineral. All mineral lands have been withdrawn, and they were all classified as mineral. That bill was introduced by the gentleman's colleague [Mr. BURNETT] in anticipation of another bill that he had seeking to set apart so much land as is purely mineral for the use of the public schools of the State of Alabama, but that land——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It is for that reason I wanted to ask about this.

Mr. LACEY. This bill would not affect that land in any way in the present condition of the land. The object of this bill—and it is a departmental bill, prepared by the Department, and sent in and introduced at their request—is to amend existing law as to disposal of these lands. They are little odds and ends here and there, generally islands or small tracts of land in the bend of rivers in the Northwest, and this is simply a method of disposing of those isolated tracts of land. And this is to simplify or modify the disposal of those tracts of land. The amendment suggested by the gentleman from Wisconsin was prepared by the committee and reported subsequently to the report upon the bill, providing that "nothing in this act shall defeat any vested right which is already attached under any pending entry or location." Some of those lands have already been located and the entries have been held up.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I understand that; but does this propose to sell homestead lands, too?

Mr. LACEY. Less than a quarter section of land. Of course, all of this land could have been taken under the homestead law long ago, but has not been taken.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If there is more than one quarter section lying contiguously, then this bill does not apply?

Mr. LACEY. It does not. It is known as the "isolated-tract" bill.

Mr. PERKINS. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. LACEY. Yes.

Mr. PERKINS. The gentleman says that the object of this bill is to simplify the selling of the land. I wish he would explain to the House what changes it makes. Many of us are not familiar with the procedure, and we do not know what this bill amounts to. What is the law, and what will be the law after this bill is passed?

Mr. LACEY. The act of 1895 was passed in order to provide for the disposition of these little isolated tracts of land. The Secretary of the Interior, in his annual report, uses the following language, which perhaps will answer the gentleman more clearly than a more elaborate statement from me:

Prior to February 26, 1895, under section 2455, United States Revised Statutes, small isolated tracts of public land were, in the discretion of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, after thirty days' notice, sold at public auction for not less than $1.25 per acre. The act of February 26, 1895 (28 Stat. L., 687), amended said section 2455 by adding the proviso:

"That lands shall not become so isolated or disconnected until the same shall have been subject to homestead entry for a period of three years after the surrounding land has been entered, filed upon, or sold by the Government: Provided, That not more than 160 acres shall be sold to any one person."

The result of this legislation has been to encourage speculation and deprive the Government of considerable revenue, as such isolated tracts are now often entered either as original entries or under soldiers' additional homestead rights to secure title to the land for uses other than agricultural. The simple remedy for these conditions is the repeal of the act of February 26, 1895.

Now, it had to be held open for three years for homestead entries, and in many cases entries were made colorably. The land is not adapted to homestead uses, and some of the lands have water power connected with them, and they will be put up now and sold to the highest bidder at public auction. This provision, in the nature of an amendment, was intended to cover some cases, however, where parties have entries on these lands, and it is not desired to disturb entries heretofore made if the entrymen have any vested right.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and, two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

GRANTING CONDEMNED CANNON.

Mr. DENBY. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the joint resolution (S. R. 47) granting condemned cannon for a statue to Governor Stevens T. Mason, of Michigan, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to deliver to the governor of the State of Michigan six bronze or brass condemned cannon, to be used to make a life-size statue of Stevens T. Mason, late governor of Michigan: Provided, That the Government shall be at no expense in connection with this gift.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

A second not being demanded, the question was taken; and, two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the joint resolution was passed.

NAMES OF SAILING VESSELS.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 17600) granting authority to change the names of certain sailing vessels.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Commissioner of Navigation is hereby authorized and directed, upon application by the owners, to change the names of the following sailing vessels: Iron bark Abby Palmer, official number 107429; steel ship Balclutha, official number 3882; iron bark Euterpe, official number 136801; iron bark Himalaya, official number 96501; iron bark Coalinga, official number 127343.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second for the purpose of securing information.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Are these all American ships?

Mr. GROSVENOR. They are all American ships, and this is the condition: By the law of the country as it stands now, upon the application to the Department of Commerce and Labor the name of a vessel may be changed by order of the Commissioner of Navigation without any act of Congress, unless there are incumbrances upon the vessels. In this particular case these five small vessels have a lot of almost unpronouncable names, and they are also, all of them, more or less encumbered by mortgages. Both the mortgagees and mortgagors have applied to have a change of names, so that they may conform them to the names of the lines to which they belong. All parties are agreed to the proposition, and there is an unanimous report from the committee in favor of the passage of the bill.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. That is all the change it makes with reference to its status?

Mr. GROSVENOR. That is all. It simply changes their names and retains the lien of the mortgage.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and, two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 57, NEZ PERCES, IDAHO.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill H. R. 15506 as amended by the committee.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to cause patent to issue to school district No. 57, in the county of Nez Perces, State of Idaho, for the use and benefit of said district, for the following-described tract of land within said county, to wit: Commencing on the east line of the right of way of the Lapwai branch of the Northern Pacific Railroad where it crosses the section line between sections 2 and 11, of township 35 north, range 4 west, of the Boise meridian, Idaho, marked by a stone 16 by 10 by 8 inches, set 12 inches in the ground and marked by a cross on top, from which the corner to sections 2, 3, 10, and 11 bears south 89° 54′ W., 3,242 feet distant; thence running south 10° 25′ E. along the east line of said right of way, 13 chains 70 links to the north line of the county road to a cedar post set 3 feet in the ground; thence north 80° E. along the north line of the county road to the east line of the former Fort Lapwai military reserve to a mound of rocks 2 feet high; thence north 26° W. along the east line of said former reserve to the line between sections 2 and 11, marked by a stone 15 by 10 by 10 inches and set 10 inches in the ground and marked with cross on top, from which corner to sections 1, 2, 11, and 12 bears north 89° 54′ E., 26 chains distant; thence south 89° 54′ W., 317 feet to the place of beginning, containing 3¼ acres, more or less, and located on the northwest quarter of the northeast quarter of section 11, township 35 north, of range 4 west, Boise meridian.

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill authorizing the patenting of certain lands to school district No. 57, Nez Perces County, Idaho."

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

No second being demanded, in the opinion of the Chair two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

PUBLIC HIGHWAY, FORT SHERMAN ABANDONED MILITARY RESERVATION.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill S. 3414.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby granted to the county of Kootenai, State of Idaho, for a public highway, a strip of land lying on the east side of the abandoned Fort Sherman military reservation, in Idaho, designated by the official plat of survey as lots 1, 2, and 3 of section 12, and lots 1, 2, and 3 of section 13, township 50 north, range 4 west, Boise meridian. The title to said land is hereby vested in the county of Kootenai aforesaid for the purpose as above specified: Provided, That if the said county of Kootenai shall, at any time hereafter, abandon the lands above described and cease to use the same for said purposes, said above-described lands shall revert to the Government of the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

No second being demanded, in the opinion of the Chair two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

COINAGE SYSTEM IN THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill S. 6243.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, with the approval of the President of the United States, the government of the Philippine Islands is hereby authorized, whenever in its opinion such action is desirable, in order to carry out the provisions of section 6 of the act approved March 2, 1903, entitled "An act to establish a standard of value and to provide for a coinage system in the Philippine Islands," to change the weight and fineness of the silver coins authorized by said act, and may in its discretion provide a weight and fineness proportionately less for subsidiary coins than for the standard Philippine pesos, and may also in its discretion recoin any of the existing coins of the Philippine Islands at the new weight and fineness when such coins are received into the Treasury or into the gold standard fund of the Philippine Islands: Provided, That the weight and fineness of the silver peso to be coined in accordance with the provisions of this section shall not be reduced below 700 parts of pure silver to 300 of alloy.

SEC. 2. That section 8 of an act of Congress approved March 2, 1903, entitled "An act to establish a standard of value and to provide for a coinage system in the Philippine Islands," as amended by section 10 of an act approved February 6, 1905, is hereby further amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 8. That the treasurer of the Philippine Islands is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to receive at the treasury of the government of the said islands or any of its branches deposits of the standard silver coins of ₱1 authorized by this act to be coined, in sums of not less than ₱20, Philippine currency, and to issue certificates therefor in denominations of not less than ₱2 nor more than ₱500, and coin so deposited shall be retained in the treasury and held for the payment of such certificates on demand, and used for no other purpose. Such certificates shall be receivable for customs, taxes, and for all public dues in the Philippine Islands, and when so received may be reissued, and when held by any banking association in said islands may be counted as a part of its lawful reserve: Provided, That the treasurer of the Philippine Islands, with the approval of the governor-general, may substitute for any part of such silver pesos hereafter deposited, gold coin of the United States legally equivalent in value, and redeem the certificates hereafter issued in either silver pesos or such gold coin of equivalent value at the option of the treasurer: Provided further, That the amount of gold coin held in such reserve shall not at any time exceed 60 per cent of the total amount of certificates outstanding."

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

Mr. SLAYDEN. My purpose is to get some information about the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to a second being considered as ordered? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, the necessity for the passage of the bill is owing to the fact that the recent marked increase in the value of silver makes the bullion value of the Philippine peso greater than its face value, thus leading to the melting of the pesos and to their exportation as bullion. The House will remember that the Philippines have a gold standard, the unit of value being the American gold dollar. They also have a silver coinage, limited in volume, and under the control of the Philippine government, the peso being coined at the ratio of 32 to 1. The coinage act for the islands Congress passed three years ago, when silver was worth—that is, the silver in the American dollar—37 cents in gold. Since that time silver has increased in value a little over 45 per cent. When the law establishing the Philippine coinage was enacted by Congress, silver was at its lowest value as compared with gold. This low price of silver was attributable to several causes, among these that the United States had closed its mints against silver; that the Latin Union was coining subsidiary coinage out of its 5-franc pieces, and that Germany had put on the market a great quantity of silver. Thus there was very little demand for the metal except in India and the Orient. Since that time, as I said, there has been a very considerable and also a most unexpected rise in the value of silver. This is due in part to a largely increased demand for it in Manchuria, owing to the result of the recent war between Russia and Japan, which gives to Japan practically the control of the commerce of that country; also to the fact that India is establishing what is called an "ingot reserve" in silver in London. This bill proposes——

Mr. SLAYDEN. I want to ask the gentleman from Wisconsin if this is a unanimous report?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. It is not. There were two members of the Committee on Insular Affairs—the gentleman from Missouri, Judge RUCKER, and the gentleman from North Carolina, Judge PAGE—who said that while they would not agree to report the bill, they did not think that they would oppose it on the floor.

Mr. HULL. What does the bill do?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I was about to come to that when the gentleman from Texas propounded his question.

Owing to the rise in silver, the silver peso has become worth more as bullion than it is as money at the ratio of 32 to 1 at which it is now coined. The difficulty in the Philippines which has accrued from this is a very serious one. The bullion value being more than the face value, certain persons in the islands took to melting the coin and exporting it as bullion. Thereupon the Philippine Commission passed a law prohibiting this from being done. But of course there is more or less of difficulty in strictly enforcing such a law in an archipelago like the Philippine Islands. As a remedy for all of this trouble, the pending bill proposes to confer upon the Philippine Government power to fix a new ratio and to change the ratio to correspond with the development of events, but only upon the express condition that there shall be no modification or impairing in any way of the existing gold standard of value established by the act of March 2, 1903.

The cost of recoinage, if any be necessary, will be paid by the seigniorage.

The new coin would circulate at par, being redeemable, and also because the Mint would be closed by the Government against its free coinage. The House will see, however, that under present conditions there is the constant danger of the melting and exportation of which I have spoken.

Mr. SCOTT. As a practical detail, how is it proposed to get hold of the coins so that they may be recoined?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. It is proposed by the bill to empower the Philippine government to change the standard of fineness, and thus keep the silver bullion in the peso worth less than 50 cents in gold, as it was when we passed the law three years ago.

Mr. SCOTT. I understand that, but that does not answer my question.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. And also to prohibit the Philippine government from coining at a ratio below 700 parts of silver to 300 of alloy; in other words, seven-tenths fine. The coin is now nine-tenths fine.

Mr. KEIFER. That is our standard to-day.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. That is our standard.

Mr. SCOTT. I think the gentleman does not understand my question. What he has said does not answer it. My question was, How does the Government propose to get hold of the overweight coins that are now in circulation in the Philippines and recoin them, or is it proposed simply to coin other bullion?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. I will say to the gentleman that there are two or more courses open to the Philippine government in the event of the enactment of this bill into law. One would be to coin subsidiary coinage at a reduced rate, and let the pesos take their own course as bullion—go out of the islands, perhaps. Or they could recoin the subsidiary at a reduced rate, and recoin pesos also at a reduced rate, but reduce the subsidiary coinage more than the peso, so as to have a second bank or bulwark, so to speak, against a further increase in the value of silver bullion. They have these two alternatives, either one of which would make the new coinage perfectly safe and under the control of the government. On the other hand, if silver bullion should not rise in value, they might not find it necessary to change the weight or fineness of the coins.

Mr. HINSHAW. Then your bill proposes to cut down the value of the coin about two-tenths of its present face value?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Yes.

Mr. HINSHAW. It might occur that the peso would become more valuable than its face value.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Then the government can change it so as to make it a token coinage, just as it has before.

Mr. HINSHAW. Then you would have in circulation a peso of seven-tenths and a peso nine-tenths fine at the same time.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. No; they would not coin one at seven-tenths fine unless the one at the higher ratio was at par.

Mr. HINSHAW. What would become of the nine-tenths fine?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. As the gentleman well knows, under such circumstances the more valuable coin always goes out of circulation.

Mr. HINSHAW. Would it not be better to adopt the system of the United States, where we have a silver dollar worth 45, 50, or 55 cents, as the case may be, and which would be continuously a token coin and never probably go above the value of the gold dollar?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. They would have complete power under this law to keep the bullion value less than the face value.

Mr. PAYNE. Under the law these token coins are redeemable in gold?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Yes.

Mr. PAYNE. So that they never depreciate in value?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. No.

Mr. PAYNE. And the melting pot would take care of those that are worth more than the face?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Yes.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Does not the bill under consideration authorize the Philippine government to change the ratio without any limitation being fixed, excepting that the coin shall be at least seven-tenths fine?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Yes.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. It does not limit the Philippine Commission in respect to the question of weight, but it does in respect to the question of fineness, and it is expected if a new coinage is issued the ratio shall be so fixed that there will be no liability of the commercial value of the coin being greater than the coinage value.

Mr. HINSHAW. But the peso with its alloy will be the same size and weight as the old peso.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That makes no difference unless the old peso be worth more as bullion than coin, because they would be backed up by the 50-cent gold piece.

The question was taken; and, two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

RESURVEY OF CERTAIN TOWNSHIPS IN BACA COUNTY, COLO.

Mr. BROOKS of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 9343) providing for the resurvey of certain townships of land in the county of Baca, Colo.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to cause to be made a resurvey of the lands in townships Nos. 31, 32, 33, 34, and 35 south, in each of the ranges Nos. 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, and 50 west of the sixth principal meridian in Baca County, in the State of Colorado; and all rules and regulations of the Interior Department requiring petitions from all settlers of said townships asking for resurvey and agreement to abide by the result of same, so far as these lands are concerned, are hereby abrogated: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to impair the present bona fide claim of any actual occupant of any of said lands so occupied: Provided further, That before any survey is ordered it shall be made to appear to the Secretary of the Interior that the former official survey of said lands is so inaccurate or obliterated as to make it necessary to survey the land, and only such parts of the land where the survey is so inaccurate or obliterated shall be surveyed.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I demand a second.

Mr. BROOKS of Colorado. I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. What is the necessity for this resurvey?

Mr. BROOKS of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, this is a county which in early days was thought to contain perhaps the least valuable land in that section. Little attention was given to it, and for some reason the original survey was particularly defective. For a long time it was comparatively unsettled. It was a grazing country where there were very few settlers. When the active settlement movement began a few years ago it was found that much of the land was very good and adaptable for cultivation, but in large sections absolutely no Government monuments existed, and to-day the surveyors have to go 25 or 27 miles to the State line between Kansas and Colorado, or between Colorado and New Mexico to get their ties. The condition is one that is retarding the settlement and development of the country very greatly. The evidence has been submitted to the surveyor-general of Colorado, to the General Land Office, and to the Department of the Interior, and everyone is in favor of the resurvey.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Is this a unanimous report of the committee?

Mr. BROOKS of Colorado. Absolutely.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. How big a piece of ground is there there to be surveyed?

Mr. BROOKS of Colorado. A considerable area; some fifty townships, I think.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. And the Government is to pay the expenses?

Mr. BROOKS of Colorado. Yes; but there is no appropriation carried by this bill. The Government will simply survey so much in any one year as the Interior Department or the Commissioner-General of the Land Office may determine. He will apportion a certain sum out of the general fund of the Department for this purpose.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. How are the surveys going to be made, by contract or under the supervision of the surveyor-general of Colorado?

Mr. BROOKS of Colorado. In both ways. That is to say, I suppose it will be done as the Commissioner may determine, but usually these surveys are made by contract on public bids under the direction and control of the surveyor-general of the State, subject to the approval of the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

The question was taken; and, two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

DEPOSIT BY RECEIVERS OF PUBLIC MONEYS.

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 11040) to authorize the receivers of public moneys for land districts to deposit with the Treasurer of the United States certain sums embraced in their accounts of unearned fees and unofficial moneys.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the receivers of public moneys for land districts are hereby authorized, under the direction of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, to deposit to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States all unearned fees and unofficial moneys that have been carried upon the books of their respective offices for a period of five years or more, which sums shall be covered into the Treasury by warrant and carried to the credit of the parties from whom such fees or moneys were received, and into an appropriation account to be denominated "Outstanding liabilities."

SEC. 2. That at the time of making such deposit the receiver shall furnish a list showing the date when the money was paid to him or to his predecessor; the names and residences of the parties; the purposes of the payments and the amounts thereof, which list shall bear the certificate of the register and receiver that the same is correct; that the amounts are due and payable; that diligence has ben exercised to return the same, and that the sums specified have remained unclaimed for a period of five years or more.

SEC. 3. That amounts that appear in a receiver's accounts as "Moneys deposited by unknown parties" shall also be deposited to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States, accompanied by a list showing the amount and, if possible, the date of the receipt of each item; which list shall bear the certificate of the register and receiver that, after careful investigation, the ownership of said moneys could not be determined, and that they have been reported in the unearned fees and unofficial moneys accounts for five years or more.

SEC. 4. That any person or persons who shall have made payment to a receiver, or to his predecessor, and the money shall have been covered into the Treasury pursuant to section 1 or section 3 hereof, shall, on presenting satisfactory evidence of such payment to the proper officer of the Treasury Department, be entitled to have the same returned by the settlement of an account and the issuing of a warrant in his favor according to the practice in other cases of authorized and liquidated claims against the United States: Provided, That when such moneys shall remain unclaimed in the Treasury for more than five years the right to recover the same shall be barred.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

There was no demand for a second.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

WITHDRAWAL FROM ENTRY OF CERTAIN PUBLIC LANDS IN CHOUTEAU COUNTY, MONT.

Mr. DIXON of Montana. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 19016) withdrawing from entry certain public lands in Chouteau County, Mont., and leasing the same to the board of trustees of the Montana College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the following-described tract of land situated in Chouteau County, in the State of Montana, to wit, section 22, in township 35 north, range 24 east, Montana meridian, be, and is hereby, set apart and withdrawn from entry or settlement under the land laws of the United States, and is hereby leased, demised, and let unto the board of trustees of the Montana College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, situated at Bozeman, Mont., for and during the full period of ten years from and after the approval of this act, for the purpose of maintaining thereon experiments in so-called dry-land farming and other experimental farming operations connected with said institution: Provided, That this act shall not be construed to confer any right, legal or equitable, upon the lessee herein named other than herein specifically stated.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

There was no demand for a second.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

BRIDGE ACROSS MISSOURI RIVER IN BROADWATER AND GALLATIN COUNTIES, MONT.

Mr. DIXON of Montana. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 5989) to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River in Broadwater and Gallatin counties, Mont., which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company, of Montana, its successors or assigns, be, and are hereby, authorized, to construct, maintain, and operate a railroad bridge and approaches thereto across the Missouri River at some convenient and practicable point within the limits of Broadwater County, or between Broadwater and Gallatin counties, in the State of Montana, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded? [After a pause.] No second being demanded, the question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

BRIDGE ACROSS MISSOURI RIVER IN LEWIS AND CLARKE COUNTY, MONT.

Mr. DIXON of Montana. Mr. Speaker, I call up from the Speaker's table the bill (S. 6234) to authorize the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company, of Montana, to construct a bridge across the Missouri River in Lewis and Clarke County, Mont.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Montana calls up from the Speaker's table the bill S. 6234, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company of Montana, its successors and assigns, be, and they are hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a railroad bridge and approaches thereto across the Missouri River, at some convenient and practicable point in Lewis and Clarke County, between the southern limit of said county and the northern limit of township 11 north, range 2 west, in the State of Montana, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the third reading of the Senate bill.

The question was taken; and the bill was ordered to be read a third time, read the third time, and passed.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, a similar bill on the House Calendar will lie on the table.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

MEDALS FOR CERTAIN PERSONS.

Mr. BONYNGE. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 16013) providing medals for certain persons, with an amendment thereto, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to procure a bronze medal, with suitable device, to be presented to each of the several officers and enlisted men and families of such as may be dead, who, having volunteered and enlisted under the calls of the President for the war with Spain, served beyond the term of their enlistment to help to suppress the Philippine insurrection, and who subsequently received an honorable discharge from the Army of the United States, or who died prior to such discharge.

SEC. 2. That the sum of $5,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any funds in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose of carrying this act into effect.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded. [After a pause.] No second being demanded, the question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended, and the bill was passed.

BATAN ISLAND MILITARY RESERVATION.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 17293) to authorize the leasing of the Batan Island Military Reservation for coal-mining purposes, with amendments thereto, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to lease the coal-mining rights in the Batan Island Military Reservation to any person, firm, company, or corporation organized under the laws of the United States, or any State thereof, or of the Philippine government, which in his opinion shall be deemed responsible for carrying out the provisions of said lease.

SEC. 2. That the term "mining rights" in the first section hereof shall be deemed to include the use of all land included in and all natural products of the said Batan Island Military Reservation which may be necessary for and consistent with the establishment and operation of a coal mine and coaling station, and shall also include the right to take and use water from the Cacraray Military Reservation.

SEC. 3. That the said lease shall be granted after due advertisement and public bidding for same, and shall run for a period not exceeding fifty years. Said lease shall be signed on behalf of the Government of the United States by the Secretary of War thereof, and by such person or firm, or, on behalf of the company or corporation undertaking the establishment and operation of said coal mine, by the chief officer thereof thereunto duly authorized by the stockholders and directors of the same, and shall contain among others the following provisions:

First. That all branches of the Government of the United States and of the government of the Philippine Islands thereof shall be supplied with such coal as they may desire laid on board ship at the harbor of Batan Island, known as Coal Harbor, at a price not to exceed 10 per cent above cost price of said coal, and any such lessee shall by such lease be obligated at all times to have on hand a supply of coal sufficient to meet all orders of the Government of the United States, or of the government of the Philippine Islands, for coal, and all orders of either of said governments for coal shall be filled prior to any order of, or contract with, any other party.

Second. That the necessary wharves for receiving vessels of up to 32 feet draft and for loading coal thereon shall be erected and maintained by the company or corporation operating the said mine.

Third. That the items included in the calculations of the cost of said coal shall consist of all items of expense for labor necessary for producing the coal and for handling and loading the same on board ship, for the proper care and handling of machinery connected therewith, for the proper care and management of the interior workings of a coal mine and all machinery connected with the safe and economical operation thereof, and for the proper upkeep of all exterior buildings, grounds, and machinery incident to the operation of a coal mine and coal-loading station; all items of expense for labor and material connected with the repairs of all machinery, rolling stock, buildings, and apparatus necessary for the safe and economical upkeep of the mine and its appurtenances and of the coal-loading apparatus and docks, but shall not include the cost of new work for the extension of the plant; all items of expense for supplies for the safe and economical extraction of coal, and the maintenance of the offices, buildings, and machinery maintained, erected, or in use on the aforesaid reservation; all items of general expense, such as taxes, insurance, and reasonable depreciation on plant and property, and such others as may be also directly and solely connected with the management of the plant and offices installed on the reservation for the purpose of mining and loading coal, which shall include salaries for persons resident at the plant and necessary for the management and conduct thereof as above set forth.

Fourth. That such lease shall contain such other and further restrictions as the Secretary of War may see fit to impose.

Fifth. That the person, company, or corporation securing the lease shall pay to the Government of the United States a royalty of not less than 7 cents per ton for every ton of coal mined under the provisions of this act over and above that purchased by the Government of the United States or any branch thereof or by the government of the Philippine Islands.

SEC. 4. That all books and records of every nature of the person, firm, company, or corporation operating the said mine shall be subject to examination and inspection by any official or employee of the United States Government designated by the Secretary of War, and that any evasion of this provision shall, at the discretion of the Secretary of War, operate to render null and void any lease granted under the provisions of this act.

SEC. 5. The failure of any lessee under the provisions of this act to carry out the terms of such lease, or the violation of any of the terms of such lease by any such lessee, shall, at the discretion of the Secretary of War, operate to render said lease null and void.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second; but before doing that, without losing that privilege, I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. A few days ago this same bill was knocked out under suspension of the rules, and I would like to know how it comes back here again.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state to the gentleman in answer to his inquiry that the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CRUMPACKER] informed the Chair that certain amendments have been agreed upon which he proposed to offer in connection with this bill; but the fact that the House might refuse to suspend the rules on a former occasion or at some other time does not bar a motion to suspend the rules a second time. Perchance there may be amendments offered or the House may be in a different temper.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri objects. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. CRUMPACKER] and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] will take their places as tellers.

The House divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 51, noes 51.

So a second was refused.

PORT OF DELIVERY AT SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

Mr. HOWELL of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I move to discharge the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union from the further consideration of the bill (S. 3263) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a port of delivery at Salt Lake City, Utah," and to suspend the rules and pass the bill, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 2 of an act entitled "An act to establish a port of delivery at Salt Lake City, Utah," approved March 18, 1904, be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 2. That there shall be appointed a surveyor of customs, to reside at said port, whose salary shall be $1,500 per annum, in lieu of all fees and commissions of every kind whatsoever."

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. HOWELL of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. HOWELL of Utah. Mr. Speaker, this increases the salary of the surveyor of the port at Salt Lake City.

Mr. PAYNE. Oh, I have no objection to that bill.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and, two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

ARMY AND NAVY UNION.

Mr. PARKER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass joint resolution 31, relating to the badge of the Army and Navy Union, which I send to the Clerk's desk, with an amendment to the title.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the joint resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the joint resolution of May 11, 1894, 28 Statutes at Large, page 583, be, and the same is hereby, amended by changing the name and title therein described from "Regular Army and Navy Union of the United States" to "Army and Navy Union of the United States of America," and that the organization so last entitled shall have all the rights and privileges conferred by and described in said joint resolution of May 11, 1894.

The SPEAKER. Has this joint resolution been reported?

Mr. PARKER. Yes, sir; it was reported to-day. We made no amendment to the bill, but simply changed the title.

The SPEAKER. Is there a second demanded?

A second not being demanded, the question was taken; and, two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the joint resolution was passed.

SUBSIDIARY SILVER COINAGE.

Mr. SOUTHARD. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 8444) providing for the recoinage of abraded and uncurrent silver dollars into subsidiary coin.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That for the purpose of increasing the subsidiary coin to meet the constant and growing demand of the country for this kind of money, the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to cause the recoinage of worn, abraded, and uncurrent silver dollars, in amounts not exceeding $5,000,000 in any one year, into the several denominations of subsidiary coin as they are required to supply the needs of the public for such coin.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second, so as to get an explanation of the bill.

Mr. SOUTHARD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. SOUTHARD. Mr. Speaker, this is a bill the purpose of which is to secure an increased quantity of subsidiary coin. We have what may be designated as "three kinds of coinage." One is the coinage of gold and of silver dollars; the other is subsidiary coinage, or the coinage of fractional silver—halves, quarters, and dimes; and the third kind is known as that of "minor coin"—nickels and cents. For a very long time the country has been in need of an increased quantity of subsidiary coin. From time to time provision has been made for an increase of this coin. In the act of March 14, 1900, there was a provision for the increase of subsidiary coin, and again in the act of March 3, 1903, and still the country suffers from a lack of this kind of money. The whole stock of subsidiary coin as it now exists, my recollection is, is about $113,000,000, and it is estimated that the country could use conveniently a great deal more than we now have in circulation and in the vaults of the Treasury. Almost always the stock of subsidiary coin in the Treasury is small, and during certain seasons of the year there is a great demand for this kind of coin. There is no way now of materially increasing this subsidiary coin. Practically the only subsidiary coin that is now coined is the recoinage of abraded and uncurrent subsidiary coin as it is returned to the Treasury. There are now in the vaults of the Treasury something like three or four million dollars of abraded, uncurrent, worn silver dollars, and it is proposed by the Secretary of the Treasury to increase the amount of subsidiary coin by the coinage of these silver dollars into subsidiary coin—halves, quarters, and dimes as they are needed. The bill provides that there shall be a limitation upon the amount of subsidiary coin which may be coined in any year, and the limit placed upon the amount by the bill is $5,000,000. Now, the Secretary of the Treasury, in his last report, in reference to this subject, uses this language:

> The stock of bullion purchased under the act of July 14, 1890, became wholly exhausted during the past year. The coinage of silver dollars is necessarily discontinued and no subsidiary silver coins are being made, except by the recoinage of abraded and uncurrent coins of the same denomination as they accumulate in the Treasury. It probably will be necessary during the coming year to draw on some other supply of silver to meet the constant demand for these coins, and I recommend that the Secretary of the Treasury be authorized to cause the recoinage of abraded and uncurrent silver dollars, in amounts not exceeding $5,000,000 per year, into the several denominations of subsidiary coins as they are required.
>
> These abraded dollars, unfit for circulation, are accumulating, and some provision for their recoinage should be made. They can not be recoined into dollars without a loss, which the Secretary of the Treasury is not authorized to incur. As the subsidiary coins are of lighter proportionate weight than the dollar pieces the latter may be converted into them without loss to the Treasury or to the circulation. In view of the enormous additions now being made to the country's monetary stock by the coinage of gold, the objection sometimes suggested that the stock of full legal-tender money would be reduced by such conversion seems unimportant.

Mr. KEIFER. May I ask the gentleman a question there? I would like to know by what rule the Treasury Department determines that a dollar is abraded.

Mr. SOUTHARD. So far as the subsidiary silver is concerned, I do not think there is any definite rule. In the manufacture of gold dollars and silver dollars and in the manufacture of coin generally, there are what are called "limits of tolerance," and my understanding is that whenever dollars have become worn and abraded so that they are far from what is known as the "limit of tolerance," they are considered worn and abraded to such an extent that they are uncurrent and unfit for use. Sometimes they are worn in such a way as to be unrecognizable, except by a sort of common consent which seems to exist in the community and permits of their circulation.

Mr. KEIFER. Is the mere depreciation in weight, without any reference to appearance or marking, a test?

Mr. SOUTHARD. I do not understand that they make that a test, not as to silver dollars or fractional silver.

Mr. JAMES. Is that a unanimous report of the committee?

Mr. SOUTHARD. This is not a unanimous report of the committee. There is a minority report filed, signed by four members of the committee—Mr. GAINES of Tennessee, Mr. HARDWICK, Mr. WALLACE, and Mr. HEFLIN. This minority report is founded upon this objection, that the coinage of this much of what is known as the coin of ultimate or final redemption would reduce the stock of full legal-tender money. It is founded upon that proposition.

Mr. JAMES. Is it not true that it would be a curtailment of the legal-tender money?

Mr. SOUTHARD. To that extent, yes. But the answer of the Secretary of the Treasury is that the reduction would be so slight as to be unimportant. Of course, there are two theories with reference to this question of money. Those who believe in the objection made by those who filed the minority report contend for what is known as the quantitive theory of money—that the money in the country bears a sort of fixed and definite relation to the amount of property in the country. That if you increase the amount of money of final redemption, you increase the price of commodities and you increase the value of the property—that is, the nominal value of the property. You decrease the amount of money and you decrease prices. That, in a word, is the contention of those who profess to believe in what is known as the "quantitive theory of money."

There are others who contend that money is a mere tool, a mere instrument of exchange, and that it bears no fixed relation to the amount of property. But in any event, as is pointed out by the Secretary of the Treasury, the amount which will be coined in this instance is so small comparatively as to have no appreciable effect upon the total amount of money of final redemption which we have in the country. Of course the money of limited legal tender will be increased, because the amount of money that can be made out of a dollar in subsidiary coin will be larger than the amount measured in dollars, because one of our silver dollars will make more than $1 in subsidiary coin, inasmuch as the degree of fineness is less in subsidiary coin.

Mr. JAMES. Could you not have avoided the decrease of circulating medium of the country by coining this subsidiary coin out of the bullion?

Mr. SOUTHARD. I have said, and I will say to the gentleman from Kentucky, that we have no bullion out of which to coin this money. We have abraded silver dollars which lie in the Treasury and are unused. They serve no purpose of any kind except to take up space in the vaults of the Treasury, and it is the proposition of the Secretary to coin this money into subsidiary coin and put it into use.

Mr. KEIFER. I would like to ask the gentleman a further question. I understood the distinguished gentleman to state that the degree of fineness of the subsidiary coin was less than that of the silver dollar. I do not think he meant to say that, did he?

Mr. SOUTHARD. I mean that the silver dollar is nine-tenths fine and the subsidiary coin is less than nine-tenths fine.

Mr. KEIFER. My understanding is that two half dollars would not weigh as much as one dollar, but the degree of fineness, the standard of silver, is just the same in 10-cent pieces, 25-cent pieces, and 50-cent pieces as in the dollar, but the weight relatively is less.

Mr. SOUTHARD. I think the gentleman is correct that the weight is less and that the degree of fineness is the same.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Where do we get the silver from to coin subsidiary coin now?

Mr. SOUTHARD. There is no subsidiary coin being coined now, or very little. There is the recoinage of abraded subsidiary silver going on as this becomes necessary. I will say that at the assay offices and at the mints, in the parting of the metals, they get a certain amount of silver, but it is a very small amount comparatively. There is no subsidiary coinage going on, and we have no bullion, as pointed out by the Secretary of the Treasury, out of which to make subsidiary coin.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I yield as much time as he wants to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. SOUTHARD. How much time have I remaining, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has eight minutes remaining.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, there is a silver fanaticism and an antisilver fanaticism. This bill is an illustration of antisilver fanaticism. There are some people so horribly opposed to the coinage of silver at all that they are not willing even to buy silver bullion for the purpose of coining dimes, quarters, and 50-cent pieces—fractional silver—which is not standard silver at all. This bill does not touch the question of the monetary standards in the slightest degree. This bill purports to recoin "worn, abraded, and uncurrent" silver dollars. Now, so far as I know, there are no uncurrent silver dollars. All the silver dollars of this country are current, either in themselves or in the shape of silver certificates that are doing the work of the coin itself—all except the few left over from month to month, as the accidents of current receipt and disbursement.

One of the great causes of our prosperity is the abundance of money in circulation among the people, either gold or the equivalent of gold in commercial use and debt-paying capacity. Now, instead of buying silver bullion to coin dimes, quarters, and half dollars—and the country is in very urgent need of dimes, quarters, and half dollars—recognizing that need, instead of buying the bullion to coin this fractional currency, gentlemen now propose to encroach upon the field of the standard silver dollars and to subtract from the sum total of our silver-dollar coinage $5,000,000, I believe it is, "not to exceed $5,000,000," in any one year. Now, it will be perfectly easy, of course, for the Treasury Department people, who will be charged with determining this question, to find every year at least 5,000,000 of "worn, abraded, and uncurrent" silver dollars, because they are going to start out to find them, and of course they will find them, and that will subtract just that much from what otherwise would be the money in currency among the people. Now I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. SOUTHARD. Do I understand the gentleman to say that against all the coined silver we have silver certificates issued?

Mr. WILLIAMS. No; I did not. I said there were no uncurrent silver dollars except just as there are uncurrent greenbacks and uncurrent gold, accidentally and by normal fiscal operation gathered into the Treasury. There is always at some time a certain amount of greenbacks, a certain amount of gold, and a certain amount of silver lying idle in the Treasury.

Mr. SOUTHARD. May I ask the gentleman another question?

Mr. WILLIAMS. But every dollar of silver, with that exception, which is merely a current affair, every silver dollar—standard silver dollar—is doing its work either in propria persona or in the shape of a silver certificate.

Mr. SOUTHARD. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him this question: If it were to do over again, would the gentleman think it a wise provision to pile up silver in the Treasury against which to issue paper money in circulation as we have it now in circulation, representing the silver dollars in the Treasury of only limited value?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Chairman, the American silver dollar has a limit of value of 100 cents, and it is circulating at exactly that value to-day and it is doing that money work exactly, and no greenback, no national-bank note, no gold dollar, is doing work over 100 cents monetary work. If it is limited at all, it is limited to 100 cents. It is doing the work of 100 cents; and you want to subtract from what otherwise would be current money among the people $5,000,000 a year and turn it into fractional currency; whereas if this bill is not passed we have got to have that amount of fractional currency, and you will be forced to buy silver bullion with which to coin it and add that much to our volume of currency.

Mr. SOUTHARD. In every practical sense is not the subsidiary dollar doing the work of 100 cents?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes; that is true; but the gentleman surely does not want to mislead the House. I know him too well to think that. If we do not pass this bill we have got to have about $5,000,000 a year additional to coin into fractional currency—dimes, quarters, and halves—and that amount will have to be coined from silver bullion purchased in the market for this purpose; and if we do pass this bill that amount will be coined out of the so-called "abraded, worn, and uncurrent" silver. It is a question of addition on the one hand or substitution on the other. In other words, this bill will subtract $5,000,000 a year from what otherwise would be the current money of the country.

Mr. SOUTHARD. Would the gentleman be in favor of buying bullion for the purpose of coining silver dollars?

Mr. WILLIAMS. "The gentleman" is in favor of buying bullion for the purpose of coining dimes, quarters, and halves, and this bill is for the purpose of preventing that from being done. That is the precise question presented here, and no other question. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. SOUTHARD. In that respect I have no doubt the gentleman agrees perfectly with the smelting trust of the country.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Oh, Mr. Speaker, whenever I go down to buy a suit of clothes, which is not very frequently (the Speaker and I both agreeing in the fact that clothes are not necessaries of life), I suppose I am, to a certain extent, "agreeing with" and encouraging the man who makes the clothes, but that is not my object. I am going to buy clothes because I want clothes, and not for the purpose of benefiting the seller of the clothes. Of course, the man who sells silver and the man who mines silver have an interest in the Government buying silver to make fractional silver currency; but the gentleman from Ohio certainly does not mean to charge that my motive on this floor is to help them. My motive is to help the people keep at least the amount of money that they otherwise would have without the passage of this bill. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, how much more time have I?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has eleven minutes.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, the whole sum and substance of this bill is that it takes out of circulation $5,000,000 a year of good legal-tender money.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I understood the gentleman from Ohio to say that this uncurrent money was not in circulation; that it was piled up in the Treasury, being entirely unused, not being the basis even of silver certificates. I do not know anything about what the fact is, but do the gentlemen disagree as to what the facts are?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I am not responsible for what the gentleman from Ohio says.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. No; but do you disagree as to what the facts are?

Mr. SOUTHARD. I do not think the gentleman from Missouri will dispute what I have said.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I do not know as to that, but I do know that I never saw a silver dollar in my life that was not current silver that people were not willing to take.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. When you saw it, it was current.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Yes.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. But when it became uncurrent you did not see it, because it would not be in circulation.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I know; but who is it that says it is uncurrent?

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. The gentleman from Ohio so states. What I want to find out is whether the gentleman from Missouri and the gentleman from Ohio differ as to the fact. I do not know what the fact is.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. If you will wait till I make my statement, you will not want any more information. [Laughter.]

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I will have all there is.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. The sum and substance of this bill is that it removes from circulation $5,000,000 a year of full legal tenders, and it will only take about seventeen years to get all the silver dollars out of circulation; and that is what they have been working at for a third of a century.

Mr. PRINCE. Will not the effect of this bill be to change the form of the silver coin?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Yes; it not only changes the shape of the money, but it changes the character of the money. The silver dollar is full legal tender and fractional coin is not.

Mr. PRINCE. It is, up to a certain amount.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. A very small amount.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Up to $5.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Yes; up to $5. You must take into consideration, for the benefit of the gentleman from Maine [Mr. LITTLEFIELD], this further matter: The man who passes upon the question whether this coin is worn, abraded, or uncurrent is the Secretary of the Treasury. Personally, I have a high regard for Mr. Secretary Shaw. I think he is the best story-teller in the United States. [Applause.] But it is a matter of common knowledge that he is unfriendly to silver money, unless he has experienced a very sudden change of heart. An abraded coin is a coin some part of which is worn off. You can't use either gold or silver without abrading it somewhat. You put a brand-new silver dollar in your pocket and go from here to the Treasury with it, and by the time you get there it is an abraded coin to some extent.

If you have an unfriendly person to pass on the question as to what is an abraded coin, you are as certain to have $5,000,000 of worn, abraded, uncurrent silver dollars every twelve months as the sun is to rise in the east to-morrow and to set in the west. It all depends upon the view point.

Mr. MADDEN. I should like to ask the gentleman, if the abraded silver dollars are not current now, and because they are not current are not in circulation, would not their recoinage into subsidiary coins get into circulation the money that is not now in circulation?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Now, Mr. Speaker, with all due respect to my friend from Chicago, I don't believe a syllable of that statement. It is owing to who passes on the question as to whether it is current or uncurrent silver or whether it is abraded or unabraded, and somebody who was friendly to it would keep that coin in circulation down there.

Mr. MADDEN. If we agree on the fact that it is not now in circulation and is abraded, wouldn't the recoinage into subsidiary coin put it into circulation?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. As long as Secretary Shaw or any man like him is Secretary of the Treasury, every time he gets hold of a silver dollar that there is the slightest excuse for declaring uncurrent he would declare it so. If I were Secretary of the Treasury, every dollar that Secretary Shaw has got locked up in the Treasury vaults as uncurrent money would be in circulation this day. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. LACEY. I would like to ask my friend a question.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Yes, certainly.

Mr. LACEY. If this is recoined, it will still be money, will it not?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Not as good as the silver dollar is, because the silver dollar is full legal tender.

Mr. LACEY. That is because it is twice as easy to get half a dollar as it is a dollar. [Laughter.]

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. That is owing to circumstances. The real effect of this bill is that it contracts the legal-tender money of the country $5,000,000 a year.

Mr. MADDEN. Does the gentleman think that it takes it out of circulation?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. If it was a friend of silver who was in the Treasury, it would be in circulation.

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. Is my friend aware that we spend thousands of dollars a year trying to get it into circulation, and in spite of that fact it continually comes back?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I have heard that tale, and I do not believe a syllable of it and never did.

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. The gentleman does not believe the appropriation bill which makes the appropriation to get it out?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. What is the reason it doesn't go out like other money?

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. My friend's mistake lies in the fact that while a silver dollar is unlimited legal tender, in fact, you wouldn't dream of offering more than four of them to a person, and if you did, you would apologize for it.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Did you ever see anybody, even in the State of Minnesota, refuse to take every silver dollar that he could lay his hands on? You never did.

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. Yes; every man knows that he wouldn't dream of passing out more than four silver dollars to a person in change.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Let me ask my friend, Would you refuse to take five silver dollars as legal tender?

Mr. McCLEARY. If I wanted five silver dollars, I would take them. Let me ask my friend a question. Suppose that you bought something costing a dollar, and you laid down a twenty-dollar gold or silver certificate or a greenback, in your own State, and the merchant tendered you nineteen silver dollars; would you take them?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I would take them so quick it would make your head swim. [Laughter.]

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. Suppose you laid down a hundred-dollar bill?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I would take that.

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. When my friend goes down to the Sergeant-at-Arms' office and draws his salary, does he want it all except the change in paper?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I always take what they hand out and never ask any questions. [Laughter.]

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. Now, laying all fun aside, let me ask my friend in good faith if he was doing business as a merchant and a person bought a dollar's worth of goods and gave him a twenty-dollar bill, would he, as a matter of fact, hand out nineteen silver dollars, or would he hand out three five-dollar bills and four in silver?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. It would be entirely owing to which I had the most of.

Mr. McCLEARY. As a matter of stern necessity, you could not do any better; but there is no sane person living that would accept them if he could get paper.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I will give the gentleman my experience; I never heard of any living man refusing to accept the silver dollar when it was tendered to him, and I do not believe any such man ever lived on the face of the earth.

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. It is legal tender and he couldn't refuse it, but the gentleman never saw in his life—and I ask him to deny it if he dare—a business man who would presume to offer nineteen silver dollars to any person.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Why, Mr. Speaker, I have had as many as fifty or sixty silver dollars in my pocket at one time many a time. [Laughter and applause.] And so has the Speaker and so has the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. McCLEARY], and I will give the gentleman my experience about it. We do not live so very far apart. The gentleman lives a little farther up the river than I do, but out in the western country, anywhere west of the Allegheny Mountains, the people prefer silver dollars to paper dollars. That is absolutely true. No man will deny that proposition.

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. That is true as to a very limited quantity, but they do not hanker after the opportunity of lugging around a pound or two of silver coin when they can have the same value in a more convenient form. The gentleman knows it.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, the same statement applies to gold as well as to silver. I do not object to subsidiary coin. If the Government has not enough of it, if there is not enough in circulation let the Government coin some more subsidiary coin. But the way to get the stuff to coin it out of is to go and buy the bullion to coin it. And I would not object to this bill so much if I did not know that the Secretary of the Treasury is unfriendly to the silver dollar and that he will recoin up to the maximum limit. And this is as certain as you live, that the whole sum and substance of it is a contraction of the currency to the amount of $5,000,000 a year.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. By permission of the House, I append the minority report on this bill, which is as follows:

MINORITY REPORT.

The undersigned members of the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures submitted the following as the views of the minority:

Without going into an elaborate discussion of the measure (H. R. 8444) proposing to give the Secretary of the Treasury authority to recoin "worn, abraded, and uncurrent silver dollars" into subsidiary silver coins, the minority submits the following reasons against the passage of the bill:

(1) Even if it is true that the country requires more subsidiary silver coins in order to conveniently transact its business, it seems that the simple, direct plan to pursue in order to get it would be to direct the Secretary to purchase the necessary amount of silver bullion and coin it into subsidiary coins.

(2) It would be very easy also to direct the Secretary to recoin worn and abraded silver dollars, using silver bullion now in the Treasury to do so, or, if necessary, purchasing such small amount of silver bullion as might be necessary to do so.

(3) Or, if we must pursue the plan recommended by the Director of the Mint and proposed by this bill, we insist, for the reason hereinafter stated, that the bill ought to be amended by adding the following proviso to the same:

"Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to purchase a sufficient amount of silver bullion and have the same coined into silver dollars of the present weight and fineness to an amount that, when coined, shall equal the amount of silver dollars coined into subsidiary coin under the foregoing provisions of the bill."

(4) The reason upon which we base our objection to the bill, unless so amended, is easily stated, and our objection to it is, we think, unanswerable. The bill authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to have the silver dollars as they become worn, abraded, or "uncurrent" recoined into subsidiary silver coinage, in amounts not to exceed $5,000,000 in any one year. It appears from the "circulation statement" of February 1, 1906, issued by the Treasury Department, that there was on that day in circulation 80,417,545 standard silver dollars, and 11,799,320 of them in the Treasury.

These dollars are full legal-tender money. Under the broad authority of the bill the Secretary is authorized to have them recoined into subsidiary coins, which are not full legal-tender money, whenever they become worn or abraded or, in his judgment, "uncurrent."

Under this authority it will, in our judgment, take just seventeen years for the Secretary to recoin them all, and as $92,000,000 will be subtracted from our stock of full legal-tender money there will be contraction to that extent.

To contraction of this kind we are unalterably opposed.

Nor is it any answer to this objection for the supporters of the bill to assert that in sixteen years the contraction would only amount to $1 per capita. That we concede. It is not the harm that might be done under this particular bill at which we are alarmed, but it is the harm that will surely follow the extension of the principles that underlie it. In all probability it is but the entering wedge for a series of bills that will work serious harm, and will materially contract the currency. Who can tell how long before some proposition may be submitted looking to the retirement of the $466,000,000 of silver certificates and the recoinage of the bullion held in the Treasury against them also? Our estimated circulation per capita is to-day only $31.88, and that, we submit, is small enough. We are opposed to this scheme to reduce it.

(5) We submit in conclusion that we do not believe the business world, or the people anywhere, desire any tinkering of this sort with the present currency system, and certainly none in the direction of contraction, and that it is unwise to disturb present conditions by the enactment of the pending bill.

JNO. W. GAINES.
THOS. W. HARDWICK.
ROBT. M. WALLACE.
J. THOS. HEFLIN.

Mr. SOUTHARD. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. McCLEARY].

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, my friend from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] speaks of reducing the volume of "full legal-tender money." Of course my friend knows that silver certificates are not legal tender at all. No man takes either silver coin or silver certificates because of the fact of their being legal tender. No one takes them because of the compulsive power of the law. He takes them because he knows that when he desires to buy anything——

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will permit an interruption for the purpose of setting him right—and I presume he does not want to be wrong—I desire to state that the gentleman from Mississippi does not remember that he said a word about legal tender, one way or the other. What the gentleman from Mississippi said was that if this bill was passed it would amount to a reduction of what otherwise would be the volume current among the people.

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. Then the gentleman is further wrong than I supposed he was, because as a matter of fact it increases the amount of money, nominally in dollars, current among the people. The silver in the silver dollars will make more money, face value, when coined into subsidiary coin than in the form of dollars.

Mr. WILLIAMS. But if the gentleman will allow me, I did not say it would reduce the present volume. I said it would reduce the volume of what otherwise would be current. Now, in other words, if this bill does not pass, we are bound to have about five millions a year of fractional currency coined, and if this bill does not pass we will have to go into the market and buy the bullion and that will amount to an increase of that much. If this bill does pass, instead of our having that increase we will have merely a substitution of that kind of fractional currency for that amount of standard currency.

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, the question involved in the bill now before the House is a very simple one. It is this: Shall we or shall we not coin the silver that has been bought with the people's money into the form that will best serve the people's interest and suit the people's convenience? And there would not be a moment's doubt or a minute's debate on the matter if it were not for the fact that our friends on the other side feel it to be their duty to try to be consistent with certain positions heretofore taken relative to silver.

In the discussion of the question before the House three elemental ideas have been touched upon—namely, the idea of a "standard of value," the idea of "legal tender," and the idea of "current money."

As a matter of historic fact, the silver dollar has not been a standard of value in this country for over seventy years, since the coinage act of 1834, passed during the Administration of Andrew Jackson and with his approval.

As a matter of law, silver dollars are legal tender to any amount, but they are not a business tender except in small amounts, depending on the habits of the people. In this city a merchant will apologize for offering you as many as one silver dollar, and will explain that he has no $1 bills. As we move west, the amount of silver that can be safely offered in making change increases, and on the Pacific coast one does not mind carrying around $6 or $8 in silver.

My friend from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] and I are familiar with the use of the silver dollar. Out in our country we have very few paper dollars. We use the silver dollar, but we use it only to a very limited extent. The limit of the usefulness of the silver dollar is fixed by the burdensomeness of the weight of it.

Of course if somebody submitted to me the proposition of whether or not I would accept a thousand silver dollars if they were tendered to me, if the question were asked that way, without modification, there would be but one answer, and that would be "yes." Wouldn't you take a million silver dollars if they were tendered to you? Why, certainly, but that is not the question. The question is, Would I take them if I could have the choice of a more convenient kind of money. Then the answer would be "no." Inasmuch as in business people have that choice, they do not take them as a matter of fact, but accept a very limited sum—about $4 in the Middle West. The usefulness of the silver dollar as a currency, as I have said, is limited by its burdensomeness.

Mr. JAMES. Is the purpose of this bill, as is hinted, to ultimately retire silver from circulation, because the people do not like to use it?

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. No; it is to put it into form to accommodate the people for the use they want to make of it.

Mr. JAMES. Then why does not the Secretary of the Treasury call for authority to buy sufficient bullion to recoin these abraded dollars and then ask for sufficient authority to buy bullion enough to make the subsidiary coin requested?

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. Because we have far more silver dollars now than is possible to use as silver dollars. That was, in fact, confessed when those in favor of the more extended use of silver asked for and secured authorization for the issuance of the silver certificate in place of the silver dollar. And these "friends of silver" were willing to have these certificates without "legal tender," because they knew if they simply had the thing itself, the silver dollar, the limit of its usefulness would be so small that the purpose they had in mind would not be accomplished.

Mr. JAMES. But you do not contend in seriousness to the House that this bill would increase the circulating medium of the country, do you?

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. I certainly do.

Mr. JAMES. Of money of final redemption?

Mr. McCLEARY of Minnesota. "Money of final redemption," my friend, so far as silver is concerned, is a mere jangle of words.

Mr. JAMES. Why, it meant considerable to you gentlemen in another campaign.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Minnesota has expired.

Mr. SOUTHARD. Mr. Speaker, just one word. There is no question that silver dollars become abraded just as fractional money becomes abraded. We are recoining fractional money all the while, and to say that silver dollars do not become abraded and uncurrent is stating what is simply not a fact. I understand that there are several million silver dollars now piled up in the vaults of the Treasury serving no purpose——

Mr. WILLIAMS. The gentleman said several millions. Can he give the exact amount?

Mr. SOUTHARD. I understand three or four millions.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Now, I would like to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. SOUTHARD. I have very little time.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Is there not fully that much of each other form of money in the United States lying up in the Treasury doing no good? Is not there very much more of the gold over and above the gold reserve?

Mr. SOUTHARD. I can not answer that question, of course, but I understand there is other money in the form of abraded, worn, silver dollars that is uncurrent that ought to be recoined in some shape. Now, one of two things must be done: We must coin these uncurrent silver dollars into subsidiary silver, or we must go into the market and buy silver bullion under some authority, which must be given by Congress, in order to increase our stock of subsidiary silver. Now, which is the common-sense plan? Which ought to be done. What would you do if you were the United States, with this stock of silver on hand, and needed more subsidiary silver, as the country does now, to meet the requirements of the Treasury?

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is in doubt. As many as are in favor of passing the bill will rise and stand until counted. [After counting.] Upon this vote the ayes are 115, the noes are 90; two-thirds not having voted for the bill, the bill is not passed. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

PRINTING IN RECORD.

Mr. TAWNEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to have read and inserted in the RECORD the following letter, addressed to the Speaker of the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent to have read and printed in the RECORD a letter which the Clerk will report.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, before the letter is read, will the gentleman give us some idea of its contents?

Mr. TAWNEY. I will state the letter is a letter addressed to the Speaker of the House by the Rev. Henry S. Burrage, chaplain of the Soldiers' Home at Togus, Me., who was formerly a major under General Draper, of Massachusetts, in regard to the action of the House in respect to the abolition of the canteen in the Soldiers' Home.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I have no objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the printing of the letter in the RECORD? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. Does the gentleman from Minnesota desire to have the letter read?

Mr. TAWNEY. I asked unanimous consent to have the letter read and inserted in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the letter will be read.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

EASTERN BRANCH, NATIONAL HOME FOR DISABLED VOLUNTEER SOLDIERS,
Togus, Me., June 15, 1906.

Hon. JOSEPH G. CANNON.

DEAR SIR: As to the canteen amendment I have this to say, that all the officers here who were at Togus before the establishment of the canteen regret the action of the House. They tell me that there has been better order in the Home and much less drunkenness since the establishment of the canteen than was the case formerly. You know that I am a strenuous believer in and advocate of prohibition. I am not in favor of the canteen in the Army or Navy. But I find myself in daily contact with men from 60 to 70, 80, and 90 years of age. A large number of these men have long been accustomed to the use of liquors of one kind or another. They are now at that period of life when it is extremely difficult to change one's habits. Character tends to fixedness. I have known this, but I have had this knowledge greatly increased since my residence here. You can not do much in the way of reforming men after they have come to their three score years and ten. Because of what the officers here say as to the condition of things before the establishment of the canteen, I have come to the conclusion that temperance in the Home is not likely to be promoted by the amendment. I wish the men would not drink. I wish they would not use tobacco. They are not likely to give up the one habit any more than the other.

I fear, therefore, that with the canteen abolished the men who have been accustomed to drink for many years will make their way to the rum holes in Augusta and Gardiner, or will patronize the pocket peddlers who have been accustomed to hang on to the outskirts of the Home about pension time. The canteen, at which only beer is sold, is under restrictions established by the Home. If these are not satisfactory to Congress they can be made so.

I hope I have made my point plain. I am opposed to the canteen in the Army and Navy, because I would not wish to have a son of mine at the formative period of life subjected to canteen influences. The old soldiers here long ago passed that period, and the differences in the circumstances in which they stand and those of the young men in the Army and Navy should be taken into account, it seems to me.

I am, truly, yours,

HENRY S. BURRAGE.

[Applause.]

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD some additional facts in relation to the question to which the letter relates, some additional statisties which I did not put in the RECORD the other day.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. TAWNEY. I have also a letter——

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota was not through.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I will wait.

Mr. TAWNEY. I have another letter, received this morning from an inmate of the National Home at Leavenworth, Kans., addressed to myself, which I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. MACON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to have the letter read.

Mr. HEFLIN. I object to having it read:

The letter is as follows:

NATIONAL MILITARY HOME, KANSAS, June 16, 1906.

Hon. JAMES A. TAWNEY, Washington, D. C.

SIR: I see that an amendment to some act, the civil bill, I think, was offered by the Hon. J. D. BOWERSOCK, of Kansas, to do away with our canteen, and that the amendment carried by a big majority, but a small vote. Now, although the honorable Member of Congress from Lawrence, Kans., lives almost within hailing distance of this Home, I have no recollection of his ever being here. One that has the good of the soldiers at his heart so much, and in the Halls of Congress, too, should get better acquainted. Now, I was never intoxicated in my life and do not average one drink of beer in a year and do not think I have taken one in our Home canteen in three years; still I believe it is for the best that the canteen be allowed to run. These men who have all their lives been used to their beer are not going to quit when the Home canteen is closed, but will go where they can get it, and then they will mix whisky of very poor quality with it. Here they get nothing but beer, and they endeavor to get the best article, and the officer in charge will not let them get intoxicated. Here there is no danger of their being robbed, but every pension day lots of gamblers hold up men, and thugs of all kinds congregate in Leavenworth, Kans., 2½ miles north, looking for the pickings, and there are abundant opportunities in the alleys, etc. There is the danger also of car accidents, and scarcely a pension day passes that two or three are not hurt by the cars, and about two per year killed. Now, this amendment will shove men, who never go to the city saloons, out where they can drink to the limit, and there are plenty who do all their drinking at the Home canteen. If they could not get anything to drink elsewhere, then there would be some sense in the amendment. I feel sorry for that Member of Congress from Michigan who is going to make the boys good by legislation. That has been tried for a good many thousand years, and I can see no improvement. He might do as the colonel of a regiment in the Army, who told the adjutant to detail so many men for baptism. Henry Ward Beecher said, when some one objected to the kind of books some one had collected to send to one of the Soldiers' Homes (in the first start of the Homes), and Mr. Beecher told the objectors that none of these books would hurt these men. You tell a man that he can not have any more to drink, and does he go off somewhere and go to praying? Oh, no; he goes where he can get it and fills himself up. It is human nature.

The canteen brings a profit of from $12,000 to $15,000 each year, which goes toward providing amusements. We usually have one good play each week in winter, and a game of baseball once a week in the summer (league games) besides probably as many more plays and concerts in the winter of a cheaper class, but first class of the kind.

It will be a clear gain for the saloons of Leavenworth of at least $1,000 per month, and a couple of hundred to the electric line. These are actual facts, and for your own consideration, so you may know the facts of the case in case the bill should come up for any further consideration in the House.

Yours, respectfully,

A. S. CHURCH,
Late of Company I, One hundred and twentieth Ohio Infantry.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Then, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD, after those two letters, additional statistics showing the facts in relation to the various Homes, and which I did not put into the RECORD the other day, but which I then had in my hand for that purpose.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Reserving the right to object, I would like to ask a question of the gentleman from Maine and make a brief statement. The other day he stated in the most ponderous fashion that he was not going to argue the question of the canteen, but simply to state facts. Before he got through we found that he was not stating facts, but only statistics compiled by the president of the Anti-Saloon League. [Applause and laughter.] Now, I wish to ask the gentleman from Maine whether the facts which he is going to insert in the RECORD to-day are statistics, merely, compiled by the same gentleman.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. Well, now, "the gentleman from Maine," in an imponderous way—not quite so ponderous—will state that he wants to put in the RECORD statistics compiled by the same gentleman.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. I have no objection to that, so long as they are called by their proper names. [Laughter.]

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. If the gentleman desires, I would like to have unanimous consent to put in the RECORD the record of the various Homes from which the statistics were compiled, which I think will give absolute foundation for the computation.

The matter referred to is as follows:

[Page 279.]

Report of the Board of Commissioners of the Soldiers' Home.

THE SOLDIERS' HOME,
OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS,
Washington, D. C., July 19, 1904.

SIR: Under the requirements of section 1 of the act of Congress approved March 3, 1883, prescribing regulations for the Soldiers' Home in the District of Columbia, I have the honor to submit the following report of the Board of Commissioners of the Soldiers' Home for the year ended June 30, 1904, and to invite attention to the following table showing the changes that have occurred in the number of beneficiaries during that period:

	Regular.	Temporary.	Total.
On the rolls June 30, 1903	1,382	32	1,414
Admitted since	254	164	418
Readmitted	325	----------	325
Total	1,961	196	2,157
Withdrawn from the Home	422	----------	422
Dropped, dismissed, etc	121	78	199
Died	117	4	121
Transferred to permanent roll	----------	83	83
Total	660	165	820
Leaving on the rolls June 30, 1904	1,301	31	1,332

Temporarily admitted for medical treatment	41
Denied admission	29
Number applying for readmission	337
Granted outdoor relief	25
Denied outdoor relief	40
Inmates present having service in Mexico	30
Inmates on outdoor relief having service in Mexico	114
Total inmates having service in Mexico, of whom 34 had service in the civil war	144
Inmates present having service in the civil war	304
Inmates absent having service in the civil war	73
Total inmates having service in the civil war	377

List of delinquencies committed during the year ending June 30, 1904.

Drunkenness	108
Absence without leave	66
Drunk and disorderly	70
Disobedience of orders	1
Introducing whisky	8
Destroying Home property	1
Assaulting other inmates	4
Using abusive language	2
Insubordination	2
Theft	1
Total number of offenses	263

[Page 159.]

Report of the Board of Commissioners of the Soldiers' Home.

THE SOLDIERS' HOME,
OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS,
Washington, D. C., August 15, 1905.

SIR: Under the requirements of section 1 of the act of Congress approved March 3, 1883, prescribing regulations for the Soldiers' Home in the District of Columbia, I have the honor to submit this report of the board of commissioners of the Soldiers' Home for the year ended June 30, 1905, and to invite attention to the following table showing the changes that have occurred in the number of beneficiaries during that period:

	Regular.	Temporary.	Total.
On the rolls June 30, 1904	1,301	31	1,332
Admitted since	261	174	435
Readmitted	265		265
Total	1,827	205	2,032
Withdrawn from the Home	368		368
Dropped, dismissed, etc	79	82	161
Died	83	1	84
Transferred to permanent roll		85	85
Total	530	168	698
Leaving on the rolls June 30, 1905	1,297	37	1,334

Temporarily admitted for medical treatment	86
Denied admission	28
Number applying for readmission	296
Granted outdoor relief	25
Denied outdoor relief	26
Inmates present having service in Mexico	29
Inmates on outdoor relief having service in Mexico	92
Total inmates having service in Mexico, of whom 28 had service in the civil war	121
Inmates present having service in the civil war	301
Inmates absent having service in the civil war	72
Total inmates having service in the civil war	373

List of deliquencies committed during the year ending June 30, 1905.

Drunkenness	116
Absence without leave	83
Drunk and disorderly	59
Introducing whisky	16
Disobedience of orders	2
Neglect of duty	1
Destroying Home property	1
Assaulting other inmates	7
Using abusive language	3
Disposing of Home clothing	3
Total number of offenses	291

National Home for Regulars, Washington, D. C., 1903.

(No canteen.)

Average number present	1,414
Total cases of discipline	259
Per cent	.183

ITEMS OF ABOVE CASES AND PER CENT.

Bringing liquors into grounds	9
Per cent	.006
Drunkenness and disorderly	166
Per cent	.117
Absent without leave	74
Per cent	.052

National Home for Regulars, Washington, D. C., 1904.

(No canteen.)

Average number present	1,332
Total cases of discipline	263
Per cent	.197

ITEMS OF ABOVE CASES AND PER CENT.

Introducing liquors into grounds	8
Per cent	.006
Drunkenness and disorderly	178
Per cent	.133
Absent without leave	66
Per cent	.049

National Home for Regulars, Washington, D. C., 1905.

(No canteen.)

Average number present	1,334
Total cases of discipline	291
Per cent	.218

ITEMS OF ABOVE CASES AND PER CENT.

Bringing liquors into grounds	16
Per cent	.011
Drunkenness and disorderly	175
Per cent	.131
Absent without leave	83
Per cent	.062

CENTRAL BRANCH (DAYTON, OHIO).

Discipline.

Changes from present to absent	1,823
Changes from absent to present	1,773
Total changes	3,596
Arrests under major charges	694
Arrests under minor charges	1,982
Total charges	2,676

Charges.

Major:
Penal offenses	303
Bringing intoxicating liquors within the limits of the Branch	334
Drunkenness on duty	3
Absent without leave while under sentence	12
Insubordination to an officer	42
Total	694
Minor:
Absent without leave	1,273
Drunkenness	647
Disorderly conduct in quarters or on the grounds	9
Lying or falsely accusing	10
Violation of rules	20
Other misconducts	23
Total	1,982
Grand total	2,676

Major:
Penal offenses	44
Bringing intoxicating liquors within the limits of the Branch	372
Drunkenness on duty	22
Absent without leave while under sentence	144
Insubordination to an officer	98
Total	680
Minor:
Absent without leave	1,175
Drunkenness	730
Disorderly conduct in quarters or on the grounds	57
Lying or falsely accusing	17
Violations of rules	62
Other misconducts	21
Total	2,062
Grand total	2,724

Discipline.

Changes from present to absent	1,902
Changes from absent to present	1,906
Total changes	3,808
Arrest under major charges	486
Arrest under minor charges	2,119
Total charges	2,605

Charges.

Major:
Penal offenses	8
Bringing intoxicating liquors within the limits of the Branch	265
Drunkenness on duty	21
Absence without leave while under sentence	120
Insubordination to an officer	72
Total	486
Minor:
Absence without leave	906
Drunkenness	676
Disorderly conduct in quarters or on the grounds	244
Lying or falsely accusing	8
Violation of rules	240
Other misconduct	45
Total	2,119
Grand total	2,605

Central Branch, Dayton, Ohio, 1903.

Average number present	4,729
Total cases of discipline	2,676
Per cent	.565

ITEMS OF ABOVE CASES AND PER CENT.

Bringing intoxicating liquors within limits of Branch	334
Per cent	.07
Drunkenness on and off duty	650
Per cent	.137
Penal offenses (admitted "drunks") in city courts	303
Per cent	.064
Absent without leave	1,273
Per cent	.269

Central Branch, Dayton, Ohio, 1904.

Average number present	4,658
Total cases of discipline	2,724
Per cent	.584

ITEMS OF ABOVE CASES AND PER CENT.

Bringing intoxicating liquors within limits of Branch	372
Per cent	.079
Drunkenness on and off duty	752
Per cent	.161
Penal offenses (admitted "drunks") in city courts	44
Per cent	.009
Absent without leave	1,175
Per cent	.252

Central Branch, Dayton, Ohio, 1905.

Average number present	4,569
Total cases of discipline	2,605
Per cent	.57

ITEMS OF ABOVE CASES AND PER CENT.

Bringing intoxicating liquors within limits of Branch	265
Per cent	.057
Drunkenness on and off duty	697
Per cent	.152
Penal offenses (admitted "drunks") in city courts	8
Per cent	.001
Absent without leave	906
Per cent	.198

Annual report of Northwestern Branch, National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, for the year ending June 30, 1903. (Milwaukee, Wis.)

NATIONAL HOME,
Milwaukee County, Wis., July 10, 1903.

SIR: I have the honor to submit the following report of this Branch for the year ending June 30, 1903:

Average present for the year ended June 30, 1903, 2,175.

Charges.

Major:
Bringing intoxicating liquors into Home grounds	74
Drunkenness on duty	5
Absent without leave while under sentence	17
Total	96
Minor:
Absent without leave	380
Drunkenness	357
Disorderly conduct	50
Violation of rules	41
Other misconduct	29
	857
	96
Total	953

Annual report of Northwestern Branch, National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, for the year ending June 30, 1904. (Milwaukee, Wis.)

NATIONAL HOME,
Milwaukee County, Wis., July 16, 1904.

SIR: I have the honor to submit the following report of this Branch for the year ending June 30, 1904:

Average present for the year ended June 30, 1904, 2,181.

Social condition:
Married, or having living wives, or minor children, or both	868
Single	2,316
Total	3,184

Two thousand nine hundred and twenty-four could read and write, and 260 could neither read nor write. Of the latter 45 per cent were native born and 55 per cent were foreign born. Number of colored members, present and absent, June 30, 1904, 27.

Discipline:
Changes from present to absent	866
Changes from absent to present	924
Total changes	1,790
Arrest under major charges	87
Arrest under minor charges	1,092
Total charges	1,179

Charges.

Major:
Bringing intoxicating liquors within the limits of the Home grounds	75
Drunkenness on duty	3
Absence without leave while under sentence	7
Insubordination to an officer	2
Total	87
Minor:
Absence without leave	518
Drunkenness	405
Disorderly conduct	24
Lying, or falsely accusing	1
Violation of rules	107
Other misconduct	37
Total	1,092
Total offenses	1,179

Annual report of the Northwestern Branch, National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, for the year ending June 30, 1905. (Milwaukee, Wis.)

NATIONAL HOME,
Milwaukee County, Wis., July 1, 1905.

SIR: I have the honor to submit the following report of this Branch for the year ending June 30, 1905:

Average present for the year ending June 30, 1905, 2,107.

Discipline.

Changes from present to absent	945
Changes from absent to present	1,000
Total changes	1,945
Arrest under major charges	103
Arrest under minor charges	1,002
Total charges	1,105

Charges.

Major:
Bringing intoxicating liquors within the limits of the Home grounds	101
Insubordination to an officer	2
Total	103
Minor:
Absence without leave	432
Drunkenness	338
Disorderly conduct in quarters or on the grounds	85
Lying or falsely accusing	1
Violation of rules	123
Other misconduct	23
Total	1,002
Grand total	1,105

Northwestern Branch, Milwaukee, Wis., 1903.

Average number present	2,175
Total cases of discipline	953
Per cent	.438

ITEMS OF ABOVE CASES AND PER CENT.

Bringing intoxicating liquors within Home grounds	74
Per cent	.034
Drunkenness	362
Per cent	.166
Absent without leave	397
Per cent	.182

Northwestern Branch, Milwaukee, Wis., 1904.

Average number present	2,181
Total cases of discipline	1,346
Per cent	.625

ITEMS OF ABOVE CASES AND PER CENT.

Bringing intoxicating liquors within Home grounds	58
Per cent	.026
Drunkenness	813
Per cent	.372
Absent without leave	285
Per cent	.130

Northwestern Branch, Milwaukee, Wis., 1905.

Average number present	2,107
Total cases of discipline	1,105
Per cent	.524

ITEMS OF ABOVE CASES AND PER CENT.

Bringing intoxicating liquors within Home grounds	101
Per cent	.047
Drunkenness	338
Per cent	.112
Absent without leave	432
Per cent	.205

[Page 111.]

Annual report of Southern Branch, National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, for the year ending June 30, 1903.

SOUTHERN BRANCH, July 25, 1903.

SIR: I have the honor to submit the following report of this Branch for the year ending June 30, 1903:

Average number present year ending June 30, 1903, 2,773.

Discipline:
Changes from present to absent	1,280
Changes from absent to present	1,297
Total changes	2,577
Arrests under major charges	101
Arrests under minor charges	1,586
Total charges	1,687
Charges:
Absence without leave, more than ten days	58
Assaulting comrades	7
Bringing whisky into camp	42
Drunk	1,077
Fighting in camp	65
Jumping the fence	48
Other minor offenses	390
Total	1,687

[Page 114.]

Annual report of the Southern Branch, National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, for the year ending June 30, 1904.

ELIZABETH CITY COUNTY, VA., July 25, 1904.

SIR: I have the honor to submit the following report of this Branch for the year ending June 30, 1904:

Average number present year ending June 30, 1904 2,670

Charges.

Absence without leave, more than 10 days	285
Assaulting comrades	7
Bringing whisky into Home grounds	58
Drunkenness	738
Drunk and disorderly	75
Fighting on Home grounds	30
Jumping the fence	30
Other minor offenses	141
Total	1,364

[Page 119.]

Annual report of the Southern Branch, National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, for the year ending June 30, 1905.

ELIZABETH CITY COUNTY, VA., July 27, 1905.

SIR: I have the honor to submit the following report of this Branch for the year ending June 30, 1905:

Average number present, year ending June 30, 1905 2,616

Charges.

Major:
Penal offenses	3
Bringing liquor	60
Absent without leave while under sentence	37
Insubordination	4
	104
Minor:
Absent without leave	353
Drunkenness	625
Disorderly conduct	103
Violation of rules	59
Other misconduct	127
	1,267

Southern Branch, Hampton, Va., 1903.

Average number present	2,773
Total cases of discipline	1,687
Per cent	.608

ITEMS OF ABOVE CASES AND PER CENT.

Bringing in liquor	42
Per cent	.015
Drunkenness	1,077
Per cent	.388
Absent without leave	58
Per cent	.02

Southern Branch, Hampton, Va., 1904.

Average number present	2,670
Total cases of discipline	1,364
Per cent	.51

ITEMS OF ABOVE CASES AND PER CENT.

Bringing in liquor	58
Per cent	.021
Drunkenness	813
Per cent	.304
Absent without leave	285
Per cent	.106

Southern Branch, Hampton, Va., 1905.

Average number present	2,616
Total cases of discipline	1,371
Per cent	.524

ITEMS OF ABOVE CASES AND PER CENT.

Bringing in liquor	60
Per cent	.023
Drunkenness	625
Per cent	.238
Absent without leave	390
Per cent	.148

Marion Branch, Marion, Ind.

Average present for year ending June 30, 1903, reported on page 162, Report of Board of Managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers.

Charges.

Major:
Penalty—
Arrested by civil authorities	3
Assault and battery	6
Bringing intoxicating liquor within the limits of the Home	68
Drunkenness while on duty or under sentence	39
Fence jumping and absent without leave while on duty or under sentence	35
Insubordination	11
Total	162
Minor:
Drunk or repeatedly drunk	127
Drunk, fence jumping, absent without leave	14
Drunk, disorderly, or threatening	85
Fence jumping and absent without leave	133
Violation of Home rules	22
Total	381
Grand total	543

Average present during year ending June 30, 1904 (see page 169) .. 1,714

Charges.

Major:
Penalty—
Arrested by civil authorities	42
Assault and battery	14
Bringing intoxicating liquors within the limits of the Branch	119
Drunkenness while on duty or under sentence	36
Fence jumping and absent without leave while on duty or under sentence	35
Insubordination to an officer	19
Total	265
Minor:
Drunk, or drunk fence jumping, and absent without leave	196
Drunk, or drunk and disorderly, or threatening, or both	44
Fence jumping, absent without leave	53
Violation of Home rules	45
Total	343
Total charges	608

Average present during year ending June 30, 1905 (see page 174) .. 1,682

Charges.

Major:
Arrested by civil authorities	42
Assault and battery	17
Stealing or attempting to steal	1
Indecent exposure	5
Bringing intoxicants within the Home limits	71
Drunkenness on duty	10
Fence jumping and absence without leave while on duty	8
Insubordination	22
Total	176
Minor:
Drunk or repeatedly drunk	201
Drunk, fence jumping, absence without leave	31
Drunk, brought to guardhouse on cart	24
Drunk, disorderly, threatening	66
Absence without leave	95
Fence jumping and absence without leave	117
Disorderly conduct	15
Using profane language	5
Violation of Home rules	7
Total	561
Total charges	737

Marion Branch, Marion, Ind., 1903.

Average number present	1,750
Total cases of discipline	543
Per cent	.31

ITEMS OF ABOVE CASES AND PER CENT.

Bringing intoxicating liquors within Home grounds	68
Per cent	.038
Drunkenness	265
Per cent	.151

Marion Branch, Marion, Ind., 1904.

Average number present	1,714
Total cases of discipline	608
Per cent	.354

ITEMS OF ABOVE CASES AND PER CENT.

Bringing intoxicating liquors into Home grounds	119
Per cent	.069
Drunkenness	276
Per cent	.161
Absent without leave	53
Per cent	.03

Marion Branch, Marion, Ind., 1905.

Average number present	1,682
Total cases of discipline	737
Per cent	.438

ITEMS OF ABOVE CASES AND PER CENT.

Bringing intoxicating liquors into Home grounds	71
Per cent	.042
Drunkenness	332
Per cent	.19
Absent without leave	220
Per cent	.13

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. In connection with that I would like to ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD, alongside of the statistics of the gentleman from Maine [Mr. LITTLEFIELD] a statement made by Mr. Crafts before our committee with reference to the manner in which statistics may be used, in which he repeated the old saying that "While figures do not lie, liars may figure." [Laughter.]

MR. CRAFTS'S OPINION OF STATISTICS.

Mr. CRAFTS. Certainly; but these men are witnesses. They are not talking theory.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Do you say that they are better witnesses than the managers of the Soldiers' Homes themselves?

Mr. CRAFTS. The managers are prejudiced, too.

Mr. SULLIVAN. What is the reason for that? Let me put an exact case. Major Harris, General Henderson, and Mr. Murphy were before the committee the other day. Major Harris made his statement in the presence of the other two men, who are managers. His testimony was that the beer halls in the National Homes were a benefit to the soldier.

That these soldiers were men of advanced years; that their habits were fixed, and that it would cost them great discomfort, if not ill health, to change their habits abruptly at their time of life; and that it was a charitable and merciful thing to allow them to have beer in the beer hall. Much more so than to send them out to the adjacent districts to be given over to the tender mercies of the rum seller and the keeper of disorderly places, and all that sort of thing. His statement was that if the State Homes were managed as well as the National Homes with the same regulations properly enforced, that he could see no objection to allowing the liquor to the old soldiers in the State Homes; and he saw no objection as a result of his observations to allowing it in the National Homes. That statement had the apparent approval of General Henderson and Mr. Murphy. Unless you can show that these witnesses are prejudiced, that they are in the pay of the liquor trade, or prejudiced in any way in favor of the liquor trade, how can you overweigh that kind of testimony?

Mr. CRAFTS. That is only an opinion. They did not give you the facts to prove it, and you don't know that. While figures can never lie, yet liars can figure.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Do you say that Mr. Murphy and General Henderson and Major Harris would lie?

Mr. CRAFTS. No; but I say that users of statistics can take lies and make them appear as facts.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I have no objection to that.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I think we ought to have some idea as to the extent of this. The gentleman from Maine states that he wants to put in all the records of the Soldiers' Homes. It may be a dozen volumes like that [indicating] for all I know.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I will put in only so much of the record [indicating] of the Soldiers' Homes—extracts upon which computations are based.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Mr. Speaker, I do not object to this request if coupled with it I may be given permission to insert a statement on the other side of the question.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I have not the slightest objection, so far as I am concerned.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BARTHOLDT] object or not?

Mr. BARTHOLDT. I do not object if I have the same privilege.

The SPEAKER. Then it is in the shape of an amendment. [Laughter.]

Mr. SLAYDEN. I want to ask the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BARTHOLDT] a question, with his permission. Is the gentleman from Missouri prepared to print in the RECORD statements, arguments, and statistics equally strong as those read a moment ago from the Home of old soldiers in Maine, which go to show that sobriety, decency, good order, and better discipline were maintained in the Army when the canteen was in full effect?

Mr. BARTHOLDT. In answer to the question, if the gentleman will do me the honor to read what I am going to print in the RECORD, he can judge for himself.

The SPEAKER. This proceeding has been by unanimous consent.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, to be allowed to print a statement in the RECORD.

[Mr. BARTHOLDT addressed the House. See Appendix.]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman couples with the request of the gentleman from Maine the request that he may print remarks on the other side. Is there objection? Also a similar request is made by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. SULLIVAN]. Is there objection to the requests?

There was no objection.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to print in connection with my remarks the minority report of the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures. It is very short.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

By unanimous consent the bill H. R. 8761, to amend section 1 of the act approved March 3, 1905, providing for an additional associate justice of the supreme court of Arizona, and for other purposes, and the bill H. R. 11016, for the preservation of American antiquities, were ordered to lie on the table, they being similar to Senate bill which had been passed to-day.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, Mr. DEEMER was granted leave of absence indefinitely, on account of illness.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. WACHTER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 20070. An act to authorize the Chattanooga Northern Railway Company to construct a bridge across the Tennessee River at Chattanooga, Tenn.;

H. R. 18442. An act to fix and regulate the salaries of teachers, school officers, and other employees of the board of education of the District of Columbia;

H. R. 10715. An act to establish an additional collection district in the State of Texas, and for other purposes;

H. R. 10292. An act granting to the town of Mancos, Colo., the right to enter certain lands;

H. R. 19681. An act to survey and allot the lands embraced within the limits of the Blackfeet Indian Reservation, in the State of Montana, and to open the surplus lands to settlement;

H. R. 8973. An act to amend section 5200, Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to national banks;

H. R. 16125. An act authorizing a license and permit to the Corinth and Shiloh Electric Railway Company to construct a track or tracks through the Shiloh National Park, and to operate electric cars thereon;

H. R. 4464. An act to classify the officers and members of the fire department of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes;

H. R. 19571. An act to authorize the county court of Gasconade County, Mo., to construct a bridge across the Gasconade River at or near Fredericksburg, Mo.;

H. R. 18668. An act ratifying and confirming soldiers' additional homestead entries heretofore made and allowed upon lands embraced in what was formerly the Columbia Indian Reservation, in the State of Washington;

H. R. 7771. An act for the relief of Judd O. Hartzell;

H. R. 14968. An act to amend the internal-revenue laws so as to provide for furnishing certified copies of certain records;

H. R. 8428. An act to regulate the construction of dams across navigable waters;

H. R. 14928. An act for the relief of F. V. Walker;

H. R. 4468. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the appointment of a sealer and assistant sealer of weights and measures in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved March 2, 1895;

H. R. 11787. An act ratifying and approving an act to appropriate money for the purpose of building additional buildings for the Northwestern Normal School at Alva, in Oklahoma Territory, passed by the legislative assembly of Oklahoma Territory, and approved the 15th day of March, 1905; and

H. R. 10133. An act to provide for the annual pro rata distribution of the annuities of the Sac and Fox Indians of the Mississippi between the two branches of the tribe and to adjust the existing claims between the two branches as to said annuities.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills and joint resolution of the following titles:

S. 4806. An act to regulate the landing, delivery, cure, and sale of sponges;

S. R. 60. Joint resolution providing for the purchase of material and equipment for use in the construction of the Panama Canal;

S. 280. An act to provide a life-saving station at or near Greenhill, on the coast of South Kingston, in the State of Rhode Island;

S. 4250. An act to further enlarge the powers and authority of Public Health and Marine Service, and to impose further duties thereon; and

S. 4184. An act to ratify, approve, and confirm an act duly enacted by the legislature of the Territory of Hawaii to authorize and provide for the construction, maintenance, and operation of a telephone system on the island of Oahu, Territory of Hawaii.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT FOR HIS APPROVAL.

Mr. WACHTER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that this day they had presented to the President of the United States, for his approval, the following bills:

H. R. 19264. An act making appropriations for the diplomatic and consular service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907;

H. R. 19816. An act to authorize the Georgia, Florida and Alabama Railway Company to construct three railroad bridges across the Chattahoochee River, one at or near the city of Eufaula, Ala., and two between said city of Eufaula and the city of Columbus, Ga.;

H. R. 19815. An act to authorize the Georgia, Florida and Alabama Railway Company to construct a bridge across the Chattahoochee River, between Columbus, Ga., and Franklin, Ga.;

H. R. 10106. An act providing for the setting aside for governmental purposes of certain ground in Hilo, Hawaii;

H. R. 3997. An act for the relief of John A. Meroney;

H. R. 19432. An act to authorize additional aids to navigation in the Light-House Establishment;

H. R. 19681. An act to survey and allot the lands embraced within the limits of the Blackfeet Indian Reservation, in the State of Montana, and to open the surplus lands to settlement;

H. R. 19571. An act to authorize the county court of Gasconade County, Mo., to construct a bridge across the Gasconade River at or near Fredericksburg, Mo.;

H. R. 8973. An act to amend section 5200, Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to national banks;

H. R. 18668. An act ratifying and confirming soldiers' additional homestead entries heretofore made and allowed upon lands embraced in what was formerly the Columbia Indian Reservation, in the State of Washington;

H. R. 7771. An act for the relief of Judd O. Hartzell;

H. R. 14968. An act to amend the internal-revenue laws so as to provide for furnishing certified copies of certain records;

H. R. 8428. An act to regulate the construction of dams across navigable waters;

H. R. 14928. An act for the relief of F. V. Walker;

H. R. 20070. An act to authorize the Chattanooga Northern Railway Company to construct a bridge across the Tennessee River at Chattanooga, Tenn.;

H. R. 4464. An act to classify the officers and members of the fire department of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes;

H. R. 16125. An act authorizing a license and permit to the Corinth and Shiloh Electric Railway Company to construct a track or tracks through the Shiloh National Park, and to operate electric cars thereon;

H. R. 4468. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the appointment of a sealer and assistant sealer of weights and measures in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved March 2, 1895;

H. R. 18442. An act to fix and regulate the salaries of teachers, school officers, and other employees of the board of education of the District of Columbia; and

H. R. 10715. An act to establish an additional collection district in the State of Texas, and for other purposes.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

By unanimous consent Mr. TAWNEY obtained leave to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, the papers in the case of the bill (H. R. 2803) for the relief of De Witt Eastman.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. ZENOR. Mr. Speaker, I desire to make a privileged motion on the bill H. R. 16785. I move that the House concur in the Senate amendment. The bill is from the Speaker's table.

The SPEAKER. Will it be convenient for the gentleman to be here in the morning? The papers have been filed away.

Mr. ZENOR. Very well.

The motion of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] was agreed to.

Accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report of examination of harbor of refuge at Harbor Beach, Mich.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed with illustrations.

A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a list of judgments in favor of claimants in Indian depredation cases—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Postmaster-General, recommending legislation for the relief of the W. C. Walsh Company—to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions of the following titles were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several Calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. SPERRY, from the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 5292) to prevent the sale of intoxicating liquors in buildings and upon premises around or controlled by the United States Government, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4954); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. SULZER, from the Committee on Patents, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 11943) to amend Title LX, chapter 3, of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to copyrights, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4955); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. HULL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the House joint resolution (H. J. Res. 43) authorizing the Secretary of War to furnish condemned cannon for a life-size statue of Gen. Henry Leavenworth, at Leavenworth, Kans., reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4961); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. BURTON of Ohio, from the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, to which was referred the concurrent resolution (H. C. Res. 34) for the examination and survey of the harbor at Duluth, Minn., reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4963); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 19431) permitting the building of a dam across the Mississippi River between the counties of Stearns and Sherburne, in the State of Minnesota, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4964); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. RANSDELL of Louisiana, from the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 7083) to repeal section 5, chapter 1482, act of March 3, 1905, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4965); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. FOSTER of Indiana, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 16008) to provide for the establishment of judicial divisions in the district of Indiana, designating the places where court shall be held, and for other purposes connected therewith, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4967); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. YOUNG, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 18920) to authorize the Wichita Mountain and Orient Railway Company to construct and operate a railway through the Fort Sill Military Reservation, and for other purposes, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4968); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6395) for the exchange of certain lands situated in the Fort Douglas Military Reservation, in the State of Utah, and other considerations, for lands adjacent thereto, between Le Grand Young and the Government of the United States, and for other purposes, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4970); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

Mr. MILLER, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 4197) authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Treasury to enter on the roll of Capt. Orlando Humason's Company B, First Oregon Mounted Volunteers, the name of Hezekiah Davis, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4956); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. PARKER, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20220) to correct the military record of James Devlin, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4957); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. YOUNG, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 1166) to correct the military record of Peleg T. Griffith, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4969); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. HOPKINS: A bill (H. R. 20287) to authorize George

it was a charitable and merciful thing to allow them to have beer in the beer hall. Much more so than to send them out to the adjacent districts to be given over to the tender mercies of the rum seller and the keeper of disorderly places, and all that sort of thing. His statement was that if the State Homes were managed as well as the National Homes with the same regulations properly enforced, that he could see no objection to allowing the liquor to the old soldiers in the State Homes; and he saw no objection as a result of his observations to allowing it in the National Homes. That statement had the apparent approval of General Henderson and Mr. Murphy. Unless you can show that these witnesses are prejudiced, that they are in the pay of the liquor trade, or prejudiced in any way in favor of the liquor trade, how can you overweigh that kind of testimony?

Mr. CRAFTS. That is only an opinion. They did not give you the facts to prove it, and you don't know that. While figures can never lie, yet liars can figure.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Do you say that Mr. Murphy and General Henderson and Major Harris would lie?

Mr. CRAFTS. No; but I say that users of statistics can take lies and make them appear as facts.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I have no objection to that.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I think we ought to have some idea as to the extent of this. The gentleman from Maine states that he wants to put in all the records of the Soldiers' Homes. It may be a dozen volumes like that [indicating] for all I know.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I will put in only so much of the record [indicating] of the Soldiers' Homes—extracts upon which computations are based.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Mr. Speaker, I do not object to this request if coupled with it I may be given permission to insert a statement on the other side of the question.

Mr. LITTLEFIELD. I have not the slightest objection, so far as I am concerned.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BARTHOLDT] object or not?

Mr. BARTHOLDT. I do not object if I have the same privilege.

The SPEAKER. Then it is in the shape of an amendment. [Laughter.]

Mr. SLAYDEN. I want to ask the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BARTHOLDT] a question, with his permission. Is the gentleman from Missouri prepared to print in the RECORD statements, arguments, and statistics equally strong as those read a moment ago from the Home of old soldiers in Maine, which go to show that sobriety, decency, good order, and better discipline were maintained in the Army when the canteen was in full effect?

Mr. BARTHOLDT. In answer to the question, if the gentleman will do me the honor to read what I am going to print in the RECORD, he can judge for himself.

The SPEAKER. This proceeding has been by unanimous consent.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, to be allowed to print a statement in the RECORD.

[Mr. BARTHOLDT addressed the House. See Appendix.]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman couples with the request of the gentleman from Maine the request that he may print remarks on the other side. Is there objection? Also a similar request is made by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. SULLIVAN]. Is there objection to the requests?

There was no objection.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to print in connection with my remarks the minority report of the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures. It is very short.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

By unanimous consent the bill H. R. 8761, to amend section 1 of the act approved March 3, 1905, providing for an additional associate justice of the supreme court of Arizona, and for other purposes, and the bill H. R. 11016, for the preservation of American antiquities, were ordered to lie on the table, they being similar to Senate bill which had been passed to-day.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, Mr. DEEMER was granted leave of absence indefinitely, on account of illness.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. WACHTER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 20070. An act to authorize the Chattanooga Northern Railway Company to construct a bridge across the Tennessee River at Chattanooga, Tenn.;

H. R. 18442. An act to fix and regulate the salaries of teachers, school officers, and other employees of the board of education of the District of Columbia;

H. R. 10715. An act to establish an additional collection district in the State of Texas, and for other purposes;

H. R. 10292. An act granting to the town of Mancos, Colo., the right to enter certain lands;

H. R. 19681. An act to survey and allot the lands embraced within the limits of the Blackfeet Indian Reservation, in the State of Montana, and to open the surplus lands to settlement;

H. R. 8973. An act to amend section 5200, Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to national banks;

H. R. 16125. An act authorizing a license and permit to the Corinth and Shiloh Electric Railway Company to construct a track or tracks through the Shiloh National Park, and to operate electric cars thereon;

H. R. 4464. An act to classify the officers and members of the fire department of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes;

H. R. 19571. An act to authorize the county court of Gasconade County, Mo., to construct a bridge across the Gasconade River at or near Fredericksburg, Mo.;

H. R. 18668. An act ratifying and confirming soldiers' additional homestead entries heretofore made and allowed upon lands embraced in what was formerly the Columbia Indian Reservation, in the State of Washington;

H. R. 7771. An act for the relief of Judd O. Hartzell;

H. R. 14968. An act to amend the internal-revenue laws so as to provide for furnishing certified copies of certain records;

H. R. 8428. An act to regulate the construction of dams across navigable waters;

H. R. 14928. An act for the relief of F. V. Walker;

H. R. 4468. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the appointment of a sealer and assistant sealer of weights and measures in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved March 2, 1895;

H. R. 11787. An act ratifying and approving an act to appropriate money for the purpose of building additional buildings for the Northwestern Normal School at Alva, in Oklahoma Territory, passed by the legislative assembly of Oklahoma Territory, and approved the 15th day of March, 1905; and

H. R. 10133. An act to provide for the annual pro rata distribution of the annuities of the Sac and Fox Indians of the Mississippi between the two branches of the tribe and to adjust the existing claims between the two branches as to said annuities.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills and joint resolution of the following titles:

S. 4806. An act to regulate the landing, delivery, cure, and sale of sponges;

S. R. 60. Joint resolution providing for the purchase of material and equipment for use in the construction of the Panama Canal;

S. 280. An act to provide a life-saving station at or near Greenhill, on the coast of South Kingston, in the State of Rhode Island;

S. 4250. An act to further enlarge the powers and authority of Public Health and Marine Service, and to impose further duties thereon; and

S. 4184. An act to ratify, approve, and confirm an act duly enacted by the legislature of the Territory of Hawaii to authorize and provide for the construction, maintenance, and operation of a telephone system on the island of Oahu, Territory of Hawaii.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT FOR HIS APPROVAL.

Mr. WACHTER, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that this day they had presented to the President of the United States, for his approval, the following bills:

H. R. 19264. An act making appropriations for the diplomatic and consular service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907;

H. R. 19816. An act to authorize the Georgia, Florida and Alabama Railway Company to construct three railroad bridges across the Chattahoochee River, one at or near the city of Eufaula, Ala., and two between said city of Eufaula and the city of Columbus, Ga.;

H. R. 19815. An act to authorize the Georgia, Florida and Alabama Railway Company to construct a bridge across the Chattahoochee River, between Columbus, Ga., and Franklin, Ga.;

H. R. 10106. An act providing for the setting aside for governmental purposes of certain ground in Hilo, Hawaii;

H. R. 3997. An act for the relief of John A. Meroney;

H. R. 19432. An act to authorize additional aids to navigation in the Light-House Establishment;

H. R. 19681. An act to survey and allot the lands embraced within the limits of the Blackfeet Indian Reservation, in the State of Montana, and to open the surplus lands to settlement;

H. R. 19571. An act to authorize the county court of Gasconade County, Mo., to construct a bridge across the Gasconade River at or near Fredericksburg, Mo.;

H. R. 8973. An act to amend section 5200, Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to national banks;

H. R. 18668. An act ratifying and confirming soldiers' additional homestead entries heretofore made and allowed upon lands embraced in what was formerly the Columbia Indian Reservation, in the State of Washington;

H. R. 7771. An act for the relief of Judd O. Hartzell;

H. R. 14968. An act to amend the internal-revenue laws so as to provide for furnishing certified copies of certain records;

H. R. 8428. An act to regulate the construction of dams across navigable waters;

H. R. 14928. An act for the relief of F. V. Walker;

H. R. 20070. An act to authorize the Chattanooga Northern Railway Company to construct a bridge across the Tennessee River at Chattanooga, Tenn.;

H. R. 4464. An act to classify the officers and members of the fire department of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes;

H. R. 16125. An act authorizing a license and permit to the Corinth and Shiloh Electric Railway Company to construct a track or tracks through the Shiloh National Park, and to operate electric cars thereon;

H. R. 4468. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the appointment of a sealer and assistant sealer of weights and measures in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes," approved March 2, 1895;

H. R. 18442. An act to fix and regulate the salaries of teachers, school officers, and other employees of the board of education of the District of Columbia; and

H. R. 10715. An act to establish an additional collection district in the State of Texas, and for other purposes.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

By unanimous consent Mr. TAWNEY obtained leave to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, the papers in the case of the bill (H. R. 2803) for the relief of De Witt Eastman.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. ZENOR. Mr. Speaker, I desire to make a privileged motion on the bill H. R. 16785. I move that the House concur in the Senate amendment. The bill is from the Speaker's table.

The SPEAKER. Will it be convenient for the gentleman to be here in the morning? The papers have been filed away.

Mr. ZENOR. Very well.

The motion of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] was agreed to.

Accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report of examination of harbor of refuge at Harbor Beach, Mich.—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed with illustrations.

A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a list of judgments in favor of claimants in Indian depredation cases—to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

A letter from the Postmaster-General, recommending legislation for the relief of the W. C. Walsh Company—to the Committee on Claims, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions of the following titles were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several Calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. SPERRY, from the Committee on Alcoholic Liquor Traffic, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 5292) to prevent the sale of intoxicating liquors in buildings and upon premises around or controlled by the United States Government, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4954); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. SULZER, from the Committee on Patents, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 11943) to amend Title LX, chapter 3, of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relating to copyrights, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4955); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. HULL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the House joint resolution (H. J. Res. 43) authorizing the Secretary of War to furnish condemned cannon for a life-size statue of Gen. Henry Leavenworth, at Leavenworth, Kans., reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4961); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. BURTON of Ohio, from the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, to which was referred the concurrent resolution (H. C. Res. 34) for the examination and survey of the harbor at Duluth, Minn., reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4963); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 19431) permitting the building of a dam across the Mississippi River between the counties of Stearns and Sherburne, in the State of Minnesota, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4964); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. RANSDELL of Louisiana, from the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 7083) to repeal section 5, chapter 1482, act of March 3, 1905, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4965); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. FOSTER of Indiana, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 16008) to provide for the establishment of judicial divisions in the district of Indiana, designating the places where court shall be held, and for other purposes connected therewith, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4967); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. YOUNG, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 18920) to authorize the Wichita Mountain and Orient Railway Company to construct and operate a railway through the Fort Sill Military Reservation, and for other purposes, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4968); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6395) for the exchange of certain lands situated in the Fort Douglas Military Reservation, in the State of Utah, and other considerations, for lands adjacent thereto, between Le Grand Young and the Government of the United States, and for other purposes, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4970); which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

Mr. MILLER, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 4197) authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Treasury to enter on the roll of Capt. Orlando Humason's Company B, First Oregon Mounted Volunteers, the name of Hezekiah Davis, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4956); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. PARKER, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 20220) to correct the military record of James Devlin, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4957); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. YOUNG, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 1166) to correct the military record of Peleg T. Griffith, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4969); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. HOPKINS: A bill (H. R. 20287) to authorize George

Hammons, Charles Vaunice, and F. A. Lyons to construct a bridge across Kentucky River at Beattyville, Ky.—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. NEEDHAM: A bill (H. R. 20288) to refund certain duties paid on merchandise brought into the Hawaiian Islands from the United States between August 12, 1898, and April 30, 1900, and also to refund all duties in excess of those provided in the act of July 24, 1897, entitled "An act to provide revenue for the Government, and to encourage the industries of the United States," collected by the United States Government on importations into said Hawaiian Islansd from countries other than the United States between August 12, 198, and April 30, 1900, and for other purposes—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. JENKINS: A bill (H. R. 20289) to amend an act entled "An act conferring jurisdiction upon United States commissioners over offenses committed in a portion of the permanent Hot Springs Mountain Reservation, Ark.," approved April 20, 1904—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. OTJEN: A bill (H. R. 20290) to amend the river and harbor act of March 3, 1905—to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. TOWNE: A resolution (H. Res. 597) requesting the Secretary of State to send to the House of Representatives all correspondence relating to Hon. H. N. Allen, late minister to Korea—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. AIKEN: A bill (H. R. 20291) granting an increase of pension to Emma F. Buchanan—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. ANDRUS: A bill (H. R. 20292) granting a pension to Howard William Archer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BROOKS of Colorado: A bill (H. R. 20293) for the relief of Alonzo H. Adams—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BUTLER of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 20294) granting an increase of pension to Jefferson Wilson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CURTIS: A bill (H. R. 20295) granting an increase of pension to Francis K. Richards—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 20296) for the relief of A. L. Robb—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. DAVIS of West Virginia: A bill (H. R. 20297) granting an increase of pension to Sylvester Lipscomb—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. GILBERT of Indiana: A bill (H. R. 20298) granting an increase of pension to William H. Isbell—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HAY: A bill (H. R. 20299) granting an increase of pension to Lizzie E. Enright—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KLEPPER: A bill (H. R. 20300) granting an increase of pension to B. A. Mills—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KLINE: A bill (H. R. 20301) for the relief of Howard F. Esterline—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. McGAVIN: A bill (H. R. 20302) to grant an extension of certain letters patent to Madison Maginn—to the Committee on Patents.

By Mr. MOUSER: A bill (H. R. 20303) granting an increase of pension to John Crowley—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. NEVIN: A bill (H. R. 20304) granting an increase of pension to Eliza Peterson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 20305) granting an increase of pension to James E. Pangle—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PARSONS: A bill (H. R. 20306) granting an increase of pension to John S. Watson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RHODES: A bill (H. R. 20307) for the relief of Levi W. Revelle—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. RODENBERG: A bill (H. R. 20308) for the relief of H. B. Massey—to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. RYAN: A bill (H. R. 20309) granting an increase of pension to Daniel McGuire—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TYNDALL: A bill (H. R. 20310) granting an increase of pension to John Patton—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 20311) granting an increase of pension to John W. Mooney—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 20312) granting a pension to James Cave—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 20313) granting a pension to Elias G. Friend—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 20314) granting an increase of pension to William R. Gray—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 20315) granting an increase of pension to James H. Rains—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 20316) granting an increase of pension to Herman H. Meyerkoly—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 20317) granting an increase of pension to Phillip Heinrich—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 20318) granting a pension to Sarah F. Fink—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WEEMS: A bill (H. R. 20319) granting an increase of pension to Davis Garvin—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. WILEY of Alabama: A bill (H. R. 20320) granting an increase of pension to Charles Hussey—to the Committee on Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER: Petition of citizens of German descent at Caspers Union, N. Y., for negotiation of arbitration treaties—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of International Missionary Union, against harshness of administration of Chinese-exclusion law—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. ACHESON: Petition of R. W. Mason, Washington, Pa.; Edw. McDonald, McDonald, Pa.; Wiles Boyd & Co., McDonald, Pa., and Crude Oil Company, Oil City, Pa., for amendment to the pipe-line provision of the rate bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. AIKEN: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Emma F. Buchanan—to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BONYNGE: Petition of citizens of Colorado against religious legislation in the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. BROWN: Petition or resolution of residents of Prentice, Wis., against Sunday bill now before Congress—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. BURLEIGH: Petition of Savings Bank Association of Maine, against bill to establish postal savings bank—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. BUTLER of Tennessee: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Jefferson Wilson—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CAMPBELL of Ohio: Petition of United Commercial Travelers of America, Grand Council of Ohio, against bill H. R. 4549, relative to parcels-post law—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. COLE: Petition of Pennock Brothers, for amendment of section 137 of United States Postal Laws—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. DALZELL: Petition of ladies of McKeesport, Pa., relative to abuses in Kongo Free State—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. DUNWELL: Petition of New Immigrants' Protective League, favoring the Bartholdt joint resolution, relative to immigration—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of Wholesale Liquor Dealers' League, relative to certain modifications of the pure-food bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. ESCH: Petition of the New Immigrants' Protective League, for measures to insure a better distribution of immigrants—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. FULLER: Petition of Lyman Hawley, of Gardner, Ill., for pure-food bill and Federal inspection of meat-packing products—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of National German Alliance of America, for furtherance of treaties of arbitration—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. GROSVENOR: Petitions, in form of letters and telegrams, protesting against the passage of the eight-hour bill, from the following cities: Rockford, Ill., Chicago, Ill., Providence,

R. I., Moline, Ill., and Cleveland, Ohio—to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. HOWELL of Utah: Petition of Lake Typographical Union, No. 115, et al., labor associations of Salt Lake City, for passage of the Pearre bill (H. R. 18752)—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. KENNEDY of Nebraska: Petition of Nebraska Stock Growers' Association, for action relative to disposition of such public lands in Nebraska as are unfit for agricultural purposes—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, petition of Nebraska Stock Growers' Association, for speedy Government meat inspection—to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. KENNEDY of Ohio: Petition of citizens of Youngstown, Ohio, urging exemption of aliens who come to the United States by reason of religious or political persecution from considerations of Gardner bill—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. KINKAID: Petition of business firms of Nebraska, for immediate action on Government inspection of meat-packing products—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. KLINE: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Howard F. Esterline—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. LINDSAY: Petition of Robert S. Waddell, against the powder monopoly—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, petition of General Federated Union of New York, against the antipilotage bill being passed as a rider to ship-subsidy bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. LORIMER: Petition of Edwards & Deutch Lithograph Company, against Gardner eight-hour bill—to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. McCARTHY: Petition of Frank Dowd and J. H. Rothnell, for the pure-food bill and Federal inspection of meat-packing products—to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, petition of Nebraska Stock Growers' Association, for such action relative to public lands in Nebraska as shall prevent destruction of the cattle industry—to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, petition of Nebraska Stock Growers' Association, for careful revision of Beveridge bill, relative to meat inspection—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. McNARY: Petition of citizens of Massachusetts, against religious legislation in the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. NORRIS: Petition of citizens of Nebraska, against religious legislation in the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. PADGETT: Paper to accompany bill for relief of John M. Defoe—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. ROBERTS: Petition of citizens of Seventh Massachusetts district, against religious legislation in the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. RYAN: Petition of United German Societies of New York, for the furtherance of arbitration treaties—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of Central Federated Union of New York, against the antipilotage bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Charles W. Airey—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of citizens of United States of German birth, of New York, for furtherance of arbitration treaties—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. THOMAS of Ohio: Petition of the Sentinel, Jefferson, Ohio, and Lawrence Times, Lawrence, Mich.—to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Grand Council of Order of the United Commercial Travelers of America, against parcels-post law—to the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads.

By Mr. WEBBER: Petition of hundreds of influential citizens of Washington, D. C., for bill H. R. 6016, for prohibiting manufacture and sale of liquor in the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. WEEKS: Petition of Boston Christian Endeavor Union, for appropriate action by the Federal Government relative to abuses of power in the Kongo Free State—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of citizens of Boston and West Newton, against religious legislation in the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. WILEY of Alabama: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Charles Hussey—to the Committee on Pensions.

SENATE.

WEDNESDAY, June 20, 1906.

Prayer by Rev. JOHN VAN SCHAICK, of the city of Washington.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when, on request of Mr. KEAN, and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Journal stands approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills:

S. 3263. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a port of delivery at Salt Lake City, Utah;"

S. 3414. An act providing for a public highway on the east side of the Fort Sherman abandoned military reservation, Idaho;

S. 5989. An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River in Broadwater and Gallatin counties, Mont.;

S. 6234. An act to authorize the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company, of Montana, to construct a bridge across the Missouri River in Lewis and Clarke County, Mont.;

S. 6243. An act to amend an act approved March 2, 1903, entitled "An act to establish a standard of value and to provide for a coinage system in the Philippine Islands; and

S. 6451. An act to provide for a commission to examine and report concerning the use by the United States of the waters of the Mississippi River flowing over the dams between St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn.;

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolution with amendments; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

S. 1540. An act to increase the efficiency of the Ordnance Department of the United States Army;

S. 1697. An act confirming to certain claimants thereto portions of lands known as Fort Clinch Reservation, in the State of Florida;

S. 2948. An act to amend section 1 of the act approved March 3, 1905, providing for an additional associate justice of the supreme court of Arizona, and for other purposes;

S. 3044. An act to promote the efficiency of the Revenue-Cutter Service;

S. 4190. An act to repeal an act entitled "An act to amend section 2455 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, approved February 26, 1895;"

S. 5769. An act defining the right of immunity of witnesses under the act entitled "An act in relation to testimony before the Interstate Commerce Commission," and so forth, approved February 11, 1893, and an act entitled "An act to establish the Department of Commerce and Labor," approved February 14, 1903, and an act entitled "An act to further regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the States," approved February 19, 1903, and an act entitled "An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1904, and for other purposes," approved February 25, 1903; and

S. R. 47. Joint resolution granting condemned cannon for a statue to Governor Stevens T. Mason, of Michigan.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the reports of the committees of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the following bills:

H. R. 18536. An act providing for the subdivision of lands entered under the reclamation act, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 16472. An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolutions; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 9343. An act providing for the resurvey of certain townships of land in the county of Baca, Colo.;

H. R. 10858. An act to establish a naval militia and define its relations to the General Government;

H. R. 11040. An act to authorize the receivers of public moneys for land districts to deposit with the Treasurer of the United States certain sums embraced in their accounts of unearned fees and unofficial moneys;

H. R. 13106. An act granting to the Batesville Power Company right to erect and construct canal and power stations at Lock and Dam No. 1, upper White River, Arkansas;

H. R. 14811. An act to authorize George T. Houston and Frank B. Houston to construct and operate an electric railway over the National Cemetery road at Vicksburg, Miss.;

H. R. 15506. An act authorizing the patenting of certain lands to school district No. 57, Nez Perces County, Idaho;

H. R. 16013. An act providing medals for certain persons;

H. R. 17186. An act granting to the Territory of Oklahoma, for the use and benefit of the University Preparatory School of the Territory of Oklahoma, section 33, in township No. 26 north of range No. 1 west of the Indian meridian, in Kay County, Okla.;

H. R. 17600. An act to grant authority to change the names of certain sailing vessels;

H. R. 18596. An act to enable the Secretary of War to permit the erection of a lock and dam in aid of navigation in the White River, Arkansas, and for other purposes;

H. R. 19181. An act to grant a certain parcel of land, part of Fort Robinson Military Reservation, Nebr., to the village of Crawford, Nebr., for park purposes;

H. R. 19312. An act to authorize the Mingo-Martin Coal Land Company to construct a bridge across Tug Fork of Big Sandy River at or near the mouth of Wolf Creek;

H. R. 19566. An act to authorize the Coraopolis Bridge Company and Osborne Bridge Company to construct a bridge over the Ohio River;

H. R. 19756. An act to amend section 2844 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and to provide for an authentication of invoices of merchandise shipped to the United States from the Philippine Islands;

H. R. 19814. An act authorizing the issue of obsolete ordnance and ordnance stores for use of State and Territorial educational institutions and to State soldiers and sailors orphans' homes;

H. R. 19850. An act to authorize the Monongahela Connecting Railroad Company to construct a bridge across the Monongahela River in the State of Pennsylvania;

H. R. 19916. An act withdrawing from entry certain public lands in Chouteau County, Mont., and leasing the same to the board of trustees of the Montana College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts;

H. R. 20097. An act to authorize the board of supervisors of Coahoma County, Miss., to construct a bridge across Coldwater River;

H. R. 20119. An act to authorize the village of Oslo, Marshall County, Minn., to construct a bridge across the Red River of the North;

H. R. 20210. An act to authorize the city of St. Louis, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Missouri, to construct a bridge across the Mississippi River;

H. R. 20266. An act to amend an act entitled "An act authorizing the condemnation of lands or easements needed in connection with works of river and harbor improvement at the expense of persons, companies, or corporations," approved May 16, 1906;

H. J. Res. 31. Joint resolution recognizing the change of name of the Regular Army and Navy Union of the United States to the Army and Navy Union of the United States of America; and

H. J. Res. 160. Joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to furnish a certain gun carriage to the mayor of the city of Ripley, Lauderdale County, Tenn.

The message further announced that the House had passed a concurrent resolution providing for the appointment of a joint special committee consisting of four Senators, to be appointed by the Vice-President, and five Members of the House of Representatives, to be appointed by the Speaker, to examine, consider, and submit to Congress recommendations upon the revision and codification of laws prepared by the statutory revision commission heretofore authorized to revise and codify the laws of the United States; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills, and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

H. R. 10133. An act to provide for the annual pro rata distribution of the annuities of the Sac and Fox Indians of the Mississippi between the two branches of the tribe and to adjust the existing claims between the two branches as to said annuities; and

H. R. 11787. An act ratifying and approving an act to appropriate money for the purpose of building additional buildings for the Northwestern Normal School, at Alva, in Oklahoma Territory, passed by the legislative assembly of Oklahoma Territory, and approved the 15th day of March, 1905.

PETITIONS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT presented a petition of the National German-American Alliance of Philadelphia, Pa., praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the appointment of a commission to formulate a system for carrying the immigration laws into effect; which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

He also presented a petition of the German-American Arbitration Conference, of New York City, N. Y., praying for the ratification of international arbitration treaties; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN MEDALS.

Mr. KEAN. I am directed by the Committee on Foreign Relations, to whom was referred the bill (S. 6488) authorizing the striking of 200 additional medals to commemorate the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of Benjamin Franklin, to report it favorably without amendment. It is a short bill, and I will ask for its present consideration. It will lead to no debate.

The Secretary read the bill; and there being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration. It directs the Secretary of State to have struck 200 additional medals for the use of the American Philosophical Society, Philadelphia, Pa., to commemorate the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of Benjamin Franklin; but the entire cost of striking the medals shall be borne by the American Philosophical Society.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RULES FOR GRADING LUMBER.

Mr. PLATT. I am directed by the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the joint resolution (S. R. 67) limiting the gratuitous distribution of the Rules and Specifications for Grading Lumber Adopted by the Various Lumber Manufacturing Associations of the United States to the Senate, the House of Representatives, and the Department of Agriculture, to report it favorably with an amendment to the title, and I ask for its present consideration.

The Secretary read the joint resolution; and there being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A joint resolution to protect the copyrighted matter appearing in the Rules and Specifications for Grading Lumber Adopted by the Various Lumber Manufacturing Associations of the United States."

The preamble was agreed to.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 9343) providing for the resurvey of certain townships of land in the county of Baca, Colo., was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL—ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HALE. I report back from the Committee on Appropriations, with amendments, the bill (H. R. 19844) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, and for other purposes, and I submit a report thereon.

I wish to state to the Senate that in the course of its business, in order to secure an adjournment late next week, it is essential that this bill should be passed so that it can go to the House and we can get it into conference on Sunday. In that way the bill will be out of the way, and so far as appropriation bills go there will only be the general deficiency bill, which will reach the Senate upon Tuesday of next week, as it is now arranged in the other branch of Congress.

Senators will see the importance not only of getting this bill forward in the way I have indicated, but the moment that the bill passes all of the time between its passage and next Tuesday or Wednesday will be open to the Senate for conference reports and other matters, and the Committee on Appropriations will be out of the way of the Senate.

I can see no better way of marshaling the business to the end which we all desire than what I have indicated, and I should be very glad to-day, as the bill is substantially already in print before the Senate, to take it up now, or a little later, when the amended print of the bill comes in, and go through with the formal part of the bill, so that immediately after the action of the Senate on the canal bill to-morrow, which has been settled by unanimous consent, the appropriation bill can be completed to-morrow afternoon and go at once to the House for conference.

I hope that Senators see the importance of this arrangement in view of final adjournment, and particularly that they will consider that when this bill is out of the way the Senate will have three or four uninterrupted days for the consideration of conference reports, which, of course, are important, but which can be then taken up and will not interfere with the appropriation bills.

Mr. President, I will be very glad, as soon as the new print comes in, which I expect will be very shortly, to take up this bill and run it as long as possible this morning. I do not give any formal notice, for that does not add anything, but I shall seek, as soon as the amended bill is here for Senators to follow, to take it up, and I hope Senators who are interested, as they are, in other matters will see the force of getting this bill out of the way.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I very fully appreciate the suggestion that the Senator from Maine has made as to the necessity for haste in the matter of considering these great appropriation bills, and so far as I am concerned I certainly shall not in any way interfere with the wish of the Senator, except that I trust if the print comes in before 2 o'clock the Senator will not insist upon taking up the bill before that hour as I have had consent, after the routine morning business, to further consider a bill that is of exceeding importance—in a smaller way, of course, than appropriation bills, but of exceeding importance to the traveling public.

Mr. HALE. That will be entirely satisfactory if I do not meet at 2 o'clock with some Senator who desires to speak upon the canal measure, which comes up at that time.

Mr. KITTREDGE rose.

Mr. HALE. Senators know how practically impossible it is with any measure to take a Senator from the floor who desires to speak. The suggestion made by the Senator from New Hampshire would be entirely agreeable and would give the Senate the opportunity of considering the appropriation bill for the rest of the day.

Mr. GALLINGER. Considering the celerity with which the Senator from Maine disposes of appropriation bills, I think he need have no apprehension that there will be great delay in passing the bill he has in charge at the present time.

Mr. HALE. The Senator from Maine is equally confident with the Senator from New Hampshire that when the bill gets up the Senator from Maine will not delay it. That is very certain. Let us see what the Senator from South Dakota has to say about 2 o'clock.

Mr. KITTREDGE. The Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] wishes to address the Senate at 2 o'clock on the unfinished business.

Mr. HALE. Now, the Senate sees exactly the trouble I will be in at 2 o'clock. The Senator from South Dakota announces that the veteran Senator from Alabama desires, I suppose, to occupy the day, and I shall meet there more trouble than I meet now with the District railway bill.

What I am seeking is that every Senator, no matter what he has got, will help to get this bill through. But I can see, Mr. President, if nothing is done before 2 o'clock, and the Senator from Alabama having made his arrangements proposes to deliver what will be a great speech and an extended speech, the day is gone.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Maine yield to the Senator from Wyoming?

Mr. HALE. Yes; I am inviting suggestions, because I know the Senate feels as I do—that it is very important in the marshaling of its business that this great bill shall be gotten out of the way and sent to the House, so that we can get into conference upon it. I invite suggestions. I want to be helped out.

Mr. WARREN. I was going to suggest to the Senator from New Hampshire that possibly he would hardly be able to finish the measure which he has in charge by 2 o'clock, and as he has learned that the floor will be taken at 2, possibly it would suit him just as well to lay the District measure over until we finish the consideration of the sundry civil bill.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will say in reply to the Senator from Wyoming that I trust I shall be able to have the consideration of the bill in which I am interested completed by 2 o'clock. I will say, further, that unless the bill is completed pretty soon I shall not press its consideration at all, because if it amounts to anything it must go to the other House and have the concurrence of that body. As we are nearing the day of adjournment, Senators will understand the necessity for prompt action, if any action be taken.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, I make this suggestion, almost as in extremis: If the Senate will give an evening session for the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill, it can all be finished, except that part of it relating to the Panama Canal, which will be settled by the action of the Senate to-morrow.

Mr. WARREN. I hope the Senator will ask for an evening session.

Mr. HALE. I ask, or I will move, that the Senate shall meet at 8 o'clock this evening. I have no doubt we can finish the bill then, with that exception.

Mr. BERRY. Is it understood that nothing except the appropriation bill will be considered this evening?

Mr. HALE. Nothing except this bill. The evening session is to be devoted to the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. From what hour?

Mr. HALE. My motion is that when the Senate takes a recess, say at 6 o'clock——

Mr. KEAN and others. Not later than 6.

Mr. HALE. I move that the Senate shall take a recess, not later than 6 o'clock, until 8 o'clock, the evening session to be devoted to the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Maine moves that the Senate take a recess, not later than 6 o'clock, until 8 o'clock this evening. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Maine.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. I am very much obliged to the Senate.

EDWARD KING.

Mr. BURROWS. I am directed by the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5221) for the relief of Edward King, of Niagara Falls, in the State of New York, to report it favorably without amendment, and I ask for its present consideration.

The Secretary read the bill; and there being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration. It proposes to pay to Edward King, of Niagara Falls, in the State of New York, $90, said sum being the amount paid to the United States Government for duties on certain horses imported by him at Buffalo, N. Y., and which said horses were afterwards discovered to have been stolen by one William Potts in Canada, and which were, after their importation, returned by Edward King to their rightful owner.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RESURVEY OF LAND IN BACA COUNTY, COLO.

Mr. PATTERSON. I am directed by the Committee on Public Lands, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 9343) providing for the resurvey of certain townships of land in the county of Baca, Colo., to report it favorably without amendment, and I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The Secretary read the bill; and there being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. PROCTOR. I ask that the message of the House on the agricultural appropriation bill, which is on the table, be taken up.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Let us get through with reports of committees.

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. President——

Mr. PROCTOR. I will yield for morning business that takes no time, but it is very important to get the agricultural bill into conference.

Mr. CULBERSON. I have a Senate resolution to offer, which I would be glad to have adopted. I do not think it will create any discussion. I hope it will not.

Mr. PROCTOR. I think the Senator will see the importance of action on the appropriation bill.

Mr. CULBERSON. I do; but we shall be in session for a couple of weeks yet, I think.

Mr. GALLINGER. I suggest that the Senator from Vermont has a right, under the rule, to ask that the matter be laid before the Senate.

Mr. CULBERSON. I am not insisting, but I suggest to the Senator from Vermont to yield to morning business, and let us get through with the morning business before taking up the appropriation bill.

Mr. PROCTOR. I am very good-natured this morning, and I will yield moderately. The junior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BURKETT] was on his feet before I rose. I will yield for a short time for morning business that leads to no discussion.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Reports of committees are in order.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. BURKETT, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom were referred the following bills, submitted adverse reports thereon; which were agreed to, and the bills were postponed indefinitely:

A bill (S. 4670) to provide for the control, administration, and support of the public schools of the District of Columbia;

A bill (S. 4671) to determine and regulate the salaries of officers, teachers, and other employees of the board of education for the public schools of the District of Columbia;

A bill (S. 2069) to fix and regulate the salaries of teachers, school officers, and other employees of the board of education of the District of Columbia;

A bill (S. 2323) to determine and regulate the salaries of officers, teachers, and other employees of the board of education for the public schools of the District of Columbia;

A bill (S. 2322) to provide for the control, administration, and support of the public schools of the District of Columbia;

A bill (S. 2324) to amend the act relating to the organization of the board of education in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; and

A bill (S. 2475) to provide for the control, administration, and support of the public schools of the District of Columbia.

Mr. BURKETT. I wish to state that while these bills have been indefinitely postponed, the same matter practically is covered by the school bill which we passed the other day.

Mr. BLACKBURN, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 13193) to prohibit the killing of wild birds and wild animals in the District of Columbia, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. McCUMBER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 1148) granting an increase of pension to Marion F. Halbert;

A bill (H. R. 19389) granting an increase of pension to Lewis Marquis;

A bill (H. R. 1836) granting an increase of pension to Hiram B. Thomas;

A bill (H. R. 15945) granting a pension to Cynthia A. Compton;

A bill (H. R. 18769) granting an increase of pension to Louisa Story;

A bill (H. R. 19337) granting an increase of pension to Elizabeth C. Kennedy;

A bill (H. R. 19091) granting an increase of pension to Ernest Langeneck;

A bill (H. R. 19538) granting an increase of pension to Sarah Jane Dougherty;

A bill (H. R. 16411) granting an increase of pension to Newton Moore; and

A bill (H. R. 18543) granting an increase of pension to James M. Follin.

Mr. McCUMBER (for Mr. GEARIN), from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2212) granting a pension to John B. Johnson, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. TILLMAN introduced a bill (S. 6491) granting an increase of pension to Joseph H. Abbey; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. PLATT introduced a bill (S. 6492) to correct the military record of James Devlin; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. PLATT (for Mr. DEPEW) introduced a bill (S. 6493) to authorize the city of Buffalo, N. Y., to construct a tunnel under Lake Erie and Niagara River, to erect and maintain an inlet pier therefrom, and to construct and maintain filter beds for the purpose of supplying the city of Buffalo with pure water; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. WARREN introduced a bill (S. 6494) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Lander, in the State of Wyoming; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. ALLEE introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 6495) granting an increase of pension to Joseph B. Lyons; and

A bill (S. 6496) granting an increase of pension to Thomas D. G. Smith.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming introduced a bill (S. 6497) to authorize officers and employees of Executive Departments to administer oaths when specifically designated for that purpose by the head of the Department with which they are connected; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also introduced a bill (S. 6498) to amend an act entitled "An act conferring jurisdiction upon United States commissioners over offenses committed in a portion of the permanent Hot Springs Mountain Reservation, Ark.," approved April 20, 1904; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. LONG introduced a bill (S. 6499) for the relief of Lurana Harpole; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. MARTIN introduced a bill (S. 6500) granting a pension to William S. Sykes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

He also introduced a bill (S. 6501) for the relief of William F. McKimmy, administrator of John McKimmy, deceased; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

He also introduced a bill (S. 6502) for the relief of George K. Hathaway, administrator of John R. Hathaway, deceased; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. WETMORE introduced a bill (S. 6503) granting an increase of pension to Fannie A. Moore; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. SIMMONS introduced a bill (S. 6504) for the relief of the estate of Levi T. Oglesby; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT BUTTE, MONT.

Mr. CLARK of Montana submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $15,000 for acquiring additional grounds and necessary improvements for the same for the Federal building at Butte, Mont., intended to be proposed by him to the public-buildings bill; which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

COL. FRANCIS A. MACON.

Mr. SIMMONS submitted an amendment authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to credit in the account of Col. Francis A. Macon, disbursing officer North Carolina Organized Militia, the sum of $1,194.19, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

INTERSTATE LIVE-STOCK INSURANCE COMPANY.

Mr. CULBERSON submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

Resolved, That the Attorney-General of the United States be, and he is hereby, directed:

1. To send to the Senate full copies of all correspondence between the Department of Justice and the United States attorney for the District of Columbia relating to the Interstate Live-Stock Insurance Company, of the District of Columbia.

2. State what action, if any, was taken by the United States attorney for the District of Columbia in reference to the operation of said Interstate Live-Stock Insurance Company, and if any action was taken by him, state the result thereof. If any legal proceedings were taken against said company by the United States attorney for the District of Columbia, state what they were; and if such proceedings have been discontinued, state the reason for such discontinuance.

CLAIMS OF POSTMASTERS IN TENNESSEE.

Mr. FRAZIER submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, directed to have stated in the Sixth Auditor's Office the salary accounts of former postmasters, named on annexed memorandum schedule, who served at post-offices in Tennessee in terms between July 1, 1864, and July 1, 1874, and who applied to the Postmaster-General prior to January 1, 1887, for payment of increased salary under the act of March 3, 1883, such salary accounts to be stated upon the registered returns of each postmaster for each term of service specified on memorandum schedule hereto attached, and by the method and rule laid down by the Postmaster-General for the statement and payment of salary accounts of former postmasters under the act of March 3, 1883, in his public order of February 16, 1884, directing payment of salaries by commissions and box rents, less the salary paid at time of service; and to enable the Secretary of the Treasury the better to comply with this resolution the Postmaster-General is hereby directed to turn over to the Sixth Auditor all the data now in his hands pertaining to each and every such claim specified on the memorandum schedule hereto attached;* and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to report to the Senate such stated salary accounts of former postmasters as soon as they can be made ready.

* For memorandum see Senate resolution No. 154.

COAL, LIGNITE, AND OIL DEPOSITS.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I offer the concurrent resolution which I send to the desk.

The concurrent resolution was read, as follows:

Whereas the Government of the United States owns more than 40,000,000 acres of public land underlaid with coal and lignite deposits and large areas of public land containing oil deposits; and

Whereas the future industrial development of the country, its heat and power and light, are largely dependent upon this supply of coal, lignite, and oil; and

Whereas these public lands are subject to entry and sale and are entered and sold to individuals and are rapidly passing under the control of corporations that are thus acquiring a monopoly of the coal and oil supply; and

Whereas it is in the interest of the coal and oil consumers of the country that the extent and character of these deposits be accurately determined so that the country may know the amount of its fuel supply and may adopt such measures as will conserve it for the benefit of the whole people: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Secretary of the Interior cause to be made a thorough investigation of the coal, lignite, and oil deposits of the United States and report to Congress the nature, extent, and best methods of mining the same so as to operate them with the least amount of waste.

Resolved, That the President be authorized to withdraw from entry and sale all public lands known to be underlaid with coal, lignite, or oil and all such lands which, in the judgment of the Director of the Geological Survey, contain deposits of coal, lignite, or oil, and that all such lands be withheld from entry or sale until such time as Congress shall determine otherwise.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Mr. President——

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I simply wish to ask that the resolution may lie upon the table.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The resolution will be printed and lie on the table.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I give notice that I shall call it up as early as possible for action, at which time I will submit some remarks.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I will ask the Senator from Wisconsin when it is his intention to call up the resolution. Does the Senator intend to call it up to-morrow?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I did not hear the Senator.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from North Dakota asks when it is the purpose of the Senator from Wisconsin to call up the resolution just submitted.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. As early as possible.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. No definite date is stated.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. In the next few days, if I can get the attention of the Senate.

Mr. WARREN. I should like to make a suggestion to the Senator from Wisconsin. As this is a very important matter, I hope before he calls it up and addresses the Senate he will give at least a day's notice.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I will do so.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. PROCTOR. I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the message from the House of Representatives relative to the agricultural appropriation bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 18537) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, agreeing to amendment No. 29 with an amendment, and requesting a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

Mr. PROCTOR. Mr. President, I make the ordinary motion that the Senate insist upon its amendments and agree to the conference asked by the House, the conferees to be appointed by the Chair.

Before the motion is put I think I ought to say a word about the principal points of difference upon Senate amendment 29, that the differences may be fully understood by the Senate.

There are two points which seem of most importance. One is that the House in its amendment has stricken out the provision of the Senate amendment that the date should be placed upon the cans. I believe that is a proper provision, but I do not propose to discuss it, as I presume there are other Senators who have given it more attention who will speak upon it. I make this brief preliminary statement because I would like to hear from other Senators upon these matters. I know it will be urged in favor of the House provision striking out the date that it is not of great practical importance; that dealers will hardly stock up a year's supply or more, and that they will in the interest of business sell the oldest first. But I think it is a proper and a wise provision to put the date on the label.

In regard to the other provision, the cost of inspection, it seems to be a radical departure and a very unwise one for the Government to defray this expense. I do not look upon it as a tax that can be put on the cattle grower or upon the consumer. It is a very small one at the most. I look upon it as a proper expense of advertising that should be charged to that account. These packers do a large amount of advertising, and certainly they do none that will yield such a tremendous return as this one of having the Government stamp on their products.

I might cite the oleomargarine law as an illustration. There is a tax of one-quarter of a cent upon renovated butter. The result of that very small tax has been that the production of that article has increased largely—I think nearly double—and that it has yielded an income to the Government of about double the expense of administering it.

There has been a good deal of pressure brought to bear regarding this expense, and multitudes of telegrams have been received. It is plain, in looking them over, to see that they emanate from Chicago, and they are sent to different sections of the country to be forwarded to Congress. Many of them are in almost identical language. Several of them have a mistake in grammar, which is repeated identically in different telegrams. Here is a package of them, in which the sender asks "prompt action in passing meat-inspection bill providing for rigid inspection at Government expense." That identical expression occurs in a large number of the telegrams, and, in fact, in nearly all of them that have been received. Here is another with the same expression, "rigid inspection at Government expense." The same language occurs in this entire package, "rigid inspection at Government expense." Here is another form, perhaps gotten out by one of the other packers. They seem to be adroit packers, not only of meat products, but of men as well. They know how to bring their constituencies into line to have their views represented. This one is probably from another house: "Please urge Secretary of Agriculture and Bureau Animal Industry that Government inspection is thorough." Some words are omitted there. Several others "urge announcement that the Government inspection is thorough and covers domestic and foreign meats." There are still other forms. Here is one that "inspection should be on practical and reasonable lines." This form of expression occurs several times, repeated in the same language, "practical and reasonable lines."

The cost is so inconsiderable that it seems to me entirely impossible that the packers, if they wish, could make any excuse for charging this upon the cattle grower or upon the consumer. I am confident that a charge of 6 cents for cattle and 3 cents for sheep, swine, goats, and calves would cover all the expense. I do not believe in the principle of collecting fees or a tax to be deposited in the Treasury and to be drawn upon to defray the expense, but it seems to me perfectly proper, as in the case of oleomargarine and renovated butter, that the tax or fee should be collected and deposited in the Treasury as other moneys are and that we should appropriate for this inspection entirely independent of whatever proceeds of such tax or fee may be in the Treasury. That is the way it is in the oleomargarine law to which I have referred.

If the Senators will turn to the reprint of the Senate amendment and of the House substitute, which are on their desks, on page 8 of our amendment No. 29, at the fifteenth line, the provision in regard to fees begins:

That the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized and directed to prescribe and fix reasonable fees, etc.

I would suggest that this provision should read:

That the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized and directed to prescribe and fix reasonable fees for the inspection and examination of all cattle, sheep, swine, and goats, not to exceed 10 cents for cattle and 5 cents for calves, sheep, swine, and goats, maintained in accordance with the provisions of this act, and the said fees shall be uniform throughout the United States and shall be collected by the Secretary of the Treasury and shall be deposited in the Treasury; and a schedule of such fees, together with the rules and requirements relating to the collection thereof, shall be set forth in regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury.

These fees probably might safely be reduced to 5 cents for cattle and 3 cents for smaller animals, but of this the Secretary of Agriculture would be the judge.

This, as I have said, seems to me the greatest piece of advertising that any industry could possibly have. There are other lines of business in this country which will be sure to ask for the same provision, and with just claim. The butter and cheese producers, the maple-sugar manufacturers will want it, and many others. As we have already adopted in other measures the principle of a small tax or fee, it seems to me wise to follow in that line. I look upon the House proposition as a very dangerous precedent.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President, in common with other Senators, I have read the House amendment to the Senate amendment No. 29 to the agricultural appropriation bill, and I think, speaking by and large, we may congratulate ourselves on getting a very much better bill than any informed man had a right under the circumstances to expect at this session.

TEETH OF BILL REINSERTED.

The amendment, as the House has returned it to the Senate, puts back nearly all the teeth which the House committee at first took out of the Senate amendment; all, indeed, except two, and even one of those two teeth is put back with a gold filling, as it were. I refer to the $3,000,000 appropriation. Perhaps this for the present year will serve its purpose; it will bite; but it is wrong in principle.

GOOD BILL FOR A BEGINNING.

While in no great reform measure can all that one asks for be expected to be achieved at the first, nevertheless a fairly good bill has been secured with those two exceptions.

Before the conferees are appointed, however, and at the request of the Senator who will be chairman of the conferees on the part of the Senate, I desire to express myself upon those two omissions. Indeed, I desire to do so anyway, because I wish again to be on record upon both of those questions, since they arise almost to the dignity of principles; indeed, I will withdraw the limitation, and say they do rise to the dignity of principles.

LABELS AND COST OF INSPECTION.

The first one is the House amendment to that provision in the Senate amendment which omits the requirement that the date of the inspection be put upon the can or other receptacle in which a food product is sealed up; and the other one is the point to which the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR] just now felicitously called attention, the House provision which puts the cost of inspection on the people instead of on the packers.

Before I take those two up—and I shall do so with very great brevity, Mr. President, because I am quite as anxious as anyone that this business shall be concluded—I want to say that one may be permitted to take some pleasure out of the little comedies of legislation; and this House amendment and its history presents one such amusing incident.

I observed the other day that it was asserted with some vehemence by my friend the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture in the other House that the provision for the surveillance of packing houses when closed was in the first House substitute; and yet when the bill comes back to us I find, to my intense gratification, that in the broadest possible terms an additional provision for that very night surveillance is found—that the surveillance of the plant for any and every purpose whatever is put back in the law. So that if it was true that it was in the House substitute before, it is now 100 per cent better in being in there again, and in terms that are quite as broad as in the original Senate amendment. Notwithstanding the assertion that this highly important provision had not been taken out by the House, it is, nevertheless, put back in strong and sweeping language. But if it was not taken out, why has it been put back? But no matter, it is back, and we may rejoice.

Mr. President, with reference to the two omissions which still remain, the two things which the House have not restored, which they took out of the Senate amendment, I desire to express myself briefly. I said a moment ago that each of them rises to the dignity of a principle. The first one was provided in the Senate amendment concerning the dating of the cans or casks or any receptacles in which the packer packs food products. I should like to hear any Senator give a reason why we should not enforce the principle involved, which is that the people have a right to know what they purchase.

PURCHASER SHOULD KNOW THE AGE OF PRODUCT.

It was stated before the House committee that the contents of cans that were five years old were just as healthful and just as good as meat that was but five days old. Possibly that is true, Mr. President; but will any Senator contend that the consumer, that the purchaser of that can, has not the right to know whether it is five years old or five days old?

It was stated before the House committee by Mr. Wilson, representing the packers, in explanation of the circumstance of a large amount of cans that looked very old, scratched up, and otherwise defaced being there, that they were brought in that the labels might be melted off, or taken off by hot water, and new labels put on, thus making the cans look as though their contents had been put in yesterday, when, as a matter of fact, the only thing that was done yesterday was to put on the label.

PEOPLE SHOULD KNOW WHAT THEY PURCHASE.

So that it is possible, under the amendment as it comes to us from the House with this provision, for a can of meat whose contents are five years old to have on it a label which would make the purchaser believe that it was only one day old. That is a fraud upon the purchaser, and I have not yet heard one valid reason—and I have conversed with many men who are interested in this matter—why the date should not be put on. Have not the people the right to know what they purchase?

GREAT BRITAIN'S RULE.

Two or three days ago we all read about the debate in the British House of Commons, in which one of the members of the House put to the Secretary of War the question whether or not it was possible that the British soldiers were being fed meat the date of inspecting which was not on the tin, and he replied certainly not; that it was a rule of the war office of Great Britain to provide in the contract for food for the soldiers that the date should be put on the can.

Mr. President, if the British soldier is protected by a contract for the stamping of the date on the can so as to know the age of the food he consumes, why should not the American citizen, who is purchasing at home, be protected by a law providing for stamping the date on the can? Is it because the packer knows better what the people ought to eat than the people themselves? Do you say to the people who consume this product, "Here, buy this can of meat; it is none of your business whether it is five days, five months, or five years old; pay your money and eat it and ask no questions. We, the packers, know what is best for you?" Is that position defensible in logic or morals? No; the people have the right to know what they buy.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Yes.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I desire to ask the Senator from Indiana whether he has any doubt that hereafter, in the case of American meat being sold to any foreign government, that the government purchasing such meat will require that the date shall be stamped on the can—not only the Government of Great Britain, but any other foreign government?

IF STAMPED ABROAD SHOULD BE STAMPED AT HOME.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I am glad the Senator asked me that question. In reply I would say, certainly; there is no doubt of it. Everybody knows that from this moment on the precaution which the British Government has taken with reference to this entire matter will be taken by every other government with reference to this matter. The inference necessarily follows that if our meats are to be sent abroad, stamped with the date of their inspection, the stamp should be put on with reference to meats sold at home as to the date of their inspection.

Mr. President, I had thought that this particular phase of the controversy was settled. Some amendments were submitted to me at the end of last week, among which was this, that the provision for stamping the date should be restored as it was in the Senate bill. Later on I was informed that there was an objection to stamping the precise date on the can, but that a compromise had been reached by stamping on the can the year in which the inspection had occurred. But even that has been omitted at the last moment from this bill as it comes to us.

So it occurs to me, Mr. President, that the Senate conferees should insist upon the date going upon the can or the package which contains any meat food products. At least, so far as I am concerned, I desire to go on record with reference to that particular thing. We must all face this question before the people: Shall the people have a right to know what they buy when they place their money upon the counter and purchase a can of food products? Have they not the right to know what it is their money pays for? I wish to be on record that the people have the right to know what they buy.

IS HIDING THE TRUTH ENCOURAGING BUSINESS?

This reason has been suggested to me—and I believe the Senator from Vermont referred to it—that it would be a hardship upon the grocer that when he had stocked up, and the date appears upon the label upon his goods, after they are a few months old the consumer would refuse to purchase them. But, Mr. President, the converse of that proposition means that they are to be sold to the purchaser only by concealing the date of their inspection. Does the Senate, does any Senator, does any Member of the House of Representatives, want to go before the American people supporting such a proposition as that? Shall business be encouraged by concealing the truth, by deceiving the consumer?

But, Mr. President, would the grocery man's business be hurt? Certainly not. The packer would make an arrangement with the grocer, and would only be too glad to do so, that after a certain time, if any of the old goods remained, they might be returned to the packing house and new goods supplied in their place. To any person who has studied this question it appears that these old goods so returned can then be healthfully treated, reinspected, recanned, and resold under a truthful representation of the facts—marked "reinspected," and with the date thereof. The clothing dealer must abide the change of styles; kodak films are dated—but, according to the House, the packer alone must not abide the consequences of age upon his product. There is no defense for such a position, Mr. President.

CONCEALMENT IS A FRAUD.

The proposition that we are going to hurt the grocery man, which has no foundation in fact, is the only argument that has been urged in support of the House omission of this provision of the Senate. It is not true, of course, but even if it were, no man has the right to foster trade by fraud, and concealing the date of inspection—concealing the age of the meat—is a fraud on the consumer.

WHY SHOULD THE PEOPLE PAY?

Mr. President, the other provision is equally important and equally sound in principle. It may be stated in this question: Why should the people pay for the packers' inspection, instead of the packers paying for their own inspection?

I have been impressed by the convincing argument advanced by the senior Senator from Vermont, who said that the packing establishments might well pay for this inspection and charge it to advertising account. Why, Mr. President, it would be worth to the packers not $3,000,000, not $4,000,000, not $5,000,000, but, considering the extent of their business, eight or ten million dollars as a mere advertising proposition, to be able to put upon all of their food products the stamp of the Government's approval. So the argument advanced by the Senator from Vermont, it strikes me, original and novel, is also conclusive.

Does any Senator believe that the packers under present circumstances would not be willing to pay not only the cost of the inspection, but 100 per cent more than the cost of inspection, rather than have the stamp of the Government approval taken away from their goods? So, Mr. President, we are not putting upon the packers any burden, but we are granting to the packers a favor when we require them to pay the expense of inspection. Shall we do more and give them $3,000,000 of the people's money every year in addition to the boon we are granting them in the inspection itself? Why should the people pay for an inspection for which the packers ought to pay?

It has been suggested that if the packers pay this cost of inspection by a system of fees, they will put it upon the producers—the cattle raisers; but, after a moment's examination of the facts, that supposed argument, like all the other arguments that have been advanced against the provision of the Senate bill, disappears. The highest price that any person has suggested as being adequate to the inspection of one head of cattle is 8 cents; the highest price that anyone has suggested as to hogs is 5 cents. The accepted price is 3 cents for hogs, sheep, and goats, and 5 cents to 8 cents for cattle.

ARGUMENT AN AFFRONT TO INTELLIGENCE.

Now, Mr. President, in the case of a steer weighing 1,400 pounds, could any person distribute the 8 cents, which it would cost to inspect that steer, over those 1,400 pounds so as to enable the packer to say to the cattle raiser: "I have got to pay 8 cents for inspecting this steer; therefore I will reduce the price I pay you one-fourth or one-sixteenth or any other fraction of a cent a pound?" It is an affront to the intelligence of thoughtful men to make such a suggestion as that. The farmers who raise cattle are not fools.

On the other hand, the cost can not be put upon the consumer, for the same reason. Take the 8 cents which the packers pay under the fee system for the inspection of a steer weighing 1,400 or 1,600 pounds. That 8 cents can not be distributed over the hundreds of pounds of the product that comes out of that steer so as to justify the packers before the public opinion of the country, which hereafter they must take into account, in raising the price of a steak a quarter of a cent, or a sixteenth of a cent, or any other fraction of a cent a pound. If they did it, it would be a ruthless exercise of power which would arouse an indignation against them, which at the present time, I think, they are not courting.

THE PACKERS WOULD HAVE TO PAY.

So, Mr. President, the reports that were sent broadcast by the packers in trying to arouse the fears of the cattle raisers on the one hand and the fears of the meat consumers upon the other hand, that the packers would pass the price of inspection on to the producers and the consumers, evaporate when we examine the facts. Mr. Wilson, representing the packers before this House committee, frankly stated that not the producers and not the consumers, but the packers themselves must pay the charge of inspection if it were put upon them by the fee system. It is one of those charges, Mr. President, that comes out of the packers' profits, and that is one of the reasons why they object to paying it.

DIFFICULTY OF A SUFFICIENT APPROPRIATION.

The other reason is perhaps the most critical reason why the appropriation system should not be followed and why the fee system should be followed, and that is the very great difficulty in getting sufficient appropriation to furnish an adequate inspection. The fact that we have made an increase of the present appropriation of 400 per cent merely proves that proposition. At the present time, Mr. President, the appropriation for this purpose is about $750,000. We are partially inspecting perhaps 150 plants. In those 150 plants we are inspecting the carcasses, but not the meat food products. Under this amendment not only must the inspection that at present occurs continue, but an immensely increased inspection of all the plants where inspections occur at all must also be added. So that if we do not add a single one to the present plants that are now being inspected, the plants now being furnished inspection would consume all of your $3,000,000 the first year of inspection under this act.

NO FAVORITISM TO PACKING HOUSES.

Very well. But there are already, according to the Secretary of Agriculture, in addition to the 150 establishments now inspected, as many as 100 more establishments that need inspection. These are all that he has thus far heard from; but every day the Secretary of Agriculture is receiving news of other establishments that not only need inspection, but that are asking for inspection.

So that, Mr. President, large as the present appropriation is, generous as it is in comparison with the appropriations that we have had in the past, it will be inadequate in a single year if the Government gives to all the packing establishments already actively engaged in interstate commerce the inspection which they ask and which they deserve to have under the law. All packing establishments ought to be treated upon an equality. The great packing houses of Chicago ought to have no better inspection than the smaller and independent packing houses located in some other section of the country.

WHAT A FEE SYSTEM WOULD DO.

The fee system, Mr. President, which was proposed by the Senate amendment, would always raise enough money to give the amount of inspection which the packing houses ought to have instead of the amount of inspection which the packing houses want. The fee system will put into the Treasury enough money to give all establishments, little and big, independent and trust, equally good inspection, and that is something an appropriation does not do and can not do.

Under the fee system, if there is a large business, there will be a large fund in the Treasury derived from the fees, and there will be a large number of inspectors to be paid from that fund. If the business sinks, the fund sinks, and the number of inspectors will be decreased. But according to the appropriation system you will have, after this year, precisely the difficulty that you have had in the past years, and that is the impossibility of getting an increased appropriation, no matter how much the business grows.

DIFFICULT TO INCREASE APPROPRIATION.

I know that this appropriation is made a permanent appropriation, but everybody who is familiar with practical legislation knows that when the Secretary of Agriculture, or the Administration, or any Senator, or any man in public life comes to Congress and asks for an increased appropriation, they will say, "It was good enough for last year, and we think it is probably good enough for this year."

Well, Mr. President, the meat industry of this country has not reached its climax. This country has not reached the crest of its prosperity. If $3,000,000 were adequate to-day, which I doubt, it will not be adequate to-morrow. There will be an enormous increase in the consumption of meat and meat food products, and yet every one of us knows, as a practical proposition of legislation, that probably the most difficult thing to do is to get an increase of appropriation, and that probably the easiest thing to do is to get a decrease of appropriation.

Do gentlemen think, do Senators imagine, that the beef business of this country is going to pause just where it now is? Mr. President, it will be as much greater to-morrow than it is to-day as it is greater to-day than it was yesterday. Therefore the appropriation system is entirely inadequate.

HOUSE AMENDMENT MAKES THE PEOPLE PAY.

In the amendments submitted to me last Friday there was a provision for an appropriation of two or three million dollars, and then a provision (which was the better provision for the whole measure) that if that proved insufficient, that thereafter the fee system might be employed. That, Mr. President, would not be as good as adopting the fee system for the whole thing and making the packers pay entirely for their inspection; but it would be much better than the present provision of the House amendment, which makes the people pay entirely for the packers' inspection.

FEES IN OTHER CASES.

There is nothing novel in this proposition. National banks pay for their inspection; the immigrant who comes to these shores pays for his inspection; and, as the Senator from Vermont pointed out, the producer of oleomargarine pays for his inspection.

I want to return just a moment and ask Senators to consider this: If it is conceded that the meat industry will grow, as it must be conceded; if it is conceded that where we have now 100 packing establishments we will have in a few years hundreds more, as it must be conceded; if it is conceded, as it must be, that the number of packers will multiply as the years pass; and if it is conceded, as it logically must be, that Congress proposes to keep pace with that business in the increase of its appropriation for inspecting that growing business, will Senators tell me where such appropriations are going to end?

If $3,000,000 a year is necessary now, as is conceded by the House provision, will it not require $5,000,000 in coming years and millions more as the time passes and business grows? Are we to apply that principle to every inspection that is necessary under our Government? If we are, Mr. President, I ask Senators and every man who is responsible to the people to tell me where that drain upon the Treasury will stop.

THE INDUSTRY, NOT THE PEOPLE, SHOULD PAY THE FEES.

The truth about it is, Mr. President, that the scientific way to raise the money to pay the cost of inspection of any industry that ought to have inspection is to make the industry itself pay for that inspection. I see about me members of the Appropriations Committee and other Senators who will be members of the Appropriations Committee because of their special aptitude in those lines—men who are familiar with this question of the drain upon the people's money—and before I close this part of the argument I call their attention to this serious fact: If it is now necessary to take $3,000,000 of the people's money out of the Treasury of the United States to pay the cost of inspection, which the packers themselves ought to pay, will not $5,000,000 and then $10,000,000 and then other and increased millions be required in the future? And if you apply that principle to everything that has inspection in the United States, how much will you be annually appropriating out of the money of the people to pay for inspections that ought to be paid for by the business itself?

Yesterday I was talking to my friend the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. MCCUMBER]. He said, giving an admirable illustration, that in Dakota the man who took a load of wheat to market had to pay the cost of inspecting that wheat, and not the Government. Then why, Mr. President, make an exception of the packer? I have nothing against the packing industry—the packers must stop their evil practices—but I have nothing against the industry. I have nothing against any legitimate industry of this country; but I see no reason why packers should be singled out and made the recipients of the bounty of the Government. I see no reason why, to use the language of the Senator from Vermont, they should not only not have to pay for their own inspection, but, in addition to that, should be given an advertisement worth 100 per cent more than the $3,000,000 which the inspection will cost.

GOVERNMENT INSPECTION A GOOD ADVERTISEMENT.

Does any Senator imagine that they would not rather give $6,000,000, under present circumstances, than to have the privilege of stamping the Government's approval upon their goods taken away from them? They want inspection enough to get the Government's indorsement; and they do not want any more inspection than that. They want inspection enough to enable them to use the Government's approval in selling their goods. They care about no more. They have been resisting any larger inspection than that. That much inspection is "good for business;" more than that is "bad for business."

Now, Mr. President, I shall not detain the Senate any longer. I am anxious to conclude; I am anxious that this bill shall get into conference, and I am anxious that the entire matter shall speedily be wound up. It would not have taken very long to have wound it up if there had been no resistance to the essential provisions of the Senate bill.

Much has been said about the agitation that has occurred. If any agitation has been caused, the packers themselves and they alone and no person else is to blame for it. Had there been a disposition to have accepted practically what has now been accepted, I imagine there would have been no such agitation.

AGITATION HAS NOT HURT BUSINESS.

It has been said, Mr. President, that agitation hurts business; but this agitation, it will be found when the clouds clear away, has not injured business. It will be found that this agitation has put the prosperity of the packing business of this country upon a sound, because upon an honest, basis. It will be found that it has made wrong methods correct and improper practices straight; and in the end it will be found that more than anything that could possibly have occurred it will have restored the confidence of the American people and of all the nations of the world in the products of the American packing house. For, after President Roosevelt signs the bill which this Congress shall send to him upon that subject, every man all over the world will know, having the guaranty of the American Congress therefor, that he can buy with impunity and consume without fear any product which the American packing house places upon the market.

HONEST METHODS MAKE PUBLIC CONFIDENCE.

Mr. President, gentlemen need not be afraid of business being injured. I predict that within a month from the time this bill becomes a law the meat and cattle business of this country will experience a boom beyond the wildest imagination of the most covetous; and that within a year the trade, foreign and domestic, in American meat and American food products will have reached a point higher than ever before in our history. And the best thing about it all will be that that commerce, both foreign and domestic, will continue steadily to mount on the unfailing wings of honest methods and public confidence.

TRUTH DOESN'T HURT BUSINESS.

Mr. President, it does not hurt any business to tell the truth about it and to correct the evils which that truth reveals. Any business which can be permanently hurt by telling the truth about it ought not only to be hurt, but it ought to be destroyed. All sound business will thrive upon the facts. It is a mistaken wisdom which makes men think that they can successfully prosper by concealing the truth. The American people are the greatest business people in the world, but it must not be forgotten that they intend to insist that their business shall be conducted by conscience as well as by intelligence and by the rules of right and wrong as well as by the rules of profit and loss.

We want now to make money as much as we ever did, and it is one of our best ambitions; but we intend to insist that every dollar of money we make shall be clean. The American people want no business prosperity that flows from wrong methods and improper practices; the American people will tolerate no prosperity which is poisoned with fraud.

A MORAL REGENERATION OF BUSINESS.

We are in a period of moral regeneration of American business. That regeneration will not injure American business; it will strengthen and increase it. It will expand as well as purify our prosperity; it will make the people richer, and it will make the people happier, because it will give them satisfaction with the money they make. And not every man to-day experiences that pleasure—the pleasure of being satisfied with the money he makes.

We have heard much about the restoration of markets. We have not heard too much on that subject. Markets are a method of civilization. Markets for American products should be the first consideration of American statesmen. But the way to restore markets for our meat and meat food products is to restore confidence in our meat and meat food products.

HOW TO RESTORE CONFIDENCE.

And the way to restore confidence is to enact as nearly as possible, without modification, the amendment upon the subject of meat inspection which passed the Senate.

We have this nearly—not quite, but nearly—in the bill which the House sends to us, as I said in the beginning, a much better bill than any person familiar with the facts under all the circumstances had the right to expect. But, with the two exceptions I have pointed out, it restores the vital features of the Senate measure.

CREDIT DUE TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

And such improvements over the first House proposition as we now have, such restoration of the Senate provisions as we now have, we owe to the courage, determination, and the absolutely unselfish devotion to the interest of the people of President Roosevelt. From the beginning of the opposition to the Senate bill he has advocated the most rigid and scientific inspection, and it is chiefly to him that we owe the fact that we will get as excellent a bill as we will have.

If the Senate conferees, as pointed out by two of them—the Senator from Vermont, the chairman, and the Senator from North Dakota, another member of the committee—will insist, and if the House conferees will, as I have no doubt they will, agree to put back into the bill the remaining two features which the House has taken out, we shall have accomplished three things in addition to what we have already accomplished: First, the people will know what they are buying when they pay their money for a can of food product; second, the people will be relieved of the cost of the payment of inspection, which the packers ought to pay, for whose benefit it is; and, thirdly, we will have secured for the American people as complete a meat-inspection bill as is now on the statute books of any nation in the world.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, this is a very great and very useful measure, one of such importance that I think no apology is required from any Senator for desiring to say a few words in regard to it. Yet I confess it is with some trepidation that I venture to suggest that we can say anything about it here in the Senate, because we are credibly informed that the amendment has been perfected in the House and accepted by the President, so that it may seem audacious even to suggest that this body has still to pass upon it. Nevertheless such is the provision of that much-discussed instrument—the Constitution—and I will take advantage of it to say a few words, because I regard this amendment as of the utmost importance.

Mr. President, I am glad to hear from such good authority as the Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR] and the Senator from Indiana [Mr. BEVERIDGE] that the amendment as we now receive it from the House is valuable and effective, because there seems to have been a good deal of doubt cast upon its true nature. We were told first that the original substitute proposed by the House Committee on Agriculture was perfectly worthless; that it amounted to nothing as legislation and would have no effect in curing the evils of the packing houses. Then, we were informed that amendments to the substitute had been agreed upon which made it a thoroughly effective and efficient measure. Finally, yesterday, reading what occurred elsewhere I gathered on high authority that these new amendments, so satisfactory to the President and to those who desire effective meat inspection, had simply been put in to sweeten the substitute, that they had no real meaning, and that the measure as offered to the House really did not amount to anything at all.

I hope therefore that we are not being deceived as to the merits of the amendment in its present form; I trust that the opinions expressed by the Senator from Indiana and the Senator from Vermont are correct, and that it is in fact an effective measure to cure what I regard as one of the greatest of existing evils in the daily life of the United States to-day. I should have no doubts of its merits, so far as it goes, were it not for the approval which it seems to receive from its enemies.

Two points, however, have been made by the Senator from Vermont and the Senator from Indiana as to certain serious changes in the Senate amendment. Those two points refer to the labels and as to who shall pay for the inspection. I do not care to discuss them at any length, even if time served; but I desire to say a few words in regard to the matter of dating the labels. It is not the date on the label that we want. It is the date which shows when the Government inspection occurred. When the Government puts its stamp upon an article which is to go out into the whole world, carrying with it the official approval of the United States, the world ought to know just when the United States put that word of approval on it.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. LODGE. Certainly.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I interrupt the Senator only to say that if I did not state precisely that as being the original provision in the Senate amendment I was in error, because that is precisely what the Senate amendment did provide for and what I referred to—the date of inspection.

Mr. LODGE. Exactly. What we want is the date of inspection.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. That is right.

Mr. LODGE. The packers say that canned articles of food are just as good five years after they are canned as at the moment of canning. If they like them that way, let them eat them that way. Nobody objects. But I contend, and this is the spirit of all our pure-food legislation, that the public has a right to know exactly what it is buying. If canned meat 5 years old is just as good as meat which has been canned five months, it can not hurt the business of these tender creatures who are doing this packing for us to have the fact known. People will be just as ready to buy their excellent 5-year-old cans as they will be to buy those that are 5 months old.

When we passed the oleomargarine bill it was argued that oleomargarine was, as a rule, better than most of the butter sold in the market. I am inclined to think it was, but that did not affect the argument one particle. The buyer is entitled to know what he is buying, especially when the article bears the Government stamp, for the Government must never be made party to a fraud. If a man is buying canned food that is five years old, he is entitled to know it. If it is just as good as the freshly canned food and he wants it, that is all right. But when the Government puts its stamp upon an article, the date ought to go with it. Why do they want to keep it off if the old canned meat is just as good as the new? Because I suppose they would say there is a prejudice against age in meat. I suppose there is. I suppose people prefer to eat something that was canned a few weeks since to something that was canned five years ago.

There is an impression—a mistaken impression, the good and disinterested packers say—that five-year-old cans are not as good as those which have been canned within the year. I suppose it is a prejudice. But that is no reason why people should be sold canned articles on the pretense that they were canned this year, when they were, as a matter of fact, canned five years before. It seems to me the proposition is as simple and as unanswerable as possible, and it does not seem to me that the refusal to allow the date of the Government inspection to go on indicates any overwhelming honesty of purpose on the part of the packers and their friends.

Now, as to the payment of the tax. We make the maker of oleomargine pay the tax for the inspection of his product. We collect from the steamship companies, nominally from the immigrants, a head tax to pay for that inspection service. When we put the Government label on these goods going out from the packing houses, we give them a value which they could obtain in no other way, especially after all that has occurred, and they ought to pay this expense. The inspection tax is a trifle, and it ought to be borne by those who are pecuniarily benefited by it.

I do not, however, agree with the cheerful deduction made by the Senator from Indiana that the tax is so trifling that the cattle raiser and the consumer will not be touched by it. We have seen a trifling advance, caused by some accidental occurrence, which would amount to a fraction of a cent a pound on meat, develop, in the hands of the Chicago packers, into a reduction on a steer of several dollars and an increase in price on the meat of this steer which, by the time it reached the consumer in the hotel or the restaurant, amounted to perhaps 20 or 25 cents on only enough meat to make an ordinary meal. A very slight excuse in the past has enabled those amiable gentlemen to cut the cattle raiser on the one hand and to increase the price to the consumer on the other, and they would find in a mill a pound on the steer a reason to advance meat to the people of the United States 5 or 6 cents a pound and to cut down the price to the cattle raiser a good many dollars per head. I apprehend there is a very real danger there, and yet I do not think that that fact affects the principle. It is right and proper that this tax should be paid by those who direcly benefit by it, and whose business methods have made severe inspection absolutely necessary.

Moreover, Mr. President, there is another very serious danger in the opposite direction, and that is if we leave the inspection service to an annual appropriation, we shall find very soon that it is a convenient place for economy, and that we are going to cut down inspectors and cut off the expense of inspection until it is impossible to make it effective or efficient.

I for one hope, Mr. President—and it is for that purpose I rose—that our conferees will stand with the utmost strength for the views expressed by the Senate on those two points when they embodied this amendment in the bill. That amendment went through the Senate without debate. If it had been accepted in the same spirit by the House, taken into conference by the House, and then and there settled and put into proper shape and form, with such improvements and modifications as it needed, for undoubtedly all legislation can be improved by consultation, this agitation and this debate would never have arisen. The report would never have gone in. There would, no doubt, have been rumors that such a report existed, but the debate, the agitation, and all that was in the report would not have been spread before the public. But the Chicago packers believed that they could defeat this legislation. They saw fit to make an open contest about it. They have got the report published. They have had their debate. They have had it all pulled over in the newspapers, and I wonder now whether they think it has profited them much in the end.

If I may digress for one moment, let me say that I care very little for the attacks which have come from across the water on this subject. Our neighbors and our rivals in trade are not slow to take advantage of anything of this sort, and the British brother particularly, when anything of this sort happens, rolls up his eyes and holds up his hands and says how wicked we are and by inference how good he is. These evils are not confined to the United States. I read in dispatches which I have clipped from newspapers such statements as these:

BAD MEAT IN OTHER LANDS—BRITISH HORROR OVER CHICAGO AND SOME FACTS ABOUT ENGLISH METHODS—DENMARK AND RUSSIA SEND BAD MEAT TO GERMANY.

NEW YORK, June 15, 1906.

A London cable to the Times says that in spite of the horror affected by the British public over the Chicago packing-house exposures, the English purveyors of food are quite as much addicted to foul practices as those in America. The dispatch quotes the report of a sanitary inspector in the employ of the borough of Camberwell, the revelations of which, the newspaper publishing them says, shows that the indignation poured out on Chicago might as well be turned to give an impetus to the movement for the removal of horrible abuses at home.

For example, the inspector says it was shown recently that a firm engaged in manufacturing tinned "delicacies," such as potted chicken and tongue, had acquired a large quantity of old tinned meat and had worked it over with other materials in circumstances too loathsome to detail. Thousands of tins of putrefying and poisonous meat were seized from this firm.

The inspector alleges that large quantities of diseased meat are brought from the country and sold in London constantly, and instances a number of cases of meat from cows which had died from fever finding its way to London butchers' shops. The inspector says that even the London slaughterhouse butchers, in spite of the inspectors, manage to slaughter and put on the market the carcasses of tuberculous and other diseased animals, and that all sorts of refuse and dirty scraps are put into London-made sausages.

"Recently," says the inspector, "I found in a jam factory a collection of dried raisins filled with ants and other insects, rotten-apple pulp, orange peel, some filthy macaroni, a lot of blown tins of apricots, and other refuse bought from grocers' shops as unfit for food. It amounted to 9 hundredweight in all, and was being treated and made into jam."

In a confectioner's the inspector found a case of 500 absolutely rotten eggs designed for use in pastry and creams. There was not a good egg in the place. The inspector says a good many London confectioners invariably use rotten eggs in the preparation of their delicacies.

At a time when the whole world is holding America in contempt, it seems worth while to point out that all the conscienceless food purveyors do not live in the United States.

Again, on June 18:

BAD MEAT FROM BRITISH COLONIES—MORE THAN A TON OF TINNED FOODS DESTROYED DAILY FOR FIVE YEARS.

LONDON, June 18, 1906.

The report of Doctor Thomas, the medical officer of the borough of Stepney, to the local government board shows that his department during the past five years has destroyed over a ton of rotten tinned foods daily at the Stepney wharves. These, he adds, were not American goods, as practically no canned goods from American concerns are imported through the Stepney wharves, but were colonial meat, fish, and fruit. The medical officer says he found New Zealand raspberries treated with sulphur to preserve them. On their arrival in England, the raspberries were soaked in an aniline bath to restore their color. He considers that diseased meat once canned will easily defy detection and that a strict examination of the carcasses at the time of slaughtering is the only means of protection. Doctor Thomas incidentally asks what becomes of the tongues of the great number of horses slaughtered yearly in London. He says he has never seen a horse's tongue exposed for sale and labeled as horse's tongue. He urges that increased powers be given to the public health departments.

Last night, by mere accident, I read a reprint of an article which originally appeared in the Contemporary Review. I want to read a single paragraph from it. It is called "The parson and his flock."

To judge by what the bishops and the press have been saying lately, commerce is homogeneous. It is rotten all through. House dealing, horse dealing, picture dealing—ask anyone who has had an outsider's experience of these walks of life whether they do not reek of fraud. Adulteration is all but universal. Respectability in the shop-keeping class is a white sheet thrown over practices which infect the air employees have to breathe. Shopmen must lie to live. Shopgirls who answer honestly questions put to them by Government inspectors are turned into the street. How capital treats labor let the London poor declare. Morality, even in the country, is a veneer. Intemperance hardly takes the trouble to walk straight at noonday. The rights of the poor are annexed by the rich with the effrontery of impudence that almost staggers belief. The bishop of Salisbury has just called his laity to account in a letter which reads like a confession of failure. Debt, drink, impurity, gambling, extravagance; shifty, lying customs of trade or business, reciprocal failure of duty of servants and masters—on all these points the bishop feels apparently that the ordinary machinery of the church is powerless to control the conduct of her lay members.

Mr. President, there is a description of English business in an important English review by a serious writer, and I call attention to these things not for the sake of palliating or excusing what has happened here, but because I am a little weary of this continuous talk which I see in virtuous foreign newspapers of how bad we are. When the insurance frauds appeared—and bad enough they were, Heaven knows—you would have supposed that England had never heard of Hooley, had never heard of the noble guinea pigs on the boards of directors, had never heard of the Whittaker Wright case, had never heard of the horse-buying scandals which occurred in this country under our eyes during the South African war. I do not bring up those things here to say to another country, "You are another," or to point out how bad some one else is and how good we are. I bring them up here to show that conditions are bad in other countries, and that what concerns us is not to use this as an excuse, but to make ourselves better and above reproach.

The methods of the people over in England are different from ours. If anything disagreeable occurs there, they smother it up. They set to work to cure it, but they say as little about it as possible. They try to forget it, and they say, "All is right, and see how bad the French and the Germans and the Americans are." Our way is different. We pull everything out into the open. We make it appear not only as bad as it is, but we make it appear usually ten times worse than it is. We drag all the dirty linen out and shout and shout for fear people will not pay attention to it. On the whole, I think ours, unjust as it often is, is the better way, for I think it shows that there still remains among us a capacity for honest public indignation with wrong. I believe that the American people are an honest people, and that the mass of the American business men are honest men; and that is the reason why I feel as strongly as I do about this group of packers in Chicago, who discredit us all and injure our good name everywhere. They are exceptional. We have not heard from the other packers in other parts of the country. We have not heard any protests from the cattle raisers. It has all come from that one group of men.

They began by saying that everything was all right. What did Mr. Neill and Mr. Reynolds know, forsooth? You wanted experts to see that a room was dark. You wanted experts to tell you whether the air was bad. You wanted an expert to tell you whether the floor was dirty. They made light of it and belittled it.

Mr. President, on the 7th of June, when this thing began, I read this dispatch from Chicago:

PACKERS WILL CLEAN UP—CHICAGO BUILDING AND SANITARY INSPECTORS ORDER CHANGES TO COST $1,000,000.

CHICAGO, June 7, 1906.

That improvements costing nearly $1,000,000 would be ordered in the stock yards was the statement of Building Inspector Bartzen and Sanitary Inspector Perry L. Hedrick to-day.

State or municipal inspectors in Illinois.

Bartzen said the changes required in the buildings to conform with the city ordinances and correct the violations found by the inspector would cost more than $300,000 and may reach $700,000. Mr. Hedrick said the sanitary improvements, as far as he could estimate at present, would cost at least $300,000.

Mr. Bartzen said further that if any of the buildings at the stock yards were found in a dangerous condition he would close them, but the packers have assured him that they would make all the changes ordered. Superintendent Young, of Swift & Co., is quoted as saying that the packers would go to any expense to make their plants safe for employees and to conform with the building laws.

"All the packers want are suggestions to clean up, and they show a willingness to follow them out," Mr. Hedrick said.

Plumbers are expensive, but $300,000 will go a good way, even in plumbing. Yet that was a place where, according to the packers and their friends, nothing needed to be done. These poor theorists from Washington had gone out there and misrepresented things, for when experts of the packers looked everything was all right, and yet after this agitation began two native experts went there and looked, and behold they said that a million dollars must be spent in the most necessary improvements. On June 16 I find this from Chicago:

PACKERS MUST CLEAN HOUSE—OFFICIAL NOTICE ISSUED BY THE CHICAGO HEALTH DEPARTMENT TO NELSON MORRIS & CO.—DEFINITE STATEMENT OF IMPROVEMENTS REQUIRED.

[Special to the Transcript.]

CHICAGO, June 16, 1906.

The city health department has sent its first official written notice to the packing companies at the Union Stock Yards to improve the sanitary conditions of their plants. It was sent to Nelson Morris & Co. by Chief Sanitary Inspector Perry L. Hedrick. The packers were instructed—

To do what?—

that they must within three days discard the filthy tables and benches—

Those were the things that Mr. Neill and Mr. Reynolds imagined, which had no real existence—provide cleaner rooms and tools, and correct some of the present insanitary conditions. Structural changes in the buildings, including new toilet rooms and more ventilation and light must be made within thirty days. These conditions must be changed at once. The improvements ordered in the various departments are: Rats and vermin must be excluded from the meats by floors and walls of concrete construction, special receptacles must be maintained to receive all the meat which falls upon the floor, all pieces of meat which fall upon the floor must be discarded and must not be used for any food product, leaf lard must not be laid upon the floor, cuspidors containing a disinfectant solution must be placed upon all floors, and no employees must be permitted to spit on the floor. The cuspidors must be regularly and effectively cleaned.

All employees who handle food products must be clean in their personal habits and attire, and must wash their hands before beginning work throughout the day. All unsanitary toilet rooms must be removed and approved toilet rooms and washing facilities for all employees must be provided with clean towels and plenty of soap. Employees must not be permitted to sit on the tables or workbenches, and seats must be provided for women employees. This notice will be followed with similar notices to other packers whose plants have been inspected and who have been found wanting.

John Brisben Walker, en route to Denver yesterday, was invited by Swift & Co. to inspect their packing plant, Mr. Walker being deemed a radical of fair mind who would put matters exactly as he saw them. Mr. Walker expects to see and hear labor leaders and workingmen, and go to the bottom of the stock-yards business. When this report has been completed Mr. Walker will address it to President Roosevelt.

Those changes were ordered by the local building inspectors on the spot, and they have been made since this agitation began.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. LODGE. I yield to the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. In connection with what the Senator from Massachusetts has said in respect to the investigation made by Building Commissioner Bartsen, I call attention to the following telegram:

CHICAGO, June 6, 1906.

Building Commissioner Bartsen personally went to the hog-killing department of one of the large packing houses to-day, and described the conditions he found there as "filthy and dirty." He characterized the room as a "dirty hole, unfit for the use to which it is put."

In the portion of the plant where cattle are killed and dressed the walls were covered with calcimine scarcely dry—

Showing that after this agitation commenced they began to clean up—

He said there is not a modern building in the entire district devoted to the packing industry. The majority of them, he declared, "are dilapidated, filthy, and unfit for such use as is made of them."

Mr. LODGE. I am obliged to the Senator. That confirms precisely the point I was making. These foul conditions were there. They were there in defiance of decency and law—of local laws—building laws of Chicago and of Illinois, which, I have no doubt, are excellent.

What has been the history of that group of men who run those packing establishments? It has been a history of utter defiance of law and of public opinion. It is only the other day that they were convicted of violating the Elkins law in connection with the Burlington and Quincy road. They barely escaped another charge under the immunity decision. It is less than a year since Sulzberger—if that is the name—was fined $25,000 for a violation of the law. They have been going on for years in that way, with a coarse defiance of public opinion and of the law.

A few years ago I saw in the Evening Star an interview with Mr. Nelson Morris. It is admitting myself to be deplorably ignorant, but at that time I had not the faintest idea who Mr. Nelson Morris was, and I ought, of course, to have known our greatest men. It appeared by this interview that Mr. Morris had a son who had gone to some university and developed a fondness for books, and his father had allowed him to go abroad to study at some foreign university in continuation of the courses which he had been pursuing here. He had now summoned him home, and the newspaper reporter inquired of him why the young man had been called back. "Why," he said, "I let him go abroad for a little while. He had a fancy for books." The tone was exactly as if he had said "I thought he had better go abroad and sow his wild oats." "I allowed him to go abroad. He had a fancy for books, and I let him study a little while, and he wanted to write a book; but he has got something better to do than that. I can hire men to write books, but he has got a big packing business, the like of which is not in the world. He can not waste time in studying and writing books."

It has occurred to me once or twice, Mr. President, that this agitation, which I think even those packers probably regret, was brought on by a man who wrote a book, and it may occur to some of them out there that literature is not so contemptible a thing after all.

Mr. President, what struck me about that interview was not the sordid vulgarity of it. That is common enough perhaps among men of that type. What struck me about it was the contempt which was displayed for everything that we in America have held to be our ideals. Despite the eager race for wealth and money that we have had and that has been natural enough in a new country like ours, despite our devotion to material success, Americans have always held and now hold education in profound respect. They have always, I believe, in all parts of the country without exception held in respect the man who without regard to the heaping up of money has devoted his life to learning or to teaching, to being a clergyman or a physician. They have admired and revered the men who have given themselves to those things which we are fain to believe are of more importance than mere material success, than mere money.

When I read that interview which spoke with a sneer of everything that I had been brought up to believe was honorable and of good repute, and what I believe all other Americans look up to and respect, it revealed to me a condition of mind which I think may be characterized as eminently dangerous to the Republic. Heaping up money in this way, regardless of law, regardless of the employees, regardless of the public health; openly defying public opinion; so far as I know, never doing one thing to make one corner of the earth a little better or a little happier for their presence in it—it is a sorry picture.

Mr. President, it seems to me that men of that sort, who cherish such beliefs, at least, should be made by Congress and by State legislatures to live within the law. Why should they alone be excepted? Why should we leave them out when we tax other men for the purposes of inspection? Why should we leave them out any more than we should leave the Standard Oil out of the rate bill? Why should we except the greatest and most obnoxious combinations now extant in the country from the operation of laws which we propose shall fall upon all alike?

Mr. President, I have no sympathy whatever with the socialistic movements that are going on to take possession of all sorts of business and all so-called "public utilities," whether municipal, State, or national. I believe the movement, if successful, means the destruction of the Government, which we reverence and love and which it has taken us a hundred years to build up.

But I say, Mr. President, and I say it in all seriousness, that those packers in Chicago and those owners of the Standard Oil have done more to advance socialism and anarchism and unrest and agitation than all the socialistic agitators who stand to-day between the oceans.

People do not like to see their food tampered with in order to increase profits already huge, and made the sport of mere insensate greed for money. The people also believe, and believe rightly, that those men should be made to obey the law. I declare now that the one thing more important than who pays the tax is that those men should be put on the same basis as other American citizens who have their goods inspected and sent out to the whole world with the Government stamp upon them. I am not asking that they be persecuted or hunted down. I am asking that they have the justice which they would deny to others, but which we in Congress are bound to give to all Americans alike.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I had been led to believe, through conversation with Members of the other House, Members of this body, and with the Executive, that we had arrived at a reasonable degree of unity as to the meat-inspection amendment to the agricultural appropriation bill finally decided upon in the House. I had supposed that when it came up in the Senate from the conferees the Senate would act as promptly and as unanimously as they did when the matter was first presented here and introduced into the agricultural appropriation bill. And I venture to express the hope that our conferees will agree without delay.

Of course its presentation here at that time without, as I understand, the recommendation of any committee, without many Senators having seen it at all, either in the shape of bill or amendment, was somewhat unusual. I was not here at the time, and I had never seen the bill. I assume that had I been here I should have done as every other Senator did, perhaps, feel that the subject was so important that, although I might not agree with the bill as a whole, rather than take any chances upon defeating the subject-matter, I would let it go to the House, expecting, of course, that there might be some further and more deliberate consideration.

It seems, however, that there are still differences, real or imaginary, and there are suggestions from Senators that the conferees ought to have the sense of the Senate. I do not know whether the chairman proposes to now bring it to a vote or not. But I want to say that I agree with all of my fellow-Senators that the legislation, having been included in the agricultural appropriation bill, should now be completed in some form. I do not care how much the packers are lambasted. I have nothing whatever to say or propose in their interest, and I would not care what fees you collected from them if you collected them and they did not recoup themselves upon the stock grower, as well as perhaps the consumer.

Now, the novel proposition made here, that this inspection is an advertising scheme for the benefit of the live-stock growers, is not only novel, but it is monstrous. It means that you can take some private business enterprise or industry and say that notwithstanding not one soul engaged in that industry has asked you to do it, you will provide here by Congress that he shall advertise whether he likes or not, and not only that he shall advertise, but you will put in his mouth the words and print the kind of advertisement that you demand and have it promulgated to the world, all at his expense and against his protest.

Senators talk about paternalism and socialism. I do not think I have ever heard a proposition inside of the walls of this Capitol that was, to my mind, so monstrous as this, that you shall invade a private business and provide, first, that a private citizen must advertise; second, what and how he shall advertise, and third, charge him what you please, notwithstanding his protests against that kind of advertising.

Now, suppose to every man engaged in farming or in stock raising we should say, "We want you to advertise, and the way you shall advertise is thus-and-so, and we shall charge you so much for it." He would at once ask: "Is that the freedom of American institutions? Is that the liberty American citizens are supposed to enjoy?"

It is very peculiar in my mind; it seems to me to be strikingly so, that if, as the Senator from Indiana [Mr. BEVERIDGE] says, it will make millions of dollars for the packers and millions of dollars for the stock grower, that in all the years in which those packers have been in business and grown wealthy from poor men, as all of them have, that no one of them should have discovered the secret and availed himself of its benefit. It is passing strange that not a single farmer or stock grower has ever discovered this kind of advertising scheme which leads to the Utopian condition which is marked out by the Senator from Indiana, that he will make all the stock growers rich despite their wishes by his mode of advertising.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I did not hear the Senator. The Senator referred to me.

Mr. WARREN. I simply alluded to the proposition made by the Senator from Vermont and you that you propose to advertise for the live-stock men and the packers against their will, at their expense, and then you suggest how and in what language they shall advertise.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. No, Mr. President, it is the converse. I do not propose to inspect and advertise for the packers at the people's expense.

Mr. WARREN. Well, Mr. President, we have an agricultural appropriation bill here to which this is attached. You provide there for various inspections all through the United States and through all the different industries, and this is the only one in which you ask that the men engaged in the business shall pay the tax.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. What about national banks?

Mr. WARREN. National banks are not yet connected with the agricultural appropriation bill.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Oh, that is the Senator's explanation?

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, we have a right surely, when we assume to legislate for the farmers and the stock growers, to take advice from them as far as we can.

Now, we have this condition, that every live-stock man and every farmer, so far as I know, indorses the proposition made here—that there shall be a rigid inspection in Chicago and elsewhere of meats and meat products. In that he is perfectly with you. He has no interest with the packers, but he asks and they ask unanimously, not sporadically, one here and one there—I have yet to hear from a single stockowner or a single farmer in the United States who is practically interested in the business, and who disposes of his products through the packing houses, and who has been acquainted with this system and business as conducted there—that this inspection expense shall be paid by the Government to the end that the people at large and all the people shall pay for this inspection rather than have the man who is raising the live stock pay for it alone.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which the Secretary will state.

The SECRETARY. A bill (S. 6191) to provide for the construction of a sea-level canal connecting the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, and the method of construction.

Mr. MORGAN rose.

Mr. PROCTOR. Mr. President, this matter, I suppose, being privileged business it can be taken up after the Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] has spoken. I would ask, therefore, that it be temporarily laid aside to give him an opportunity to make his remarks.

Mr. MORGAN. The Senator from California [Mr. PERKINS] desires to speak to this question to-day.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the conference report will be laid aside. The Chair will ask the Senator from Alabama to suspend for a few moments.

Mr. MORGAN. Certainly.

ADDITIONAL ASSOCIATE JUSTICE OF ARIZONA.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2948) to amend section 1 of the act approved March 3, 1905, providing for an additional associate justice of the supreme court of Arizona, and for other purposes, which was, on page 1, line 11, to strike out all after the word "court," down to and including line 2, page 2, and insert:

Except that in any case where two or more of the five justices shall be disqualified from sitting, the justices qualified shall constitute a quorum, and a majority thereof may affirm or reverse such case, but should a case be tried before only two justices their disagreement would be an affirmance of the case.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I move that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

EFFICIENCY OF THE REVENUE-CUTTER SERVICE.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 3044) to promote the efficiency of the Revenue-Cutter Service, which was, to strike out all of section 4 and insert:

SEC. 4. The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to employ two civilian instructors in the Revenue-Cutter Service, one at a salary of $2,000 per annum and one at a salary of $1,800 per annum.

Mr. NELSON. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House of Representatives.

The motion was agreed to.

DISPOSAL OF ISOLATED TRACTS OF PUBLIC LAND.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 4190) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend section 2455 of the Revised Statutes of the United States," approved February 26, 1895, which were as follows:

Page 1, line 9, after "sell," insert "at public auction at the land office of the district in which the land is situated."

Page 1, line 11, after "domain," strike out "less than" and insert "not exceeding."

Page 2, line 2, strike out all after "That" down to and including "notice," line 4, and insert "this act shall not defeat any vested right which has already attached under any pending entry or location."

Mr. NELSON. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House of Representatives.

The motion was agreed to.

EFFICIENCY OF THE ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1540) to increase the efficiency of the Ordnance Department of the United States Army, which was, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Ordnance Department shall consist of one chief of ordnance with the rank of brigadier-general; six colonels, nine lieutenant-colonels, nineteen majors, twenty-five captains, twenty-five first lieutenants, and the enlisted men, including ordnance-sergeants, as now authorized by law.

SEC. 2. That details to the Ordnance Department under the provisions of the act of February 2, 1901, may be made from the Army at large from the grade in which the vacancy exists, or from the grade below: Provided, That no officer shall be so detailed except upon the recommendation of a board of ordnance officers, and after at least one examination, which shall be open to competition: And provided further, That officers so detailed in grades below that of major shall not be again eligible for such detail until after they shall have served for at least one year out of that department.

Mr. WARREN. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House of Representatives.

The motion was agreed to.

IMMUNITY OF WITNESSES.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 5769) defining the right of immunity of witnesses under the act entitled "An act in relation to testimony before the Interstate Commerce Commission," and so forth, approved February 11, 1893, and an act entitled "An act to establish the Department of Commerce and Labor," approved February 14, 1903, and an act entitled "An act to further regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the States," approved February 19, 1903, and an act entitled "An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1904, and for other purposes," approved February 25, 1903.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I move that the Senate disagree to the amendment proposed by the House, that the Senate ask a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, and that the conferees be appointed by the Chair.

The motion was agreed to; and the Vice-President appointed Mr. CLARK of Wyoming, Mr. NELSON, and Mr. CULBERSON as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

CODE PREPARED BY THE STATUTORY REVISION COMMISSION.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives; which, on motion of Mr. FULTON, was referred to the Committee on the Revision of the Laws of the United States:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That a joint special committee be appointed, consisting of four Senators to be appointed by the Vice-President and five Members of the House of Representatives to be appointed by the Speaker, to examine, consider, and submit to Congress recommendations upon the revision and codification of laws prepared by the Statutory Revision Commission heretofore authorized to revise and codify the laws of the United States; and that the said joint committee be authorized to sit during the recess of Congress and to employ necessary clerical and other assistance; to order such printing and binding done as may be required in the transaction of its business, and to incur such expense as may be deemed necessary, all such expense to be paid in equal proportions from the contingent funds of the Senate and House of Representatives.

STATUE OF GOVERNOR STEVENS T. MASON.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the joint resolution (S. R. 47) granting condemned cannon for a statue of Governor Stevens T. Mason, of Michigan, which was, after line 6, to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That the Government shall be at no expense in connection with this gift.

Mr. BURROWS. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House of Representatives.

The motion was agreed to.

FORT CLINCH RESERVATION, FLA.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1697) confirming to certain claimants thereto certain portions of lands known as Fort Clinch Reservation, in the State of Florida, which were, on page 2, line 4, after "United States," to insert "at the date of the patent to Yulee and of the swamp-land selection by Florida hereinafter referred to;" on page 2, line 9, after "Plaza," to insert "bounded by Estrada, White, Marine, and Somuerelos streets;" on page 2, line 9, after "and," to insert "except also;" on page 2, lines 10 and 11, to strike out "confirmed, granted;" on page 3 to strike out lines 2, 3, and 4 and insert "town of Fernandina shall hold the lands hereby confirmed and relinquished to it only on condition that the said town shall keep open and maintain the said military road from said town to Fort Clinch without expense to the United States."

Mr. TALIAFERRO. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House of Representatives.

The motion was agreed to.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

H. R. 10858. An act to establish a Naval Militia and define its relations to the General Government; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands:

H. R. 11040. An act to authorize the receivers of public moneys for land districts to deposit with the Treasurer of the United States certain sums embraced in their accounts of unearned fees and unofficial moneys;

H. R. 15506. An act authorizing the patenting of certain lands to School No. 57, Nez Perces County, Idaho; and

H. R. 19916. An act withdrawing from entry certain public lands in Chouteau County, Mont., and leasing the same to the board of trustees of the Montana College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs:

H. R. 14811. An act to authorize George T. Houston and Frank B. Houston to construct and operate an electric railway over the national cemetery road at Vicksburg, Miss.;

H. R. 16013. An act providing medals for certain persons;

H. R. 19181. An act to grant a certain parcel of land, part of Fort Robinson Military Reservation, Nebr., to the village of Crawford, Nebr., for park purposes;

H. R. 19814. An act authorizing the issue of obsolete ordnance and ordnance stores for use of State and Territorial educational institutions and to State Soldiers and Sailors' Orphans' homes;

H. J. Res. 31. Joint resolution recognizing the change of name of the Regular Army and Navy Union of the United States to the Army and Navy Union of the United States of America; and

H. J. Res. 160. Joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to furnish a certain gun carriage to the mayor of the city of Ripley, Lauderdale County, Tenn.

H. R. 17186. An act granting to the Territory of Oklahoma, for the use and benefit of the University Preparatory School of the Territory of Oklahoma, section 33, in township No. 26 north, of range No. 1 west, of the Indian meridian, in Kay County, Okla., was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands;

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Commerce:

H. R. 13106. An act granting to the Batesville Power Company the right to erect and construct canal and power stations at Lock and Dam No. 1, upper White River, Arkansas;

H. R. 17600. An act granting authority to change the names of certain sailing vessels;

H. R. 18596. An act to enable the Secretary of War to permit the erection of a lock and dam in aid of navigation in the White River, Arkansas, and for other purposes;

H. R. 19312. An act to authorize the Mingo-Martin Coal Land Company to construct a bridge across Tug Fork of Big Sandy River at or near the mouth of Wolf Creek;

H. R. 19566. An act to authorize the Coraopolis Bridge Company and Osborne Bridge Company to construct a bridge over the Ohio River;

H. R. 19850. An act to authorize the Monongahela Connecting Railroad Company to construct a bridge across the Monongahela River, in the State of Pennsylvania;

H. R. 20097. An act to authorize the board of supervisors of Coahoma County, Miss., to construct a bridge across Coldwater River;

H. R. 20119. An act to authorize the village of Oslo, Marshall County, Minn., to construct a bridge across the Red River of the North;

H. R. 20210. An act to authorize the city of St. Louis, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Missouri, to construct a bridge across the Mississippi River; and

H. R. 20266. An act to amend an act entitled "An act authorizing the condemnation of lands or easements needed in connection with works of river and harbor improvement at the expense of persons, companies, or corporations," approved May 16, 1906.

H. R. 19756. An act to amend section 2844 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, and to provide for an authentication of invoices of merchandise shipped to the United States from the Philippine Islands, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Philippines.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. B. F. BARNES, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had approved and signed the following acts:

On June 18:

S. 3649. An act granting a pension to Sarah Agnes Sullivan;

S. 4811. An act granting a pension to Mae Spaulding;

S. 5056. An act granting a pension to Alexander Plotts;

S. 5442. An act granting a pension to Frances E. Taylor;

S. 5783. An act granting a pension to Florence H. Godfrey;

S. 3261. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles B. Town;

S. 3270. An act granting an increase of pension to William H. Richardson;

S. 3486. An act granting an increase of pension to Edwin D. Wescott;

S. 3487. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph Fuller;

S. 3553. An act granting an increase of pension to William Oliver;

S. 3629. An act granting an increase of pension to William Hibbs;

S. 3684. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. Hyde;

S. 3697. An act granting an increase of pension to Sarah A. Petherbridge;

S. 3728. An act granting an increase of pension to William H. Winans;

S. 3750. An act granting an increase of pension to Wilbur F. Flint;

S. 3814. An act granting an increase of pension to John Giffen;

S. 3818. An act granting an increase of pension to David B. Johnson;

S. 3904. An act granting an increase of pension to George J. Thomas;

S. 4092. An act granting an increase of pension to John Smith;

S. 4133. An act granting an increase of pension to George Brewster;

S. 4171. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph Bovee;
S. 4173. An act granting an increase of pension to Catharine E. Smith;
S. 4205. An act granting an increase of pension to George Warner;
S. 4346. An act granting an increase of pension to William E. Holloway;
S. 4372. An act granting an increase of pension to Emily P. Hubbard;
S. 4379. An act granting an increase of pension to Roy E. Knight;
S. 4458. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew P. Quist;
S. 4492. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. Fletcher;
S. 4497. An act granting an increase of pension to Augustus McDowell;
S. 4585. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary A. Counts;
S. 4719. An act granting an increase of pension to John Joines;
S. 4770. An act granting an increase of pension to Edward Hart;
S. 4784. An act granting an increase of pension to Lemuel Cross;
S. 4790. An act granting an increase of pension to Edward W. Smith;
S. 4879. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary E. Baker;
S. 4887. An act granting an increase of pension to Calvin C. Hussey;
S. 4910. An act granting an increase of pension to William Wright;
S. 4937. An act granting an increase of pension to John Reece;
S. 5022. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry S. Olney;
S. 5032. An act granting an increase of pension to Daisy C. Stuyvesant;
S. 5065. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles Jackson;
S. 5085. An act granting an increase of pension to Ellen Donovan;
S. 5143. An act granting an increase of pension to Eugene V. McKnight;
S. 5152. An act granting an increase of pension to Holaway W. Kinney;
S. 5158. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Fosdick;
S. 5169. An act granting an increase of pension to James A. Price;
S. 5256. An act granting an increase of pension to John Johnson;
S. 5290. An act granting an increase of pension to James Ramsey;
S. 5326. An act granting an increase of pension to Annie A. West;
S. 5340. An act granting an increase of pension to Laura Hentig;
S. 5501. An act granting an increase of pension to Jacob L. Kline;
S. 5557. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry Clay Sloan;
S. 5559. An act granting an increase of pension to Ann H. Crofton;
S. 5583. An act granting an increase of pension to Foster L. Banister;
S. 5700. An act granting an increase of pension to Stacy B. Warford;
S. 5708. An act granting an increase of pension to Nathalia Boepple;
S. 5728. An act granting an increase of pension to Emery Wyman;
S. 5731. An act granting an increase of pension to James McTwiggan;
S. 5742. An act granting an increase of pension to James A. Bryant;
S. 5758. An act granting an increase of pension to Joshua J. Clark;
S. 5765. An act granting an increase of pension to Theodore F. Montgomery;
S. 5767. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas D. Welch;
S. 5772. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas M. Harris;
S. 5775. An act granting an increase of pension to Harvey M. Traver;
S. 5784. An act granting an increase of pension to Mahala F. Campbell;
S. 5785. An act granting an increase of pension to Joseph W. Doughty;
S. 5786. An act granting an increase of pension to Mary J. Ivey;
S. 5790. An act granting an increase of pension to Jehial P. Hammond;
S. 5791. An act granting an increase of pension to Margaret Simpson;
S. 5801. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew Jackson Paris;
S. 5803. An act granting an increase of pension to William H. Meadows;
S. 5808. An act granting an increase of pension to Washington Brockman;
S. 5809. An act granting an increase of pension to Hannah C. Church;
S. 5834. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles F. Sheldon;
S. 5844. An act granting an increase of pension to John Keys;
S. 5855. An act granting an increase of pension to Blanch Badger;
S. 5902. An act granting an increase of pension to George W. Webster;
S. 5928. An act granting an increase of pension to Patrick Gaffney;
S. 5932. An act granting an increase of pension to Elijah R. Merriman;
S. 5948. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel B. Rice;
S. 5949. An act granting an increase of pension to George F. White;
S. 5966. An act granting an increase of pension to Christopher C. Davis;
S. 5969. An act granting an increase of pension to Franklin Burdick;
S. 6024. An act granting an increase of pension to Franklin B. Beach;
S. 6034. An act granting an increase of pension to William A. Hopper, alias Cuff Watson;
S. 6039. An act granting an increase of pension to George Gardener;
S. 6063. An act granting an increase of pension to Frances A. Sullivan; and
S. 6240. An act granting an increase of pension to John G. Fonda.

PANAMA CANAL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 6191) to provide for the construction of a sea-level canal connecting the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, and the method of construction.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President, I take the floor this morning with great reluctance for the discussion of this question. The bill before the Senate confines the inquiry that we are now engaged in trying to determine to the single question of a sea-level canal at the Isthmus of Panama. It has surprised me, as I have no doubt it has surprised the Senate and the country, when a lock-canal system has been brought forward so prominently and so urgently in the messages of the President connected with this matter and sent before the Committee on Interoceanic Canals, that no bill has been presented here upon which the Senate could act, and none has been presented in the Committee on Interoceanic Canals upon which any action may be taken for the purpose of giving legal, constitutional support to the demands—I call them demands—the requirements, certainly, of the President of the United States. I am not here for the purpose of criticising him for that course of conduct. It is the first time that I have ever yet heard or known of a debate in this body where the negative or a dissenting report takes actually the affirmative side of the question and urges and presents in the negative report a canal which is not formulated in the shape of a bill.

If a bill was here for the purpose of establishing a lock-level canal with a dam and locks at Gatun, there would be opportunity to amend it if it was not agreeable to the views of the Senate, or to modify it in many ways. But the attitude of the minority of the Committee on Interoceanic Canals is that they "stand pat" on the declaration made in the message of the President of the United States, and contend that unless a majority of that committee and of the Senate of the United States, in cooperation with the House of Representatives, can reverse the action upon that subject, the President insists that the legislation already exists that justifies him in fixing the type of the canal and all connected with it.

That is not, Mr. President, to say the least of it, a bold and a fair presentation of a question. We are here now to meet it with a report on the part of the majority of the committee, which was ably prepared by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. KITTREDGE], who introduced the bill, and which fairly and fully sets out the ground upon which the committee felt constrained, many of them against previous convictions of a very settled character, to recommend a sea-level canal.

If the recommendation that the committee gives in favor of the sea-level canal needed to be justified by the array of the vast field of facts of an important character that have been developed in the course of the hearings, which have lasted practically all the winter and all the summer down to the present time and embodying some three or four thousand pages of testimony; if we had to look through that and compare the value of the testimony in favor of each proposition, one witness with another and one fact with another, I would despair of attempting to make any decided impression upon any one who has not studied this whole question thoroughly.

Mr. President, in the multitude of our labors in the Senate I understand perfectly that very few Senators can afford to take the time from their current and necessary business to follow up the facts in a very extensive investigation such as this has been.

I take occasion to say, in respect of the engineers and the persons who have been called upon to testify as to the facts involved in the governmental control and the like of that, before that committee, that a remarkable display has been made of integrity, manhood, firmness, and truthfulness. I am very happy to say that the facts as presented on this record, while they may be in apparent conflict with each other, have no element of weakness, so far as I know, in respect of the character of the men who have stated them.

Is it possible, Mr. President, for me to present an issue in this case, or a point in this case, which is and ought to be the controlling fact in the whole situation? In all questions based on a great number of facts more or less in conflict with each other there is still a pivotal point upon which the question turns. That is true in every controversy of this kind. There is a pivotal point upon which controversy turns, and I wish this morning to devote what I have to say to the development of that pivotal fact and to attempt to show that when it is settled the whole question is settled in respect of the type of canal.

The type of this canal, Mr. President, is as important to the people of the United States as are the boundaries of any State of the Union. It is almost as important as any physical fact that depends upon the climatology of this great Republic. The type of this canal is, above all things else connected with public works, the most important, the most far-reaching in its effects upon the present and all coming generations. So if we can determine the type of the canal by determining some great fact which is pivotal in the case, and having gained that ground, we can go forward with confidence and without embarrassment in the adjustment of all collateral questions that might grow up in what I will term the administration of the canal, according to the system that may be adopted, our success will bless the country for all time to come.

I set out with the proposition that, in any type of canal at Panama, the control of the Chagres River is the great vital factor of safety, without which no canal can be permanently maintained.

I will leave out of consideration the minor questions of the cost of dredging, the time consumed in the passage of ships, the cost of lands that will be submerged, the dangers of collisions between vessels passing each other in the canal channel, the military defense of the canal, or the locks, the silting up of the canal, of either type, from inflowing streams, and other economic questions.

I omit these discussions because they are questions that are common to both types of canal, whether constructed at high or low level. I do not feel justified in treating either type of the canal presented in the reports of the majority or the minority of the Board of Consulting Engineers as a sea-level canal, because both reports recommend a canal with dams and spillways for controlling the waters of the Chagres River. I can not treat either plan as a lock canal, because they both have sea-level sections that extend into the land for several miles, from the Bay of Limon on the north, and the Bay of Panama on the south.

What Congress is left to consider, if anything is left to their consideration, is whether the surface of the section of the canal between Gatun and Miraflores, a distance of about 8 miles, which is not to be less than 40 feet deep, and not less than 200 feet in width at the bottom, shall be at the mean level of the sea, or whether the canal, at its surface, shall be 185 feet above the level of the sea between the points I have mentioned.

It goes without saying that the section of the canal between Gatun and Miraflores can be excavated to a depth of 40 feet below sea level; and so between Gamboa and Miraflores, and so on any part of the line.

If there were no other engineering problem involved, the question of the time and the cost of construction would be simply economic, and could be solved by mathematical processes almost to a certainty.

But the question of the control of the Chagres River recurs, as it has recurred, to tax the highest powers of engineering skill and knowledge, since it was presented in the report of the Lull survey in 1872, of which Menocal was the chief engineer. That was the first instrumental canal survey that was made at Panama. It was made by the order of the Government of the United States. In that survey it was developed that the control of the Chagres River was the real obstacle to the construction of a canal at Panama. The axial line of Lull's survey from Gatun to Miraflores has not been changed as much as a hundred feet from that time to this hour. The struggle to control the Chagres River has cost thousands of lives. It has cost the people of France more than $260,000,000. It has cost Colombia 100,000 lives and a debt of $6,000,000 expended in civil war. It has cost that Republic the secession of Panama, if that is the proper term to use; and it has cost the United States already, in surveys, explorations, and outlays for work and material, more than $100,000,000. The sums that are demanded of our people for accomplishing the control of the Chagres River vary from three hundred to five hundred million dollars, to be determined, it is said, by the type of canal to be constructed.

I put these figures very broadly. I do not put them with the accuracy of quotations from reports, and it is not necessary to do so. I want to get the highest and lowest limits, between which we are obliged to consider our bearings.

The advocates of both types set forth in the majority and minority reports of the Board of Consulting Engineers are centering their controversy upon the still vital question of the control of the Chagres River.

In this silent but tremendous mental conflict of opinion between engineers to whom the United States and several European sovereigns have given the honor of their selection as their best representatives in skill, experience, and ability, in this highest reach of scientific and practical work, the vital question is the control of the Chagres River.

Does this question approach its solution upon the agreements as to undisputed facts that are stated in the reports of the minority and the majority of the Board of Consulting Engineers?

I maintain that these agreements upon undisputed facts as to the control of the Chagres River not only approach a solution of that crucial question, but they settle it. No engineer of that great Board seems to question seriously that a dam based on a rock foundation at Gatun, of proper dimensions and material, constructed after the method of the highest art of the science of engineering, in connection with a sea-level canal cut through the Isthmus and controlled by a sea gate and lock at Miraflores, will safely and certainly control the Chagres River.

There is really no disputation amongst any of these great engineers anywhere or at any time that a dam properly constructed at Gamboa, with a tide lock at Miraflores or at Sosa, nearer the coast, using the canal as a part of the system of drainage, will be absolutely perfect to control the flow of the flood waters of the Chagres River and, of course, its normal flow.

Great engineers do earnestly contend, however, that the Chagres River can be as safely controlled by a dam with locks at Gatun. This proposition is not accepted by the majority of the Board of Consulting Engineers. On the contrary, it is severely contested by that majority and by other great engineers and by a majority of the Senate Committee on Interoceanic Canals.

The Senate can therefore see exactly where the controversy is. They all admit that a dam properly constructed at Gamboa, with a sea-level canal, and a tide lock on the Pacific side at Miraflores, will control the Chagres River. When we come to the other side of the proposition, whether a dam can be constructed at Gatun which will control the Chagres River, there the dispute commences, and it is fierce and unrelenting and sometimes almost bitter in the antagonism of their candid, honest, professional opinions and experience. Where is the use of the Government of the United States and the Congress of the United States participating in the decision of a disputed question thus heavily controverted by the great engineers of the world, when they all agree that the main proposition, which is to control the flood waters of the Chagres River, can be completely and perfectly effected by a dam at Gamboa and the drainage channel of a sea-level canal across the Isthmus and with a tide lock at Miraflores?

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WHYTE in the chair). Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. MORGAN. I do.

Mr. FORAKER. I should like to ask if I properly understand the statement of the Senator to be that every one of the consulting engineers was of the opinion the Senator has just expressed, that by means of a dam at Gamboa the Chagres River could be controlled, and that there was a division and difference of opinion among those same engineers as to the dam at Gatun?

Mr. MORGAN. The provision for a dam and locks at Gatun was severely contested by the conflicting opinions of the European engineers and some of the American engineers. They have expended much time and labor in looking into the question as to the stability of such a dam. As to the stability of a dam properly constructed at Gamboa, and that it, in connection with a sea-level channel across the Isthmus, will control the flood waters and the normal waters of the Chagres River, there is no contest. No man has raised his voice to deny that. The proposition is true that a dam built there will control the entire situation.

Mr. President, I might stop my argument on this question right here, and I do not know but that I had better do so, because the evidence in this case shows the consensus of opinion without interruption in favor of the proposition that there is a way to control the floods of the Chagres River. That way is to build a dam at Gamboa upon solid rock—tough, hard basalt, I believe it is—and to dig the sea-level canal past that location, and with proper regulating works to control the waters impounded behind the dam at Gamboa; and in the highest floods, or the greatest possible coming of successive floods, that water will enter the canal so that it will be harmless; it can run either way to the sea; and there is no probability that the canal thus draining the waters of this great lake at Gamboa, created by this dam, will ever be in such a state of flood or agitation as to disturb the navigation of that canal.

This question is therefore narrowed down to this proposition: Is the certainty and safety, which none deny, of controlling the Chagres River through a sea-level canal, with a dam at Gamboa and a sea gate and tidal lock at Miraflores, to be abandoned for any known cause in favor of the disputed and more uncertain plan of accomplishing such control of the Chagres River by means of an earth dam at Gatun with a head of 85 feet of water, and with three double locks in a flight, each with a lift of more than 28 feet?

Senators who cast their eyes up to that reporters' gallery and notice the steps that come down, three of them, one below the other, will have a fair idea of three locks in flight. If you make the elevation 85 feet above sea level and divide that by 3, 28⅓ feet about, you will have an idea of what it would look like, and you will have perhaps a better idea of what it will actually be than by any words that I could use to express it.

Mr. TALIAFERRO. Mr. President, may I interrupt the Senator?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. MORGAN. Yes.

Mr. TALIAFERRO. Does the Senator know of any great canal in the world that employs locks of that character in flight?

Mr. MORGAN. No; I do not know anything about that personally, but the testimony of the engineers shows that there is no such ship canal in the world, at least, with three double, or twin, locks in a flight. This seems to be a new and perilous experiment.

If there were no Chagres River to control or to feed the canal, a sea-level canal at Panama would be the only alternative. But there is a Chagres River that must be controlled, and that remains the vital question as to any type of canal Congress may adopt. I have repeated this proposition several times, but not oftener than is required by the inevitable logic of the situation.

I have been forced to yield my preference for a lock canal, and to adopt the type of a sea-level canal as the only plan I can afford to vote for, upon the known and undisputed facts that I have no right to disregard.

As far as the opinions of laymen should be influenced by those great engineers, who are honest men, I would cheerfully yield my judgment on questions of technical learning and experience, but when such guides disagree, and I must decide between them on a great matter like this, I am bound to accept their concurrent admissions and concessions of facts as being true, and to follow the line that is least embarrassed with doubts and difficulties, and that, in this case, must necessarily be the type of canal that is the most certain of success in controlling the Chagres River.

The engineer whose statements are relied upon with the greatest confidence by the advocates of the high-level canal with dam and locks at Gatun is Mr. Stevens, of whom it is sufficient praise to say that he is a man above reproach in all respects, and is an engineer of experience in important public works, and is of great skill and energy in his profession. I quote Mr. Stevens with satisfaction as to his estimate of the controlling factor in the successful construction of a ship canal at Panama. He was the first engineer examined by the committee, and I will add that part of his examination antedated the publication of the report of the majority and minority of the Board of Consulting Engineers, and his treatment of the real difficulty we must encounter and solve in this enterprise is so conclusive that the question was put to rest, and no other engineer was called upon to discuss it.

On page 63 of the report of the testimony of the engineer witnesses Mr. Stevens says:

I regard the solution of the engineering difficulties in building the Panama Canal to be the control of the Chagres River.

Senator HOPKINS. Yes.

Mr. STEVENS. There are grave questions to be met, of course.

Senator HOPKINS. But that is the question?

Mr. STEVENS. To my mind, yes.

Senator HOPKINS. And the most feasible way of doing that is by the lock canal, with an 85-foot elevation?

Mr. STEVENS. That is my candid belief.

The first time I went over the canal, you might say—the second time I ever went across the Isthmus—of course I had in mind the proposition that had been advanced, largely by the old Commission of 1901 and 1902.

That is, the first Walker Commission—

I could see the force of the argument very readily about taking care of the Chagres River. I had understood from various writings that Bohio was the lowest point in the valley where the dam could be built. The first thing that occurred to me was: Is it a fact or is it an assumption? And going down through there I noted the narrowness down here at Gatun. I immediately asked some of my assistants why they selected Bohio instead of Gamboa.

"Gamboa" there should be "Gatun," I am sure.

They said the dam at Bohio was better than at Gatun. I found that there were no borings there, and that they did not know anything about it. I commenced to get ready to find out. About that time there came a request of the Consulting Board, which convened here the 1st of September. They cabled down instructions to go on with borings at Gatun—just what I was preparing to do—with the result that we have explained, that in the opinion of everyone, I think, Gatun proved to be the better site.

Again, on page 100, in speaking of the dam at Gatun, in reply to a question of Mr. Gorman, Mr. Stevens says:

Mr. GORMAN. That would leave your summit level at 85 feet?

Mr. STEVENS. Yes, sir; the reason I favor that is because of the point brought out yesterday—the control of the floods of the Chagres.

Now, Mr. President, I think that in reason I have developed the real question in controversy, which is whether a sea-level canal is safer as the method of controlling the floods of the Chagres River than any high-level canal that has yet received the sanction of engineers and other responsible persons charged with the duty of deciding between them.

A great dam for impounding the waters of the Chagres River is equally requisite to either type of a ship canal, and this dam is the prime factor in the work of controlling the flood waters of that river.

The location of that dam on safe foundations is therefore the most important actual work in controlling the floods of the Chagres, and it requires the most careful examination.

All other questions in an important degree, if not in a paramount sense, hinge upon the location of the great dam that alone can control the flood waters of the Chagres River.

After all and above all this is a question of drainage, which includes necessarily the best and safest method of draining off these flood waters when they occur in the watershed of the Chagres River. And this is the pivotal fact to which I have adverted.

I do not include the financial strength of the United States. I assume that it is sufficient to regulate and control the flood tides of the Chagres River in their most frantic development.

I will attempt to demonstrate this in the course of my remarks, and to show that when we have "put a hook in the nose of Behemoth" the spoil of the conquest will be very rich.

The certainty of our being able to impound the waters of the Chagres in flood and in its normal flow by constructing a dam at Gamboa is really an undisputed fact, and, being such, it is the controlling fact in this great engineering problem. I think that if I should be required to demonstrate this controlling fact, which is conceded by all engineers, the demand would arise from the querulous challenge of the plain truth or from carping criticism.

As the dam at Gamboa must regulate the drainage of the Chagres River, a sea-level canal must be a great factor in supplying a drainage channel for the flood waters of the river that gather from its watershed to the eastward of Gamboa.

These waters would enter the canal at points nearer to the Bay of Panama than to the Bay of Limon, but not far from a central point between both bays. These waters, distributed over a canal surface of 200 feet in width and 49 miles long, do not appear to be a formidable intrusion that would affect navigation or destroy the banks of the canal, even if the regulation of the flow should be imperfect.

In the judgment of all the engineers, the regulation is so easily in reach of ordinary engineering skill that no inquiry is needed to demonstrate its safety and its controllability. There is no real difficulty in this very important work, and I will not consume time in its further description. As to the drainage of flood waters or the waters at normal flow that will or may enter the canal on either side between the mouth of the Obispo and the Bay of Limon, nothing more important than a temporary inconvenience can possibly occur, because of the ease and simplicity of the methods that any ordinary engineer would adopt to prevent any really injurious results.

There is some discussion, but no real controversy, among the engineers as to the safe control of these small and short streams at any stage of their waters.

I had better explain that those small streams that I speak of are below the dam at Gamboa, and come in on either side of the Chagres River. Except when they are in a raging flood, they are absolutely inconsiderable. There is one exception, however, and that I will refer to after a while. It is the stream called the Trinidad River.

The power to regulate and control them easily and safely is so manifest that this part of the discussion is used by the disputants, it seems, only as a makeweight to reenforce more important arguments against each others' contentions. In this great controversy, which should be inspired by a desire to arrive at just conclusions with cordial zeal, there is instead the bitterness of invective and criticism, some evidences of which I will point out in my brief review of the hearings before the committee. I can not dwell on the discussion of the streams that enter the Chagres below Gamboa, because they are unimportant in settling the type of the canal.

In this inquiry, as in others of far greater moment, Congress is left to conjecture, where facts should have been ascertained and were in easy reach of positive demonstration, and the Consulting Board of Engineers were left to grope in the dark in their great and responsible task of advising our Government as to the type of canal that it would be best to adopt at Panama.

Mr. Stevens, on pages 17 and 18 of his testimony, states as follows:

Mr. STEVENS. There was one question, if you will allow me—I assume you want all the light there is——

Senator HOPKINS. Yes.

Senator MORGAN. We do.

Mr. STEVENS. I do myself. I am seeking for light, and any opinion I have so far is only made up from impressions and the data that has gotten in my brain so far. You spoke about taking care of the flood waters by means of the regulating works at the Gatun dam. That is the plan of the minority; but I am not clear as to whether or not that is the place, in case a dam of that size is built, where the regulation could be effected, up here on the Trinidad River, which comes in here from the west. Here is the canal.

Senator GORMAN. How far is that from the dam—about what distance?

Mr. STEVENS. The Trinidad River comes in about 4 miles above the dam. Now, going up that stream, which has very little rise—I have been up there several times with a small launch—going up there about 5 or 6 miles farther there is a depression in the hills between there and the Caribbean Sea. I sent some men up there to take the elevation and make an examination of the country, and it was made very lately, but I know this: That the top of that pass is only 27 feet above the top of the dam here. That is through natural ground; and I think, although I have not drilled it, that it is rock. Now, my own opinion is that before I will permit myself to put in these spill works here I should examine that very closely, and if it is as I expect to find it I would plan to put my regulating works at the head of that stream. That would be a similar proposition to the old Gigante spillway of the old Commission.

That is in regard to the dam at Bohio.

Senator MORGAN. Yes—the same thing. Now, if you were building a dam at Gatun, could you dam the Chagres at Trinidad—is that the name of the river?

Mr. STEVENS. You would not need any dams on the Trinidad at all. This water would back, you know, to within 27 feet of the top of this pass. You would merely make your cut right through there, and put your regulating works there, and keep them away from the dam.

Senator MORGAN. I am speaking about a diversion of the Chagres for the purpose of building a dam at Gatun.

Mr. STEVENS. Yes, sir.

Senator MORGAN. Could that diversion be made through Trinidad?

Mr. STEVENS. Yes, sir.

Senator MORGAN. And that is 4 miles above the dam at Gatun?

Mr. STEVENS. By the river line it would be probably 8 miles. It is some distance up to Trinidad.

Senator MORGAN. Yes, sir. In any event such a diversion at Trinidad would be a relief to the work of the Gatun dam, even if it did not entirely complete the diversion?

Mr. STEVENS. It would be simply a transference of the regulating works needed for controlling the level of the big lake. Instead of putting it through the dam, you put it through the natural ground.

Senator MORGAN. I never heard of that before, but it looks very nice.

I have been studying this question for years, and Mr. Stevens is the first man to suggest that with the depression at the head of the river, 27 feet high, by putting a dam across the Trinidad River at a proper place below that, between that and the Chagres River, you would turn the Trinidad upon its course and run it through its watershed to the sea, and you would get rid of the waters of the Trinidad, and then, by connecting the Trinidad River with the other three small streams between that and the Obispo, you would run the whole of it right down the valley of the Chagres River and turn the Chagres River away from the sea-level canal on that side.

I refer to this, and I do it with a painful feeling, too, to show that our Government has not made the proper ascertainment of facts to enable this great Commission of Consulting Engineers to decide these questions which I am now discussing and to pass proper judgment upon them. They show that there is not enough in this evidence to-day to justify the Senate of the United States in coming to any decision upon the facts like a jury would as to what are the actual conditions there in that great coastal plain which we call the "valley of the Chagres River." We are going too fast. We have been going too fast all the time, making too much fuss and doing too little work of a sedate, practical, orderly character. We have been too much under the influence of newspaper dominance and public opinion; we have been too much swerved from time to time by criticisms made as to the appointees and their conduct on the Isthmus and elsewhere. We ought to have been sedately studying these facts. If Stevens had been put at that work six months, if you please, before the meeting of the Board of Consulting Engineers, when he was only put there after they had got here and been some time in session—and it was upon their demand sent by cable that these borings should be made—Stevens and all the rest of us would have had more substantial and reliable foundation for the verdict we are to give, because it is a verdict in the highest possible sense that Congress is called on to render.

Will it not surprise the world that this important information, so easy to obtain, was not laid before the Board of Consulting Engineers? The Trinidad River, with a low depression of 27 feet near its head, leading down to the seacosat, seems to be almost a natural outlet for the flood waters of all the streams that enter the left bank of the Chagres River as far as the Obispo. It is obvious that with low dams across them and connecting channels between them, in the valley of the Chagres, all these small streams, four in number, can be led into the Trinidad. A dam of even 40 feet across that stream would throw all these waters back on the head of the Trinidad, where a cut of 27 feet would put them through the swamp into the sea. If this is true, the protection of a sea-level canal from the inflow of these streams would be perfect.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. MORGAN. Certainly.

Mr. TILLMAN. Will the Senator kindly tell us how much of a cut and how long a one it would take to have this river driven back to its source and turned off into the ocean at another point?

Mr. MORGAN. According to Mr. Stevens, it would take a cut 27 feet.

Mr. TILLMAN. I know, but how long?

Mr. MORGAN. Perhaps a quarter of a mile.

Mr. TILLMAN. In other words, it will not take another canal to get rid of that river?

Mr. MORGAN. No.

Mr. TILLMAN. It would be a short outlet, which would relieve us of this water?

Mr. MORGAN. Yes. There is a short ridge running in there.

Mr. HOPKINS. You are now speaking of the Trinidad, are you not?

Mr. MORGAN. Of the Trinidad.

Mr. HOPKINS. Not of the Chagres. The Trinidad is on the Colon side of the Isthmus.

Mr. MORGAN. The topography of such a diversion canal is not known to me, neither is it known to our engineers at Panama. There is the trouble about it. They do not know.

In the effort to create an impression of sudden and rapid progress in canal building, to astonish the world, we find that our want of preparation for the work, and our picturesque display of speed, is exciting derision.

If Congress will forbid a final determination of the type of the canal by the President until the next session and require a further exploration of the Chagres Valley at Gatun, and up to Bohio, with diamond drills, before the final decision is reached, we will be spared the chagrin of additional failures and the wasting of many millions of dollars.

Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. MORGAN. Certainly.

Mr. HOPKINS. Before the Senator leaves the question of the different rivers, has the Senator in his speech at any point taken into consideration the streams on the right-hand side between Obispo and Gatun?

Mr. MORGAN. I have not in the remarks which I have submitted here, because they are trifling little streams—very short.

Mr. HOPKINS. I think not.

Mr. MORGAN. There is only one—the Gatun; and it has already been diverted by the French and carried out above Colon and emptied into the bay. There is no other stream on the right bank of the Chagres——

Mr. HOPKINS. One of the schemes for disposing of the waters of those rivers is the one suggested by the Senator from South Carolina—to build another canal carrying these waters off into the bay.

Mr. MORGAN. I understand they are so entirely negligible that I doubt if any Senator on this floor can tell the names of them. They are little creeks, as we call them, emptying from the hills that come down sheer almost on the right bank of the Chagres River.

Mr. HOPKINS. If the Senator will allow me, even the majority of the Board of Consulting Engineers regarded those streams of so much importance that, as I remember their report, they propose to divert them from their channels and carry them through a new channel to the sea.

Mr. MORGAN. That is easy enough to do, I suppose.

Mr. HOPKINS. There is where we differ. It is a very serious problem, and we contend it can not be successfully done without great expense.

Mr. MORGAN. There are many questions of minor importance which the Senate is not called upon to decide in determining the type of the canal, for the reason that they have no material effect upon it. We can afford to lay by our controversies about these minor matters until we have first accomplished the settlement of the type of the canal, which is the great controlling question of the destiny not only of the canal itself, but I may say, in a large degree, of the United States of America. We had better lay aside these little catch questions until we have determined the main proposition—the type of the canal.

No decision of the type of canal by Congress is required by the President, unless it should be a ratification of his avowed purpose to locate a lock canal, with its dam and locks, at Gatun. Such a ratification would be accepted by him with condescending approval.

If Congress should prefer to meet its responsibility to the people of this and all succeeding generations by voting for a sea-level canal, such a vote would not engage the respect or the approval of the President.

In view of such official outgivings, it may require some fortitude to consider the subject of a sea-level canal, but, on the other hand, it will surely require the loss of some self-respect to drop the subject where it is.

So far as I am concerned, I prefer, under the rules of the Senate, to discuss the bill before this body and to vote upon it. Congress has frequently been advised to take prompt action in determining the type of canal, and has been admonished by the Government that delay in passing a bill would be an interruption of the work on the canal. Why should such haste be enjoined upon Congress to settle the type of the canal if the President has already established the type and the location and the plan by Executive foreordination?

It is not for me, perhaps, to venture to make such inquiries, but the occasion seems to justify this freedom, and I will proceed to discuss the sea-level canal, which is the canal that the people require and also the President's canal, it being "the ideal canal."

If the President could take the risk of the failure of the dam at Gatun without the contribution of the money of the people to another bankruptcy at Panama, many would be glad to indulge him in such a reckless pleasure; but Panama has too great fatality for reckless adventure to be the chosen theater of American sport with fortune.

Established on the firm basis that a sea-level canal is the safest solution of the problem of the control of the flood of the Chagres River, no other plan of canal can be logically supported. Another plan less safe may be a proper subject of competitive discussion, if it is cheaper than a sea-level canal and if we are really too poor to build a sea-level canal, in justice to our taxpayers.

If such a supposition involves the question of the expenditure of $100,000,000 to meet the higher cost of a sea-level canal, that we are not really able to pay, prudence would require us to drop the subject.

If a sea-level canal is worth $100,000,000 more than a lock canal, and if we are able to own such property, it is the part of wisdom to expend the additional money for the better property. I use these figures only to illustrate an argument.

As to the actual cost of either type of canal, we will be older, if not wiser, before that fact is known.

But it is not probable that the Suez Canal, which is twice the length of the Panama Canal, has cost only one-fourth of the sum that a sea-level canal at Panama will cost us. It is not probable that the cost of the Panama Canal will be even twice as much as the cost of the Suez Canal. So, laying aside all estimates that engineers have made as to the cost of either type of the canal at Panama and taking these reasonable probabilities for our guides, the ascertained facts in respect of the financial condition of the Suez Canal remove all doubt that the Panama Canal, at a cost of $500,000,000, will be a money-making investment for our Government. To get these facts before the Senate and the country in clear and concrete form, I will read the letter of Gen. George W. Davis, already printed as a document by order of the Senate. I regard this as the most important statement of a fiscal and financial character which has been submitted to the Senate in any form, through its committees or otherwise, since this subject has been undergoing investigation:

[Letter from Mr. George W. Davis, giving certain data relating to the Suez Canal.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 14, 1906.

MY DEAR SENATOR: Replying to your favor of yesterday, I give you the following data respecting the Suez Canal:

The original capital of the company, issued before 1870, was 400,000 shares, at 500 francs each; but these securities do not answer to our definition either of stocks or bonds, as they partake of the character of both. Under the terms of issue there was a condition that the shares could be redeemed in certain proportions at stated periods and that when redeemed they should be no longer an interest-bearing security, but should continue to constitute an asset to the original owner of the shares to the extent that he should participate in all surplus benefits earned by the company; but the interest provided by the statute—5 per cent—stopped when the bond should be called for redemption.

On the 31st of December, 1904, there were 385,460 of these shares still outstanding, and they continued to enjoy participation in the surplus benefits or profits of the company. But the interest on the residue of these bonds had ceased; that is to say, on 14,600 shares. The other outstanding securities of the Suez Canal Company are bond issues, as follows: First, an issue of 400,000 shares, at 85 francs, put out in order to take up unpaid coupons on the original issue, this being really to make good a deficit arising in the earlier years of the operation of the company, when its revenues were small. These bonds were entitled to 5 per cent interest, and the value of those still unredeemed and outstanding is 32,919,310 francs. Of the loan of 1867–68, which was in 300-franc shares, there was still outstanding on the date above specified 53,160,600 francs. In 1871 a still further issue of 100-franc shares was made, of which are yet unpaid 1,678,000 francs. A further loan was made in 1880 at 3 per cent, of which 24,575,770 francs remained unpaid at the end of 1904.

In 1887 there was still a further loan negotiated at 3 per cent, the aggregate of which still remaining unredeemed is 97,362,450 francs. The aggregate of all these issues, stock and bonds, came to the total of 402,296,130 francs, or $80,500,000. This is all of the capital stock of the Suez Canal Company, except that there remains an obligation resting on the company to pay 10 per cent of their surplus profits to the original founders, constituting all those who formed the original company that Mr. De Lesseps exploited. These founders' interests are divided into 100,000, and each now receives about one-half as much annually as the owners of each original share received.

The only reserve of which I can get any trace, maintained by the Suez Canal Company, is one of $5,000,000, which is required by the statute to be maintained, so as to equalize profits and losses and to provide for emergencies. There is another fund of small amount maintained as a pension and retirement fund, disbursed for the benefit of employees of long standing and of recognized merit. But the aggregate of this fund is not a large one.

The last quotation for Suez Canal stock that I have seen is for May, 1906, when it was quoted at the Bourse as 4,515 francs. As the par value of the share is 500 francs, you can readily see that these securities are at 900 per cent premium.

The dividend paid last year on the original shares was a net of 141 francs per share. This included the 25 francs (5 per cent interest) referred to above as having ceased on certain of the shares of the original stock that had been called in and redeemed. The per cent of dividend was therefore about 28. The tonnage passing the Suez Canal last year was 13,000,000 net tons, and the toll rate was 7¼ francs per ton.

About a dollar and fifty cents per ton.

Under the terms of the concession, which extended for ninety-nine years from the date of completion of the canal—1869—all the securities will have been retired and canceled on maturity, and amortization provisions are arranged to that end.

The Government of England paid almost exactly £4,000,000 for the shares bought by Beaconsfield from the Khedive. The dividend on these shares last year for the benefit of the British Government was £933,000.

The authorities, for the information contained in the above, are: L'Economiste, a French publication with which you are no doubt familiar; the Statist, an English publication devoted to statistical matters; also a recently published work on the Suez Canal, by J. Charles Roux, entitled "L'Isthme et le Canal de Suez," Paris, 1901, and The Stock Exchange Official Intelligence for 1905.

Hoping the above will meet your necessity, I remain, as ever,

Yours, sincerely.

GEO. W. DAVIS.

Hon. JOHN T. MORGAN,
Capitol, Washington, D. C.

The income of the Panama Canal is not conjectural, if it is to be compared with that of the Suez Canal, as stated by General Davis. It is quite as certain as the next estimate of the income of the United States will be for the fiscal year ending in June, 1908. The contributory territory to both these canals is the same as to the area of the commercial field of traffic, but the coastwise trade between our Atlantic and Pacific States will yield an enormous income to the Panama Canal that is not in reach of the Suez Canal. The productive energies of the entire Pacific coast of America and of Australia and the Philippines, and of the great clusters of other islands in the Pacific Ocean, will be so stimulated by the opening of the Panama Canal that the growth of the Suez Canal in tonnage and tolls will be far exceeded.

Our Sault Ste. Marie Canal has a tonnage which is twice that of the Suez Canal, and they are about the same age. Our Soo Canal floats a tonnage that comes almost exclusively from the watershed of the Great Lakes—a mere dot on the map as compared with the area from which the Suez Canal derives its support—yet its tonnage is twice as great as that of the Suez Canal.

Who can permit a doubt to disturb this splendid outlook for the commercial supremacy of the Panama Canal?

I state it with more confidence than any engineer can state the cost of excavating a cubic yard of rock from the bottom of the Culebra cut. If we have such facts within the reach of rational calculation and will consult them we will see that an expenditure of $100,000,000 to get the best canal is not a loss or an extravagance, but is a safe investment.

As to the money for doing this work, it is as certain and as easily obtained and as secure as an investment as the money that will be expended in the next fifty years in building great ships to navigate the oceans.

It will be more safely invested in the Panama Canal than if it were put into such steamships, for they are certain to perish, while the canal is quite as certain to survive all perils, unless an earthquake should destroy it.

Mr. SCOTT. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. MORGAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. SCOTT. Does the Senator from Alabama think, then, that the passage of the so-called "shipping bill" would be a great advantage to the Panama Canal if we had our shipping restored to the seas?

Mr. MORGAN. A proper shipping bill applied to the new conditions created by the Panama Canal would be very valuable if you could keep out the little speculations for private purposes. There is the difficulty with the shipping bills that I have examined.

Now, having this safe basis of calculation as to the value of the Panama Canal, as compared with its cost, and its earning power, as compared with that of the Suez Canal, we see that the differences between engineers as to the cost of construction through Culebra cut does not reasonably affect the question as to whether we should have the cheapest canal and one that is affected with grave doubts as to its permanency or whether we should have the best canal.

I will not consume the time of the Senate in the discussion of our duty, which is to adopt the best canal.

The President says the sea-level canal is "the ideal canal" in his letter to the Board of Consulting Engineers and in his message to Congress. Does he mean that such a canal is a vain imagination, when he says it is ideal? Does he allude to its ideality to frighten us with its hopelessness on account of its cost? He would not think that a navy as powerful as the British navy was a vain and hopeless ideality. He would seize such a flattering illusion with the eagerness that a little boy would grasp a toy pistol. Why should he tell such a people as comprise his constituency, that they must not aspire to the lofty ideal in constructing a canal, but must spend their money for a cheap and doubtful type of canal? It is in vain that we should attempt to solve such riddles. If the sea level is the ideal canal, the people want it. They want the best their money will pay for, and are not alarmed at high ideals when the facts justify their desire to have the best of everything in the way of public enterprise and commercial success. The Suez Canal is also an ideal canal. Why should Europe and Asia enjoy the benefits of such ideality that swells their coffers as well as their heads, while the Americans who pay for the canal at Panama must content themselves with an enforced inferiority?

The simple truth is that the canal and the railroad at Panama are the best property and surest money-makers in the world. This being true, the cost of the canal need only be compared with its assured income to ascertain whether any expenditure in its construction is within the limit of financial safety. Those who take a timorous view of this matter will never contribute any real strength to this great movement.

I do not disapprove. On the contrary, I applaud the most conservative calculation of the cost in this enterprise, and I have a candid respect for the engineers who look into cost and expenditure with the greatest care; but I insist that their differences as to the cost of the respective plans suggested are swallowed up and lost in the greater fact that the Panama Canal will pay its own cost and expenses and return to us a handsome dividend if we will furnish the money or the credit for putting it in operation.

In the axial lines of both of the proposed canals there is perfect correspondence in every particular, except in the depth of the cuts—through the 8 miles between the stations El Bispo and Miraflores. The width of the canal and the curvatures are the same in this reach through the Culebra and Emperador heights. The depth of the sea-level plan at its bottom, if 40 feet below the level of the sea, and the bottom of the lock canal is 40 feet above that level.

If one canal is defective, the other is equally so. If such defect exists and is not remedied, the fault will rest with Congress in either case; for we have the means to prevent such a flaw if we choose to employ them. I mean that the canal, when completed, will be worth every dollar expended on it and will yield a sure profit on the investment if it is enlarged at heavy expense. The property will bear the increased cost.

No other fact discussed in the wide range of disputation that we are indulging in has any material bearing on the great proposition—that a sea-level canal is the best and safest means for controlling the flood waters of the Chagres River, and that such a canal at the cost of even $500,000,000 is a perfectly safe investment and will be greatly profitable as a financial venture.

The argument is complete, if these propositions are true; and a sea-level canal is not only the ideal of the President, but it is far better as the solid realization of the proud hope of a great people.

The President abandons his great ideal and again returns to the field of disaster and defeat and invites us—no; he commands us—to follow again as a forlorn hope to certain defeat in the lower marshes of the Chagres Valley. But we have no occasion to follow his lead for the alleged saving of a negligible sum in the construction of a canal that is not free from serious doubts. We are able to build it and sacrifice the cost; but this is not necessary.

I mean that the canal, if completed, will be worth every dollar expended on it and will yield a profit on the investment, and we have the money in the Treasury of the United States to build it, if we choose to vote it. We have the money now to widen it to 300 feet in the Culebra cut. It is 200 feet wide there. We have the money to deepen it below 40 feet, if we want to deepen it; and the money that we expend in providing such a channel for the greatest ships the world has, or can produce, will be refunded to us many fold, because that canal can not be ignored whenever it is made safe for the transit of vessels. The world can not ignore it. The owners of the ships and the commercial men of the world and the insurance men of the world will not be satisfied to permit ships to find their way between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans south of America, through the frozen Straits of Magellan. With the dangers of that navigation they will not be satisfied to waste the enormous amount of time and the expenses of navigation, which amount to even thousands of dollars a day on every vessel on long voyages around the Horn. They will not be willing to do that. Why should we refuse to construct a safe sea-level canal, when we, with the proper liberality of expenditure, can make an investment of this kind that will pay us very handsomely and provide a safe way for those ships to pass from ocean to ocean in a very few hours?

Now, there is the real financial problem. We have the Suez Canal to prove its safety. Above that here is the Sault Ste. Marie to prove it, although the Suez Canal is more nearly the type of canal we are trying to construct. Some one stated the question in the committee to an engineer, if the falls of the St. Marys River could be disposed of and a canal was still necessary to get through the shallows, do you think that anybody would ever recommend a lock canal across those falls? No, he did not. Why did they recommend a lock canal across those falls? It is because they were obliged to do it. It was the only way to get through. But whenever a sea-level canal is possible—I speak now in respect of one of the great sea-level canals such as the Suez Canal, the Panama Canal, the Kiel Canal—wherever it is possible to dig a sea-level canal in preference to a lock canal, no sane-minded people who have any respect for the income on their property and for the safety of their ships and their commerce would ever fail to adopt a sea-level plan. It is the natural, first suggestion to the mind of any commonplace thinker in the world. Put it to anybody who has reasonable common sense and every time he will adopt a sea-level canal as one free from impediment and obstruction.

So here, Mr. President, the argument grows and grows, not only upon its own merits as an economic and proper feature of commercial intercourse, but when you come to the control of the Charges River you find a safe method in a dam at Gamboa, with its sea-level channel to carry it into both seas whenever there might be, by a possibility, in the course of fifty or seventy-five years, an excessively great flood. You will find then and there and in that place the only power that exists in the world for the mastery of the Chagres River.

Mr. MALLORY. Will the Senator from Alabama permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. MORGAN. Certainly.

Mr. MALLORY. With regard to the Gamboa dam, I understand that the problem of a dam there is similar to the problem of a dam for a lock canal at Gatun. However, I should like to inquire of the Senator if he can state whether it has been ascertained that there is a rock foundation for the dam at Gamboa?

Mr. MORGAN. I will say in regard to the Gamboa dam that according to the expression of every man and every engineer who has ever examined the subject the rock at Gamboa is basalt—a tough, hard rock. It reaches across the Chagres River—that is to say, the Chagres River runs across this rock, and there is on both sides a high ridge of rock, so that you can build a dam at Gamboa as deep as you want to make it, and as high as you want to make it, and as strong as any lock dam was ever built on the top of the earth. There is no impeachment of that proposition at all. It bears no resemblance whatever to the dam at Gatun as to its foundation or in any other respect.

Mr. MALLORY. I understand that there is no rock foundation at Gatun.

Mr. MORGAN. There certainly is not.

Mr. MALLORY. Will the Senator please tell me why, in the plan of the majority, unless I am misinformed, the dam proposed at Gamboa is simply to be an earthen dam?

Mr. MORGAN. Oh, no; that is not proposed.

Mr. MALLORY. That was my impression.

Mr. MORGAN. No; they say they may make it of any type; but there are engineers in the world who will persist in saying that an earth dam is better than a rock dam. If the chief engineer prefers an earth dam, he has the best location for it that could possibly be found.

Mr. TALIAFERRO. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. MORGAN. Certainly.

Mr. TALIAFERRO. Is it not true that all the dams recommended by the majority are to be masonry dams, or earth dams with masonry cores?

Mr. MORGAN. That is true. That is objected to by the minority. They say that it is not necessary to have a rock core or a rock dam at all—that an earth dam is superior to it.

Mr. HOPKINS. I desire to call the Senator's attention to the fact that the dams that are to take care of the rivers Cano, Gigante, and Gigantito are not to be rock dams. There is no evidence in the report that they are to be rock dams.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President, so far as those little diverting dams are concerned, I really never have paid any serious attention to them.

Mr. HOPKINS. If the Senator will allow me, I have given a good deal of attention to them and one of them is to be 2,800 feet long and 75 feet high. There is no data upon which they can predicate any judgment at all as to the foundation upon which that dam 2,800 feet long and 75 feet high is to be placed.

Mr. MORGAN. If that dam was not a yard long or a foot high the effect on the canal would be just the same, because in a sea-level canal, when completed, they intend to take in, if at all necessary, all the waters that flow in from these different streams.

Mr. HOPKINS. If the Senator will allow me, they propose to build this dam so high that it will divert the waters of the three rivers I have named and change the course and drive them back upon their sources and make them find new channels to the sea.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President, I return to the question I was considering. The matter of controlling this little body of water, these low-grade streams, does not compare with the question of controlling the flood of the Chagres River. I am discussing that question, and I maintain that when we control the flood of the Chagres River we have controlled the pivotal feature in this case, and the balance goes with it.

Mr. HOPKINS. If it does not disturb the Senator, I desire to call his attention to the fact that they provide in the sea-level plan these three dams, the longest of which is 2,800 feet. Another dam is to be 820 feet in length and another dam five hundred and something feet, as I remember. All these dams are to have a height of 70 feet above the sea level.

Mr. MORGAN. There are various plans suggested in the report of the majority of the Board of Consulting Engineers as to how different matters may be disposed of conveniently, none of which are vital.

The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. KITTREDGE] has very kindly referred me to a selection of many, many like it in the report, the testimony of Mr. Noble on the proposition here:

> Senator KITTREDGE. I understand that you think that has been taken care of sufficiently by the majority.
> Mr. NOBLE. It looks so; yes, sir.

Again, Mr. TALIAFERRO puts a question:

> As I understand you, then, all of the streams are provided for by that method? All that empty into the canal are expected to pass through pools or dams, so as to take the coarser silt out before the water empties into the canal basin?
> Mr. NOBLE. I think so.
> Senator KITTREDGE. Do you regard that situation you have just described as a serious objection to the sea-level plan?
> Mr. NOBLE. Only inasmuch as it makes a somewhat larger charge for maintenance.

As I have already said, I do not consider that an impossible or impracticable proposition at all.

Mr. HOPKINS. I have not the evidence before me, but the evidence, as I remember it, does not relate to the river Cano nor to the river Gigantito.

Mr. MORGAN. Well, Mr. President——

Mr. HOPKINS. I have not looked at the evidence since we had it before the committee, but I will say to the Senator if it does not disturb him—if it does I will quit——

Mr. MORGAN. The river Cano is so absolutely inconsequential that although I have been studying this question with care for years, I do not know where the river Cano is, and I think I would know it if it was a matter of the slightest consequence.

Mr. HOPKINS. The point I was making, if the Senator will allow me, was in answer to an inquiry by the Senator from Florida [Mr. TALIAFERRO]. In the majority report, in order to make a sea-level canal they provide for three dams, one of the length I have given—2,800 feet—and another of 800 feet, as I now remember, and another of five hundred feet and something, 70 feet high, without giving any data at all relating to the foundation of those dams. That is the real point that I was calling to the attention of the Senator.

Mr. TALIAFERRO. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. MORGAN. Certainly.

Mr. TALIAFERRO. I wish, with the permission of the Senator from Alabama, to read just a few lines of the testimony of Mr. Noble:

> Senator TALIAFERRO. As I understand you, then, all of the streams are provided for by that method? All that empty into the canal are expected to pass through pools or dams, so as to take the coarser silt out before the water empties into the canal basin?
> Mr. NOBLE. I think so.

All the streams.

Mr. MORGAN. I had just read that to the Senate.

Mr. HOPKINS. Will the Senator——

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President, I do not like to have my attention diverted——

Mr. HOPKINS. I will not interrupt the Senator——

Mr. MORGAN. By Senators asking me questions of this kind.

Mr. HOPKINS. But I will take another occasion to correct the impression of the Senator from Florida upon that point.

Mr. MORGAN. I am not discussing the slight appendages that may adhere to this question and be of some doubt. I am trying to give the Senate the benefit, if it is a benefit, of my judgment and conclusion in regard to the great pivotal question that controls this subject, and that is the control of the Chagres River. When we get that under control the balance of this matter sinks into insignificance; it is not worth talking about. Any common engineer can provide to protect a canal dug there after we have control of the Chagres River so that that great and furious stream can not invade it and destroy it. That is what my argument is drifting to, and I do not care about taking up all of the minutiæ of disputation that concerns this subject generally, because if we should enter into that we would find a dispute about everything we have ever considered. Take the disputes about cement, cement purchase, and transportation, labor, commissary, government, and all that is connected more or less intimately with the question of building and control of the canal. What do they amount to? When we have first settled the great controlling question as to the type of canal and have got it, if that decision was in favor of the Gatun dam, as it was formerly in favor of the Bohio dam, I would put up with it and say nothing about it and leave the idea of a sea-level canal, which I have been compelled to approach with the greatest possible reluctance.

In precipitous haste the President urged Congress to adopt the lock-canal project, with a dam at Bohio and with two twin locks in flights at the elevation of 90 feet above sea level, and Congress followed him, with equal precipitancy, to the disaster that has cost the people more than $100,000,000. We did this in the Spooner law. We did not intend such a result, and, in fact, the result was reached through the President's misconstruction of his powers under that law.

I will not now recall the dreary chapter of our history that followed the enactment of the Spooner law and its attempted execution in the effort to construct a lock canal, with its dam at Bohio.

The Isthmian Canal Commission, created by the Spooner law, was appointed and began work to execute the Spooner law with the dam at Bohio.

They had reported to the President on the 16th of December, 1901, that "no location suitable for a dam exists on the Chagres River below Bohio." This report was made after examination by that Commission, composed of Admiral John H. Walker, Hon. Samuel Pasco, Mr. George S. Morrison, Col. Aswald H. Ernest, Lewis M. Haupt, C. E., Alford Noble, C. E., Col. Peter Hains, William H. Burr, and Prof. Emery R. Johnson.

These names are guaranties of high integrity and honor. They made detailed estimates of the cost of the Panama Canal, as follows.

I will not stop to read those estimates, but will insert them in my remarks, and proceed to say that in the passage of the Spooner Act we had that basis and no other basis of Congressional action, and in the passage of that act and adopting the report of the Commission we decided in favor of the lock canal. We also decided that it should be at Bohio, and we also decided that it should not be at Gatun. So stands the law today, for this Commission had said that there was no location for a dam below Bohio.

I will insert those estimates, as follows:

Summing up the several figures already given, the total estimated cost of completing the Panama Canal is as follows:

Total estimated cost.

	Miles.	Cost.
Colon entrance and harbor	2.39	$8,057,707
Harbor to Bohio locks, including levees	14.42	11,099,839
Bohio locks, including excavation	.35	11,567,275
Lake Bohio	13.61	2,952,154
Obispo gates		295,434
Culebra section	7.91	44,414,460
Pedro Miguel locks, including excavation and dam	.55	9,081,321
Pedro Miguel level	1.33	1,192,286
Miraflores locks, including excavation and spillway	.20	5,781,401
Pacific level	8.53	12,427,971
Bohio dam		6,369,640
Gigante spillway		1,209,419
Peña Blanca outlet		2,448,076
Chagres diversion		1,929,982
Gatun diversion		100,000
Panama Railroad diversion		1,267,500
Total	49.09	120,194,465
Engineering, police, sanitation, and general contingencies, 20 per cent		24,038,893
Aggregate		144,233,358

The total amount of excavation is 94,863,703 cubic yards, exclusive of excavation for the Bohio dam and the Gigante spillway.

The location of the canal is, in general, the same as that proposed by the French company. Its total length, from 36 feet deep in the Atlantic to 36 feet deep in the Pacific, is 49.09 miles. The distance from the inner end of the harbor enlargement at Colon to the shore end of the bay channel at La Boca is 42.3 miles, of which 11 miles is the broad channel of Lake Bohio. The alignment is exceptionally good, the sharpest curve having a radius of 6,232 feet, except one at the entrance to Colon Harbor, which has a radius of 3,280 feet, but where the bottom width is from 500 to 800 feet. The total curvature in the entire length of the canal is 771° 39′, distributed as follows:

Number of curves.	Length.	Radius.	Total curvature.
	Miles.	Feet.	° ′
1	0.88	19,629	14 17
1	.48	13,123	11 04
4	4.22	11,483	111 32
15	11.61	9,842	355 50
4	2.44	8,202	90 20
2	1.67	6,562	77 00
1	.73	6,234	35 45
1	.82	3,281	75 51
Total	22.85		771 39

The Spooner law appropriated the money to construct the canal specified in these estimates, as follows:

Appropriations therefor shall from time to time be hereafter made, not to exceed in the aggregate the additional sum of $135,000,000, should the Panama route be adopted.

To which is added in section 5 of that law, $10,000,000 "appropriated toward the project herein contemplated by either route so selected."

This act as clearly identifies the Panama project as being a lock canal with dam and locks at Bohio as it identifies the Nicaragua project and locates it "from a point on the shore of the Caribbean Sea near Greytown, by way of Nicaragua, to a point near Brito on the Pacific Ocean."

To deny one location is to deny the other, and a sincere reading of the law includes both with equal certainty. To find room for a dam at Gatun under this law and under the report on which it is based is quite as consistent with the act as it would be to find, by construction, that a sea-level canal was within the definition of the canal project in Nicaragua.

If the future destiny of the United States in this vast enterprise rests on canons of construction that are so absurd, Congress would at least save its self-respect by abandoning the entire subject to the discretionary action of the President. This has not been done; and for one I will not so declare by my vote in the Senate.

The Bohio location, adopted and enacted in the Spooner law, went suddenly into collapse when Chief Engineer Wallace tested the work of the Commission of 1899–1901 and found that it was untrue. He used diamond drills and reached the untruth of the report of that Commission as to the depth below sea-level of a rock formation for the dam at Bohio and changed it from 128 feet to 168 feet. That was a fatal discovery to Mr. Wallace. It put him to the necessity of finding another location for the dams and locks of a high-level canal that could control the flood waters of the Chagres River. He worked with great energy and skill and failed. He was forced to the alternative of a sea-level canal or else to the abandonment of all hope of any canal at Panama.

He had no desire to work out a plan in which he could find no room for success. He was not playing to the galleries.

He resigned his office of chief engineer because he could not undertake a plan that was impracticable.

Mr. Wallace and the Canal Commission disappeared from the stage of action almost at the same time, and a new Commission came in without the advice and consent of the Senate.

The special powers conferred on the President expired at the close of the Fifty-eighth Congress, but his powers have increased by construction, continually. Among them he has found authority, under the Spooner law, to construct a lock canal, with a dam and locks at Gatun, and informs Congress that this is all the power he needs. In this selection the President has fortified his dangerous choice by the researches and opinions of three engineers of great note, but the facts on which they rest their opinions fail them and destroy the value of their advice. The President created an international commission, without authority from Congress, to consider the vital question of the type of a canal that the American people are endeavoring to construct.

Such appeals to other nations on a subject that is domestic in all its important belongings is without precedent and is un-American. It is so considered by our people, and especially by our great and enlightened engineers. But the President took care to associate with them some Americans who are an honor to our country. I would have preferred a jury of Americans, and would have followed their advice without hesitancy.

The result of their deliberations was in favor of a sea-level canal. This was the natural result of the opinion of the world—that a sea-level canal for great ships must be preferable to any lock canal, both types being properly constructed. We have no criticisms to make of the findings of the foreign engineers; but I think the President has inflicted upon them an unnecessary and, I hope, an unintended criticism in his sudden declaration that he would construct a lock-level canal with the dam at Gatun. Congress, however, is also included in this Presidential snub, and we share it with the foreigners.

The preparation of facts to be ascertained by explorations and borings was inadequate to enable the foreign engineers to accept the plan submitted to them. The deficiencies are obvious and numerous. They were not disposed to accept theories worked out on paper by an engineer who had never seen Panama—plans worked up in his office far away in New England. That engineer claims to have designed the plan for the dam at Gatun, and that it was modeled on the plan of a dam for a water supply and filtration works near Boston. That structure has not yet been tested, and it may fail. Studies in a laboratory at Boston scarcely meet the requirements of absolute faith when applied to different conditions at Gatun.

This plan was presented to the Board of Consulting Engineers by its inventor, and he gently complains that it was not considered for many days when an engineer of the Board characterized it as an "engineering guess."

This seems to have warmed up the inventor until he is aggressive in attacking the statements of such men as Professor Burr and Mr. Parsons.

I regret, Mr. President, that I have not time to read to the Senate at large the introductory remarks of this distinguished engineer before the committee—his introduction of himself to our favorable consideration—which we gave, so far as his manners and conduct were concerned, with great pleasure; but it seemed to me as if he had come prepared with a case stated, and upon the examination, in the profundity of his knowledge, I think he discovered many things that are not known to anybody else but himself, which are not stated historically, and, perhaps, are not referred to in books on geology, etc. He seemed to think they were necessary as a foundation for his disquisition. I should like for Senators who wish to inform themselves of the real value of this Gatun project to take up the testimony of Mr. Stearns and read it.

Mr. Stearns invented the plan, or copied it from the filtration plant or water-supply plant that he had in the vicinity of Boston. A part of it was made, as he says, the model of that dam, which appears on the map that hangs on the wall there; another part made in cut stone, and so on all around. He seems to have tried every experiment that he knew anything about in order to get the walls to his satisfaction, and he is waiting to see them give way. I think there is no doubt of that.

This gentleman went into the geological conditions and the structure of the earth there and elsewhere, and developed such remarkable and profound studies that he had made of the Isthmus of Panama in his office in Boston, that I became almost awed in his presence. He started with the proposition that the world was made of rock originally, and then he admitted that some water came and washed down gullies in the rock, and those gullies grew wider and wider, and then there was soil, and then trees followed and other things began to grow up.

When he got down to Gatun and to the coastal plain of Panama he discovered that there had been at first an elevation, a considerable elevation of the soil along the coast of Panama, and that after a lapse of time, he did not know exactly when or how, this great elevation was depressed and disappeared into the sea. When it got down there, the waters had cut two great gulches—they are there on this map [indicating]—and they were filled up with drift from the highlands. There the trees grew, and the water commenced to deposit silt and gravel, and then sand, then rock, and the like of that. Finally it was all filled up, and these two great gulches there, one of them 228 feet deep and another one—I will ask the Senator from South Dakota how deep that was?

Mr. KITTREDGE. Two hundred and four and 258 feet were the depths.

Mr. MORGAN. Yes; 204 feet and 258 feet. The deepest one was some 600 feet across the top, and the shallowest was about half a mile across the top.

Mr. HOPKINS. One 800 feet and the other 1,800 feet.

Mr. MORGAN. Yes; pretty nearly half a mile.

Now, according to the arrangement of the rising and subsidence of this coast—I do not think anybody ever dreamed of that but him—these gulches were left there to be filled up down to 258 feet, which was shown by drill holes bored entirely through this blanket of indurated clay of which he speaks. There was still found gravel and water at the bottom of the deepest boring, but no rock was found at the depth of 258 feet. Just above that there was clay and sand. It was like a cheese cake or a sandwich; one layer piled upon the other to a depth of 258 feet, until finally the gulch had been filled up in this manner.

Mr. SCOTT. May I ask the Senator from Alabama a question?

Mr. MORGAN. Certainly.

Mr. SCOTT. Had this learned man looked into the route which I have advocated, so as to be able to tell us the condition of the rock in the mountains there?

Mr. MORGAN. He could not see through the mountain, because, unfortunately, no hole had been bored through; but if he had ever been called upon for an opinion, he would have given one without the slightest hesitancy. There is no doubt about that.

Mr. SCOTT. I thought perhaps he might have done so.

Mr. MORGAN. I want the Senate to read that opinion for this reason: Mr. Stevens was a direct, square, fair man. In giving his statements he would come to a proposition and say: "I do not know about that, but Mr. Stearns will follow me, and he will explain it." Twice he made that reference to Mr. Stearns in answer to a question. Then Mr. Noble is one of the noblest men I have ever known. He said in substance that he had been very much averse to the idea of a dam at Gatun, or at Bohio either, for the matter of that; although he subscribed to the report for the dam at Bohio, he was quite strongly inclined to favor a sea-level canal, but he encountered Professor Stearns and he was rather converted and brought over. We have got to give due respect to the testimony of experts in all these things, but if one is to follow science in this matter exclusively it will not do to rely upon plain common sense, it seems to me.

With these cursory—and I feel that they are almost disconnected—propositions which I have stated, I will return to the proposition and state for the last time that I expect I shall have occasion to state it that the great controlling question in this case, that as to the flood waters of the Chagres River, no device has ever yet been suggested by any man that would control them except a sea-level canal with a dam at Gamboa.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. MORGAN. Certainly.

Mr. FORAKER. Before the Senator takes his seat, I should like for him to tell us, if he is informed about it, what there is on the top of the ground at the place where the Gatun dam is to be constructed—I mean the ground that is to be covered by the water that is to be backed up by the dam, 110 square miles.

Mr. MORGAN. You can get the exact description from Mr. Stevens's statement as to what is on top. He calls it loam and mud.

Mr. FORAKER. I do not mean that. I mean, is there a wood there; trees or jungle or what?

Mr. MORGAN. There are vines, briers, chaparral, grass, and all manner of obstructions of native growth covering the whole body of that land.

Mr. FORAKER. The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. KNOX] yesterday, in calling attention to the map that he made use of, said the blue on the map indicated a depth of 45 feet of water. I wanted to know whether that was over an unobstructed surface or whether there was woodland there; and if so, what was its height? I saw it stated somewhere by somebody that the country there is covered all over with trees. Is there anyone who can give any information about it?

Mr. MILLARD. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. MORGAN. Certainly.

Mr. MILLARD. I will say to the Senator from Ohio that there is occasionally a tree—in a hundred or a thousand feet. Those trees, as well as the jungle, will all be removed when the canal is constructed, which will make a regular waterway 45 feet deep and from 300 to 1,000 feet wide.

Mr. FORAKER. In other words, would it interfere with the sailing of a ship?

Mr. MILLARD. Not at all.

Mr. MORGAN. I will say to the Senator from Ohio that in the letter from Mr. Hunter, the president of the Manchester Canal, he gives the description the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER] is asking about. I will ask the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. KITTREDGE] to read it.

Mr. FORAKER. Perhaps that is where I saw the statement to which I was referring. I know I saw it somewhere, and I should like to have it read.

Mr. KITTREDGE. It is as follows:

Members of the committee who have visited the Isthmus will remember the appearance of the landscape which presents itself to a spectator standing on the foothills near Gatun and looking over the immense tract of country which it is proposed to submerge by the waters to be retained by the Gatun dam. With small exceptions the whole area is occupied by dense tropical vegetation. Trees of different species, some of great size, canebrakes, and jungle-like undergrowth clothe the hills and the valleys with an impenetrable covering. It is not proposed that any attempt should be made to clear the site of the lake from this herbaceous obstruction. Such a proposal would be impracticable; it would be in the nature of an attempt to translate the legendary labors of Sisyphus into more costly but equally futile efforts in modern life. It is doubtful whether it will be found possible to clear even the lines of the submerged channels, owing to the extraordinary rapidity of growth in an atmosphere so humid as that of Panama. The flooding of this great area will produce a submerged forest; every tree and shrub will perish, will, as experience has shown, ultimately fall, and the result will be that an unlimited supply of water-logged snags will be provided, which will furnish obstacles of the sort which are viewed with more dread than any other by those responsible for the safe passage of vessels along waterways, as the snags neither float nor sink, but are carried to and fro in the water, and nothing can be done either to determine the whereabouts of the invisible obstructions or to protect shipping from contact with them.

The presence of such unseen obstacles will render it essential for steamers, for the sake of their propellers, to crawl through these lake navigations instead of steaming full speed ahead, as the authors of the minority report appear to imagine.

Should any of the honorable members of the committee think that this account is overdrawn, I beg respectfully to suggest that they will call for particulars of the present condition of the embayment on the Atlantic side, into which the Rio Chagres discharges, and which I, together with two other members of the Board, had an opportunity of viewing when in Panama.

Mr. MORGAN. I will give a further answer to the Senator from Ohio in this way: Panama on the Caribbean side is, perhaps, the most queer and unaccountable country in the world. It is all covered over at intervals of from 50 to 500 yards with hills, like potato hills, that grow up from 50 to 250 feet high, all of them evidently of volcanic origin. They have been thrown up there and have taken their slopes from the weight and compactness of the material. They are not in ridges, though at the same time they are strung along in such a way that there is elevated ground between some of them. Underlying those hills, or intermixed with the soil of those hills and underlying the top surface, the loam surface of the general country, there is what is called a blanket of indurated clay. How far that extends nobody has ascertained. There has been very little inquiry—almost none at all—made into the geology of that country, and I think absolutely none into the chemistry of these composite clays called "rocks." That blanket is represented on the picture that is on the wall yonder by the dark salmon-color base.

It has a good many undulations, sometimes on the upper surface and sometimes down on its bottom surface. It has a great variety of combinations of materials. If you should bore a hole in that material and get out a specimen and examine its chemical analysis and then take another specimen 20 feet away, such a discrepancy would be shown between them that you would not suppose they had come from the same source at all. As to stratification, there are no pretensions to any, any more than there is in a bank of clay. It is not rock at all. With your knife you can cut it like you could a piece of chalk, and although it contains some sand, it will scarcely dull the knife. Some specimens of it you can crumble with your hand; others are harder.

Where did that blanket come from which extends as far down the coast at least as Colon, and, I think, down below the mouth of the Chagres River? Nobody pretends to account for it. It has in general appearance a dark, shady look, but there are differences in the coloring. Mr. Stevens, who evidently is not an educated geologist, says it is tufa. Well, if it is tufa it came out of volcanoes; it came out of the enormous extinct volcanoes that exist on the Culebra ridge and the Emperador ridge. Those volcanic pits are there yet. I have examined a witness, whose testimony appears somewhere in the reports, who said he went down into some of them. The gentleman, I think, is an officer of the Navy. You may pass by one, perhaps within 50 yards of it, without ever discovering it, because the growth is so thick you can not see anything. It is like looking through the wall of the Capitol here—you can not see anything through it.

It will never do to say that that bed of stuff they call "indurated clay"—some call it "rock"—with all these differences in density from place to place will answer the purposes of rock for the foundation of anything, because it has no stratification. It is not held together in long ranges, beds, or quarries by common elements of stratification. Every pound of it is separate from every other pound in its organization. Each part is an independent factor and has its own chemical ingredients. Imagine a gulch cut through there 204 feet deep. Cut down 204 feet into that material and more than half a mile across. You will go 400 yards perhaps, and you will strike another gulch that is 258 feet deep, and down at the bottom of it you will find coarse sand and gravel and water percolating through it and running through it away down below the depth of that blanket. It is this blanket of so-called "indurated clay" that they propose to build this dam upon. In building the dam, when they come to these gulches, what do they do? They do not remove anything except 40 or 50 feet of loam.

Mr. KITTREDGE. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Alabama yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. MORGAN. Certainly.

Mr. KITTREDGE. It is only 10 or 15 feet that they propose to remove from the surface.

Mr. MORGAN. Yes; that is right at that place.

Mr. HOPKINS. Most of it is indurated clay.

Mr. MORGAN. They remove that much of the surface, and they remove bushes and trees, etc., to get a fair field to work on, and then they commence piling dirt upon it, in the one case half a mile across and 205 feet deep, and in the other case nearly a quarter of a mile across and 258 feet deep. They propose, by piling that yellow bank of dirt that you see there marked on the map upon this stuff and across these gulches, so to compress the material that is contained in them, consisting of sand and gravel and wood and loam and clay, that it will be impervious to water, and will become a solid foundation for the earth dam.

Mr. Stearns says that in the building of these dams there is necessarily a shrinkage. I suppose that after this dam has been built there will be a shrinkage of 3 feet. I think I am right as to that. Well, if that whole dam be let down 3 feet, or even 3 inches, on account of the pressure of water above this gulch filled with the material I have indicated, there is no safety about it. While that settling is going on the water will have something to do with it, because the water will be held at 85 feet, and will it not find its way to its level by penetrating through that mass? Once it makes a hole through it, if it is not bigger than the hole of a crawfish, will not the effect be just like the effect of a crawfish hole in the embankments of the Mississippi River? So when the next high current comes you will find there is a flood working through there. The pressure of water will wash it out, just as it continually is doing every year.

That experience has been repeated a thousand times on the Mississippi River. And yet we are running that same danger under the advice of Professor Stearns, who made his experiment by forcing water through beds of sand and beds of gravel and beds of loam and beds of clay in his study at Boston, never having seen the isthmian canal except for eight days and not knowing to-day what are the ingredients of the soil on the Isthmus at Gatun. I tried to get him to define the indurated clay, but he could not tell what it was or where it came from.

If we have to rely for a foundation for this dam upon this blanket of indurated clay that already has been cut through by the waters of the Chagres River until there is one chasm there 258 feet deep, filled up with this varied material, and another one 204 feet deep and half a mile wide, have we not a right to suppose the same attack, from the same source, by the same river will undermine and sweep away all that we put on the top of it? How does piling material on the top of that blanket of indurated clay make it able to resist the washing effects of the Chagres River?

It makes no difference how firm this stuff may appear to be in your hands, or appear to the eye, it is nevertheless pervious to water when in motion. The water has already carved these big gulches into this material, and will continue to do it. In the gulch that is 258 feet deep it has cut entirely through the blanket, and these borings prove it.

I mentioned, as I was speaking a while ago, that, at all events and under any circumstances, the Senate of the United States ought to insist that the final plan of this canal should not be determined upon, especially if the sea-level is excluded, until there have been some reasonable explorations by borings of that material. Gen. Peter Hains sent to Panama and got me specimens of borings from Culebra Heights clear on down to Gatun. Then they were submitted to the Geological Survey here, and I have the chemical analyses in my possession.

There is no such thing as stratification in that soil. There is a mixture of sand and clay and iron, and things of that kind; but there is no stratification at all. It has not anything like the strength of adobe brick. When you come to apply water to it in a current, it washes it away and carries it off. Why is it that the Government of the United States, handling such a question as this at such a place as this and under such circumstances as these, has never thought to have its geologists go down there and examine its strength, and its chemists to take material from there and ascertain what its crushing strain is and what its breaking strain is and what its tensile strain is to the square inch or the square foot?

I say the Government has been extremely negligent. We have had working upon the canal a lot of men who were great builders of railroads, and the like of that, but they are not the men to look into the actual scientific conditions there and ascertain the real foundations upon which we are to act.

Mr. President, these doubts have very greatly impressed me. I have nothing to go by but the testimony of the witnesses brought here—Mr. Noble, and Mr. Stearns and Mr. Stevens—and standing on that and guiding myself entirely by the testimony they have given, I come to the conclusion that it would be extra hazardous to cast a vote to build a dam at Gatun. I would rather build it at Bohio than at Gatun. It is easier to do it, and it will have a better foundation. At Bohio they have actual rock foundation at a hundred and sixty-eight feet, instead of a hundred and twenty-eight feet below sea level. We have suffered enough in having this question forced ahead upon the testimony and the advice and the recommendations of men who did not know what they were talking about and did not take pains to find out.

That great commission, with these great men upon it—one of whom was Mr. Noble, George S. Morison was another, Admiral Walker was another—ascertained and reported to the Congress of the United States, in the report I have here, in so many words, as the result of borings at Bohio, that they had found solid rock clear across between the points of the ridges in that valley at a hundred and twenty-eight feet. I did not believe it at the time. Not that I thought they were misrepresenting, but because I knew that they had not used the proper instrumentalities to ascertain the fact. That is to say, they used these water drills, these churn drills, and when you strike a bowlder with one of them, you can not tell whether it is a foot thick or a thousand feet thick. You can not enter it. But they found these bowlders, scattered across at convenient distances, I suppose, and they reported to the Government of the United States that solid rock foundations were found there at a hundred and twenty-eight feet.

While that was an immense departure from any depth for a dam that had ever been built anywhere in the world—a tremendous exaggeration of what we conceived to be our opportunity to build dams—we recklessly adopted it. Mr. Wallace was appointed chief engineer, and he did not believe it. He knew the kind of drills they had used. He used diamond drills. Instead of finding solid rock at a hundred and twenty-eight feet, he went down to a hundred and sixty-eight feet, and when he found it he went into it with his diamond drills and proved it.

Now, the whole of this trouble that we are in to-day has resulted from the fact that we were misled by these Commissioners as to 40 feet in the depth of the rock below sea level at Bohio. I do not say intentionally. I do not believe that. Nevertheless we were misled. But in the haste of action they came off and left the men there to bore the holes, and they were here in Washington when the holes were bored and they got the reports. I saw the borings they brought up. I got their report. The Congress of the United States changed the whole system of canalization upon the basis of that report, and the President changed the location of the canal to Panama. It has been really the Iliad of all our woes and is to-day, and now, when we have escaped from that, do not let us venture in a headstrong and precipitate way to do the same thing at Gatun under circumstances very much more difficult than existed at Bohio. The difference is 258 feet at Gatun and 168 at Bohio, with no rock foundation at Gatun.

Mr. TALIAFERRO. Two hundred and fifty feet at Gatun.

Mr. MORGAN. Two hundred and fifty-eight feet at Gatun. That is the difference between what they call the "rock level," and when they get down 258 feet, instead of going to the rock level, after getting through the blanket, they have found flowing water amongst coarse gravel.

I say there never was more danger in a proposition that was ever advanced to a legislative tribunal in this world than is advanced in the Gatun dam and recommended to the Congress of the United States.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. President, after several years' consideration and debate Congress decided to build an interoceanic canal at Panama. Now, years after we decided to construct a canal, and after examinations and reports by engineers and commissions from the time of De Lesseps to the present day, the result of which is a strong preponderance of evidence in behalf of a certain type of canal, we are endeavoring to determine what kind of a canal we shall build. Every Senator on this floor desires to vote right, to vote for the canal which will be constructed in the shortest period of time, one which will be substantial and reliable, and afford the best means of transportation from ocean to ocean. We have heard the opinions, and the testimony is very voluminous, of scientific men and of engineers. Many who reported in previous years have changed their minds. Even our scientific friends change their minds about as often as the wind changes down in the Gulf of Mexico in the month of August, which is every few hours. Having the same common object in view, to do that which is for the best interest of commerce, and to the honor of our country, some of us have given a cursory reading to the testimony, and must draw our own conclusions. Certainly every one of us prefers a sea-level canal if it be practicable to build it and to build it within a reasonable time, as much as we prefer to walk on the level ground rather than to walk upstairs step by step, as much as we prefer to travel in a steamer rather than to swim in the water. The question, therefore, is what is the practical thing, the most expedient thing for us to do in our official capacity representing the people of the country.

Throughout the whole course of canal history the one fact that stands out with vivid distinctness is the element of delay. The Mexicans call it "mañana"—to-morrow, next month, next year—and it has been procrastinated from time to time. Young, in his Night Thoughts, tells us "Procrastination is the thief of time." It was so under French management. I am sorry to say that we appear to be entering upon the same course. Through delay over $250,000,000 of the money of the French people was frittered away with practically no results, except to show that the original plan of De Lesseps was impracticable, for the reason that there was not money enough available in one of the richest countries on earth to dig a tide-level canal. Out of this was developed the feasibility of constructing a lock canal at a comparatively reasonable cost and in a reasonable time. If we are wise we shall accept the lesson taught us by the experience of France, avoid the lamentable mistake made by the enthusiastic French engineers, and adopt a plan of canal that is, I think, universally accepted as practicable, safe, and capable of execution within a period which will not cause the patience of a willing people to become exhausted. Only in this way, I believe, can we avoid another and a greater scandal than that under which the French canal scheme is so deeply buried.

Mr. SCOTT. May I ask the Senator from California a question?

Mr. PERKINS. With pleasure.

Mr. SCOTT. The Senator in making this speech to us, who are seeking light, I take it is making it from the experience of a man who knows the sea, of a man who knows what it is to navigate a vessel. Upon that theory he is giving us his personal experience, we may say, with respect to what he believes to be the proper and best type.

Mr. PERKINS. It is said that a wise man learns from the experience of others. One who is not so wise ought to learn something from his own experience. I have had some practical knowledge in building dams, in digging ditches, etc., but they have resulted in a financial way similar to the experience of the French people in constructing the Panama sea-level canal. So the few remarks I am making are more to define my own position and why I have come to this conclusion. I was in favor of a sea-level canal, but after investigating it somewhat I have come to the conclusion which I am endeavoring now to present. Undoubtedly my distinguished friend the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. KITTREDGE], and the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MILLARD], and other members of the committee who have devoted months to a study of this question, are better equipped and have a greater fund of knowledge to impart to us relative to this than it is possible for us to have who have given it only a cursory examination.

It would not be profitable to recapitulate the investigations and examinations made under French auspices to determine the type of canal practicable at Panama within a reasonable time and at a reasonable cost. The Technical Commission, of which W. Henry Hunter, engineer of the Manchester Canal, was a member, and who has been quoted here in favor of a sea-level canal, made an exhaustive examination and a full report, from which there was no dissent. The principles governing the Commission in its treatment of the problems were as follows:

(1) Every solution must be rejected a priori which, in itself and apart from any consideration of time and expense, does not present absolute guaranty of certain success; (2) in preparing the plans of the several structures required by so important and complicated a work, such types only should be adopted as have been proven to be satisfactory by experience, barring out all innovations which might lead to failure; (3) in the examination of all questions the special conditions under which the work is to be executed should be taken into account.

Considering the problems presented, therefore, in accordance with these same rules, the Commission found that the problem of caring for the Chagres River and its overflow waters was of transcendent importance. In the case of a sea-level canal, this problem, it was found, could not be solved within the limits of safety which the Commission had laid down. The Commission said:

To turn the stream completely from its course and to direct it to the Pacific slope * * * would be a colossal undertaking, requiring an amount of labor which would render it impracticable. It therefore becomes necessary to make of the river and of the canal two neighbors whose character and wants are to be harmonized. * * * An artificial bed established at a higher elevation than the canal would prove a work very difficult to execute, but also to be a danger, a permanent menace to the canal itself. We can consequently state that the principal obstacle to the execution of a canal without locks results less from the difficulties entailed by the execution of the deep cut at the summit than from those which spring from the proximity of the Chagres in the region to be crossed before reaching that summit. *It will not, perhaps, be too much to maintain that herein lies an obstacle insurmountable to a conception of that kind. * * * We can only learn from the unfortunate past that material proof has been furnished that a canal without locks to unite the two oceans is an undertaking, the realization of which can not be thought of, certainly for a long time to come.*

How Mr. Hunter, who signed this report, can make his later opinion tally with it is a labor which I will leave him to perform. I am unable to do so for him or to reconcile the opinion he then advanced with the letter which was placed on our desks a few weeks ago. He has since been quoted here as an advocate of a sea-level canal, and in a letter which has been printed for the information of the Senate he refers to the problem of the Chagres River and its overflow as a matter of no consequence whatever—a point which he formerly considered of absolutely vital importance. And yet we have no authentic report that the clouds have not yielded the moisture with as much prolificness as they did prior to the time he made that report. Our information is that there are 120 inches of rainfall on an average on the Caribbean side of the Isthmus of Panama, while on the summit it averages 90 inches per annum and on the Pacific slope about 75 inches.

Here is what Mr. Hunter says in his latest communication:

Much necessary apprehension has been expressed both as to the effect and as to the probable cost of the works required for the regulation of the side streams which will flow into the sea-level canal. The works will be very simple in their design and very direct in their operation. No elaborate systems of masonry construction, for the purpose of converting the streams into cascades, will be required or need be contemplated. It will suffice if the streams, when not diverted altogether, whether higher or lower in level (as compared with the level of water in the canal), are in each case allowed to fall directly into a pool to be formed at the foot of each, from which pool the water will flow over a weir into the canal, the short channel from the weir being laid out on such lines and at such depths as will reduce velocity to the point required to eliminate appreciable current.

Therefore I think his testimony, as my legal friends would say in presenting it to the jury, would amount to nothing as far as his opinion is concerned, and the letter which I read with much interest, and which has been placed upon our desks——

Mr. KITTREDGE. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. PERKINS. With pleasure.

Mr. KITTREDGE. Is it not a fact that Mr. Hunter, in declaring for the type of canal suggested by the Senator, was limited by the French company to the construction of a canal within a given time and within a given cost?

Mr. PERKINS. I think if I send for a physician and ask him to examine me to determine whether I have any symptoms of rheumatism, and he finds some other disease, he would be false to his profession if he did not give me a correct diagnosis of the case, such as his professional ability would warrant him in giving. So I say about Mr. Hunter——

Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. PERKINS. With pleasure.

Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. Hunter himself does not say that the point made by the Senator from South Dakota is the one which changed his mind.

Mr. PERKINS. We will leave that to Mr. Hunter, for his opinion as to the canal has very little weight with me.

Mr. FORAKER. May I ask the Senator from Illinois whether Mr. Hunter does anywhere state what was the cause of his change of opinion?

Mr. HOPKINS. My remembrance now is that he has not given a substantial, reasonable explanation for his change of opinion, but——

Mr. FORAKER. Does the Senator know whether an inquiry was made of him as to that?

Mr. HOPKINS. I will say to the Senator that Mr. Hunter never appeared before our committee, and that the communication which has been read here is one, as I remember, that was never given to our committee, but to one member, who entered into a private correspondence with him.

Mr. FORAKER. It seems to be in the nature of a letter.

Mr. HOPKINS. Yes; not to the committee, but to a member of it.

Mr. PERKINS. I submit that this remarkable change of opinion demands a fuller explanation than the reader of Mr. Hunter's letter can make for himself.

Chief Engineer Stevens, in his testimony before the Senate committee, most vividly brought out the strength of the opinion of the technical commission and the weakness of Mr. Hunter's later views. I desire to say in passing that while I have never met Mr. Stevens, I know he stands high in his profession. I know he is a patriotic, true American. I know he is placed in charge as chief engineer of this greatest undertaking of the present generation; and who is there who has a greater interest, who is more desirous of making a success of the work in which he is engaged than is the chief engineer of this great enterprise? Therefore, I give more weight to him, not because he is an American, and yet I feel very kindly toward my own, but I certainly give more weight to him as an engineer than I do to Mr. Hunter, our British friend across the water, who came here for a consideration and is not actuated or animated by any patriotic motives. Mr. Stevens says:

Now, you can put this picture on the plates of your minds: You would have practically, under this present majority report of a sea-level canal, a little, narrow, tortuous strip, the sewer of the country, down at the bottom of everything, with torrential mountain streams pouring down there into it with a fall of from 15 to 130 feet. You have got a current there which, from the best scientific authority we can get, figures out 3 miles an hour. This is a channel 150 feet wide nearly the entire way, only 150 feet wide at the bottom, with sharp curvature, and less than twice the width of the vessel that will have to navigate it, with from 2 to 4 feet of water under their keels, going against a current of nearly 3 miles an hour, which would require them to run at least 7 miles an hour to keep steerageway with their own steam. I do not think there is a shipowner or a ship company on earth that would put a ship through that canal.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. PERKINS. With pleasure.

Mr. FORAKER. The Senator's comment on the current reminds me of a little information I should like to get from somebody on that point. I have not yet heard anybody tell which way this current is to run, north or south, or whether it is to run constantly in the same direction, or whether the tides affect it, and part of the time it will run one way and part of the time another. Can the Senator give us any information on that point?

Mr. PERKINS. I am told that the water in the canal seeks its level, and part of it runs east and part of it runs to the west.

Mr. FORAKER. I know; but where does it come from?

Mr. PERKINS. It comes from the Chagres River, or this lake.

Mr. FORAKER. Does not the water flow in from both sides? The canal connects the two oceans, and I supposed there would be a current all the way through at one time in one direction and at another in another, accordingly as the tides run. But nobody has yet been able to give me any information on that point. I have made the inquiry several times.

Mr. PERKINS. A sea-level canal——

Mr. FORAKER. If the Senator will allow me to interrupt him just a little further——

Mr. PERKINS. Certainly.

Mr. FORAKER. I do not know how an engineer can compute what the current will be, how rapidly it is running, until it is first determined which way it is going to run.

Mr. PERKINS. In a lock canal there is supposed to be still water. In the sea-level canal the tide——

Mr. FORAKER. I am talking of the sea-level canal, of course.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. PERKINS. With pleasure.

Mr. NELSON. In a sea-level canal would it be any more than what we call "tidal currents" resulting from the ebb and flow of the tide? And how could that be as much as 3 miles an hour?

Mr. PERKINS. The Senator must remember that there are pouring into the canal some thirteen streams——

Mr. HOPKINS. Seventeen.

Mr. PERKINS. With so many thousands of inches of water coming from these mountain streams, and with the rainfall——

Mr. FORAKER. The testimony, so far as I have read it, shows that a good part of the time there is not very much water coming from these streams. There is an appreciable amount and an amount that affects the current only when they are having the torrential rains, making torrential floods.

Mr. HOPKINS. This covers between eight and nine months of the year. Of course, during the dry season it is a minimum. The flow then is very light.

Mr. FORAKER. So I understand.

Mr. HOPKINS. But eight or nine months in the year they have these tremendous rains, when the rivers flow with tremendous current down into the canal. It is provided, even with the Gamboa dam, that during this season 15,000 cubic inches per second will pass into the canal where it is about a hundred and thirty feet above——

Mr. FORAKER. But during the dry season there will be a current 40 feet in depth——

Mr. KITTREDGE. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. PERKINS. We are all in search of light, and the more information we can receive upon this subject, the more intelligently we can vote to-morrow. No one interrupts me at all. I yield to the Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. KITTREDGE. This matter of currents is apparently not well understood. As a matter of fact the currents caused by the introduction of the waters from the streams tributary to the Chagres River is negligible. It does not exceed one mile to one mile and a half per hour, except in times of great floods, and then for a period of not exceeding sixty hours, judging by the history of floods, it may reach two miles and six-tenths per hour. That current, according to the statements of shipmasters and pilots, whose evidence appears in the RECORD as a part of the remarks submitted by me two or three weeks ago, is not regarded by any one of them as any obstacle to easy transportation in the canal.

Mr. HOPKINS. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. PERKINS. With pleasure.

Mr. HOPKINS. If the Senator will allow me, I desire to put in opposition to the statement made by the Senator from South Dakota that of the chief engineer of the Suez Canal, who says that that canal is less tortuous than the proposed sea-level canal, and it is difficult to navigate the larger ships which go through the canal, and the larger ships are only 500 feet in length, a little over half the size of the larger ships that are proposed to be navigated through this canal. So, upon the basis of the evidence offered by the chief engineer of the Suez Canal, it would be utterly impossible to navigate one of the larger ships, even on the slower current, as expressed by the Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. MALLORY. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. PERKINS. Certainly.

Mr. MALLORY. I should like to ask the Senator from California if he is certain that in Mr. Stevens's remarks the current referred to is the current caused by the influx of water from the tributary streams or whether it is the tidal current that may flow though there by reason of the higher tide on the Pacific.

Mr. PERKINS. I think it means the tide on the Pacific. I stopped in the middle of the quotation. I will quote further from Mr. Stevens.

Mr. MALLORY. What I wanted to say in this connection is that it strikes me if that is the current he is referring to it will not run in the same direction all the time, that it will vary in its direction according to whether there is a rising tide or a falling tide, and that ought to be largely controlled by the lock at the Pacific end of the canal.

Mr. PERKINS. But let us suppose that we have constructed a "little, narrow, tortuous strip, the sewer of the country, down at the bottom of everything." We shall not even then have a canal without locks. A lock at the Pacific end is absolutely necessary, on account of the high tides of Panama Bay, and if a high-tide level is adopted there will have to be a lock at each end, so where would be the advantage over a canal at a higher elevation? And the curious fact is developed from this study of level that any level except that of Pacific high tide would compel the lowering of vessels into the canal for one-half the time. This is a point which has been brought out very clearly by Hon. William Ham Hall, of San Francisco, Cal., member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, who is eminently qualified to deal with the subject through his education, training, and experience.

I wish to say, in passing, that when I was governor I had the honor of appointing Mr. Hall State engineer of California. He was a stanch Democrat. He could not see any good in any Republican, but I saw good in him as an engineer, and I selected him by reason of his eminent qualifications. He performed the duties with so much ability that my Democratic successor reappointed him after he had served during my administration. I wish to quote what Mr. Hall said, and I want to reiterate that he is a master of his profession, a man of the highest character and integrity, who went to Panama himself for the French company when they were trying to reorganize, and made a report to his principals in Paris.

On this subject, Mr. Hall writes:

> Thus far all the sea-level projects have been for the mean sea or, say, mean-tide plane. The extreme tide movement is about 2 feet at the Atlantic and 20 feet at the Pacific end. Suppose there were 20 feet of tide at the Atlantic as well as the Pacific terminus, would you cut for a mean-tide level then? Think a moment. A lock would be an absolute necessity at each end. For about half the time your water plane would be below sea level at both ends, or for more than half the time at one end or the other.

I think Mr. Hall has answered the question propounded by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. FORAKER], that this sea-level canal would be half the time running one way and half the time the other.

> With respect to the waters you sought to join, for half the time your canal would be down in a hole. It would cost much money for the extra excavation to put it there. Would it seem rational to do so? Would you feel justified in so doing? The locks could as well perform the function of raising all the entering vessels to the high-tide plane. The reverse of this would apply to the exits. Only a small proportion of vessels could be passed through without lockage, even if the canal plane were at mean sea level. Remember, you could have a superabundance of water for lockage to and from the high-tide plane in the canal to any plane the tide happened to be at in the sea, or the reverse.
>
> I hope the thoughtful engineer, even though he has been inclined to the sea-level idea of the Panama Canal, will agree with me in this, that if there were 20 feet, say, of tidal movement in both seas, instead of in one only, it would be an absurdity to put the canal water plane at any lower than about ordinarily high full tide. If, then, it would be absurd to stick the canal down in a hole with respect to the water as it would be half of the time at both ends, how are we to look upon the proposal to put it in a hole with respect to the water plane half the time at one end? It would not be polite to speak of this latter proposition as any part of an absurdity, though logically it would seem to be half of an absurdity. We might, however, refer to it as a strange oversight.

It is clearly seen that with a mean-tide level there will be developed the absurdity of lowering vessels into the canal at the Pacific end about half the time. Mr. Hall continues:

> That, it seems to me, would be a wasteful engineering error—to cut a waterway from sea to sea, through a summit 333 feet in elevation, to a plane actually lower than nature, for nearly half the time at one end of it, will present the vessels to be taken into it—to make a cutting into which nearly one-fourth of all the vessel entrances would have to be effected by lowering them, and nearly a fourth of the exits by raising them. And for what? To save one lock and one lockage near the Atlantic end; for, remember, there must be a lock near the Pacific end on account of the tidal movement, and that lock could as well raise and deliver all vessels to the high-tide plane as raise or lower them to the mean-tide plane.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. PERKINS. With pleasure.

Mr. CARTER. In the statement the Senator has just quoted it is set forth that the sea-level canal would be constructed only for the purpose of avoiding the construction of one lock. Is it not the fact that three locks are contemplated in the lock plan of canal?

Mr. PERKINS. Yes, Mr. President, there are three locks of 28½ feet each, raised 85 feet; but he says there should be two locks there, one a spare lock and then one on the Caribbean Sea, as I understand it.

Mr. CARTER. In the sea-level plan you contemplate a tide lock on the Pacific?

Mr. PERKINS. That is an absolute necessity.

Mr. CARTER. And a tide lock on the Caribbean Sea?

Mr. PERKINS. That I am not so sure about.

Mr. TALIAFERRO. Mr. President——

Mr. CARTER. Another question and then I will be through. What will be the lift, or the drop, as the case may be, in the tide lock on the Pacific?

Mr. PERKINS. I will say to the Senator from Montana that, as he perhaps is aware, it is not alone the rise and fall of the tide naturally, but the contour of Panama Bay is such that the tide rises from 20 to as high as 23 feet, and for that reason the steamships now operating on the Pacific coast are unable to come into the wharf and they anchor out and do their lighterage in Panama.

Mr. CARTER. So the lock canal, as contemplated by the minority report, involves a lift of only 60 feet in excess of what the sea-level canal would require on the Pacific coast?

Mr. PERKINS. I so understand it.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. PERKINS. With pleasure.

Mr. FORAKER. I am only seeking for information. I do not have any such understanding. I understand that the lock, or rather a gate, in the sea-level canal to control the inflow of the tide does not lift the ship at all; that half the time it stands open. I have seen the statement in the testimony of the engineers that it is merely to regulate the inflow of the tide from the sea.

Mr. PERKINS. There is a rise and fall of 20 feet, we will say, at mean tide, and if the ship comes in from the Pacific coast it must be lowered 20 feet, if the water is below that in the canal. If it is going out it must wait until the water is raised 20 feet inside before it can pass out into Panama Bay.

Mr. FORAKER. Is there to be a lock there as well as a gate?

Mr. PERKINS. A lock is contemplated, and necessarily so, the report of this engineer says.

Mr. CARTER. I presume that a vessel, for instance, coming through the canal from the north and facing a solid body of water in the ocean held by a gate 25 feet higher than the water in the canal would of necessity have to go through a lock in order to avoid being submerged, or wait, as the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. SCOTT] suggests to me, until the mean tide has been reached.

Mr. KITTREDGE. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. PERKINS. Certainly.

Mr. KITTREDGE. If the Senator from California had read the reports of the engineers regarding this tidal lock, or remembered them, he would not have permitted the inaccurate statements to have gone unchallenged. The tide on the Pacific varies from 11 to 21 feet, and it does not mean that you are confronted by a wall of 20 or 30 feet of water or anything of the sort. Many of the engineers tell us that a tidal lock is absolutely unnecessary at the Pacific coast. The tidal lock was mentioned and put in the report simply in an excess of caution to operate as a gate or break, whatever you may call it, and also in case of necessity to enable boats to pass in and out.

Mr. HOPKINS. Will the Senator from California yield a moment before the Senator from South Dakota takes his seat? I confess I have not understood the testimony as the Senator has expressed it. What engineer has said that it is unnecessary to have a tidal lock on the Pacific side?

Mr. KITTREDGE. I am unable to give the name of the engineer; but that testimony appeared before our committee, and is in the record as a part of the proceedings before the Committee on Interoceanic Canals.

Mr. HOPKINS. Some of the engineers have said that that lock could be opened a part of the time; but that is denied by the American engineers and, in my judgment, by the best engineering testimony that we had before us.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. President——

Mr. HOPKINS. It has been suggested by some of the foreign engineers that it could be open a part of the time, but the American engineers have contended that in the canals abroad where they supposed they could be open it has been found for safe navigation that they should be closed.

Mr. KITTREDGE. If the Senator will yield further——

Mr. PERKINS. Certainly.

Mr. KITTREDGE. The engineers of whom the Senator from Illinois has just spoken all agree that for at least half the time the gates stand wide open.

Mr. HOPKINS. I beg the Senator's pardon. I do not understand the evidence that way.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. President, here is the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD giving an account of the Coast and Geodetic Survey's report, which shows that the average mean tide at Panama is 16 feet. What I am giving is not what I say, but is a quotation from what William Ham Hall says, a man of the highest standing in his profession as a civil engineer and a member of the American Society of Technical Engineers. His testimony has never been impeached; neither has he ever contradicted himself, as Mr. Engineer Hunter has done.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President, I want to call the Senator's attention to the fact that Mr. Hunter has come into this matter, in discussing what his testimony is, in a way that ought to protect him from any reflections upon him that are not really necessary. I find that the President of the United States requested the Government of Great Britain to nominate some engineer, and that the President, when the Government of Great Britain had nominated Mr. Hunter, appointed him and requested him to come here and render this service. It does not seem to have been a matter about which there was any higgling or dickering or bargaining with a view to have a consideration named, but that he did it like men very frequently engage in work of world-wide importance.

While it is said here that he was at one time in favor of a lock canal and is now in favor of a sea-level, and while it does not appear that there is any explanation given for that change of mind, or apparent change of mind, yet, from reading what I have after Mr. Hunter, he appears to me, at any rate—and I am sure I have no bias about it—in an entirely creditable way. He seems to be a man who is seeking to give us the benefit of his judgment. He may be mistaken about it, but I think, under all the circumstances, he ought to be spared here in our discussion from anything like a reflection upon him, because it is impossible for him to defend himself.

Mr. PERKINS. I fully agree with my friend from Ohio. I have been particularly careful not to reflect upon him. I simply have read an extract from his first report and also from the letter that was placed upon our desks. I said I was unable to reconcile the difference; I will leave it to him to do. If that is not the most charitable criticism one can make of another, I do not know what is.

Mr. FORAKER. The remark I referred to more particularly was the one made by the Senator earlier in the course of his remarks, when he said he would prefer a man who was acting from patriotic and public-spirited impulses rather than a man who had come here for a consideration.

Mr. PERKINS. I think I still entertain that view; but I do not mean——

Mr. FORAKER. But I think the Senator might spare Mr. Hunter from reflections of that kind, when he will remember that Mr. Hunter is not in a situation to defend himself. I do not know the man; I never saw him; I have no interest in him.

Mr. PERKINS. My dear Senator, that certainly is not reflecting upon him. I simply thought his letter left something to him to explain, and undoubtedly he will do so to our satisfaction, and that I preferred an American to a foreigner. Of course I presume that is one of my mental infirmities, for which I crave the charity of my friends.

Mr. FORAKER. The Senator said it was entirely agreeable to him to be interrupted, and——

Mr. PERKINS. I like to have interruptions.

Mr. FORAKER. I should like to interrupt him further. What I want to call attention to is that I do not think there is anything in this record which justifies us in concluding that Mr. Hunter is here simply for the compensation that he might be able to realize from it, but he is appointed in a way that is of the highest credit to him.

Mr. PERKINS. I think so.

Mr. FORAKER. Therefore, in reading after him, I think he has shown himself to have given this subject a great deal of careful study. He may have reached wrong conclusions, but I think he is entitled to most respectful consideration in every way.

Mr. PERKINS. I fully concur in what my friend from Ohio has said. No one has more respect and admiration for him, and I will impute to him none but the purest motives. Certainly only by inference have I reflected upon him.

However, the American engineer, Mr. Hall, says:

> I must confess at the outset, therefore, that the proposal to buy the advantage of floating ships from the Atlantic into the canal without lockage at all, at the expense of arranging to lower them into it almost half the time from the Pacific, does not appeal to me as being sound, especially when the cost will be the deepening of the canal 6 to 9 feet for its entire length, and the saving will be only one lock for about a 7 to 10 foot lift. (A foot of these latter figures is on account of the tide at Colon.)

Mr. Hall says further:

> The 6 to 9 feet of excavation would necessarily be the most expensive 6 to 9 feet in depth of the entire cutting. Aside from its being the deepest below water level, and probably the most expensive per cubic yard, it, of course, would lower the whole cutting, slopes and all, that much, and would extend the slopes out farther and make more excavation on them than any 6 to 9 feet above it. I venture to say that its cost would be materially more than the cost of a pair of locks with a 10-foot lift. But aside from any showing on the basis of comparative estimates which might be made on this question, as a broad economic problem it would surely be wasteful to cut a waterway through a land summit to a depth such that vessels would at times have to be lowered into it from the waters it was intended to join. Though a great nation foots the bills and though the national aim is above considering the rate of return to be obtained, still it is the honorable province of the engineer not to lead his client into the violation of broad economic laws by the indulging of mere sentiment.

If the engineering absurdity of a mean-tide level is not adopted, there remains the full-tide level, and this level must be that of full tide at Panama. This would carry through to the Atlantic end of the canal a water surface 7 feet or more above the range of high tide of the Atlantic. Another lock would therefore be necessary at the Colon end, making a full lock canal, though at tide level. But if we must have two locks at tide level there will be just as great interference with commerce as there would be if there were locks lifting vessels 40 or 60 feet instead of 10. There would be obviously no advantage whatever over a high-level canal, while the cost of excavating down to the tide level would double the cost of the work and, perhaps, more than double the time within which it could be executed. Everyone is, I think, familiar with the figures of cost worked out by Frederick P. Stearns, chief engineer of the Massachusetts metropolitan water and sewage board. The cost of a lock canal, completed in nine years, he gives as $219,000,000; of a sea-level canal, which will take twice as long to build, $410,000,000. The difference in the interest alone on the money borrowed at 2 per cent for construction work is enormous, the saving being $60,000,000 to the time of completion alone. And when we have spent this enormous amount of money, have consumed so many precious years, and have added so many millions of dollars to our interest account, we still have a lock canal, with all the disadvantages which are urged against a canal with locks.

It seems to me, therefore, that the sane and safe plan is that of a high-level canal. Under the sea-level plan we have to lift or lower ships by locks. Why, then, do we not lift or lower them 40, 50, or 60 feet, as the case may be, instead of 10, if by so doing we can have just as efficient a canal, save $200,000,000, nine or ten years, and cut down our canal-interest payments $60,000,000? From every point of view this seems the only wise course to pursue, and I think that until recently that was the general opinion. The recent earthquake in California caused some who held it to modify their views, on the ground that such a disturbance at Panama would be likely to ruin the engineering works incident to a high-level canal. But this very earthquake has demonstrated the absolute safety of such construction as is proposed, and in support of this assertion I will read an editorial from that unimpeachable engineering authority, the Scientific American. In the issue of June 9, 1906, appears the following:

The San Francisco earthquake is responsible for the Senate Committee on the Panama Canal having cast its vote, by a narrow margin of one, in favor of a sea-level canal. To those of us who have followed closely the course of the lengthy hearing before this committee it was evident that there was a growing conviction that the lock canal was the better type to build, and it looked for a while as though there might be a nearly unanimous vote to this effect. The disaster of April 18, however, was bound to awaken solicitude as to the fate of locks and dams at Panama in case a similar disturbance should visit the Isthmus after the canal was built, and the Senate committee, by a vote of six to five, has committed itself to the sea-level canal, its decision being largely due to the imaginary dangers of earthquake.

We say "imaginary," for, as a matter of fact, and we wish to say this with all emphasis, the San Francisco earthquake, so far from shaking our faith in massive monolithic structures of the character that will be used for a lock canal at Panama, has triumphantly vindicated such structures, and proved that they can go through the severest earthquake practically unharmed.

For it so happens that there exist in the line of the main earthquake fault several large earth or cement structures of the same character or built of the class of materials as it is supposed would be imperiled if the lock canal were subjected to earthquake shock. These structures form part of the extensive scheme of works by which San Francisco is supplied with water, and they include several large dams for the impounding of water. The most important of these, Pilarcitos dam, is a mound of earth 120 feet in height and similar in construction to, though much lighter in its total mass and ability to resist destruction, than the Gatun dam at Panama. Another important dam is that by which San Andreas Lake is formed—and this is a structure of earth and clay, approximately 100 feet in height above the natural surface of the ground. A third dam, which came directly in the line of the earthquake fault, was that at Crystal Spring. This is a concrete structure of unusually massive proportions, which extends to a height of 115 feet above the ground.

This is in California, within some 40 or 50 miles of San Francisco—

Now, it is evident that the conditions were such that the passage of the main line of disturbance through the valley in which these structures have been erected afforded a colossal testing laboratory, in which the strength both of earth and concrete structures of great size was put to a full-sized test. What concrete and earth endured at these places under one of the severest earthquake shocks on record they may be depended upon to endure again, and the lessons taught on that early morning of April 18 are good for all time and any place. The best description of the effect of the earthquake in this region is that given by Mr. Charles Derleth, associate professor of structural engineering at the University of California, whose observations are recorded in a recent article in the Engineering News. The Pilarcitos reservoir he found to be thoroughly intact and full of water, and its great earthen dam was not injuriously affected. Although the main fault line of the earthquake runs through Crystal Spring Lake, it appears to have in no way affected the imperviousness of its bottom, since the reservoir, two weeks after the earthquake, was found to be full of water. The fault line passes directly through the older dam, which separates the lake into halves, yet the dam was not seriously affected. Again, it was found that though the line of disturbance touches the eastern edge of the San Andreas earth and clay dam, which is nearly 100 feet in height, and there is evidence that it was subjected to a most severe shock, it retains the water just as well as it did before the earthquake, and this in spite of the fact that there are cracks running through the ground against which the dam abuts. So, again, the concrete dam at Crystal Spring, 115 feet in height, shows not the slightest crack, although it was subjected to a series of thrusts and pulls in vertical planes along its axis.

It is impossible to resist the force of the argument that if these earthen dams in California could pass uninjured through the severe shock and wrenching to which they were subjected, the much more massive Gatun dam, built in a region where shocks are infrequent and of comparatively moderate intensity, might be considered to be practically earthquake proof. So, again, it may fairly well be argued that if a dam of simple concrete 115 feet in height, endured the ordeal of the earthquake without developing a single crack, the 75-foot walls of the Gatun locks, built as they will be, not of simple concrete, but of concrete stiffened, toughened, and thoroughly tied together with steel rods, and with a special eye to resisting earthquake stresses, will present no element of danger to the permanence of the canal.

There is no doubt whatever as to the feasibility of building a canal at Panama of either type proposed. The difference between the two plans resolves itself into a simple question of time and money. Have we so much of both to spare that we need take no heed of the future? Have we forgotten the experience of the French people, who sunk in the enterprise more money than it would cost to build a lock canal and after years of weary delay refused to contribute more? Are we to become heirs to the scandals which surrounded the French undertaking, begun under as favorable auspices as has our own; and is postponement and delay again to disgust the world with the whole scheme, with an American reproduction of the French fiasco at the end?

A canal with locks can be built in eight or nine years if work is conducted on business principles and removed from the influence of politics. Divide the canal route into sections and give each section to the lowest responsible bidder, and you will have results—not otherwise. If the canal is to be built at all it must be built by business men and under business methods, such methods as have built the great railroads of our country, such methods as have developed the mines of our country, such methods as have reclaimed the swamps and the valleys and made them bloom like a green bay tree. We must bring to our aid business principles and conduct this work on business lines, uninfluenced by political or other considerations. If the canal is to be built at all it must be built on those lines. Under the efficient management of men experienced in great undertakings of this kind a canal can be constructed that will be more efficient in all respects than such a sea-level canal as is contemplated. It could be deepened to 50 feet and widened to 300 at a small fraction of the cost of excavating 85 feet of earth along the entire course and then obtaining not only a canal with locks, but a canal of insufficient width and a depth at the limit of safety, which width and depth could not be increased without enormous expense and at the cost of suspension of traffic. To construct a sea-level canal of the dimensions to safely provide for commerce would require the expenditure of fully $600,000,000, for practically twice as much work would have to be performed, and we should then have only a lock canal whose capacity would be limited by the work of the lock itself. This proposed narrow canal of 150 feet in width at the bottom is wholly inadequate for the purposes of commerce. We should have only a lock canal whose capacity would be limited by the work of the lock itself.

I have been asked, in passing, what I know about lock canals. Mr. President, in this country we have one of the greatest lock canals in the world, and the same principles upon which that is conducted this Panama Canal would be conducted. Last year there passed through the Soo Canal, which connects, as you know, Lake Superior with Lake Huron, 44,000,000 tons of freight in vessels. In one day alone, I am informed, over forty vessels passed through that canal. So, if we construct this lock canal, its facilities will be such that it will give transportation to all vessels that desire to pass through it, while a sea-level canal has many disadvantages for vessels while en route through the canal. No more vessels could go through in a day than the number that the lock could handle, and in consequence a lock of similar capacity on the Atlantic end would not interfere in the least with the efficiency of the canal. Therefore should we expend even four times as much money and time on a sea-level canal as we propose to spend on a lock canal, we should in the end have a waterway in no way more efficient than one constructed on a higher level. A sea-level system of the dimensions proposed would not be so efficient as the proposed lock canal on account of deficient width. It is so narrow—150 feet bottom width—that large vessels would find it extremely difficult of navigation unless all should move in the same direction at the same time. All of this is avoided in the high-level canal through the lake system which is one of its features, and navigation in both directions would never be impeded. There can be not the slightest doubt that this lake system would make a high-level canal more efficient than a "little, narrow, tortuous strip, down at the bottom of everything," for navigation would be far less obstructed, and the extra lock of the high-level system would be of no disadvantage whatever, for one lock, either at sea level or high level, determines the efficiency of the canal as far as entrances and exits are concerned. To make a sea-level canal as efficient as the high-level system it would be necessary to at least increase the width of the waterway, and this means not only scores of millions of dollars, but years on years of time, and in the end we should have simply a lock canal, whose capacity to handle commerce is governed by the capacity of the lock to handle ships.

It seems to me, therefore, Mr. President, that the question resolves itself simply to this: Are we willing to wait eighteen or twenty years for a canal which will be in no respect better than that which we can have in eight or nine years? Are we willing to pay $400,000,000 for something which is no better than we can get for about half that sum? Are we willing to abandon all business principles in this connection, as did the French, and sow the seed which will later ripen into a harvest of scandals as nauseous and as fatal to national reputation as were those growing out of the defunct Panama Canal companies' work on the Isthmus and at home? Are we willing to bring into this great project the element of delay, which will as surely kill it as it did the French scheme? If we wish to declare the doom of the Panama Canal, we can do so no better than by voting that the canal shall be dug to sea level. If we so vote, we shall in my opinion, as I understand this question, be recreant to our duty if we do not refuse to appropriate a dollar for the scheme. The sea-level proposition means, in my opinion, that there will be no Panama Canal constructed by the United States; certainly not in this generation. If we are in earnest in this matter, let us look at it in a business way and secure results. The canal is proposed for the benefit of commerce. Then let that be built which is most efficient and consumes least time and money, for commerce is waiting upon it. We have made a declaration to the world that we will build this canal. Let us do it, and those of us who are participating here to-day may see the realization of our hopes in the completion of this great work. An extra ten years would bring about changes and complications that might change the entire complexion of affairs. We can see ahead eight or nine years with sufficient clearness to shape our course. We can hardly do so twenty years away. The only thing that we are certain of is that, should we wait twenty years and should we then by chance find that a canal had been built, we should find that it was a lock canal after all, which could not handle traffic any better than the lock canal that was killed and which, had it been built, would have been passing ships between the Atlanic and Pacific for twelve years.

I believe, Mr. President, that the best interests of this country demand the construction of the lock canal. I believe the recommendations of those who have given thought and consideration to the construction of the canal should be considered, and that the Senate should vote in favor of the construction of a lock canal.

Mr. PROCTOR obtained the floor.

Mr. KITTREDGE. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Vermont yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. PROCTOR. Certainly.

Mr. KITTREDGE. Upon the subject of currents, which the Senator from California mentioned, I venture to read just a sentence from the report made by the Board of Consulting Engineers upon that subject.

Mr. HOPKINS. From what page?

Mr. KITTREDGE. Page 176. It is as follows:

In the Suez section the velocity of the current very often exceeds 0.60 meter (1.96 feet) per second (2,160 meters per hour, or 1.1 knots), and reaches at times 1.35 meters (4.42 feet) per second (4,860 meters per hour, or 2.6 knots).

In the latter case the ships do not steer very well with the current running in. However, the navigation is never interrupted on account of the current.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Vermont yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. PROCTOR. Certainly.

Mr. PERKINS. I want to say, in answer to my friend from South Dakota [Mr. KITTREDGE], that there is no comparison whatever between the Panama Canal and the Suez Canal. A few minutes ago I looked up the curvatures of the Suez Canal as compared with those of the Panama Canal. The Suez Canal is 104 miles long, and it has only fifteen curves, with a total curvature of 467 degrees. The Panama Canal is 49 miles long and has nineteen curves, of 597 degrees. The total curvature of the Suez Canal is about 13 per cent of the route, while that of the Panama Canal is 39 per cent of the whole canal, and in some of the narrow cuts it is as high as 47 per cent. Then, there are other differences in favor of navigating in the Suez Canal as compared with the Panama Canal. On each side of the Suez Canal is sand, while the Panama Canal two-thirds of the way is hard rock, besides being narrower.

Mr. PROCTOR. Mr. President, in considering the isthmian canal question, I have tried to commence my investigations at the beginning. I regret to say that I have not had time to bring down my researches to within three hundred years and over of the present time; but I am glad to give the results so far as I have gone.

The earliest mention I have found of a canal across the Isthmus is in a book entitled "The Discouveries of the World," composed by the noble and remarkable Capt. Antonio Galvano, in which he speaks of the visit of one Saavedra, "cosen unto Cortes," in 1529. On page 179, under the heading "Discouveries of the Spanyards," is the following paragraph:

Saavedra perceiuing that the time and weather was then somewhat better for his purpose, made saile towards the firme lande and (isthmus of the) citie of Panama (it being not more than 17 or 18 leagues across), where he might unlade the cloues and marchandise which he had, that so in cartes it might be carried (across the plains) fower leagues to the riuer of Chagre, which they say is naulgable, running out into the North Sea not far from Nombre de Dios, where the ships ride which come out of Spaine, by which way all kinde of goods might be brought unto them in shorter time and with lesse danger then to saile about the Cape of Bona Speranca. For from Maluco unto Panama they saile continually betweene the Tropickes and the line, but they neuer found winde to serue that course, and therefore they came backe againe to Maluco very sad, because Saavedra died by the way, who, if he had liued, meant to haue opened the land of Castillia de Oro and New Spaine from sea to sea, which might have beene done in fower places, namely, from the Guife of San Michael to Vraba, which is 25 leagues, or from Panama to Nombre de Dios, being 17 leagues distance, or through Xaquator, a riuer of Nicaragua, which springeth out of a lake three or fower leagues from the South Sea and falleth into the North Sea, whereupon doe saile great barks and crayers. The other place is from Tecoantepec through a riuer to Verdadera Cruz, in the Bay of the Honduras, which also might be opened in a streight. Which if it were done then they might saile from the Canaries unto the Malucos under the climate of the zodiake in lesse time and with much lesse danger then to saile about the Cape de Bona Speranca or by the streight of Magelan or by the Northwest. And yet if there might be found a streight there to saile into the sea of China, as it hath beene sought (it would doe much good).

In 1551, the year following the appearance of Galvano's book, the Spanish historian, Lopez Gomara, thoroughly convinced of the immediate importance of the project, addressed a special plea to his master Philip, urging him to undertake the work for the further glory of Spain. Three routes he declared to be feasible for this purpose—Tehuantepec, Nicaragua, and Panama.

It is true—

He wrote—

that mountains bar the passes—but if there are mountains, there are also arms—take but the resolve, and the means to do it will not be lacking; the Indies toward which the passage will be opened will furnish them. To a king of Spain, with the riches of the Indies at his doorway, when the end to be obtained is the commerce in its products, the barely possible becomes easy.

Philip appointed two Flemish engineers to have surveys of the routes; but partly because of their unfavorable report, and partly because of reasons of state connected with the mining monopoly, the King, by advice of the council for the Indies, disapproved the plan, and went so far as to forbid any of his subjects to propose it again on pain of death.

The next mention I find of the canal project is in Acosta's History of the Indies (see Hakluyt, vol. 60, p. 135). Joseph de Acosta, a Jesuit, left Spain in 1570 to go to Peru to do missionary work, and it was on his way there that he crossed the Isthmus of Panama. He says:

They say that hee that first discovered this sea ["South Sea"—as it was then called] was called Blasco Nunez de Balboa, the which he did by that part which we now call Tierra Firme, where it growes narrow, and the two seas approach so neere the one to the other that there is but seaven leagues of distance, for although they make the way eighteene from Nombre de Dios to Panama, yet is it with turning to seeke the comoditie of the way, but drawing a direct line the one sea shall not be found more distant from the other. Some have discoursed and propounded to cut through this passage of seaven leagues, and to joyne one sea to the other, to make the passage from Peru more commodious and easie, for that these eighteene leagues of land betwixt Nombre de Dios and Panama is more painefull and chargeable then 2,300 by sea, whereupon some would say it were a meanes to drown the land, one sea being lower then another. As in times past we finde it written, that for the same consideration they gave over the enterprize to win the Red Sea into Nile, in the time of King Sesostris, and since, in the empire of the Ottomans. But for my part, I hold such discourses and propositions for vaine, although this inconvenient should not happen, the which I will not hold for assured.

I call this to the especial attention of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MILLARD] and the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. KITTREDGE]:

I beleeve there is no humaine power able to beat and brake downe those strong and impenetrable mountaines, which God hath placed betwixt the two seas, and hath made them most hard rockes to withstand the furie of two seas. And although it were possible to men, yet, in my opinion, they should fear punishment from heaven in seeking to correct the workes which the Creator by His great providence hath ordained and disposed in the framing of this universall world.

Although not the first to make mention of it, the fertile mind of the great explorer Champlain passed upon this suggestion of an interoceanic canal, and in the Narrative of his Voyage to the West Indies and Mexico in the years 1599–1602 (see Hakluyt, vol. 23, p. 41) I find the following remarkable passage:

One may judge that if the 4 leagues of land which there are from Panama to this river were cut through one might pass from the south sea to the ocean on the other side, and thus shorten the route by more than 1,500 leagues; and from Panama to the Straits of Magellan would be an island, and from Panama to the New-found-lands would be another island, so that the whole of America would be in two islands.

I am glad to submit these quaint extracts to be printed, especially the one from Champlain, the first white man to visit the lake which bears his name and to set foot on Vermont soil, in 1609, eleven years before the landing of the Pilgrims.

The shot from his arquebus at the war party of Iroquois was the first sound of firearms to wake the echoes of the Adirondack and Green Mountains. It was the opening gun on Lake Champlain, destined for the succeeding one hundred and fifty years to be the scene of many conflicts by land and water.

I will say that Champlain was a Frenchman who lived in the southwest corner of France, next to Spain. He engaged when quite young to go as an assistant with an uncle who had contracted to send supplies for the Spanish Government to their colonies in this country. In his travels through the West Indies and Mexico he was intrusted with responsibility, and made such a reputation that he was sought for by the French Government when he returned and was put in charge of the mission to Canada.

Leaving Spain in 1598, Champlain spent three years in the West Indies and Mexico, crossing the Isthmus from Porto Bello to Panama and viewing the Pacific Ocean from Panama Harbor. He kept records of all his travels, fully illustrated by his own hands, and these quaint and interesting narratives have been preserved through the publications of the Hakluyt Society, of London.

Among the great pioneers on this continent he had no superior—in my view no equal—in general ability. Poorly supported by his home government, burdened by tremendous responsibilities, in the face of seemingly insurmountable obstacles, he was at once a constructive statesman of a high order, a soldier, sailor, explorer, author, diplomat, and executive, and withal a Christian gentleman.

Mr. President, if there is nothing more to be said upon the canal question, I think that ought to be a fitting close to it, and I would ask that the——

Mr. KITTREDGE. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Vermont yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. PROCTOR. I do.

Mr. KITTREDGE. I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Dakota asks unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolution:

S. 3743. An act to confirm the right of way of railroads now constructed and in operation in the Territories of Oklahoma and Arizona;

S. 4954. An act authorizing Capt. Ejnar Mikkelsen to act as master of an American vessel;

S. 5512. An act defining the qualifications of jurors for service in the United States district court in Porto Rico;

S. 6333. An act authorizing the Secretary of War to acquire for fortification purposes certain tracts of land on Deer Island, in Boston Harbor, Massachusetts;

S. 6462. An act granting lands to the State of Wisconsin for forestry purposes; and

S. R. 52. Joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to donate to the board of trustees of Vincennes University, Vincennes, Ind., such obsolete arms and other military equipments now in possession of said university, to be used in military instruction.

The message also announced that the House had passed a joint resolution (H. J. Res. 21) authorizing the President of the United States to appoint a commission to examine and report upon a route for the construction of a free and open waterway to connect the waters of the Chesapeake and Delaware bays; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House had passed a concurrent resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to cause an examination and survey to be made of the harbor at Duluth, Minn., etc.; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (S. 1442) to increase the efficiency of the militia and promote rifle practice; and it was thereupon signed by the Vice-President.

HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED.

H. J. Res. 21. Joint resolution authorizing the President of the United States to appoint a commission to examine and report upon a route for the construction of a free and open waterway to connect the waters of the Chesapeake and Delaware bays; was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

SURVEY OF HARBOR AT DULUTH, MINN.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives; which, on motion of Mr. NELSON, was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause an examination and survey to be made of the harbor at Duluth, Minn., including the entrance thereto, with a view to determining what modifications of the present plan, if any, are desirable.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. PROCTOR. I ask that the Senate resume consideration of the action of the House on the agricultural appropriation bill.

There being no objection, the Senate resumed consideration of the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 18537) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, agreeing to amendment No. 29 with an amendment, and requesting a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

Mr. McCUMBER. Just before taking up the consideration of the canal bill, the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN] was addressing the Senate upon this subject, and I assume that he did not finish his address at that time. I do not wish to take his place, although I desire to make some remarks upon the matter.

Mr. WARREN. I am willing that the Senator from North Dakota shall proceed.

Mr. McCUMBER. I will be very brief, occupying only a very few minutes.

Mr. President, when this amendment came before the Senate and was adopted without any discussion, my belief is that very few of the Senators had taken the trouble even to read it over. They had not been apprised, at least, of the fact that it would become a part of this appropriation bill. While it was being read I simply listened, but there were features in it which at that time necessarily challenged one's attention, and features of a legal nature. The amendment provided, as I understand, for the inspection of canned meat of all kinds, without reference to where it was to be used. I know there is a provision whose intendment is that it shall apply only, of course, to interstate commerce and those products which are to become articles of interstate commerce. But I am afraid that they are so blended together that there is danger of a court holding that the amendment may be unconstitutional as dealing with matters which are purely of State cognizance—that is, those over which we have no control by reason of the provision in the Constitution relating to interstate commerce.

We can not exercise police power in the States. There is no question about that. Very well. If we limit the law absolutely to products which are to go into interstate commerce, then there can be no question in my mind of our authority to inspect for that very purpose—that is, the purpose of determining what shall enter into interstate commerce. There is but one rule to guide us in matters of this kind. If it is a question simply of police control, then Congress has no power over it. If it is a question simply of commerce, then Congress has control over it so far as it is interstate commerce.

Many of the beeves and calves and sheep and hogs which are to be inspected undoubtedly will be used in the State of Illinois or in the city of Chicago alone. Over those we could not attempt to exercise any control, provided the question was brought up where that right was questioned by the packers. So I hope the conferees will carefully look into that provision of the bill.

Mr. President, I received very shortly after this amendment passed the Senate telegrams from my State which indicated that they came, not as the first thought and first impulse of the shippers of my State, but came as the result of the im-portunities of the great packing houses in the city of Chicago and elsewhere. The very fact that they were stereotyped in form indicated that very clearly. All of the first ones that came were in the form of a request that we ask the Secretary of Agriculture to publish the fact that the inspection both for domestic and foreign purposes was complete and thorough. I could not give an affirmative response to that request, for the reason that I was not certain that it had been thorough, and I simply submitted the question to the Secretary of Agriculture to determine whether or not it had been thorough. If it had not been, I was certain that he would not, for the benefit of the packers or for the benefit of the raisers of cattle, certify to anything not absolutely true.

Mr. President, I believe that the raisers of cattle in my State agree with me upon this one stand: They do not want the packers, even for their benefit, to sell over the country meats that are unfit. They do not wish to take advantage of any fraud that may be perpetrated by the packers throughout the country. They wish honest inspection, and they wish honest meats sold throughout the United States, and they want the same to go to foreign countries.

The second set of telegrams that have come here show also the stamp of the great packing houses. The Senator from Vermont has read some of them. Here is one:

We strongly urge your support for passage of meat bill requiring rigid inspection at Government expense.

So far as the first part of the telegram is concerned, I believe it represents the deliberate judgment of the raisers of cattle in my State. So far as the other portion is concerned, I do not believe it represents their candid and deliberate judgment, but that it comes, as I have stated, from the interests at Chicago. I believe in the first part of the telegram, because I think the cattle raisers, in common with the public throughout, demand and insist that this disgraceful operation, if I can follow what has been given in the reports, shall absolutely cease, and they do not wish to benefit by any fraudulent practices. The other portion, I say, does not, in my mind, represent their deliberate judgment, and therefore I wish to go into that subject for a little while.

Why should the raisers of cattle be so solicitous about saving the packers the sum, we will say, of $3,000,000 a year, provided that is the sum necessary for proper inspection? What interest is it on their part to make the public pay for advertising for the packers in Chicago or anywhere else? Is this not an advertisement? What better advertisement can any corporation producing any commodity have than the stamp of the United States that it is pure and perfect? The moment we passed our other law upon meat inspection our meats, which had been challenged in every market in Europe, found a demand in every one of those markets, and the great wealth that has come to the packers of this country has come through the fact that they have had Government inspection on all the exports of meat. The Government stamp upon meat means the same as the Government stamp upon the silver dollar. It counts for what it says it is in every market of the world. It means that the goods with that stamp upon them will go into any market across the ocean and that they will be purchased upon what that stamp signifies.

The assumption is that the producer of stock or else the consumer will have to pay the inspection fee, if it is paid in the first place by the packer. Why? Because if the packer is compelled to pay $3,000,000 a year for the purpose of inspection, it will necessarily follow, according to their argument, that the packer will make it up upon somebody, and he will probably make it up on the producer of the cattle or the consumer. He will make it up whether we vote for this provision or not. It makes no difference, because it is absolutely in the packer's power to determine what he will pay for stock at the stock yards. It is absolutely in his power to-day to determine what prices he will fix to the consumer for the meat consumed.

How has this become so? Thirty years ago I used to visit the stock yards in the city of Chicago. I used to observe the method of bidding. A man might have his stock in the yard for one or two or three days. The first bids might be light, but there was absolutely competition, and before he left he got practically what his property was worth. So, at that time, the small packer, with competition, had to go into the market and sell his meats as low as anyone else would sell them. Gradually this great demand on the part of the American people to get things cheaper, to produce things more economically, led to, first, two of these great concerns combining. That cut off just so much competition; and we found, as the years went by, every new combination cut off so much more of our competition, until finally the result was that one great combination cut off entirely all competition in the stock yards; and the man who goes there to-day will find that if Armour makes a bid the Swift Company makes no bid, or at least will go no higher.

In the selling now the same rule applies. First one great corporation and then another went out of existence or was combined with the greater one, until this great octopus controls enough of the business so that it is necessary for the American public to go to it for its meats.

Now, what is the result? The result is simply this: There is but one commercial principle that governs in the buying of cattle and the selling of the meat products. What is it? It is this: If you place your purchasing price so low in the market in the purchase of an article as to make it absolutely impossible for the producer to produce it at any profit, you destroy the source of your supply. The other is, if you raise your price of meats so high that the public can not afford to buy them, but must take other things in the place of meat, you destroy the field of consumption. So the rule is this: Just give enough so that the farmer or stockman can live and sell his products; just hold your prices at such a figure that the public will be compelled to buy, without driving them into other lines of consumption. There is right where we are, and I say that is the condition which meets the stock raiser in our State, and the only remedy on earth that will remove this condition is to destroy in some way the great combination. We are going to injure, we are going to cripple it to a great extent in the enforcement of the new railway law or the enforcement of the old one, because the public now is getting in favor of that.

Now, on what principle are we to protect this industry? Is it an infant industry which needs the protection of the Government of the United States? That infant industry has grown so powerful that it holds the public by the throat to-day, and we are helpless in its great grasp. So, Mr. President, there is no occasion that I can see for our cattlemen to ask that the public, who are paying to-day 50 per cent more than they ought to for their meats, considering the prices at which cattle are being purchased, shall have this extra burden placed upon them. I have had a little experience in dealing with these great corporations and trusts.

The same thing is true in the great elevator trusts in our country. I remember possibly fifteen years ago when we were dissatisfied in our section of the country with the grades we were receiving at the terminals. The farmers got together. They built a good elevator and commenced buying grain. They gave better grades. They carried it on for less than a week when the old-line elevators raised the price 2 or 3 cents above what the farmers' elevator was paying. They still went on. The old-line elevators raised another 2 or 3 cents a bushel, and they held the prices there until the farmers' elevator was broken, because they could not do business at a loss. How did the old-line elevators recoup? They immediately went to those places where there was no competition whatever, in the other elevators along their line, and by dropping the price to the producer a half or three-quarters or a cent a bushel the trust made $1 where they lost 1 cent in dealing with the farmers' elevator.

This is the condition of the public in reference to the great meat trust of the country. The trust can make up their loss. They have such complete control that they can go into the fields where there is little competition and by raising the purchasing prices a little they are able to drive out any small concern, unless it goes into the field with a capital practically as great as that of the combination itself.

Mr. President, we can not meet these conditions by simply buying off the great packing establishments of the country. We can not bribe them with a fee of $3,000,000 a year to pay better prices to the producers of cattle; and I for one am not willing to go into the question of bribery, even to make our own people greater profits in the sale of their cattle. I do not believe they would get one cent better price for it.

Now, Mr. President, about the dates upon the cans. The canning industry is very ancient. I read a great number of years ago that in the excavations in the old country they had found in the ruins of Pompeii canned vegetables that were still in a state of preservation. I read only the other day in the press, and it was given out as authentic, that they had discovered the heart of Rameses II, some 4,000 years old, which had been carefully canned and pickled all of these years.

Yet, Mr. President, while it is possible to keep things in a certain condition for a number of years, we all know chemical changes are gradually taking place. The Senator from Vermont [Mr. PROCTOR] would recognize immediately the difference between an hermetically sealed can of maple sirup of a year ago and that of this spring. Although no air touches it, chemical changes bring about results which are to the detriment of it.

That is true of all canned goods. It is absolutely true of meat, as well as any other character of goods. I have stood here year in and year out in favor of compelling the dealer in food products to deal honestly with the consumer and the public. I stand upon that same proposition to-day—to compel at least the year to be placed, and I think the month ought to be placed, upon every can of these products that go from the canneries. I gave here but a short time ago the fact of thousands upon thousands of cans of veal that were sold and marketed as spring chicken. If the mark of 1890 had been placed on the meat when it was canned, although it was veal, we never would have bought it for spring chicken at least.

What right have the packers to deceive the public with reference to the age of their meats? I do not know that they will gain anything by the provision, or that they will lose anything by it, because naturally they will ship out and sell the oldest and keep that out continually, but we will know whether we are buying meat that is 6 months old or 6 years old. If there has been no change in five years, we can just as well say that there will be no change in fifty years, but no sensible man will subscribe to that doctrine. If the meats are old and spoiled, or if they have undergone a chemical change, we who are using them ought to know it.

Mr. CULLOM. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

RECESS.

Mr. NELSON. I desire to call the attention of the Senator from Illinois to the fact that it was agreed to-day, on motion and by unanimous consent, to take a recess at 6 o'clock.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The motion was that the Senate should take a recess not later than 6 o'clock until 8 o'clock.

Mr. KEAN. It is now one minute of 6.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator's motion is in order.

Mr. CULLOM. If there will be no time to transact any business after we get into executive session, I will not make the motion.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will be obliged to declare a recess at 6 o'clock.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. I desire to ask the Chair whether the agreement for to-night is simply for the purpose of considering the sundry civil appropriation bill?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It is simply to consider the sundry civil appropriation bill.

Mr. WARREN. Only that bill?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Only that bill. The hour of 6 o'clock having arrived, the Senate will take a recess until 8 o'clock this evening.

Mr. BEVERIDGE. Mr. President——

Mr. WARREN. I wish to say that I was cut off in my remarks this morning by the expiration of the morning hour. I assumed when the Senator from North Dakota rose that he wished to introduce telegrams in answer to some observations that I made just before I closed. It was a very interesting speech made by the Senator, and I am glad that he has used the time. I wish to say, however, that I will ask a little time to continue my remarks when this question comes up again. I think, one side having so far used the time, there should be a little evidence offered on the other side.

The Senate thereupon (at 6 o'clock p. m.) took a recess until 8 o'clock p. m.

EVENING SESSION.

The Senate reassembled at 8 o'clock p. m.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 19844) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments.

Mr. PERKINS. In the temporary absence of the acting chairman of the committee, I ask that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with, and that the amendments of the committee be considered as they are reached in the reading.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from California asks that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with, that the bill be read for amendment, and that the committee amendments be first considered. Without objection it is so ordered. The Secretary will read the bill.

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill.

The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was in the items "Under the Treasury Department," on page 2, after line 21, to insert:

Cheyenne, Wyo., public building: For completing approaches, subdividing and finishing the attic story, and increasing the business facilities of the building, $15,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 9, line 1, to increase the appropriation for repairs and preservation of custom-houses, court-houses, and post-offices, marine hospitals and quarantine stations, buildings and wharf at Sitka, Alaska, etc., from $420,000 to $440,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 9, line 13, to increase the appropriation for heating, hoisting, plumbing, and ventilating apparatus, and repairs to the same, for all public buildings, including quarantine stations and marine hospitals, under the control of the Treasury Department, etc., from $365,000 to $390,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 10, after line 13, to insert:

Buildings for the Departments of State, Justice, and Commerce and Labor: To enable the Secretary of the Treasury, in his discretion, to acquire, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, the whole of squares No. 226, 227, 228, 229, and 230, in the city of Washington, and toward the erection of one or two buildings thereon, $3,000,000. That part of C street, Ohio avenue, D street, and E street lying between the squares named herein is hereby made a part of the site authorized by this act. That should the Secretary of the Treasury decide to institute condemnation proceedings in order to secure any or all of the land herein authorized to be acquired, such proceedings shall be in accordance with the provisions of the act of Congress approved August 30, 1890, providing a site for the enlargement of the Government Printing Office (U. S. Stat. L., vol. 26, ch. 837). That a commission, to be composed of the Secretary of State, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Attorney-General, the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, and the Superintendent of the Capitol Building and Grounds, which is hereby created, shall report to Congress preliminary plans and an estimate of cost for one or two buildings to be erected on said site, for the use of the Departments of State, Justice, and Commerce and Labor, and for other governmental purposes, said preliminary plans and estimate of cost to be paid for out of the appropriation herein made.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead of "Revenue-Cutter Service," on page 15, line 9, after the word "surgeons," to insert "two civilian instructors, one at $1,800 and one at $1,500;" so as to read:

For expenses of the Revenue-Cutter Service: For pay and allowances of captains, lieutenants, engineer in chief, chief engineers, assistant engineers, and constructor, Revenue-Cutter Service, cadets, commissioned surgeon; two contract surgeons, two civilian instructors, one at $1,800, and one at $1,500, and pilots employed, and rations for the same, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 18, line 3, after the word "dollars," to insert: "and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to enter into a contract or contracts for such construction at a cost not to exceed $250,000, the limit fixed by said act;" so as to make the clause read:

Toward the construction of a steam vessel specially fitted for and adapted to service at sea in bad weather, for the purpose of blowing up or otherwise destroying or towing into port wrecks, derelicts, and other floating dangers to navigation, said vessel to be operated and maintained by the Revenue-Cutter Service under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, as authorized by the act of Congress approved May 12, 1906, to be immediately available, $100,000; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to enter into a contract or contracts for such construction at a cost not to exceed $250,000, the limit fixed by said act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead of "Interstate Commerce Commission," on page 23, line 1, after the word "to," to strike out "properly carry out the objects of" and insert "give effect to;" so as to read:

For all other necessary expenditures, to enable the Commission to give effect to the act to regulate commerce, and all acts and amendments supplementary thereto, including the joint resolution "instructing the Interstate Commerce Commission to make examinations into the subject of railroad discriminations and monopolies in coal and oil, and report on the same from time to time," approved March 7, 1906, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead of "Miscellaneous objects, Treasury Department," on page 25, line 22, before the word "silver," to strike out "fractional;" so as to read:

Transportation of silver coin: For transportation of silver coin, including fractional silver coin by registered mail or otherwise, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 27, line 2, before the word "counters," to strike out "three" and insert "four;" and in the same line, after the word "watchmen," to strike out "one laborer" and insert "two laborers;" so as to make the clause read:

Distinctive paper for United States securities: For distinctive paper for United States securities, including expenses of transportation, salaries of register, assistant register, four counters, five watchmen, two laborers, and of officer detailed from the Treasury as superintendent, $308,900.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 28, after line 19, to insert:

General inspector of supplies for public buildings: For one general inspector, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, $3,000; and for actual necessary expenses, not exceeding $2,000; in all, $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 30, line 15, to increase the appropriation for the purchase of fuel, steam, light, and water for public buildings from $1,200,000 to $1,240,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 32, line 23, to reduce the appropriation for pay, allowances, and commutation of quarters for commissioned medical officers and pharmacists in the Public Health and Marine-Hospital Service from $375,000 to $350,000

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 33, line 2, to increase the appropriation for pay of all other employees in the Public Health and Marine-Hospital Service from $250,000 to $275,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 36, line 6, after the date "1907," to insert "And the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to expend, from the appropriation of $100,000 provided for in section 5 of said act, such an amount as may be necessary to construct a road from the hospital station at Kalawao to the landing site at Waikolu, Molokai; and he is further authorized to construct a landing stage on the landing site at Waikolu, including the necessary appliances for landing supplies;" so as to make the clause read:

Leprosy hospital, Hawaii: The unexpended balance of the $50,000 appropriated by the act of March 3, 1905, for maintenance of the leprosy hospital, Hawaii, for the fiscal year 1906, is hereby reappropriated and made available for the same objects for the fiscal year 1907. And the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to expend, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Light-houses, beacons, and fog signals," on page 37, after line 8, to insert:

Stonington Breakwater, Connecticut: For erection of a suitable dwelling for the keeper of the light station at Stonington Breakwater, Connecticut, $6,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 37, after line 11, to insert:

For the following, damaged or destroyed by the earthquake in California, namely:

Cape Mendicino light station, California: For rebuilding of keeper's dwelling, $5,400.

Point Arena light station, California: For rebuilding of light station, $98,900.

Southampton Shoal light station, California: For extraordinary repairs, $17,640.

Bonita Point light station, California: For rebuilding of double dwelling for assistant light keepers, $6,000.

Point Pinos light station, California: For rebuilding of light station, $19,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 38, after line 2, to insert:

For the following, authorized by the act to authorize additional aids to navigation in the Light-House Establishment, approved June —, 1906, namely:

Nantucket Shoals, Massachusetts: for a light vessel to be placed off Nantucket Shoals, Massachusetts, $115,000.

Ambrose channel, New York Bay: For a light vessel for the sea entrance of the channel, $115,000.

For a light-house on Staten Island, New York, and raising West Bank light, $100,000.

For two lens lanterns and structures for range on the bend, $12,000.

For moving North Hook beacon light, $6,000.

For a tank light vessel, $15,000.

For a stone beacon with gas illuminant on Craven Shoal, $20,000.

For thirteen gas buoys in Ambrose channel and eleven gas buoys in the Gedney and Main Ship channel, $43,200.

For temporary structure to maintain West Bank light while light is being raised and temporary structure for North Hook beacon light while it is being moved, $10,000.

Harbor of refuge, Delaware Bay: For additional amount for establishing a light and fog-signal station on the new breakwater, harbor of refuge, Delaware Bay, $20,000.

Pungoteague Creek, Virginia: For a light station at Pungoteague Creek, Virginia, $8,000.

Light vessel, Brunswick, Ga.: For additional amount for light vessel to be placed off the outer bar of Brunswick, Ga., $25,000.

Southwest Pass light station, Louisiana: For dwellings for three light-house keepers at Southwest Pass light station, Louisiana, $12,000.

Harbor of refuge, Milwaukee, Wis.: For a light and fog-signal station on the south end of the breakwater, harbor of refuge, Milwaukee, Wis., $100,000.

Niagara River, New York: For four range lights, Strawberry Island Cut and channel leading thereto, Niagara River, New York, $13,000.

Isle aux Peches, Michigan: For two range lights, Isle aux Peches, Lake St. Clair, Michigan, $18,000.

Rock of Ages, Lake Superior: For a light and fog-signal station on Rock of Ages, Lake Superior, $100,000.

Makapuu Point, Oahu, Hawaii: For a light station at Makapuu Point, at the Island of Oahu, Territory of Hawaii, $60,000.

Humboldt Bay, California: For a fog signal at the entrance to the harbor at Humboldt Bay, California, $15,000.

Twelfth light-house district: For a steam tender for the use of the light-house engineer of the twelfth light-house district, $150,000.

Columbia River, Oregon: For a light vessel for use off the mouth of the Columbia River, Oregon, $130,000.

Swiftsure Bank: For a steel steam light vessel, equipped with the latest improved light and fog signals, to be anchored upon Swiftsure Bank, off the entrance to Juan de Fuca Strait, at a point at or near 13 miles north, 74° west, magnetic, from Cape Flattery, Washington, $150,000.

Mr. MALLORY. I should like to ask the acting chairman whether these new lights and light vessels have been passed on by the Committee on Commerce, commencing at Nantucket Shoals, Massachusetts, page 38?

Mr. HALE. What is the inquiry?

Mr. MALLORY. I should like to inquire if the light-ship on Nantucket Shoals, light vessel at Ambrose channel, light-house on Staten Island, two-lens lanterns and structures for range on the bend there, and so on, have been before the Committee on Commerce?

Mr. HALE. They have all been approved by the committee.

Mr. MALLORY. All have been approved by the Committee on Commerce?

Mr. HALE. Every one of them.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PERKINS. By permission of the acting chairman, I wish to present a committee amendment. I will state that it was authorized in House bill 19432, and is now a law.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 40, after the amendment just agreed to, after line 21, insert:

A light and fog-signal station, Hinchinbrook, Hinchinbrook Island, Prince William Sound, Alaska, at a cost not to exceed $125,000.

Mr. NELSON. The amendment should read:

A light and fog-signal station, Hinchinbrook Entrance, Prince William Sound, Alaska, at a cost not to exceed $125,000.

Mr. PERKINS. Let the amendment be so modified.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment as so modified.

The amendment as modified was agreed to.

The reading was resumed. The next amendment was, under the subhead "Light-House Establishment," on page 41, line 10, to increase the appropriation for the supplies of light-houses from $525,000 to $560,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 41, line 24, to increase the appropriation for repairs of light-houses from $740,000 to $800,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 42, line 13, to increase the appropriation for expenses of light vessels from $600,000 to $625,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 42, line 20, to increase the appropriation for expenses of buoyage from $550,000 to $600,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 43, line 5, to increase the appropriation for expenses of fog signals from $210,000 to $225,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Coast and Geodetic Survey," on page 46, line 23, before the word "thousand," to strike out "seventy" and insert "eighty-five;" and in the same line, after the word "dollars," to insert the following additional proviso:

Provided further, That not more than $15,000 of this amount may be expended in carrying out the provisions of public act No. 181, approved May 25, 1906.

So as to make the clause read:

For field expenses: For surveys and necessary resurveys of the Atlantic and Gulf coasts of the United States, including the coasts of outlying islands under the jurisdiction of the United States: Provided, That not more than $25,000 of this amount shall be expended on the coasts of the before-mentioned outlying islands, $85,000: Provided further, That not more than $15,000 of this amount may be expended, etc.

Mr. HALE. There is a matter of date there. It should be May 26 instead of May 25.

The SECRETARY. In the proposed amendment, line 1, page 47, after the word "May," strike out "twenty-fifth" and insert "twenty-sixth."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 48, after line 9, to insert:

For any special surveys that may be required by the Light-House Board or other proper authority, and contingent expenses incident thereto, to be immediately available and to continue available until expended, $12,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 49, line 5, to increase the total appropriation for field expenses, Coast and Geodetic Survey, from $252,900 to $279,900.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Bureau of Fisheries," on page 54, line 18, before the word "hundred," to strike out "one thousand eight" and insert "two thousand one;" in line 20, after the word "dollars," to insert "property clerk, $1,600;" on page 55, line 6, before the word "hundred," to strike out "thirty-three thousand six" and insert "thirty-five thousand five;" so as to make the clause read:

Office of Commissioner: For Commissioner, $5,000; deputy commissioner, $3,000; chief clerk, $2,400; accountant, $2,100; stenographer to Commissioner, $1,600; property clerk, $1,600; librarian, $1,200; one clerk of class 4, two clerks of class 3, clerk to Commissioner, $1,600; one clerk of class 1; one clerk, $1,000; two clerks, at $900 each; engineer, $1,080; three firemen, at $600 each; two watchmen, at $720 each; five janitors and messengers, at $600 each; janitress, $480; messenger, $240; in all, $35,540.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 55, line 8, after the word "dollars," to insert "assistant architect, $1,600;" in line 10, after the word "dollars," to insert "draftsman, $900;" and in line 12, before the word "hundred," to strike out "four thousand one" and insert "six thousand six;" so as to make the clause read:

Office of architect and engineer: Architect and engineer, $2,200; assistant architect, $1,600; draftsman, $1,200; draftsman, $900; clerk, $720; in all, $6,620.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 64, line 19, before the word "thousand," to strike out "fifty" and insert "sixty;" so as to make the clause read:

Propagation of food-fishes: For maintenance, equipment, and operations of the fish-cultural stations of the Bureau, the general propagation of food-fishes and their distribution, including the movement, maintenance, and repairs of cars, purchase of equipment and apparatus, contingent expenses, and temporary labor, $260,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 64, line 25, before the word "thousand," to strike out "fifty-two" and insert "fifty-five;" so as to make the clause read:

Maintenance of vessels: For maintenance of the vessels and launches, including the purchase and repair of boats, apparatus, machinery, and other facilities required for use with the same, hire of vessels, and all other necessary expenses in connection therewith, $55,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Under the Department of the Interior," on page 70, after line 9, to insert:

For equipping the Senate post-office with steel counter, letter boxes, and cabinets, and for metal furniture, $3,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 70, after line 12, to insert:

Toward the construction of the fireproof building for committee rooms and offices for the United States Senate provided for in the sundry civil act approved April 28, 1904, including not exceeding $500 for the purchase of necessary technical and other books, $950,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Surveying the public lands," on page 78, line 2, after the word "surveys," to insert "office examination of surveying returns;" and in line 6, after the words "United States," to insert:

Authority is hereby given for the survey of townships 28 north, ranges 37 and 38 east; 27 north, ranges 38, 39, and 40 east; 29 north, range 40 east, and fractional range 41 east; 26 north, ranges 38, 39, and 40 east, and 30 north, range 40 east, and fractional range 41 east, Valley County, Mont.; also for the survey of the unsurveyed townships lying between the Big Muddy River in Valley County, Mont., and the Dakota line; and the regulations governing public surveys requiring settlers' applications and their examination in the field are hereby waived.

So as to read:

And of the sum hereby appropriated there may be expended such an amount as the Commissioner of the General Land Office may deem necessary for examination of public surveys in the several surveying districts, by such competent surveyors as the Secretary of the Interior may select, or by such competent surveyors as he may authorize the surveyor-general to select, at such compensation, not exceeding $6 per day, except in the district of Alaska, where a compensation not exceeding $10 per day may be allowed one such surveyor and such per diem allowance, in lieu of subsistence, not exceeding $3, while engaged in field examinations, as he may prescribe, said per diem allowance to be also made to such clerks who are competent surveyors who may be detailed to make field examinations, in order to test the accuracy of the work in the field, and to prevent payment for fraudulent and imperfect surveys returned by deputy surveyors, and for examinations of surveys heretofore made and reported to be defective or fraudulent, and inspecting mineral deposits, coal fields, and timber districts, and for making by such competent surveyors fragmentary surveys, office examination of surveying returns, and such other surveys or examinations as may be required for identification of lands for purposes of evidence in any suit or proceeding in behalf of the United States. Authority is hereby given for the survey of townships 28 north, ranges 37 and 38 east; 27 north, ranges 38, 39, and 40 east; 29 north, range 40 east, and fractional range 41 east; 26 north, ranges 38, 39, and 40 east, and 30 north, range 40 east, and fractional range 41 east, Valley County, Mont.; also for the survey of the unsurveyed townships lying between the Big Muddy River in Valley County, Mont., and the Dakota line; and the regulations governing public surveys requiring settlers' applications and their examination in the field are hereby waived.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "United States Geological Survey," on page 82, line 1, after the word "United States," to insert "gauging streams, and determining the water supply;" so as to read:

For general expenses of the Geological Survey: For the Geological Survey and the classification of the public lands and examination of the geological structure, mineral resources, and the products of the national domain, to continue the preparation of a geological map of the United States, gauging streams, and determining the water supply, and for surveying forest reserves, including the pay of necessary clerical and scientific force and other employees in the field and in the office at Washington, D. C., etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 83, line 3, to increase the appropriation for the preparation of the report of the mineral resources of the United States, etc., from $50,000 to $75,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 83, after line 17, to insert:

For gauging the streams and determining the water supply of the United States, and for the investigation of underground currents and artesian wells, and the preparation of reports upon the best methods of utilizing the water resources, $200,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 83, line 23, before the word "investigation," to strike out "continuation of the;" and in line 24, after the word "to," to insert "and for the use of;" so as to make the clause read:

For the investigation of the structural materials belonging to and for the use of the United States such as stone, clays, cements, etc., under the supervision of the Director of the United States Geological Survey, to be immediately available, $100,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 84, line 8, after the word "dollars," to insert the following provisos:

Provided, That in examinations, hereby authorized, of fuel materials for the use of the Government of the United States, or for the purpose of increasing the general efficiency or available supply of the fuel resources in the United States, the Director of the Geological Survey may have the necessary materials collected from any part of the United States where they represent extensive deposits; and it shall be the duty of the Director of the Geological Survey to have examined, without charge, the fuels required for use by the Government of the United States, and to give these examinations preference over other work: Provided further, That in publishing the results of these investigations the materials examined shall not be credited to any private party or corporation, but shall be collected and described as representing such extensive deposits.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 85, line 1, to increase the appropriation for continuation of the survey of the public lands that have been or may hereafter be designated as forest reserves from $100,000 to $125,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 85, line 14, to increase the total appropriation for the maintenance of the United States Geological Survey from $1,138,320 to $1,538,320.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 86, line 12, after the word "while," to insert "he has been and shall be;" so as to make the clause read:

The Secretary of the Interior may, in his discretion, authorize payment to the chief disbursing clerk of the United States Geological Survey from the reclamation fund, while he has been and shall be acting as disbursing officer of said fund, of a sum not exceeding $500 per annum, in addition to the compensation now received by that officer, in consideration of the additional duties devolving upon him in connection with the Reclamation Service.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Miscellaneous objects, Department of the Interior," on page 88, after line 5, to insert:

Ruin of Casa Grande, Arizona: For protection of Casa Grande Ruin, in Pinal County, near Florence, Ariz., and for excavation on the reservation, to be expended under the supervision of the Secretary of the Interior, $3,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 88, line 21, after the word "Eskimos," to insert "Aleuts," so as to read:

Education in Alaska: To enable the Secretary of the Interior, in his discretion and under his direction, to provide for the education and support of the Eskimos, Aleuts, Indians, and other natives of Alaska, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 89, after line 10, to insert:

To enable the Secretary of the Interior to return twenty-two pupils heretofore in the United States Indian school, Carlisle, Pa., to their respective homes in Alaska, $3,705, or as much thereof as may be necessary.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 89, after line 15, to insert:

Removal of Lemhi Indians to Fort Hall Reservation, Idaho: The sum of $5,000 appropriated by the act of February 23, 1889, for the removal of the Lemhi Indians to the Fort Hall Reservation, which amount was carried to the surplus fund of the Treasury on June 29, 1895, is hereby reappropriated and made available for said removal during the fiscal year 1907.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 90, line 4, before the word "thousand," to strike out "nine" and insert "fifteen;" and in the same line, after the word "dollars," to insert "of which $5,000, or as much thereof as may be necessary, may be used by the Secretary of the Interior at his discretion in placing a herd of not exceeding 300 reindeer on the island of Unalaska;" so as to make the clause read:

Reindeer for Alaska: For the support of reindeer stations in Alaska, and for the instruction of Alaskan natives in the care and management of the reindeer, $15,000, of which $5,000, or as much thereof as may be necessary, may be used by the Secretary of the Interior at his discretion in placing a herd of not exceeding 300 reindeer on the island of Unalaska; and all reindeer owned by the United States in Alaska shall as soon as practicable be turned over to the missions in Alaska, to be held and used by them under such conditions as the Secretary of the Interior shall prescribe.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 93, line 2, to increase the appropriation for repairs to buildings of the Columbia Institution for the Deaf and Dumb from $4,000 to $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Under the War Department," on page 102, after line 9, to insert:

For the traveling expenses of the President of the United States, his attendants and invited guests traveling with him, to be disbursed at the discretion of the President, $25,000.

Mr. McLAURIN. Mr. President, has this amendment been considered by any committee? Is not this new legislation? Is there any law which authorizes the payment of the traveling expenses of the President?

Mr. HALE. The amendment was submitted to the Committee on Appropriations, considered by that committee, and reported as a part of the bill.

Mr. McLAURIN. I make the point of order that it is new legislation upon an appropriation bill, and that it ought not to be inserted here. There is no law authorizing the paying of the traveling expenses of the President of the United States, and I do not think that under the rules an appropriation of this kind can be made. It is an appropriation without being authorized by any law.

Mr. HALE. The committee reported the amendment on the ground that it is not legislation, but simply conforming to the provisions of the interstate-commerce rate bill and providing for the necessary traveling expenses of the President. It is only incidental. So it is not subject to the point of order.

Mr. McLAURIN. Mr. President, there is no law authorizing the payment of the traveling expenses of the President of the United States, and this amendment is open to objection because it is a new law upon an appropriation bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that the debate which is now proceeding is out of order. The Chair is prepared to rule on the point of order.

Mr. HALE. Let us have the ruling of the Chair.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair is of the opinion that the point of order is not well taken, and he overrules the point of order.

Mr. McLAURIN. I appeal to the Senate from that decision, Mr. President, and I should like to have the yeas and nays on the appeal.

Mr. HALE. If the Senator does that, the bill goes over, of course.

Mr. CLAY. Of course, the consideration of the bill can not proceed any further if the Senator insists on calling the roll.

Mr. McLAURIN. Mr. President, in my judgment, this is such an outrageous appropriation that I do not think, under any circumstances, it ought to go into this bill.

Mr. HALE. Let the item be passed for the present, Mr. President.

Mr. McLAURIN. That is all very well, then. I am willing to do that.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be passed over.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 102, line 20, to increase the appropriation for lighting the Executive Mansion and public grounds from $18,800 to $20,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 102, line 22, before the word "dollars," to strike out "fifteen" and insert "twenty;" so as to make the proviso read:

Provided, That for each 5-foot burner not connected with a meter in the lamps on the public grounds not more than $20 shall be paid per lamp for gas, including lighting, cleaning, and keeping the lamps in repair, under any expenditure provided for in this act; and said lamps shall burn every night, on the average from fifteen minutes after sunset to forty-five minutes before sunrise; and authority is hereby given to substitute other illuminating material for the same or less price, and to use so much of the sum hereby appropriated as may be necessary for that purpose.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 103, line 7, before the word "hundred," to strike out "three thousand six" and insert "four thousand two;" in line 11, before the word "dollars," to strike out "four thousand eight hundred" and insert "six thousand;" and in line 15, before the word "dollars," to strike out "twenty" and insert "twenty-five;" so as to make the provisos read:

Provided further, That $4,200 of the foregoing sum shall be paid from the revenues of the District of Columbia and the remainder from the Treasury of the United States: And provided further, That not more than $6,000 of said appropriation may be expended for lighting, extinguishing, cleaning, repairing, and painting park lamps of a higher candlepower than those provided for above and not less than 60 candlepower, which lamps shall cost not to exceed $25 per lamp per annum and shall otherwise be subject to the restrictions of this paragraph.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 103, line 20, before the word "dollars," to strike out "eighty" and insert "eighty-five;" and in line 23, before the word "dollars," to strike out "four hundred and eighty" and insert "five hundred and ten;" so as to make the clause read:

For lighting six arc electric lights in Executive Mansion grounds within the iron fence, at not exceeding $85 per light per annum, which shall cover the entire cost to the United States of lighting and maintaining in good order each electric light in said grounds, $510.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 103, line 25, before the word "dollars," to strike out "eighty" and insert "eighty-five;" and on page 104, line 3, before the word "dollars," to strike out "four hundred and eighty" and insert "five hundred and ten;" so as to make the clause read:

For lighting six arc electric lights at the propagating gardens, at not exceeding $85 per light per annum, which sum shall cover the entire cost of lighting and maintaining in good order each of said arc electric lights, $510.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 104, line 9, before the word "dollars," to strike out "eighty" and insert "eighty-five;" and in line 12, before the word "dollars," to strike out "two hundred and forty" and insert "five hundred and five;" so as to make the clause read:

For lighting arc electric lights in public grounds as follows: For seven in grounds south of the Executive Mansion, thirty-two in Lafayette, Franklin, Judiciary, and Lincoln parks, and fourteen in grounds south of Executive Mansion and in Monument Park, at not exceeding $85 per light per annum, which sum shall cover the entire cost of lighting and maintaining in good order each of said arc electric lights; in all, $4,505, one half of which sum shall be paid from the revenues of the District of Columbia and the other half from the Treasury of the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 104, line 16, before the word "dollars," to strike out "eighty" and insert "eighty-five;" and in line 22, before the word "dollars," to strike out "one hundred and sixty" and insert "two hundred and ninety-five;" so as to make the clause read:

For lighting twenty-seven arc lights in Potomac Park driveway, at not exceeding $85 per light per annum, which sum shall cover the entire cost of installing, lighting, and maintaining in good order each electric light on said driveway, and authority for laying single-duct conduits through public grounds and making connections for said lights is hereby granted, $2,295, one half of which sum shall be paid from the revenues of the District of Columbia and the other half from the Treasury of the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 106, after line 3, to insert:

Grant memorial: For continuing work for the erection of the memorial to Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, $40,000: Provided, That the memorial may be located in the unoccupied portion of the Botanic Garden grounds between First and Second streets NW., as recommended by the Grant Memorial Commission: Provided further, That such portion of the funds heretofore appropriated for said memorial and now available may be used in constructing extra foundation for the memorial if the character of the soil on the site selected shows such extra foundation to be necessary.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 106, after line 14, to insert:

Statue of Gen. George B. McClelland: For expenses attending the unveiling of the statue of Gen. George B. McClelland, $2,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Miscellaneous objects, War Department," on page 123, line 10, to increase the appropriation for the construction and enlargement of buildings at military posts from $750,000 to $900,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 125, line 4, after the word "cents," to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That appropriations heretofore made by the act of April 28, 1904, for Fort Crockett Reservation, Galveston, Tex., for construction of a sea-wall embankment and fill in front of said property, and the appropriation herein authorized shall be available for embankment and fill and other improvements on both the Fort Crockett Reservation and the land lying between Thirty-ninth and Forty-fifth streets, in the city of Galveston, Tex., that has been conveyed to the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 130, after line 16, to insert:

Support and medical treatment of destitute patients: For the support and medical treatment of ninety-five medical and surgical patients who are destitute, in the city of Washington, under a contract to be made with the Providence Hospital by the Surgeon-General of the Army, one half of which sum shall be paid from the revenues of the District of Columbia and the other half from the Treasury of the United States, $19,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 130, after line 24, to insert:

Garfield Memorial Hospital: For maintenance to enable it to provide medical and surgical treatment to persons unable to pay therefor, under a contract to be made with the board of charities of the District of Columbia, one half of which sum shall be paid from the revenues of the District of Columbia and the other half from the Treasury of the United States, $19,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 139, after line 18, to insert:

For shop building, $15,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 139, line 22, to increase the total appropriation for current expenses of the Pacific Branch, National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, at Santa Monica, Cal., from $353,200 to $368,200.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 144, line 6, to increase the total appropriation for the maintenance of the National Homes for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers from $4,202,944 to $4,217,944.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "Under the Department of Justice," on page 151, after line 24, to insert:

Counsel for Mission Indians: To enable the Attorney-General to employ a special attorney for the Mission Indians of southern California, upon the recommendation of the Secretary of the Interior, $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 152, line 9, after the word "elsewhere," to insert "to be selected and their compensation fixed by the Attorney-General, to be expended under his direction, so much of the provisions of the act of March 2, 1901, providing for the Spanish Treaty Claims Commission, as are in conflict herewith notwithstanding;" so as to make the clause read:

Defense of suits before Spanish Treaty Claims Commission: For salaries and expenses in defense of claims before the Spanish Treaty Claims Commission, including salaries of Assistant Attorney-General in charge as fixed by law, and of assistant attorneys and necessary employees in Washington, D. C., or elsewhere, to be selected and their compensation fixed by the Attorney-General, to be expended under his direction, so much of the provisions of the act of March 2, 1901, providing for the Spanish Treaty Claims Commission, as are in conflict herewith notwithstanding, $92,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 153, after line 12, to strike out:

To systematize the preparation of law indexes, etc., and to provide trained law clerks therefor: To enable the Librarian of Congress to direct the Law Librarian to prepare a new index to the Statutes at Large; in accordance with a plan previously approved by the Judiciary Committees of both houses of Congress, and to perpare such other indexes, digests, and compilations of law as may be required for Congress and other official use, $5,840 to pay for five additional assistants in the Law Library: One at $1,800, one at $1,200, one at $900 and two at $720 each, and for the Law Librarian $500, the said sum to be paid to the Law Librarian, notwithstanding section 1765 of the Revised Statutes.

Mr. SPOONER. I ask that that amendment be passed over.

Mr. KEAN. What amendment is it?

Mr. SPOONER. The amendment on page 153, beginning in line 13, relative to the preparation of law indexes, etc.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be passed over.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the head of "Judicial," on page 154, line 21, after the word "otherwise," to insert:

And the annual salaries of the United States marshals for the district of Idaho and the southern district of California are hereby fixed at $4,000, respectively.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 155, line 10, after the word "dollars," to insert:

And the annual salaries of the United States district attorneys for the district of Idaho and the southern district of California are hereby fixed at $4,000, respectively.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was continued to the end of line 9, on page 156.

Mr. HALE. On page 156, I move to strike out the proviso beginning in line 4 and extending to line 9, in order to put it in conference.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Maine proposes an amendment, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 156, in line 4, after the words "Revised Statutes," it is proposed to strike out the proviso as follows:

And provided further, That section 2 of the act of June 30, 1902, being chapter 1335 as found in Statutes at Large of the United States, volume 32, part 1, page 549, shall be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

Mr. PENROSE. I sincerely hope the Senate conferees will support this amendment. The effect of the provision of the House would be to transfer the custody of the United States records from Scranton to Harrisburg. Scranton is much the larger place; it is the residence of the judge, and it is the proper place to continue as the place of custody for those records.

Mr. HALE. The Senate conferees always support the amendments of the Senate.

Mr. PENROSE. Yes.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE].

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed and continued to the end of line 12, on page 156.

Mr. KEAN. May I ask a question with respect to the item on page 156, line 10?

For fees of United States district attorney for the District of Columbia, $23,800.

Does that mean that the district attorney for the District of Columbia gets $23,000?

Mr. HALE. Oh, no. That matter was all thrashed out in the House. It includes all the expenses of his office.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 157, after the word "dollars," in line 1, to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That the Attorney-General shall hereafter, under rules and regulations prescribed by him, require the clerks of the United States circuit and district courts, clerks of the Territorial courts, clerks of the United States courts for the Indian Territory, and the clerks of the United States courts in Alaska to report and account for all moneys received by them on account of or as security for fees and costs, and to report and account for all amounts collected or received by them on behalf of the United States on account of judgments, fines, forfeitures, penalties, and costs. The Attorney-General shall also hereafter require such clerks to report and account for any other moneys received by them in their official capacity, whether on behalf of the United States or otherwise, and the Attorney-General shall hereafter prescribe such docket or dockets or other books as he may deem proper to be kept and used by such clerks in recording, reporting, and accounting for moneys mentioned above in this paragraph, and in recording all fees and emoluments earned by them, which dockets or other books shall be kept and used by said clerks in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the Attorney-General.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 158, line 9, after the word "act," to insert "of March 3, 1901, and of joint resolution of March 3, 1905;" so as to read:

On and after December 15, 1906, no sums of money shall be payable under and by virtue of the act of Congress of June 4, 1897, providing for the revision and codification of the criminal and penal laws of the United States and the subsequent acts of Congress of March 3, 1899, and March 3, 1901, enlarging the duties of the commissioners appointed under said act, but the said commission so created shall, on or before said December 15, 1906, complete the duties imposed upon them thereby and shall present their final report thereon to the Attorney-General in accordance with the provisions of said act of March 3, 1901, and of joint resolution of March 3, 1905, before said date, etc.

Mr. HALE. On page 158, line 8, I move to strike out the words "Attorney-General" and insert "Congress;" so as to read:

And shall present their final report thereon to the Congress in accordance with the provisions, etc.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed, and continued to the end of line 13, on page 160.

Mr. HALE. I offer the amendment I send to the desk, which by inadvertence was not printed in the bill.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Maine proposes an amendment, which will be stated by the Secretary.

The SECRETARY. On page 160, after line 13, it is proposed to insert:

For compensation and expenses of a special master, to be appointed by the United States district judge presiding in the United States circuit court for the ninth circuit, in the western district of Washington, to take testimony in the case of United States against George Edward Adams, on such notice to the defendant or his counsel as the court may prescribe, and to find therefrom the extent and amount of the embezzlement of gold dust from the United States assay office at Seattle, Wash., and the names of depositors to whom said gold dust belonged, together with the amount and value of gold dust so embezzled belonging to each such depositor, such special master to have the full powers and status of a master in chancery, and the provisions of sections 5392 and 5393 of the Revised Statutes of the United States to apply to all proceedings had before him, the findings of said special master to be final and binding upon the depositors whose gold dust shall be found to have been embezzled, and upon the United States in so far as concerns the matter of settlement with said depositors, a sum not exceeding $12,000: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed as admitting or implying any liability on the part of the United States for gold dust embezzled by said Adams.

Mr. CULBERSON. I will ask the Senator in charge of the bill if this amendment is the one reported favorably by the Committee on the Judiciary?

Mr. HALE. Yes; it is the same amendment. It was left out by inadvertence.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 164, line 15, to increase the appropriation for subsistence, including supplies for prisoners, warden, deputy warden, etc., at the United States penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., from $30,000 to $33,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 164, line 23, to increase the appropriation for clothing and transportation, including such clothing as can be made at the penitentiary, etc., at the United States penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., from $15,000 to $17,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 167, line 1, to increase the total appropriation for the maintenance of the United States penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., from $126,220 to $132,220.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 168, after line 6, to insert:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

For the purchase of land and the entire contribution of the United States toward the erection of a building to be used as permanent quarters in the city of Washington by the International Bureau of the American Republics and the Columbus Memorial Library, $200,000, to be expended upon the order of the Secretary of State.

Mr. CLAY. I should like to have the attention of the Senator from Maine to this item:

For the purchase of land and the entire contribution of the United States toward the erection of a building to be used as permanent quarters in the city of Washington by the International Bureau of the American Republics.

I will ask the Senator whether the Government has been furnishing quarters for the Bureau of American Republics.

Mr. HALE. Yes; the United States furnishes rented buildings, but this is a proposition to have a larger building which will accommodate all the American Republics in the business that they have here, with an auditorium, and it was considered by the State Department as being a very essential thing. The committee considered it. This building, when completed, will take the place of the rented quarters that are now furnished.

Mr. CULLOM. Will the Senator from Maine allow me to make a brief statement?

Mr. HALE. Certainly.

Mr. CULLOM. I understand from the Secretary of State also that one of the South American Republics has already paid in a considerable sum of money for the purpose of the erection of this building. It has been in the Treasury now for some time.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Committee on Appropriations.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the head of "Under legislative," on page 169, after line 5, to insert:

Charters and constitutions: For the purchase from Prof. Francis N. Thorpe of the manuscript for a new edition of charters, constitutions, and organic laws of all the States, Territories, and colonies now or heretofore forming the United States, and any acts of Congress relating thereto, prepared by him, $10,000: Provided, That he shall prepare a complete index of the work and do all proof reading in connection with the preparation, printing, and publication thereof; and the Public Printer shall print and bind 6,000 copies of the work, of which 2,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate and 4,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives.

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. President, this appears to be a legal work. I should like to ask the Senator from Maine, who is in charge of the bill, if the manuscript was examined by the Judiciary Committee or any other committee of Congress with reference to its adaptability and its precision and its accuracy before the item was introduced?

Mr. HALE. All of that has been examined and approved by the Committee on the Library. It is only a question of the second edition. The Committee on Appropriations had considered the question on the first edition. The item is inserted here, I may say properly, upon a letter of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations of the House, saying that they intended to insert it in the bill there. Upon that, with the knowledge the committee had upon the subject, the provision is put in for the second edition of the work. It is a valuable work. There is no doubt about that.

Mr. CULBERSON. It is recommended by the Committee on the Library?

Mr. HALE. By the Committee on the Library.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the head of "Public Printing and Binding" on page 170, line 12, after the word "employees," to strike out "for the purchase and installation of, and instruction in, cost, audit, and inventory systems;" so as to read:

For the public printing, for the public binding, and for paper for the public printing, including the cost of printing the debates and proceedings of Congress in the Congressional Record, and for lithographing, mapping, and engraving for both Houses of Congress, the Supreme Court of the United States, the supreme court of the District of Columbia, the Court of Claims, the Library of Congress, the Executive Office, and the Departments; for salaries, compensation, or wages of all necessary clerks and employees; for rents, fuel, gas, electric current, gas and electric fixtures, and ice, etc.

Mr. GALLINGER. I understand that the junior Senator from Ohio [Mr. DICK] wishes to make an inquiry concerning this item.

Mr. DICK entered the Chamber.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator from Ohio is now present.

Mr. DICK. I desire to ask the chairman of the committee the reason, if any, which the committee had for striking out parts of lines 12 and 13, on page 170, "for the purchase and installation of, and instruction in, cost, audit, and inventory systems?"

Mr. HALE. I am glad the Senator asked the question. It is a new thing entirely; the committee has no knowledge concerning it, and the language was struck out in order that in conference we may get information as to what it covers.

Mr. DICK. A very brief interview with a representative from the Printing Office is the only information I have to give the Senate with reference to this matter.

It is the purpose of the Public Printer to install a system in the Printing Office for the careful inventory of all of its property and for fixing the exact cost of every feature of the business done in this great establishment, the ultimate purpose being to curtail what has appeared to be very great extravagance in the management of the Printing Office of the General Government; and it was thought that if by some system of bookkeeping this whole method can be demonstrated, a great saving in the end to the Government would be accomplished.

Mr. HALE. I can assure the Senator that if it is shown in conference that the amendment covers a proper reform in that direction there will be no difficulty in reinserting it; but the committee of conference ought to have full information upon it.

Mr. DICK. Very good.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Committee on Appropriations.

The amendment was agreed to. The reading of the bill was resumed and continued to the end of line 18, on page 171.

Mr. HALE. In line 4, page 171, there is a transposition of appropriation. Insert, after the words "five million," the words "one hundred thousand."

The SECRETARY. On page 171, line 4, after the words "five million," insert "one hundred thousand;" so as to read:

And for all the necessary materials needed in the prosecution of the work, $5,100,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. And in line 9 strike out the sum and insert "two million ninety-three thousand five hundred dollars."

The SECRETARY. Strike out, in lines 9 and 10, the words "one million nine hundred and ninety-three thousand five hundred" and insert "two million ninety-three thousand five hundred dollars."

Mr. HALE. That is all right.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 173, line 16, after the date "1895," to insert "and in pursuance of the provisions of public resolution No. 13 of the present session;" so as to make the clause read:

For the Department of Agriculture, including not to exceed $25,000 for the Weather Bureau, and including the Annual Report of the Secretary of Agriculture, as required by the act approved January 12, 1895, and in pursuance of the provisions of public resolution No. 13 of the present session, $300,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 173, line 18, after the word "including," to strike out "the Bureau of the Census and;" and in line 19, after the word "Survey," to insert "and $135,000 for the Census Office;" so as to make the clause read:

For the Department of Commerce and Labor, including the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and $135,000 for the Census Office, $500,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "The isthmian canal," on page 175, line 7, after the date "1902," to strike out:

Provided, That no part of the sums herein appropriated shall be used for the construction of a canal of the so-called sea-level type.

Mr. HALE. Two or three matters have been passed over, and I ask that the amendment on page 175, beginning in line 7 and including lines 8 and 9, be passed over for the action of the Senate to-morrow.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It will be passed over in the absence of objection.

The reading of the bill was resumed and continued to the end of line 23, on page 179.

Mr. HALE. In line 19, page 179, I move to strike out the words "Secretary of the Treasury" and insert "Attorney-General." It is done at the request of the Secretary of the Treasury.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 182, after line 3, to strike out section 7 in the following words:

SEC. 7. From and after July 1, 1906, all of the expenses of the supreme court of the District of Columbia and of the court of appeals, District of Columbia, the office of the United States marshal for said District, and the office of the district attorney for said District, including the salaries of the judges of the supreme court, the salaries of the judges and clerk and assistant clerk of the court of appeals, the salaries of the district attorney and his assistants, all fees of witnesses, fees of jurors, pay of bailiffs and criers, and all the miscellaneous expenses of said courts, and all other lawful expenses of said courts and their officers, shall be paid one half from the revenues of the District of Columbia and the other half from the revenues of the United States: Provided further, That one-half of the fees collected and deposited by the marshal after June 30, 1906, for services rendered by him and his deputies shall be deposited to the credit of the District of Columbia and the other half to the credit of the United States, and the excess of the earnings of the clerk of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, and the fees of the clerk of the said court of appeals shall be deposited in like manner: Provided further, That if a balance shall be found due the clerk of the supreme court of the District of Columbia under section 182 of the Code of the District of Columbia, such balance shall be payable one-half from the revenues of the District of Columbia and one-half from the revenues of the United States: Provided further, That estimates for all expenditures hereunder shall, for the fiscal year 1908 and annually thereafter, be submitted through the Commissioners of the District.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 183, line 9, to change the number of the section from "8" to "7."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 183, line 14, to change the number of the section from "9" to "8."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 183, after line 20, to insert as a new section the following:

JAMESTOWN EXPOSITION.

SEC. 9. That there shall be exhibited at the Jamestown Exposition by the Government of the United States from its Executive Departments, the Smithsonian Institution, the National Museum, and the Library of Congress, such articles and materials as illustrate the functions and administrative facilities of the Government and such articles and material of an historical nature as will serve to impart a knowledge of our colonial and national history; and such Government exhibits shall include the Life-Saving Service, the Revenue-Cutter Service, the Army, the Navy, the Light-House Service, the wireless telegraph service, the Bureau of Fisheries, and an appropriate exhibit of the products and resources of the district of Alaska, the Territory of Hawaii, the Philippine Islands, and the island of Porto Rico. And the Bureau of the American Republics is hereby invited to make an exhibit illustrative of the resources and international relations of the American Republics, and space in the United States Government building shall be provided for that purpose. And the Jamestown Tercentennial Commission, created by an act of Congress of March 3, 1905, providing for an international naval, marine, and military celebration on the waters of Hampton Roads, in the State of Virginia, composed of the Secretaries of the Treasury, War, and Navy, shall, in addition to the authority and duties conferred and imposed by the said act, be authorized and empowered, and it shall be their duty to provide for the selection, purchase, preparation, transportation, arrangement, safe-keeping, exhibition, and return of the said Government exhibits; and to this end they shall have power and authority to create and appoint such boards, commissions, agents, and employees as they may deem desirable, and to vest in such boards, commissions, agents, and employees such power and authority as they may deem necessary or expedient. In addition to the articles and materials which the said Jamestown Tercentennial Commission may select for exhibition as aforesaid, the President of the United States may in his discretion designate other and additional articles and materials.

The officers and employees of the Government who may be appointed as aforesaid by the said Jamestown Tercentennial Commission to carry out the provisions of this section, and any officers and employees of the Government who may be detailed to assist them, including officers of the Army and Navy, shall receive no compensation in addition to their regular salaries, but they shall be allowed their actual and necessary traveling expenses, together with a per diem in lieu of subsistence, to be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, while necessarily absent from their homes engaged upon the said business. Officers of the Army and Navy shall receive said allowance in lieu of the subsistence and mileage now allowed by law; and the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy may, in their discretion, detail retired Army or Navy officers for such duty. Any provision of law which may prohibit the detail of persons in the employ of the United States to other service than that which they customarily perform shall not apply to persons detailed for duty in connection with the said Jamestown Tercentennial Exposition. And to carry out the provisions of this section the sum of $200,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the same to be expended in accordance with the general law and such rules and regulations as the said Jamestown Tercentennial Commission may prescribe.

That the Secretary of the Treasury shall cause to be erected on the site of the said exposition the following buildings: A building for the United States Government exhibit provided for in section 1 of this act, with such annex as may be necessary for the Territorial and insular exhibit; a building for the exhibit of the United States Life-Saving Service; a fisheries building, including an aquarium, and a building for the Geological Survey; all of which buildings shall not exceed in the aggregate a cost of $250,000, which amount shall be apportioned among them by the said Jamestown Tercentennial Commission; also a building for use as a place of rendezvous for the sailors and soldiers of the United States Navy and Army and of the foreign navies and armies participating in the celebration, at a cost not exceeding $75,000; also a building for use as a place of rendezvous for the commissioned naval and Army officers participating in said celebration, at a cost not exceeding $50,000. Included in the said several sums representing the cost of the said several buildings shall be the preparation of the grounds therefor and the lighting thereof. All of said buildings shall be erected, as far as practicable, on the colonial style of architecture from plans prepared by the Supervising Architect of the Treasury, to be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to contract for said buildings in the same manner and under the same regulations as for other public buildings of the United States. And to carry out the objects of this section, the several sums of money in this section above enumerated, aggregating $375,000, are hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. At the close of the exposition the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to dispose of said buildings or the materials composing the same, and of the piers which are provided for in this act, or the materials thereof, giving preference to the Jamestown Exposition Company to the extent that it shall have the option to purchase the same at an appraised value to be ascertained in such manner as the Secretary of the Treasury may determine.

That to the end that free and ready communication between the ships and the shore may be had, and in order to furnish ample and safe harbor for the small craft necessary to convey the soldiers and exposition visitors from the grounds to the fleet, there shall be constructed from plans to be furnished by the Jamestown Exposition Company and approved by the Secretary of War, two piers extending from the exposition grounds into the waters of Hampton Roads, the ends of said piers to be surmounted with towers for the exhibit, if practicable, of the Light-House Service and wireless telegraph service. Said piers shall be connected by an arch sufficiently high to permit small craft to enter under it into a basin or harbor, which shall be dredged to a sufficient depth to accommodate boats drawing not more than 10 feet of water at mean low tide. And the Secretary of War is directed to contract for the construction of said piers and basin in the same manner and under the same regulations as for public structures of the United States, but the contract price shall not exceed the sum of $400,000, or as much thereof as may be necessary, which sum is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated: Provided, That before the appropriation made by this section shall become available, the Jamestown Exposition Company shall file with the Secretary of the Treasury an agreement that it will, at its own expense, operate and manage said piers and basin during the period of the exposition, and that it will, at its own expense, illumine the same so as to make it a feature of especial attractiveness when viewed from the harbor where the naval fleets will be assembled: Provided further, That all small craft attached to any naval vessel of this or any foreign country, whose fleet is in the waters of Hampton Roads to participate in the celebration, shall have access to and use of said basin and piers for the purpose of communication with the exposition grounds without any charge therefor and under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Navy shall prescribe: Provided further, That the same right of access and use of said basin and piers during the exposition shall be, and is hereby, reserved to the United States, but nothing herein contained shall be construed to impose upon the United States any obligation to maintain or keep in repair such piers or basin or approaches thereto.

That for the transportation of United States troops participating in the said Jamestown Tercentennial Exposition and the extraordinary expense incident to such participation, the sum of $100,000 is hereby appropriated, or as much thereof as may be necessary, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended in the discretion of the Secretary of War.

That in aid of the said Jamestown Tercentennial Exposition the sum of $250,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, which sum shall be paid to the Jamestown Exposition Company upon satisfactory evidence being furnished the Secretary of the Treasury that the said company has expended the sum of $500,000 on account of said exposition. Said $250,000 shall be paid by the Secretary of the Treasury upon vouchers and satisfactory evidence that it has been expended for the purposes of the exposition other than salaries.

That for the erection of a permanent landing pier at Jamestown Island on the frontage owned by the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities, the precise location to be agreed upon by the Secretary of War and said association and to be donated by said association to the United States, the sum of $15,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated, out of any sum of money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. The Secretary of War is directed to contract for the construction of said pier in the same manner and under the same requirements as for public structures of the United States: Provided, however, That if in the judgment of said Secretary of War any pier which is already constructed upon land adjacent to the land owned by said Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities is suitable for the purpose of landing to view this historic spot and to land material for the construction of the monument to be erected thereon, and the same can be purchased within the appropriation here made, he is hereby authorized to expend the sum hereby appropriated for the purchase of said pier and of a sufficient and proper amount of land adjacent thereto to give free access to the grounds owned by such Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities and the monument to be erected thereon under the provisions of an act approved March 3, 1905. For the policing during the exposition period of the grounds owned by the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities, upon Jamestown Island, and for erecting thereon suitable retiring rooms and rest stations for the visiting public, and for providing drinking water at suitable places thereon, and for such benches and other accommodations as visitors to such island will need, the sum of $10,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. The moneys appropriated by this section shall be expended by and under the direction of the Secretary of War, and shall not be expended by him until such provisions are made with such association as will insure the free access, not only to the landing pier, but to every part of the grounds of said association, of all visitors who may come during the period of the said exposition, and will insure free access always to that part of the grounds upon which said monument is located.

That all articles which shall be imported from foreign countries for the sole purpose of exhibition at said exposition upon which there shall be a tariff or customs duty shall be admitted free of the payment of such duty, customs, fees, or charges, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe; but it shall be lawful at any time during the exposition to sell, for delivery at the close thereof, any goods or property imported for and actually on exhibition in the exposition buildings or on the grounds, subject to such regulations for the security of the revenue and for the collection of import duties as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe: Provided, That all such articles, when sold or withdrawn for consumption or use in the United States, shall be subject to the duty, if any, imposed upon such articles by the revenue laws in force at the date of withdrawal, and on articles which shall have suffered diminution or deterioration from incidental handling and necessary exposure the duty, if paid, shall be assessed according to the appraised value at the time of withdrawal for consumption or use, and the penalties prescribed by law shall be enforced against any person guilty of any illegal sale or withdrawal: Provided further, That nothing in this section contained shall be construed as an invitation, express or implied, from the Government of the United States to any foreign government, state, municipality, corporation, partnership, or individual to import any such articles for the purpose of exhibition at the said exposition.

That medals with appropriate devices, emblems, and inscriptions commemorative of said Jamestown Tercentennial Exposition and of the awards to be made to the exhibitors thereat and to successful contestants in aquatic and other contests shall be prepared for the Jamestown Exposition Company by the Secretary of the Treasury at some mint of the United States, subject to the provisions of the fifty-second section of the coinage act of 1893, upon the payment by the Jamestown Exposition Company of a sum equal to the cost thereof; and authority may be given by the Secretary of the Treasury to the holder of a medal properly awarded to him to have duplicates thereof made at any of the mints of the United States from gold, silver, or bronze upon the payment by him for the same of a sum equal to the cost thereof.

That in aid of the Negro Development and Exposition Company of the United States of America to enable it to make an exhibit of the progress of the negro race in this country at the said exposition, the sum of $100,000 is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. This sum shall be expended by the Jamestown Tercentennial Commission under rules and regulations prescribed by it and for such objects as shall be approved by both the said Negro Development and Exposition Company of the United States of America and the said Commission: Provided, however, That a reasonable proportion of said appropriation shall be expended for a building within which to make such exhibit.

That except to the extent and in the manner by this act provided and authorized the United States Government shall not be liable on any account whatever in connection with the said exposition, and nothing in this act shall be construed so as to create any liability upon the part of the United States Government, direct or indirect, for any debt or obligation incurred, or for any claim for aid or pecuniary assistance from Congress or the Treasury of the United States in support of or in liquidation of any debts or obligations created by said United States Government Board, or any other board, commission, or any person or persons whomsoever, acting or claiming to act by authority of this act in excess of the appropriations provided for by this act.

That the United States Government shall not in any manner or under any circumstances be liable for any of the acts, doings, or representations of the Jamestown Exposition Company, its officers, agents, servants, employees, or any of them, or for service, salaries, labor, or wages of said officers, agents, servants, or employees, or any of them, or for any subscription to the capital stock, or for any stock certificates, boads, mortgages, or obligations of any kind issued by said corporation, or for any debts, liabilities, or expenses of any kind or nature whatsoever incurred by the said Jamestown Exposition Company in connection with the holding of the said exposition.

That all moneys appropriated by this act which the Jamestown Tercentennial Commission is authorized to expend shall be drawn out of the Treasury in such manner and under such regulations as such Commission may determine, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury; and at the close of the exposition period, and after the work of such Commission is completed, such Commission shall make a complete report of their actions hereunder and a complete statement of all expenditures for each of the purposes herein specified to the President of the United States for transmission to Congress.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. I offer the following committee amendment.

The SECRETARY. On page 2, after line 21, insert:

Cedar Rapids, Iowa—Rent of buildings: For rent of temporary quarters for the accommodation of certain Government officials, and all expenses incident thereto, including necessary moving expenses, $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CULLOM. I offer the following amendment.

The SECRETARY. On page 180, after line 9, insert:

And the salary of the appraiser of merchandise for the port of Chicago is hereby fixed at $4,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WARREN. I ask the Secretary to turn to page 72, line 7, "Salaries and commissions of registers and receivers." With the permission of the Senator in charge of the bill, I offer an amendment at that point.

The SECRETARY. On page 72, line 7, insert after the word "hundred" the words "and seventy-three;" so as to read "five hundred and seventy-three thousand dollars."

Mr. HALE. That is right.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER. I offer an amendment to the bill.

The SECRETARY. After line 14, page 69, insert the side head "Census Office" and the following:

The Director of the Census is hereby authorized and directed to publish, in a permanent form, by counties and minor civil divisions, the names of the heads of families returned at the First Census of the United States in 1790; and the Director of the Census is authorized, in his discretion, to sell said publications, the proceeds thereof to be covered into the Treasury of the United States, to be deposited to the credit of miscellaneous receipts on account of "Proceeds of sales of Government property."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GALLINGER. In connection with the amendment I should like to have inserted in the RECORD an extract from the report of the Director of the Census and a letter from the Director of the Census.

There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the report of the Director of the Census for 1904.]

PROPRIETY OF PUBLISHING THE RETURNS OF THE FIRST CENSUS.

In this connection I ask your attention to a request frequently made by the patriotic organizations of the country and by individuals, that the Government shall compile and publish the names of the heads of families in the original thirteen States, or returned at the census of 1790. Unfortunately the First Census schedules for Delaware, Georgia, Kentucky, New Jersey, Tennessee, and Virginia were burned at the time of the capture of Washington by the British, or have since been lost or destroyed; but the schedules still in existence—comprising Connecticut, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, and Vermont—contain much information, ready access to which would be welcomed by students. This information would increase the general knowledge of the origin and distribution of the early population of the country. The population of the United States in 1790, excluding slaves, was returned as 3,231,533, of which number 824,713 resided in the States and Territories for which the schedules are missing, leaving 2,406,820 as the population enumerated on the schedules now in possession of the Bureau. I estimate that this population represents 401,134 heads of families, and that the desired information could be printed in 2,507 pages, at a cost, for printing and binding an edition of 5,000 in two volumes, of $32,570. I doubt if the Government can make a more substantial and welcome contribution to its own history for a like sum of money; and I recommend that Congress be asked to make a specific appropriation for this publication, much of which is certain to return to the Treasury from the sale of these volumes. If they are sold to the public at a price corresponding somewhat with their cost, it will insure their distribution only to those who will prize them, and avoid the waste which so frequently attends the distribution of public documents.

CENSUS OFFICE, OFFICE OF THE DIRECTOR,
Washington, D. C., April 25, 1906.

Hon. CHESTER I. LONG, United States Senate.

DEAR SENATOR LONG: In response to your verbal suggestion to-day, I beg to say that the proposition covered by Senator GALLINGER'S joint resolution "to provide for the publication of the names of the heads of families returned at the First Census of the United States" appeals to me as most commendable. This census is the only record of American families as they existed in 1790, and is especially valuable from a historical and genealogical standpoint. The constant requests made upon this office for genealogical information obtainable only from this census indicates that its publication would meet a widespread and increasing want. The constant use to which these volumes have been subjected for this purpose during the century has reduced many of them to a very dilapidated condition, and at no distant date will result in their destruction.

The interest shown in the proposition, particularly among the members of the patriotic societies of the country, is shown by the fact that the Daughters of the American Revolution, at their recent congress in the city of Washington, unanimously passed a resolution, a copy of which I am inclosing, indorsing the publication of these records.

The subject was referred to at some length in the Annual Report of the Director of the Census for 1904, and as a fuller expression of my views, I am inclosing herewith that portion of this report in which the proposed publication was earnestly advocated.

This extract from the report of the Director indicates that the cost of the proposed publication, in two volumes, will be approximately $32,000. The printing will be the only cost connected with the publication, as the records can be copied at convenient intervals, by the regular clerical force of this office.

I beg leave to call your attention to the fact that a resolution similar to Senator GALLINGER'S was introduced in the House of Representatives by Mr. CALDER, of New York, and that the Census Committee of the House, at its meeting on Friday last, authorized a favorable report on the resolution, and struck out the last provision of the resolution authorizing that 1,000 copies should be printed for the use of the Senate, 2,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 2,000 copies for distribution by the Director of the Census. This amendment was made upon my suggestion, in view of the fact that no publications of the Census Office are included in the Congressional allotments for printing. In every case the size of the edition of census publications is left by the law to the discretion of the Director of the Census, the result of which has been a much greater economy in the printing of the Office than would have been possible under the allotment system, and an entire avoidance of wasteful distribution, of which so much complaint has recently been made. In order that you may fully understand the attitude of the Census Office upon this question, I inclose herewith a copy of a memorandum on the subject, prepared for my use by the chief clerk of this Office.

In my judgment the joint resolution will be still further improved if, in lieu of the provision stricken out by the House committee, the following amendment is inserted: "And the Director of the Census is authorized, in his discretion, to sell said publication, the proceeds thereof to be covered into the Treasury of the United States, to be deposited to the credit of 'Miscellaneous receipts on account of proceeds of sales of Government property.'" The adoption of this amendment will still further safeguard the distribution of the publication, and it is my belief that the sale of the volumes will return to the Treasury a very considerable part of the cost of printing. Under these conditions I can see no objection to attaching Senator GALLINGER'S resolution, with the proposed amendment, to the census bill now pending in the Senate.

Very respectfully, S. N. D. NORTH, Director.

Mr. GALLINGER. I beg to offer another amendment. In advance I will say it is subject to a point of order, which I trust may not be made against it. It is a matter that is very familiar to the Senate, and I feel that there is an urgent necessity for the insertion of the amendment in the bill in the hope that it may become law.

The SECRETARY. After line 18, on page 106, insert:

The Washington Railway and Electric Company, the Capital Traction Company, the City and Suburban Railway of Washington, and the Anacostia and Potomac River Railroad Company are hereby authorized to construct temporary surface tracks on the Union Station plaza and along such streets as may be designated by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to connect with existing tracks at the intersection of C street and Delaware avenue or North Capitol street, and at First and G streets NW., and to operate cars on such temporary surface tracks by overhead trolley pending the construction of the permanent underground electric system, for which, so far as Union Station changes and extensions are concerned, there is no authority in law: Provided, That the temporary tracks, poles, and other appurtenances necessary to the operation of the overhead-trolley lines herein authorized shall be removed immediately after the operative completion of the permanent tracks hereinbefore referred to.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I suppose that is intended to take the place of the bill which has been under discussion in the Senate. I ask the Senator from New Hampshire if that is correct?

Mr. GALLINGER. I will say that if this should become a law, beyond question the bill that has been under debate will be abandoned for the present session.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. The bill which has been under discussion will be abandoned?

Mr. GALLINGER. It will be abandoned if this becomes a law, for the reason, and for the only reason, that I feel it is extremely doubtful, even if the Senate should pass the bill which has been discussed within a day or two, that it could get consideration in another body.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I think the Senator is right about that. It is not my purpose to delay the bill which has been under consideration here, and I myself had prepared an amendment very much like the amendment the Senator has just offered. It provides, as I understand it, for merely temporary tracks and temporary overhead trolley lines.

Mr. GALLINGER. Yes. The bill which has been under discussion has been delayed since last December, hence the necessity for this amendment.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I think the Senator from New Hampshire has had something himself to do with the delay.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PERKINS. By permission of the acting chairman in charge of the bill, and on behalf of the committee, I desire to offer an amendment to the bill.

Mr. HALE. It is a committee amendment.

Mr. PERKINS. It is a committee amendment.

The SECRETARY. On page 75, after line 13, insert:

Reproducing plats of surveys, General Land Office: To enable the Commissioner of the General Land Office to reproduce by photolithography 4,855 copies, more or less, of the official plats of the United States surveys, constituting a part of the records of the office of the United States surveyor-general at San Francisco, Cal., which were destroyed by earthquake and fire April 18, 1906, $14,565, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

Mr. HALE. I think that is already provided for in one of the deficiency bills, but if not, it ought to be, and therefore I do not object to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. NELSON. I move to strike out the proviso on page 144, commencing in line 7, in the following words:

Provided, That this appropriation shall be available only under the condition that no bar or canteen shall be maintained at said Homes for the sale of beer, wine, or other intoxicating liquors.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment.

The SECRETARY. On page 144, line 7, after the word "dollars," strike out the following proviso:

Provided, That this appropriation shall be available only under the condition that no bar or canteen shall be maintained at said Homes for the sale of beer, wine, or other intoxicating liquors.

Mr. NELSON. If the committee has no objection to the amendment, I do not want to take any time on this matter.

Mr. HALE. I am very sorry the Senator has projected this matter here. It will take a very long debate. The committee was practically decisive, I will not say unanimous, that as the House had taken this matter in hand and had passed this provision the Senate should not antagonize it. The Senate has been beset by Members from the House who were outvoted asking us to raise the issue. When it had been settled in the House the committee decided not to raise that issue. I am very sorry the Senator has done it. It will lead to a very long debate.

Mr. NELSON. I can not withdraw the amendment.

Mr. HALE. Then it is utterly impossible to-night to take a vote upon it. I shall ask, when we get through with the bill, that it be reported to the Senate and all the amendments which are not in question concurred in, and I shall ask that certain amendments, including this one, shall be reserved. I hope the Senator, before the debate is closed, will see how much he is delaying the bill by this amendment.

Mr. NELSON. I want the Senator from Maine to understand that I am not doing it for the purpose of delay. I am doing it in the interest of the old soldiers. I am, to a certain extent, an old soldier myself, and it is because I feel for the old men in our Soldiers' Homes that I am in favor of this amendment. I do not move the amendment for the purpose of delaying the bill. If the Senator does not care to hear me on it to-night, I will let it go over until to-morrow morning.

Mr. HALE. It will have to go over, because there is not a voting quorum here now.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment will be passed over.

Mr. NELSON. Without prejudice.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without prejudice.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. With the consent of the acting chairman, I propose an amendment.

The SECRETARY. On page 154, after line 3, insert:

That the consolidated index to the United States Statutes at Large from March 4, 1789, to March 3, 1903, prepared under authority of Senate resolution of June 19, 1902, be printed, bound, and distributed in the manner now provided by law for the printing, binding, and distribution of the United States Statutes at Large and the Revised Statutes.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LODGE. I offer an amendment to go in on page 20, after the word "building," in line 15.

The SECRETARY. On page 20, after line 15, insert a new paragraph, as follows:

International catalogue of scientific literature: For the cooperation of the United States in the work of the international catalogue of scientific literature, including the preparation of a classified index catalogue of American scientific publications, for incorporation in the international catalogue, the expense of clerk hire, the purchase of necessary books and periodicals, and other necessary incidental expenses, $5,000, the same to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FULTON. I offer an amendment which I send to the desk.

The SECRETARY. On page 157, line 22, strike out the word "December" and insert the word "October;" so as to read:

On and after October 15, 1906, no sums of money shall be payable under and by virtue of the act of Congress of June 4, 1897, providing for the revision and codification of the criminal and penal laws of the United States, etc.

Mr. HALE. That is only a matter of time. There is no objection to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FULTON. On page 158, line 6, I move to strike out the word "December" and insert the word "October;" so as to read:

And the subsequent acts of Congress of March 3, 1899, and March 3, 1901, enlarging the duties of the commissioners appointed under said act, but the said commission so created shall, on or before said October 15, 1906, complete the duties imposed upon them thereby and shall present their final report thereon to the Attorney-General in accordance with the provisions of said act, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President, my colleague [Mr. TELLER], before he went home, introduced an amendment which was printed, and I ask that it be inserted at the bottom of page 89.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. At the foot of page 89 insert:

That section 4 of an act entitled "An act to provide for the final disposition of the affairs of the Five Civilized Tribes in the Indian Territory, and for other purposes," approved April 26, 1906, be, and the same is hereby, amended by adding the following proviso at the end of the section——

Mr. HALE. The Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER] presented that matter in the committee. I told him we were not prepared to go into that question, and that if the amendment was submitted I must make a point of order against it.

Mr. PATTERSON. I hope the Senator from Maine will not insist upon a point of order. I realize, of course, that it is subject to a point of order, but it is to remedy what those who have intelligent knowledge of the subject know is a very grave injustice in the settlement of the affairs of the Five Civilized Tribes.

The only thing the amendment proposes to do is to allow the Secretary of the Interior to examine the rolls of the Five Civilized Tribes and transfer to the rolls of citizens by blood those whose names should be there, as appears from the enrollment records. It is that and nothing more. It is a matter that is absolutely of record, about which and to accomplish which no extraneous evidence or evidence de hors the record may be introduced. It is simply to give to a class of people who are entitled to have it, under solemn act of Congress, the lands and other benefits the acts pertaining to the Five Civilized Tribes contemplated that they should have.

I do hope that the Senator from Maine, who is usually so generous, will not make the point of order. Certainly he must recognize that the Senate has been kind in interposing no points of order to many, many provisions that are in this bill and that were subject to points of order; and I think that he might omit to make the point when the only thing that is sought to be accomplished is that which, if justice is done to helpless people, must be done in this way.

I appeal to the Senator from Maine to allow this provision to be added to the bill.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, I do not think the conferees ought to be embarrassed by introducing this subject and putting it in as an amendment. I think the Senator himself sees the force of the objection. I realize what he has said that the Senate has been very indulgent about this bill.

Mr. PATTERSON. Let me say to the Senator from Maine that, as I understand it, the members of the Committee on Indian Affairs of the Senate recognize the justice of this provision. It would have been in the bill in substance had it not been for the intense opposition of a member of the conference on the part of the House.

Mr. HALE. Now, I appeal to the Senator. Suppose he were in my place. Does he think that this subject which has been thrashed out in long debate and in conference upon another bill ought to be presented and put into this bill, and thereby raise the question with another set of conferees?

Mr. PATTERSON. It has never been presented in this form. It has never been presented in a manner in which everything that is objectionable has been eliminated. The objections that were made when we had it up before, I will say to the Senator from Maine, were that it admitted testimony dehors the record for the purpose of establishing the citizenship. Now everything of that kind is eliminated, and it is simply a duty now that by the amendment is devolved upon the Secretary of the Interior to make these transfers as they should be made under the law from that which appears on the rolls themselves. The Senator can trust the Secretary of the Interior. I hope he can.

Mr. HALE. I wish that Senators would take some responsibility themselves. I have every day measures submitted to me that I know to be subject to a point of order. Sometimes they are submitted by my constituents. I decline to present them because they are subject to a point of order. I wish Senators, who have a grave responsibility about these things, when they are besieged to offer amendments to appropriation bills that they know are subject to a point of order, would decline to present them. It ought not to be pushed in in this way and an appeal be made to the Senator in charge of the bill to give away the rights of the Senate and the committee. Senators themselves ought to exercise some judgment and ought to be able to say no.

I can not accept this amendment because it is subject to a point of order. If an appropriation bill is to be a matter of solicitation and every Senator is to offer every amendment he is asked to offer, although he knows it is subject to a point of order, and then he is to make a personal appeal to the Senator in charge of the bill, we are not getting the right form of legislation. I am no more responsible for this bill than the rest of the Senate, and the Senator ought not to make an appeal to me as he does.

Mr. PATTERSON. Mr. President, I do not want to seem to be unduly insistent in view of the very gentlemanly way in which the Senator from Maine seeks to assert his opposition. I want to say to the Senator from Maine that I can at least speak for one Senator who has time and time again, from the motives that he suggested should move Senators, refused to move amendments to appropriation bills for the very reason he states.

I want to ask the Senator from Maine whether a lecture—and I use the term in the most inoffensive manner possible—comes with good grace, after a bill has been read to the Senate and accepted, that if matters subject to a point of order were eliminated from it it would be at least one-third less in bulk? Surely the Senator from Maine has been unable to act with that Jacksonian firmness which he sometimes exhibits, and which I am glad he is now exhibiting in connection with another conference committee in regard to the construction of the great vessel. If he would exhibit the firmness that he talks of, and that would be so admirable if it could always be exhibited not only by him, but by all the Senators, as a matter of course, I would not have a word to say.

But I say to the Senator this is a matter in which I have taken a personal interest, and I have offered the amendment because I am convinced that the plainest kind of ordinary justice requires that some relief of this kind should be given. Were it not for that fact, if I had not given the matter very considerable investigation, if I was not convinced of the positive justice of the proposition, and if it did anything more than devolve upon the Secretary of the Interior authority to confirm this right from the records in his own office, I would yield in a moment.

Mr. HALE. Let me ask the Senator if the Committee on Indian Affairs is in favor of this amendment?

Mr. PATTERSON. So I understand, Mr. President. I have talked with the chairman of that committee, not upon this particular amendment, but I have talked——

Mr. HALE. If the Committee on Indian Affairs is in favor of this proposition, I will not make the point of order.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President——

Mr. PATTERSON. I do not want to be understood as saying that the Committee on Indian Affairs is in favor of it, because I have not talked with all the members. I talked with the chairman of the committee, and the chairman I know is in favor of it. I understood from him that the Senate conferees were in favor of a proposition substantially what this is, only that this is less objectionable than the one they discussed.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Will the Senator allow me?

Mr. PATTERSON. Certainly.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Let the amendment be read for information.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment.

The SECRETARY. At the foot of page 89 insert:

That section 4 of an act entitled "An act to provide for the final disposition of the affairs of the Five Civilized Tribes in the Indian Territory, and for other purposes," approved April 26, 1906, be, and the same is hereby, amended by adding the following proviso at the end of the section:

"And provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to reexamine the enrollment records of the Five Civilized Tribes for the purpose of ascertaining whether said enrollment records show that persons who, at the time their enrollment was made, were of Indian blood on the side of either parent, and to make such transfer of the names of such persons from one roll to another as they are entitled to on account of the facts appearing by such enrollment records."

Mr. SPOONER. What is meant by the words "enrollment records?"

Mr. PATTERSON. I suppose it means the enrollment records associated with the applications.

Mr. SPOONER. That they should be taken into consideration in passing on the subject?

Mr. PATTERSON. It means that the Secretary of the Interior——

Mr. SPOONER. Is this the same question that was being discussed the other day in the Senate on the conference report?

Mr. PATTERSON. Yes.

Mr. SPOONER. I do not know but the language ought to be guarded a little more than that.

Mr. PATTERSON. That might be done, I think, in the committee of conference.

Mr. HALE. The Committee on Indian Affairs are evidently against this matter. If the members of that committee do not make any point of order, it having been in that committee, I certainly shall not make the point of order. Something ought to be done by other committees that deal with these subjects and consider and deliberate upon them. If no member of the committee makes the point of order on the amendment, I shall not make it.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Maine yield to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. HALE. Certainly.

Mr. LONG. The chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, the junior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. CLAPP], is absent, and so I ask that this amendment may go over.

Mr. HALE. I can not agree to that, Mr. President. I repeat, if no member of the Committee on Indian Affairs makes the point of order on the amendment I shall not make it, and the Senate may adopt it.

Mr. PATTERSON. Let me say to the Senator from Kansas [Mr. LONG] that if the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, when he appears here to-morrow, objects, and if the Senator from Kansas objects to-morrow, I will agree that the amendment may go out.

Mr. HALE. I shall not agree that the amendment go over.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. PATTERSON].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. MALLORY. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk, to come in on page 92, at the end of line 14.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Florida will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 92, at the end of line 14, it is proposed to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That all of the appropriations herein made for the Government Hospital for the Insane shall be disbursed under the direct supervision of the Secretary of the Interior by the disbursing officer of the Department of the Interior on vouchers properly certified by the superintendent of the hospital and approved by the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. HALE. Let the Senator from Florida confine his amendment to the proposition that these appropriations shall be disbursed under the control of the Secretary of the Interior. I do not want to recognize any disbursing officer.

Mr. MALLORY. I call the Senator's attention to the fact that in the Report of the Secretary of the Interior for the year 1905 he makes the direct recommendation, and the amendment, I think, is the language of the recommendation.

Mr. HALE. If the Senator will strike out the words I have indicated, I shall not object; otherwise I shall have to make the point of order against the amendment.

Mr. MALLORY. I have not before me the copy of the amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The modification of the amendment suggested by the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE] will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out the words "by the disbursing officer of the Department of the Interior;" so that as modified the amendment will read:

Provided, That all of the appropriations herein made for the Government Hospital for the Insane shall be disbursed under the direct supervision of the Secretary of the Interior on vouchers properly certified by the superintendent of the hospital and approved by the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. HALE. I have no objection to the amendment as modified. I think it is right.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment as modified.

The amendment as modified was agreed to.

Mr. MALLORY. I have another amendment which I desire to offer.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Florida will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 91, after the word "patients," at the end of line 7, it is proposed to insert:

Provided, That none of the moneys herein appropriated shall be used to purchase or maintain more than one horse and vehicle or one automobile for the use of the superintendent.

Mr. HALE. I think that is right, Mr. President.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CARTER. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The SECRETARY. On page 123, after the word "dollars," on line 10, it is proposed to insert:

Of which sum $1,000 may be used under direction of the Secretary of War for examination, survey, and plans for adequate water supply for Fort William Henry Harrison, in the State of Montana.

Mr. HALE. Only a thousand dollars?

Mr. CARTER. Yes; for an examination.

Mr. HALE. Well, I do not object to it.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CARTER. On page 127, after line 24, I move to insert as a separate paragraph the amendment which I send to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. After line 24, on page 127, it is proposed to insert:

For the survey and construction of a wagon road from the West Gallatin River, by the most direct and practicable route, to Mammoth Hot Springs, in the Yellowstone National Park, $15,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. At what point does the Senator desire to have the amendment inserted?

Mr. HANSBROUGH. I think somewhere in the vicinity of the amendment in relation to the Jamestown Exposition.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to insert, on page 88, after line 10, the following:

For the management, improvement, and protection of Sullys Hill Park, in the State of North Dakota, to be expended under the supervision of the Secretary of the Interior, $2,500.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Just a word, Mr. President. The Secretary of the Interior has recommended this.

Mr. HALE. That is a park I never heard of.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. That is one of the reasons why I offer the amendment. I want a great many people to hear of it. The Secretary of the Interior recommends the appropriation for the improvement of this park.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. Now, Mr. President, I am going to ask that the bill be reported to the Senate, and then I shall ask that certain amendments be reserved.

Mr. SPOONER. Before the bill is reported to the Senate, I want to ask attention to page 133. The Senator from Maine is a man of fine literary sense and taste, and I wish to read the language here, which seems to need a little improvement.

Mr. HALE. On what page?

Mr. SPOONER. On page 133, beginning with line 11:

For hospital, namely: Pay of assistant surgeons, matrons, druggists, hospital clerks and stewards, ward masters, nurses, cooks, waiters, readers, hospital carriage drivers, hearse drivers, gravediggers, funeral escort, and for such other services as may be necessary for the care of the sick.

Mr. HALE. The Senator might add "and the dead," if he thinks that will cover it.

Mr. SPOONER. I think that would answer, or "the burial of the dead."

Mr. HALE. There is no objection to that.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. What is the amendment proposed by the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. SPOONER. After the word "sick," in line 15, page 133, I move to insert the words "and the burial of the dead."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 133, line 15, after the word "sick," it is proposed to insert the words "and the burial of the dead."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CULBERSON. Mr. President, before adjournment I wish to call the attention of the Senator from Maine to pages 154 and 155, where amendments occur in italics on those pages. I ask the Senator if those amendments do not change existing law? I recall that separate bills for this purpose were introduced in the Senate; that they were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and were considered by that committee without final action, if I mistake not.

Mr. HALE. Does the Senator refer to the amendments fixing the salaries of district attorneys and marshals in the States of Idaho and California?

Mr. CULBERSON. Yes. I recall that, generally speaking, it was the opinion of the committee that these matters ought to be taken up in some general way by a general bill readjusting the salaries wherever they should be readjusted, and not confining the action to Idaho and California.

Mr. SPOONER. That suggestion was made; but I think afterwards it was agreed that in order to equalize these two cases pending the general adjustment, which the committee was not prepared at that time to report upon, these two should be favorably reported, and I think they were.

Mr. HALE. The Committee on Appropriations were told that the Committee on the Judiciary had unanimously agreed, under the conditions suggested by the Senator from Wisconsin, upon these propositions, and therefore the Committee on Appropriations recommended their insertion in the bill.

Mr. CULBERSON. Without taking further time, I reserve the point of order on those amendments until I can examine the matter.

Mr. NELSON. I wish to say that the Committee on the Judiciary reported favorably on the subject.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, those amendments may be reserved.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Mr. President, I want to reserve the right to move to reconsider the vote, or to again bring up the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] a while ago, in regard to permitting the street railways to lay their tracks to the Union Station. I have examined the amendment more carefully than I could by listening to it when it was read at the desk, and I am not at all pleased with its phraseology. That may be my fault. I simply want to reserve that amendment when the bill gets into the Senate. Meantime I will offer an amendment, which I shall propose to-morrow.

Mr. HALE. I ask that all amendments may be offered to-night.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. Then I will offer it as an amendment to the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GALLINGER. Let it be read, Mr. President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The proposed amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. In lieu of the amendment adopted on motion of Mr. GALLINGER, it is proposed to insert——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment in the present stage of the bill is not in order.

Mr. GALLINGER. I should like to have it read for information.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The proposed amendment will be read for the information of the Senate.

The Secretary read as follows:

That the existing street railway companies in the District of Columbia, under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, be, and they are hereby, authorized to lay temporary tracks to and from the new Union Station, connecting with their permanent tracks, and to operate their cars over such temporary tracks by overhead electrical trolley power until such time as the said street railway companies, or any of them, shall receive authority from Congress to extend their existing lines to and in front of the said Union Station and put in permanent conduits for the purpose of operating their system or systems by the underground trolley.

Mr. HALE. I shall ask that that amendment be reserved. Of course when that amendment comes up in the Senate, amendments can be offered to it, and the Senator can offer his amendment at that time.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. That is satisfactory to me.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It will be in order to offer the amendment when the bill reaches the Senate.

Mr. HALE. I ask that the bill be reported to the Senate.

Mr. MALLORY. I have an amendment that I will ask to have read, and I will offer it when the bill gets into the Senate. It is to the amendment adopted at the instance of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER].

Mr. HALE. Let it be printed, Mr. President.

Mr. GALLINGER. I should like to have it read.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. At the request of the Senator from New Hampshire, the proposed amendment will be read.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That the existing transfer arrangements between said Washington Railway and Electric Company and other passenger transportation corporations shall not be terminated except by authority of Congress.

Mr. HALE. I am satisfied, in view of all the controversies that have arisen, that I shall have to make the point of order against the amendment when it reaches the Senate, but for the present I reserve the right.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I rise to say that I will save the Senator the trouble of doing that, if I can have the privilege of withdrawing the amendment that I offered; and then the traveling public can walk in Washington after the Union Station is completed.

Mr. HALE. I understand the Senator withdraws his amendment?

Mr. GALLINGER. I do. I withdraw my amendment, and I shall make the point of order against all other amendments relating to that matter.

Mr. HALE. Now, Mr. President, I am going to ask that the bill be reported to the Senate, and when the Chair asks the question——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the vote by which the amendment proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire was adopted will be regarded as reconsidered. The Senator from New Hampshire withdraws his amendment.

Mr. HALE. That is right. Now, Mr. President, let the bill be reported to the Senate. Then I will reserve certain amendments.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Chair is inclined to think that, as a number of amendments pending in Committee of the Whole have been passed over, the bill can not now be reported to the Senate.

Mr. HALE. The same effect is reached, Mr. President, if the bill be reported to the Senate with such amendments reserved. When they are reserved in Committee of the Whole the right of every Senator is maintained when the bill gets into the Senate as to those amendments and any proposition that he may make upon them.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendments must be first agreed to as in Committee of the Whole. After the amendments go into the Senate they are still open to amendment, but they can not be taken into the Senate at this stage, as it is obvious to the Chair that they must be first agreed to as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. HALE. I do not think it is very essential. It is evident, though I am very sorry it is so, that we can not finish the bill to-night. However, the Senate is as much interested as I am.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. If the amendments are agreed to as in Committee of the Whole, they can be reserved for separate consideration in the Senate.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, of course, if the bill is reported to the Senate, it can only be reported with the amendments that have been made as in Committee of the Whole. Amendments that have been passed over have not been made or dealt with and fall when the bill is reported to the Senate.

Mr. HALE. Undoubtedly.

Mr. LODGE. But those amendments that have been passed over can all be offered as new amendments in the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Then, would not this be the parliamentary status——

Mr. LODGE. The fact that an amendment has been passed over does not deprive us of the privilege of going into the Senate if they are to be offered there as new amendments.

Mr. HANSBROUGH. But, Mr. President, is not this the case: Would it not be necessary to withdraw the amendments?

Mr. LODGE. Yes; they ought to be withdrawn.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. They must be withdrawn; otherwise a part of the bill would be in the Senate and a part of the amendments would be in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. LODGE. That is what I meant to imply—that they must be disposed of in some manner.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. They can be withdrawn and offered in the Senate.

Mr. LODGE. It is not necessary to vote them down or vote them in, but they must be in some way disposed of.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. They must either be voted down, voted in, or withdrawn.

Mr. HALE. The controversies which we do not settle to-night—and the Lord only knows when we will settle them—must be settled hereafter. I do not see any way, unless these different amendments are acted upon, and then I will reserve them after the bill is reported to the Senate; but I not am very urgent about that, because——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendments that have been passed over could be agreed to in Committee of the Whole and then reserved for separate votes when the bill comes into the Senate.

Mr. HALE. Yes; but perhaps some of the amendments are so important that the Senate would not be willing to agree to them even nominally; and, therefore, I shall ask—I have done all I could do to get the bill through to-day, but I can see plainly that it will not get through perhaps this week.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, to report the bill to the Senate without acting on amendments would be equivalent to the Committee of the Whole reporting to the Senate that they had considered the bill and made some progress with it, but have not disposed of it. Therefore, the bill would not be out of the Committee of the Whole until we had disposed of those amendments. But, Mr. President, so far as I am concerned, while I am interested in one amendment, I am quite content, if that will solve the difficulty, to withdraw it for the time being, with the understanding that I will offer it again when the bill gets into the Senate. However, I understand there are reserved two other amendments—the one to which the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. MCLAURIN] objects, and the canal amendment. There may be some others, but I recall those two.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Minnesota withdraws the amendment.

Mr. NELSON. No; I will not withdraw it, unless it will help to solve the difficulty.

Mr. LODGE. The amendment, Mr. President, the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. MCLAURIN] objected to had been agreed to. It is the point of order on which the Senator from Mississippi took an appeal that goes over.

Mr. MCLAURIN. If the Senator from Massachusetts will allow me, I do not understand that that amendment has been agreed to. It was permitted to go over and not agreed to, because I especially objected to it.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, what went over was this: The point of order was made; it was overruled by the Chair, and the Senator from Mississippi took an appeal.

Mr. SPOONER. It was not agreed to.

Mr. LODGE. And the question before the Senate is on the appeal.

Mr. MCLAURIN. The amendment was not agreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment was not agreed to. The point of order was made against it.

Mr. LODGE. That is unimportant.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. What is the further wish of the Senator from Maine?

Mr. HALE. I do not see that there is anything further I can do, Mr. President. I have done the best I could to get the bill through to-night, and the Senate was very kind in having this evening session.

Mr. MCLAURIN. Mr. President——

Mr. NELSON. Will the Senator from Mississippi allow me to make a suggestion?

Mr. MCLAURIN. Certainly.

Mr. NELSON. I will withdraw my amendment for the time being and offer it in the Senate to-morrow. I understand the Senator who has the bill in charge does not intend to go any further than to have it reported to the Senate this evening. Am I correct in that?

Mr. HALE. What I hoped, Mr. President, was that everything would be disposed of except the amendment in relation to the Panama Canal, which, of course, could not be disposed of to-night, as the Senate has agreed to take that matter up and decide it to-morrow. But I can not control the Senate; and if the Senator from Mississippi insists upon his amendment to strike out the provision in regard to the President's traveling expenses or to oppose that provision which was put in by the committee, of course I can not have a vote upon it to-night.

Mr. MCLAURIN. In answer to what was suggested by the Senator from Minnesota, I want to suggest, inasmuch as he proposes to withdraw his amendment, that the Senator who has charge of the bill withdraw the amendment on which I made the point of order and offer it to-morrow in the Senate. I do not know what disposition the Senate will make of the amendment. I have an idea what the disposition will be; but I have some observations that I desire to make before that amendment is to be acted upon, and I prefer for myself that that be done to-morrow.

Mr. HALE. Then, Mr. President, I do not conceive that anything can be gained by spending any more time on the bill this evening; but I shall continue to ask the Senate at every possible moment to take the bill up and consider and complete it, without repeating the reasons which I gave this morning, in order that it may go into conference. But if the Senate does not desire that, the Committee on Appropriations is discharged from its responsibility.

Mr. SPOONER. I should like to ask the Senator a question.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Maine yield to the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. HALE. Certainly.

Mr. SPOONER. The Senator does not expect to adopt the canal amendment to-night?

Mr. HALE. No; I do not.

Mr. SPOONER. How could the bill go into the Senate with the canal amendment unacted upon in Committee of the Whole?

Mr. HALE. What I hoped was that it would go into the Senate, and when the Chair asked the usual question, "whether any amendments are reserved," that that amendment would be reserved.

Mr. SPOONER. Does the Senator mean that the Senate, in Committee of the Whole, shall adopt the amendment?

Mr. HALE. Adopt the amendment or not—either way. But I can see that that is not a feasible thing, and there is nothing to be gained by spending any more time on the bill to-night.

Mr. MCLAURIN. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Maine yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. HALE. Yes.

Mr. MCLAURIN. I wish to say, Mr. President, in response to the suggestion that was made in reference to the appeal that I took to the Senate from the ruling of the Chair, that I will not insist upon the appeal to-morrow, not that I am convinced that I was incorrect, but for other reasons I will not insist upon the appeal. I will, however, oppose the amendment that has been reported, as I stated a while ago, and I propose to submit some observations on it when it comes to the Senate.

Mr. HALE. The Senator suggests that he proposes to debate that amendment, and I do not see that anything is to be gained by obliging him to commence the debate to-night. Good progress has been made with the bill, and I shall ask the Senate at the first possible moment to continue the consideration of it. I can see plainly that nothing can be done to-morrow, because to-morrow is already confiscated by the rule of the Senate for the Panama Canal. If, however, we should get through with that in time to-morrow afternoon, I shall ask the Senate to take this bill up and complete it; and, if necessary, I shall ask for a session to-morrow evening. Under those conditions, Mr. President, I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 10 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Thursday, June 21, 1906, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WEDNESDAY, June 20, 1906.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m.

The following prayer was offered by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN, D. D.:

We bless Thee, our Father in heaven, for every fraud unearthed, for every injustice brought to light, for every act of dishonesty and perfidy uncovered throughout the world, and we most fervently pray that speedy retribution shall follow the wrongdoer, both for his sake and for the sake of humanity, and we rejoice with exceeding great joy that for every fraud there are a thousand genuine acts, for every injustice a thousand deeds of justice and kindness, for every deed of dishonesty a thousand acts of honesty; that there is more good than evil in the world; that the trend of civilization is upward, not downward—forward, not backward; that God reigns, and the star of love is in the ascendency; that the tides of brotherhood are strengthening and widening day by day; and with an optimism born of faith in Thee and in humanity we look forward to the coming of Thy kingdom in all its sweetness and fullness and the reign of Thy love in every heart; for Thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory for ever and ever. Amen.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

LEGISLATIVE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. LITTAUER. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill H. R. 16472—legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill—and I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the report be omitted.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

Mr. LITTAUER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the statement be omitted. It is a long tabulation of what has taken place on the many amendments. It is printed in the RECORD to-day.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I shall have to object to that unless we have an explanation.

Mr. LITTAUER. It is printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I have no objection to that.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands the gentleman wishes that one or the other be read.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I merely ask that one or the other be read.

Mr. LITTAUER. I ask unanimous consent that the statement may be read.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 16472) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 27, 49,

50, 52, 53, 54, 60, 61, 65, 66, 67, 74, 76, 77, 78, 79, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 96, 97, 120, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 135, 138, 139, 141, 149, 152, 154, 155, 179, 191, 192, 197, 200, 201, 202, 204, 205, 208, 209, 210, 211, 220, 221, 227, 228, 237, 247, and 250.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 12, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 26, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 36, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 45, 47, 48, 51, 56, 57, 58, 59, 63, 64, 69, 73, 75, 81, 82, 88, 90, 92, 93, 94, 95, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 125, 133, 134, 136, 137, 144, 145, 146, 147, 151, 153, 157, 158, 159, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 169, 175, 176, 177, 178, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 193, 194, 195, 196, 199, 206, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 222, 223, 224, 226, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 238, 239, 240, 242, 243, 244, 245, and 251; and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 11: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 11, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: On page 5 of the bill, in lines 20 and 21, strike out the words "Relations with Cuba" and insert in lieu thereof "Cuban relations;" and in lines 22 and 23 strike out the words "improvement of the;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 13: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 13, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the number proposed insert "twenty-one;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 14: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 14, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "thirty-seven thousand eight hundred dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 25: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 25, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the number proposed insert "twenty-five;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 35: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 35, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "sixty-nine privates, at one thousand and fifty dollars each;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 37: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 37, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "seventy-seven thousand six hundred and fifty dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 44: That the House recede from its disagrement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 44, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the matter inserted by said amendment and insert on page 32 of the bill, after line 14, as a separate paragraph, the following:

"For plans and estimates for a newspaper stack, to be procured by the Joint Committee on the Library if said committee shall decide such stack to be necessary, two thousand five hundred dollars."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 46: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 46, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 2 of said amendment strike out the word "hereafter;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 55: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 55, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "two hundred and eight thousand nine hundred and seventy dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 62: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 62, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "ten thousand four hundred and twenty dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 68: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 68, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: On page 44 of the bill, in lines 12, 13, and 14, strike out the words "two superintendents of technical divisions, at two thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars each" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "superintendent of computing division, two thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 70: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 70, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: On page 44 of the bill, in line 16, after the word "dollars," insert the words "chief of inspection division, two thousand five hundred dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 71: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 71, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "seventy-three thousand four hundred and sixty dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 72: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 72, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "One stenographer and typewriter, one thousand four hundred dollars; one typewriter copyist, one thousand dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 80: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 80, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "one hundred and forty-two thousand five hundred and forty dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 89: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 89, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the number proposed insert "forty;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 91: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 91, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "four hundred and thirty-one thousand three hundred and thirty dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 107: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 107, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "forty thousand dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 108: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 108, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "one hundred and sixty-five thousand dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 109: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 109, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "forty-five thousand dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 110: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 110, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: At the end of the matter inserted by said amendment insert "rent of office and quarters in Juneau;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 121: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 121, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "one hundred and sixty-four thousand three hundred and eighty-six dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 122: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 122, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "Two chiefs of division, at two thousand dollars each;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 123: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 123, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the words inserted by said amendment insert the words "three clerks;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 124: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 124, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "sixty-nine thousand three hundred and eighty dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 126: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 126, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: After the word "For" in said amendment insert the word "two;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 140: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 140, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "one hundred and one thousand three hundred dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 142: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 142, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: On page 99 of the bill, in line 25, strike out the word "four" and insert in lieu thereof the word "six;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 143: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 143, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "two thousand dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 148: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 148, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the number proposed insert "sixteen;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 150: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 150, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 2 of said amendment strike out the word "eighteen" and insert in lieu thereof the word "sixteen;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 156: That the House recede from its disagreement of the Senate numbered 156, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "three hundred and fifty-three thousand eight hundred and seventy dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 160: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 160, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lines 8 and 9 of said amendment strike out the words "sixty-one thousand five hundred dollars" and in lieu thereof insert the following: "namely: twelve clerks, qualified as draftsmen, at one thousand two hundred dollars per annum each; fifty copyists, at nine hundred dollars per annum each; and one messenger, at six hundred dollars per annum; in all, sixty thousand dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 168: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 168, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the number proposed insert "thirty-five;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 170: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 170, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "one million seven hundred and sixty-nine thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendments numbered 171–174: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 171, 172, 173, and 174, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out all of the amended paragraph and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"For photolithographing or otherwise producing plates and illustrations for the Official Gazette, for work to be done at the Government Printing Office in producing the Official Gazette, including the letterpress, the weekly, monthly, bimonthly, and annual indexes therefor, exclusive of expired patents, in all, one hundred and thirty thousand dollars."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 180: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 180, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "For rent for storage for Patent Office model exhibit, ten thousand dollars or so much thereof as may be necessary; and the Secretary of the Interior shall dispose of a part or all of the models of said exhibit, either by sale, gift, or otherwise;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 198: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 198, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "two hundred and twenty-six thousand six hundred and ten dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 203: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 203, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "twenty-one thousand nine hundred and ninety dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 207: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 207, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Before the words inserted by said amendment insert the words "not more than;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 225: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 225, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "seven hundred and seventeen thousand and twenty dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 241: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 241, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 3 of said amendment, after the word "expended," insert the words "during the fiscal year nineteen hundred and seven;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 246: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 246, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: On page 161 of the bill, after the word "service," at the end of line 16, insert the following: ", and the heads of Departments shall cause this provision to be enforced;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 248: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 248, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out all of said amendment after the word "preceding," in line 5; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 249: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 249, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: At the end of said amendment, after the word "originate," insert ", in which case such special or additional estimate shall be accompanied by a full statement of its imperative necessity and reasons for its omission in the annual estimates;" and the Senate agree to the same.

LUCIUS N. LITTAUER,
L. F. LIVINGSTON,
Managers on the part of the House.

S. M. CULLOM,
F. E. WARREN,
H. M. TELLER,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The statement was read, as follows:

STATEMENT.

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. 16472) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year 1907, submit the following written statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon on the amendments of the Senate and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

On amendments Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, and 34, all of which relate to the Senate: Provides for the officials and employees of that body at the rates of compensation proposed in the amendments and also for the amounts stipulated in said amendments for contingent expenses, except that twenty-one clerks to committees at $1,800 each are provided for instead of twenty-two as originally proposed in the bill and twenty as proposed by an amendment of the Senate, and twenty-five clerks to Senators who are not chairmen of committees at $1,800 each instead of twenty-four such clerks as proposed by the Senate.

On amendments Nos. 35, 36, and 37: Provides for sixty-nine privates of the Capitol police force at $1,050 each instead of $1,020 each as proposed by the House.

On amendments Nos. 38, 39, and 40: Makes verbal corrections in the text of the bill relating to the House of Representatives.

On amendments Nos. 41, 42, 43, 44, and 45, relating to the Library of Congress: Provides for a chief classifier at $2,000 in lieu of an assistant at $1,800, as proposed by the Senate, in the catalogue and shelf division; appropriates $20,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $40,000, as proposed by the House, for furniture; and appropriates specifically $2,400 to enable the Joint Committee on the Library to procure plans and estimates for a newspaper stack.

On amendment No. 46: Reenacts, as proposed by the Senate, the provision authorizing details from the Executive Departments to the Office of the President.

On amendments Nos. 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, and 55: Makes a verbal correction in the text of the bill, and with reference to the Department of State provides for an additional assistant solicitor of the Department at $3,000, and for one additional clerk at $1,600, as proposed by the Senate; strikes out the increase proposed by the Senate of $150 in the salaries of eight chiefs of bureaus; the increase of force of one clerk at $1,800, one clerk at $1,400, one clerk at $1,200; and provides for one telephone switch-board operator at $720, as proposed by the House, instead of two telephone operators at $600 each, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendments Nos. 56, 57, and 58: Provides for an examiner at $2,000, as proposed by the Senate, in the office of the Secretary of the Treasury and makes verbal corrections in the text of the bill.

On amendments Nos. 59, 60, 61, and 62: Provides for an additional clerk at $1,800, as proposed by the Senate, in the force temporarily employed in the miscellaneous division, and strikes out the increase proposed by the Senate of $200 in the salary of one clerk therein.

On amendments Nos. 63 and 64: Provides, as proposed by the Senate, in the division of printing and stationery of the Treasury, for one foreman of bindery at $6 per day, four binders at $4 per day each, and two sewers and folders at $2.50 per day each.

On amendments Nos. 65, 66, and 67: Strikes out the increase proposed by the Senate of $200 in the salary of one clerk in the offices of disbursing clerks of the Treasury.

On amendments Nos. 68, 69, 70, and 71: Provides for a superintendent of division at $2,750 and for a chief of inspection division at $2,500 instead of two superintendents of technical divisions at $2,750 each, and increases the salary of the chief of accounts division from $2,000 to $2,500, as proposed by the Senate, in the Office of the Supervising Architect.

On amendments Nos. 72 and 73: Provides for a stenographer and typewriter at $1,400 instead of a typewriter copyist at $1,000 in the Office of the Comptroller of the Treasury.

On amendment No. 74: Strikes out the appropriation of $5,000 proposed by the Senate for restoring worn-out and defaced rolls and vouchers in the Office of the Auditor for the War Department.

On amendments Nos. 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, and 80: Provides for one additional clerk at $1,600 in the Office of the Auditor for the Navy Department, and strikes out the increase in salaries of two clerks in said office proposed by the Senate.

On amendments Nos. 81 and 82: Provides for one additional clerk at $1,800 in the Office of the Auditor for the Interior Department.

On amendments Nos. 83, 84, and 85: Strikes out the increases in salaries of twenty skilled laborers from $720 to $840 each in the Office of the Auditor for the Post-Office Department proposed by the Senate.

On amendments Nos. 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, and 91, relating to the Office of the Treasurer: Provides for two additional pressmen at $1,400 each, three feeders at $660 each, as proposed by the Senate, for forty separators at $660 each instead of twenty-eight, as proposed by the House, and forty-six, as proposed by the Senate, and strikes out the change in title, proposed by the Senate, of twenty clerks to expert counters.

On amendments Nos. 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, and 97, relating to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing: Provides, as proposed by Senate, an increase of six watchmen at $720 each, five charwomen at $300 each, and eight laborers at $540 each, and strikes out the provisions proposed by the Senate extending in any way the authority for other employments in the Bureau of a clerical, executive, or administrative force additional to those provided for in this act.

On amendment No. 98: Appropriates $65,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $40,000, as proposed by the House, for freight on bullion and coin between mints and assay offices.

On amendment No. 99: Appropriates $35,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $30,000, as proposed by the House, for stationery for the Treasury Department.

On amendment No. 100: Appropriates $600, as proposed by the Senate, for material for binding records in the Treasury Department.

On amendment No. 101: Appropriates $2,050,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $2,200,000, as proposed by the House, for collectors of internal revenue, deputy collectors, surveyors, and clerks.

On amendment No. 102: Appropriates $2,250,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $2,200,000, as proposed by the House, for revenue agents, gaugers, and storekeepers in the internal-revenue service.

On amendment No. 103: Appropriates $12,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $9,000, as proposed by the House, for paper for checks and drafts.

On amendments Nos. 104, 105, and 106, relating to the mint at Denver, Colo.: Increases the salary of the cashier $250 and of the bookkeeper $200, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendments Nos. 107, 108, and 109, relating to the mint at San Francisco, Cal.: Appropriates $165,000 instead of $150,000, as proposed by the House, and $175,000, as proposed by the Senate, for wages of workmen and adjusters, and limits the amount thereof that may be used for clerks and employees to $40,000, and appropriates $45,000 instead of $40,000, as proposed by the House, and $50,000, as proposed by the Senate, for contingent expenses.

On amendments Nos. 110 and 111: Appropriates $5,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $2,000, as proposed by the House, for contingent expenses of the district of Alaska, including $2,000 for clerk hire and necessary amount for rent of offices and quarters in Juneau.

On amendment No. 112: Appropriates $2,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $1,000, as proposed by the House, for contingent expenses of Oklahoma.

On amendment No. 113: Inserts the provision proposed by the Senate requiring the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Representatives to disburse the salary and traveling expenses of the Commissioner from Porto Rico.

On amendments Nos. 114 and 115: Appropriates $250, as proposed by the Senate, for compensation of chief of division in the War Department for services as superintendent of building.

On amendments Nos. 116, 117, and 118, relating to the Office of Quartermaster-General: Appropriates, as proposed by the Senate, for an advisory architect at $4,000, and strikes out the position of electrical and mechanical engineer at $1,600.

On amendments Nos. 119, 120, and 121, relating to the Office of the Surgeon-General of the Army: Provides for three clerks at $900 each, as proposed by the Senate, and strikes out the position of skilled laborer at $900.

On amendments Nos. 122 and 123, relating to the Office of Chief of Engineers: Provides for two chiefs of division at $2,000 each and for two clerks at $1,800 each, instead of two expert clerks at $2,000 each and two clerks at $1,900 each, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 125: Strikes out the provision proposed by the House requiring the superintendent of the State, War, and Navy building to act as superintendent of buildings rented for the War and Navy Departments.

On amendment No. 126: Appropriates, as proposed by the Senate, $3,000 for two new boilers for the State, War, and Navy building.

On amendments Nos. 127 and 128: Appropriates for one telephone switchboard operator at $720, as proposed by the House, instead of two telephone operators at $600 each in the office of the Secretary of the Navy.

On amendments Nos. 129, 130, and 131: Strikes out the provision of the Senate for one mistress of charwomen at $300 instead of a charwoman at $240 in the building rented for the use of the Navy Department.

On amendment No. 132: Strikes out the provision proposed by the Senate continuing available during the fiscal year 1908 the appropriation for publication of copies of the Official Records of the Union and Confederate Navies.

On amendments Nos. 133, 134, and 135: Provides for two additional clerks at $1,800 each in the Bureau of Navigation of the Navy Department and makes a verbal correction in the text of the bill.

On amendments Nos. 136, 137, 138, 139, and 140: Increases the compensation of one nautical expert from $1,200 to $1,300 as proposed by the Senate, in the Hydrographic Office and strikes out the provision proposed by the Senate increasing the salary of one engraver therein from $900 to $1,000.

On amendments Nos. 141 and 142: Provides for one assistant astronomer in the Naval Observatory at $2,400, as proposed by the House, instead of $2,200 as proposed by the Senate, and increases the salary of one assistant from $1,200 to $1,400, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 143: Appropriates $2,000, instead of $1,500 as proposed by the House and $2,500 as proposed by the Senate, for a new steam boiler for the Naval Observatory.

On amendments Nos. 144, 145, 146, and 147, relating to the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts: Provides, as proposed by the Senate, for one clerk at $1,800 and one clerk at $1,600 instead of two stenographers at $1,400 each.

On amendments Nos. 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, and 156, relating to the office of the Secretary of the Interior: Provides for sixteen additional members of the board of pension appeals at $2,000 each instead of twelve as proposed by the House and eighteen as proposed by the Senate; leaves in the bill the provision as proposed by the House requiring that said employment shall cease at the end of the fiscal year 1907; inserts the provision proposed by the Senate that vacancies occurring in said force shall not be filled; provides for a clerk in charge of documents at $2,100, as proposed by the Senate; strikes out proposed increase in the salary of the custodian of $150; provides for two additional clerks at $1,600 each and strikes out the provision proposed by the Senate for one clerk at $1,400 instead of one clerk at $1,200.

On amendments Nos. 157, 158, and 159: Increases the salary of two chiefs of division in the General Land Office from $2,000 each to $2,400 each, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 160: Provides for 12 clerks, qualified as draftsmen, at $1,200 each, and 50 copyists, at $900 each, and 1 messenger, at $600, to be selected and employed by the Secretary of the Interior for reproducing the official records of the land offices in San Francisco.

On amendments Nos. 161 and 162: Provides, as proposed by the Senate, that 500 copies of the United States maps shall be delivered to the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

On amendment No. 163: Appropriates $1,250, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $1,000, as proposed by the House, for separate State and Territorial maps.

On amendments Nos. 164, 165, 166, and 167: Provides for two additional clerks at $1,800 each and for two additional clerks at $1,200 each in the Indian Office, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendments Nos. 168, 169, and 170 relating to the Pension Office: Provides for thirty-five medical examiners at $1,800 each instead of thirty-two, as proposed by the House, and thirty-eight, as proposed by the Senate, and for eighteen assistant chiefs of division at $1,800 each instead of ten, as proposed by the House.

On amendments Nos. 171, 172, 173, 174, and 175: Appropriates $130,000, as proposed by the House, instead of $145,000, as proposed by the Senate, for photo-lithographing or otherwise producing plates and illustrations for the Patent Office Gazette, and requires all of said work to be done at the Government Printing Office.

On amendment No. 176: Appropriates $105,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $90,000, as proposed by the House, for contingent expenses for the Interior Department.

On amendments Nos. 177 and 178: Appropriates $10,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $20,000, as proposed by the House, for confidential agents to be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior to make investigations and examinations in special cases, and strikes out the provision proposed by the House, limiting such service to cases of protecting public lands from illegal and fraudulent entry or appropriation.

On amendment No. 179: Appropriates $60,000, as proposed by the House, instead of $68,000, as proposed by the Senate, for stationery for the Interior Department.

On amendment No. 180: Appropriates $10,000 instead of $19,500, as proposed by the Senate, for rent for storage for Patent Office model exhibit, and directs the Secretary of the Interior to dispose of a part or all of the models of said exhibits either by sale, gift, or otherwise.

On amendment No. 181: Appropriates $10,000, as proposed by the Senate, for rent of temporary office for the General Land Office and for other expenses in reproducing records of the office of the surveyor-general of California at San Francisco.

On amendments Nos. 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, and 190, relating to the offices of surveyors-general, compared with the bill as it passed the House, the following changes proposed by the Senate are made: For contingent expenses, surveyor-general of California, from $1,500 to $4,000; for clerks in office of surveyor-general of Colorado, from $16,500 to $17,225; for clerks in office of surveyor-general of Idaho, from $9,000 to $10,500, and reduces the amount for contingent expenses of his office from $1,500 to $1,000; increases amount for contingent expenses for the surveyor-general of Nevada from $500 to $1,000, and increases the amount for clerks in the office of the surveyor-general of Wyoming from $8,900 to $11,700.

On amendments Nos. 191 and 192, relating to the office of the Postmaster-General: Strike out the provision proposed by the Senate for two clerks at $1,800 each, instead of two stenographers at $1,600 each.

On amendment No. 193: Insert the stipulation proposed by the Senate that a clerk at $840, proposed to be provided for in the Office of the Third Assistant Postmaster-General, is now a classified laborer.

On amendments Nos. 194 and 195: Makes verbal corrections in the text of the bill.

On amendments Nos. 196, 197, and 198, relating to the Office of the Attorney-General: Increases the salary of the superintendent of building from $250 to $500, as proposed by the Senate, and strikes out the increase of $100 proposed by the Senate in the salary of the attorney in charge of pardons.

Amendments Nos. 199, 200, 201, 202, and 203, relating to the office of the solicitor of the Department of Commerce and Labor: Increases the salary of the chief clerk and law clerk from $2,000 to $2,250 as proposed by the Senate, and strikes out the provisions proposed by the Senate increasing the salaries of two clerks at $1,200 each to $1,400 and $1,600, respectively.

On amendments Nos. 204 and 205: Appropriates for a chief of appointment division at $2,250 as proposed by the House instead of $2,000 as proposed by the Senate in the office of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor.

On amendments Nos. 206 and 207: Appropriates $50,000 as proposed by the Senate instead of $30,000 as proposed by the House for special agents for the office of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor to investigate trade conditions abroad and requiring that not more than $20,000 thereof shall be used in the investigation of markets for cotton products.

On amendment No. 208: Strikes out the provision proposed by the Senate providing for payment of fees and mileage of witnesses out of the appropriation for special attorneys, special examiners, and special agents under the Bureau of Corporations.

On amendments Nos. 209, 210, and 211: Strikes out the provision proposed by the Senate increasing the salary of one clerk in the Bureau of Manufactures from $1,200 to $1,400.

On amendments Nos. 212, 213, 214, and 215, relating to the Bureau of Labor: Strikes out the provisions proposed by the Senate for a chief statistician at $3,000 instead of chief clerk at $2,500, and for two additional special agents at $1,800 each instead of two special agents at $1,400 each.

On amendment No. 216: Appropriates $65,140 instead of $64,090 as proposed by the Senate for subsistence and traveling expenses of special agents in the Bureau of Labor.

On amendments Nos. 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, and 225, relating to the Census Office: Provides as proposed by the Senate for nine clerks at $1,400 each instead of two clerks at $1,000 each and ten clerks at $900 each; for eleven skilled laborers at $720 each instead of eleven unskilled laborers at $720 each; for twenty-four instead of thirty-two charwomen at $240 each; and strikes out the provision proposed by the Senate for an additional skilled laborer at $1,000 instead of a skilled laborer at $900.

On amendment No. 226: Appropriates $15,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $12,000, as proposed by the House, for furniture and other articles for the Census Office.

On amendments Nos. 227 and 228: Strikes out the provision of the Senate increasing the salary of the Supervising Inspector-General of the Steamboat-Inspection Service from $3,500 to $4,000.

On amendments Nos. 229, 230, and 231, relating to the Bureau of Immigration: Provides for an additional clerk at $1,400, instead of a copyist at $900, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendments Nos. 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, and 237, relating to the Bureau of Standards: Appropriates $15,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $12,500, as proposed by the House, for miscellaneous expenses, and $3,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $4,000, as proposed by the House, for roads and walks and care of grounds, and strikes out the provision making the appropriation immediately available.

On amendment No. 238: Appropriates $60,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $50,000, as proposed by the House, for contingent expenses of the Department of Commerce and Labor.

On amendments Nos. 239 and 240: Appropriates $800, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $500, as proposed by the House, for necessary expenditures in the clerk's office of the court of appeals, District of Columbia.

On amendment No. 241: Appropriates $9,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $9,500, as proposed by the House, for books for libraries of circuit courts of appeals, and makes $2,500 thereof available for the library of the eighth circuit.

On amendments Nos. 242, 243, 244, and 245, relating to the Court of Claims: Provides for an additional clerk at $1,400 instead of a clerk at $1,200, and for a chief messenger at $1,000 instead of a messenger at $840.

On amendment No. 246: "SEC. 3. The appropriations herein made for the officers, clerks, and persons employed in the public service shall not be available for the compensation of any persons incapacitated, otherwise than temporarily, for performing such service, and the heads of Departments shall cause this provision to be enforced."

On amendments Nos. 247 and 248: Strikes out of the bill the provision proposed by the Senate requiring estimates for the Indian Service and the Indian appropriation bill hereafter to conform to the Indian appropriation act for 1906 in order of arrangement.

On amendment No. 249: Inserts the provision proposed by the Senate requiring that heads of Executive Departments shall include in their annual estimates all estimates of appropriations, required for the public service, and provides that special or additional estimates shall be submitted only under certain conditions and with accompanying explanations.

On amendment No. 250: Leaves in the bill section 5, as proposed by the House, prohibiting transfers of employees from one Department to another unless such employee shall have served for a term of three years in the Department from which he desires to be transferred.

On amendment No. 251: Excepts from the operation of section 6, as proposed by the Senate, officers and employees who have been detailed from outside of the District of Columbia to Departments in Washington by express provisions of law.

The bill as finally agreed upon carries $29,741,019.30, being $430,826 more than as it passed the House, $74,540 less than as it passed the Senate, $604,267.24 more than the appropriations for the current year, and $143,451.75 less than was submitted in the estimates for the fiscal year 1907.

LUCIUS N. LITTAUER,
L. F. LIVINGSTON,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. LITTAUER. Mr. Speaker, I move the adoption of the conference report.

The motion was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. LITTAUER, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was agreed to was laid on the table.

STATEHOOD.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for a reprint of 3,000 copies of the statehood law. I am informed that the supply is entirely exhausted.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan asks to have 3,000 copies of the statehood law printed in pamphlet form. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

SUBDIVISION OF LANDS ENTERED UNDER THE RECLAMATION ACT.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 18536) providing for the subdivision of lands entered under the reclamation act, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman calls up the conference report.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The following are the report and statement:

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 18536) entitled "An act providing for the subdivision of lands entered under the reclamation act, and for other purposes," having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment on page 1, line 9, striking out "ten" and inserting "twenty."

That the House recede from its disagreement to amendments of the Senate as follows:

Amendment on page 1, line 3, after the word "Interior," inserting "by reason of market conditions and the special fitness of the soil and climate for the growth of fruit and garden produce."

Amendment on page 1, line 4, striking out "reasonably required" and inserting "sufficient."

Amendment on page 2, line 6, after "fund," inserting "Provided, That an entryman may elect to enter under said reclamation act a lesser area than the minimum limit in any State or Territory."

On page 2, line 9, after "acquire," inserting "by relinquishment."

Amendment inserting a new section designated as section 5.

And agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate inserting a new section designated as section 4, with an amendment as follows: Strike out all after the period following the words "Secretary of the Interior" in said amendment and insert the following: "Providing that the limitation on the size of town sites contained in the act of April sixteenth, one thousand nine hundred and six, entitled "An act providing for the withdrawal from public entry of lands needed for town-site purposes in connection with irrigation projects under the reclamation act of June seventeenth, one thousand nine hundred and two, and for other purposes," shall not apply to the town sites named in this section; and whenever, in the opinion of the Secretary of the Interior, it shall be advisable for the public interest he may withdraw and dispose of town sites in excess of one hundred and sixty acres under the provisions of the aforesaid act approved April sixteenth, one thousand nine hundred and six, and reclamation funds shall be available for the payment of all expenses incurred in executing the provisions of this act and the aforesaid act of April sixteenth, one thousand nine hundred and six, and the proceeds of all sales of town sites shall be covered into the reclamation fund."

F. W. MONDELL,
W. A. REEDER,
W. R. SMITH,
Managers on the part of the House.

LEVI ANKENY,
THOS. H. CARTER,
FRED T. DUBOIS,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The statement was read, as follows:

STATEMENT.

The House conferees on H. R. 18536 submit the following statement to accompany the conference report thereon:

The amendment of the Senate on page 1, line 9, from which the Senate recedes, increased the minimum area of entries under the reclamation act from 10 to 20 acres. As agreed to, the minimum entry is 10 acres, as provided in the House bill.

The Senate amendment, to which the House conferees agree, inserting in section 1 the words "by reason of market conditions and special fitness of soil and climate for the growth of fruit and garden produce" and the word "sufficient" instead of the words "reasonably required" are in the nature of directions to the Secretary of the Interior as to conditions which he should inquire into and take into consideration in determinng upon the establishment of a minimum area per entry under the reclamation act.

The amendment in the form of a proviso to section 1, as follows: "That an entryman may elect to enter under said reclamation act a lesser area than the minimum limit in any State or Territory," authorizes the entryman to elect to enter a still smaller area than the limit fixed in the bill, and is intended to make possible the entry of small lots which may be surveyed under the subdivision surveys provided for in the bill.

The amendment inserting in the second section, after the word "acquires," the words "by relinquishment," modifies the provision of the House bill which authorizes second entries where lands included in unperfected entries were acquired by the Government under the reclamation act by confining such second entries to cases where the lands were acquired by the Government by relinquishment.

The amendment numbered section 4 is in the identical language of a bill which passed the House and in substance the same as a bill which passed the Senate, and provides that the occupants of certain lots in the town sites of Rupert and Heyburn, in Idaho, who have permanent buildings shall have the first right to purchase, at a price fixed by the Secretary of the Interior. It also provides that the present area of said town sites may be disposed of without regard to the limit of 160 acres, contained in the act of April 16, 1906; and also that where, in the opinion of the Secretary, it shall be advisable for the public interest, he may create town sites in excess of 160 acres under the provisions of the above-mentioned act.

The amendment, section 5, is intended to meet a condition which exists within the boundaries of certain lands withdrawn under the provisions of the reclamation act, and which may occur in the future elsewhere, whereby entrymen under the desert-land laws are unable to comply with the provisions of the law owing to conditions growing out of such withdrawals, and, while relieving such entrymen from the danger of losing their lands in case contemplated projects are not carried out, brings them under the provisions of the reclamation act if the project is constructed and developed.

F. W. MONDELL,
W. A. REEDER,
W. R. SMITH,
Managers on the part of the House.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I would like to ask the gentleman a question or two about this report. I could not understand entirely from the reading of the report what it was. Does this open up or yield any operation of the homestead law as to residence?

Mr. MONDELL. It does not. This bill reduces the minimum area under the reclamation law from 40 to 10 acres. If, in the opinion of the Secretary, 10 acres will support a family, the entryman can take a minimum of 10 acres instead of 40.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Is that all that it is?

Mr. MONDELL. No; it also contains a provision of the bill which passed the House that affects certain town sites in Idaho. It also has a provision with regard to relinquishments: That where the Government acquires land needed for storage reservoirs and such works by relinquishment, under the reclamation act, the entryman who relinquishes may take a second entry. It makes it easier for the Government to obtain the relinquishments and gives the entryman another right to entry.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If the man relinquishes the right to a homestead under the reclamation act, he can enter another.

Mr. MONDELL. He can; there or elsewhere.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The question was taken; and the conference report was agreed to.

PRESERVATION OF NIAGARA FALLS.

The SPEAKER. The Chair announces as conferee on the bill (H. R. 18028) for the preservation of Niagara Falls the appointment of Mr. BANKHEAD in place of the late Representative Lester.

CONNECTING CHESAPEAKE AND DELAWARE BAYS.

Mr. BURTON of Delaware. Mr. Speaker, I am directed by the Committee on Railways and Canals to move to suspend the rules and pass as amended House joint resolution (H. J. Res. 21) authorizing the President of the United States to appoint a commission to examine and report upon a route for the construction of a free and open waterway to connect the waters of the Chesapeake and Delaware bays.

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States is hereby authorized to appoint a commission, consisting of an officer or retired officer of the Engineer Corps of the United States Army, an officer of the United States Navy, and one person from civil life, to examine and appraise the value of the works and franchises of the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal, connecting the waters of the Chesapeake and Delaware bays, with reference to the desirability of purchasing said canal by the United States and the construction over the route of the said canal of a free and open waterway having a depth and capacity sufficient to accommodate the largest vessel afloat at mean low water. Said commission, to the extent that the same can be done from the surveys heretofore made under the direction of the War Department and within the limits of the appropriation herein made, shall also examine and investigate the feasibility, for the purpose of such a waterway, of the route known as the "Sassafras route." The said commission shall make a report of its work, together with its conclusions upon the probable cost and commercial advantages and military and naval uses of each of said routes, to the Secretary of War, who shall transmit the same to Congress at its next session. The sum of $10,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to pay the expenses of said commission, including such clerical assistance as may be deemed necessary by said commission, and such reasonable compensation for the services of the members of said commission as the President in his discretion may see fit to allow.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I demand a second.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to considering a second as ordered?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Delaware is entitled to twenty minutes and the gentleman from Missouri is entitled to twenty minutes.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I should like to have the gentleman explain briefly what this bill is, and about how much this is to cost.

Mr. BURTON of Delaware. Mr. Speaker, this is a joint resolution reported by the Committee on Railways and Canals by unanimous vote, authorizing the President of the United States to appoint a commission to make an examination and report on the basis of surveys that have already been made and are now of record in the War Department, and the sum of $10,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is appropriated for the use of that commission.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. That is right.

Mr. GARRETT. I did not catch the reading of the resolution. Does it provide what officers shall be appointed to make this examination?

Mr. BURTON of Delaware. It provides for one officer from the Engineer Corps of the Army, one from the Navy, and one civilian engineer. These three are to constitute the commission.

Mr. GARRETT. Will the Army and Navy officers receive any salary in addition to what they are receiving at present?

Mr. BURTON of Delaware. I think not.

Mr. GARRETT. And the appropriation is $10,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary?

Mr. BURTON of Delaware. Yes.

The first survey for a canal to connect the waters of the Delaware Bay with those of the Chesapeake was made by Augustus Herman in the year 1670 for Lord Baltimore, and another was made by Joshua Gilpin in the year 1804.

This survey was probably made after the State of Maryland granted a charter to the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal Company in the year 1799.

Whether the route of the present canal was the only one surveyed by the early work or not I am unable to say, but since that date a number of other routes have been surveyed by the Government, looking to the construction of a waterway between the two bays as a part of a system of coast defense. These were known, respectively, as the "Sassafras," the "Chaptunk River," and the "Southeast" route, which contemplate a construction by way of the waters of the Broadkiln, on the Delaware Bay near the new harbor of refuge, with those of the Nanticoke River, on the Maryland or Chesapeake.

It will be seen that the United States Government has from its beginning seen and from time to time talked of and surveyed and examined into this matter, because whenever the possibility of war occurred the urgent necessity for such a connection became apparent. Speaking from memory, I think it was President Madison who recommended in one of his messages to the Congress that such a waterway be constructed. In all probability he was led to see the need of such a thing by the war of 1812.

The work of construction of the present Delaware and Chesapeake Canal was begun on the 15th day of April, 1824, under the direction of Silas E. Weir, whose services terminated with his life on the 14th day of May, 1828. He was succeeded by Robert M. Lewis, under whose supervision the work was completed.

The water was turned into the canal on the 4th day of July, 1829. The opening up of the national enterprise was the occasion of a grand celebration on the 17th of October in the same year.

The length of the canal is 13⅝ miles.
Width at water line, 66 feet.
Depth of water, 10 feet.
Width at bottom, 36 feet.
Length of locks, 100 feet.
Width of locks, 22 feet.

The total cost of this work was $2,250,000, of which amount $450,000 was paid by the United States Government, $100,000 by the State of Pennsylvania, $50,000 by the State of Maryland, and $25,000 by the State of Delaware. The remainder of the cost was contributed by the citizens of the three States above named.

The total number of vessels passed through the canal since its opening is about 710,000. The total tonnage of merchandise about 46,000,000 tons.

The distance from Philadelphia to Baltimore by way of the Capes of Delaware and Virginia is about 425 miles. The distance by way of the Delaware and Chesapeake Canal is but about 108 or 110 miles.

By way of the canal a steamer can cover the distance in from twelve to fifteen hours, and is always sure of making about the time given.

By way of the capes it would require from forty to forty-eight hours, and to make that time would have to have favorable weather.

The one route is attended with little or no danger, while the other is subject to all the dangers and delays incident to navigating the Atlantic coast and the lower bays.

To transfer a naval fleet from one bay to the other by way of the canal it would take less than a day, without any danger of exposure to a hostile navy.

To transfer the same fleet by way of the capes it would take at best two whole days, with the probability of encountering the enemy, who would naturally be on the alert for such a movement for concentration.

The cities of Philadelphia, Pa., Wilmington and Camden, N. J., at the one side to protect, and the cities of Baltimore and Washington, the capital of the nation, and the Naval Academy on the other, it certainly does look as if this great nation should prepare for an emergency which might arise at any time.

The advantages of such a waterway to the commerce of the country is beyond my ability to estimate, but that its commercial value would be enormous no one would dare deny.

Its value as a part of our coast defense would be greater than four additional battle ships, while its cost would be but little more than one.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

Mr. MUDD. I call the attention of the Chair to the fact that there is a committee amendment.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is informed by the Clerk that the joint resolution has been reported as amended.

The question was taken; and two-thirds voting in the affirmative, the rules were suspended and the joint resolution passed.

TRAVELING EXPENSES OF THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. TAWNEY. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Appropriations, I submit the following privileged report, and move to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota submits the following report by direction of the Committee on Appropriations, and moves to suspend the rules and pass the bill. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (proposed in lieu of H. R. 20123) to provide for the traveling expenses of the President of the United States.

Be it enacted, etc., That hereafter there may be expended for or on account of the traveling expenses of the President of the United States such sum as Congress may from time to time appropriate, not exceeding $25,000 per annum, such sum when appropriated to be expended in the discretion of the President and accounted for on his certificate solely.

There is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purposes authorized by this act for the fiscal year 1907, the sum of $25,000.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. TAWNEY. I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota has twenty minutes, and the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] has twenty minutes.

Mr. TAWNEY. Mr. Speaker, the subject-matter of this bill is the appropriation of $25,000 to defray the traveling expenses of the President. The matter was fully discussed a few days ago, when the sundry civil appropriation was under consideration in Committee of the Whole. It differs from the provision carried in that bill, which provision went out of that bill on a point of order made by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] in this: It does not provide specifically, as that provision did, for the payment of the traveling expenses of those who may accompany the President as his guests. The appropriation is for defraying the traveling expenses of the President, and the amount is to be expended in his discretion and upon his own certificate.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, before the gentleman from Minnesota takes his seat, I should like to ask him a question. I have only heard the bill read from the desk. It has just been reported to the House and I could not clearly understand it. I should like to ask the gentleman from Minnesota as to whether this bill is applicable to the present President of the United States?

Mr. TAWNEY. It applies to the traveling expenses of the President of the United States, rather than to the President—to defray his traveling expenses.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The object of my question was to find out whether the bill applies to Presidents to be elected in the future, or to the President now holding office.

Mr. TAWNEY. It appropriates money to defray the traveling expenses of the President during the next fiscal year.

Mr. WATSON. Is it to be permanent law?

Mr. TAWNEY. I will say, Mr. Speaker, that the first part of the bill makes the authorization for the appropriation permanent law, that hereafter the traveling expenses of the President shall be paid; and the last paragraph of the bill appropriates $25,000 to defray the traveling expenses of the President during the next fiscal year.

Mr. WATSON. So that hereafter an appropriation for that purpose on the sundry civil bill can not be ruled out on a point of order.

Mr. TAWNEY. Hereafter an appropriation for that purpose carried in any appropriation bill will be in order under the rules of the House.

Mr. JAMES. I would like to ask the gentleman from Minnesota, Under the Constitution of the United States what official duty has the President to perform which will require him to travel over the United States or leave the capital?

Mr. TAWNEY. I do not know; he may have official duties. But whether he has or not, I think we should provide for the payment of the expense thus incurred.

Mr. JAMES. Is it not true that there is no official duty required of him under the Constitution of the country that would require him to leave the capital to perform that duty?

Mr. TAWNEY. I do not know that the Constitution requires him to travel; the demands of the people may.

Mr. JAMES. If the gentleman is unable to inform the House of any official duty that it would require him to perform, how can you insist upon an appropriation of money to pay his expenses to do something that you admit you can not assign any reason why he should perform?

Mr. TAWNEY. If the gentleman from Kentucky will permit me, I will say that as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy I think he might have occasion to travel all over the United States. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Will the gentleman answer a question?

Mr. TAWNEY. If I can.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. In view of the fact that a future Congress in a spasm of economy might possibly pare down this appropriation a little, does not the gentleman think it might be well to make it permanent?

Mr. TAWNEY. No; I do not. I am opposed to permanent appropriations for any purpose.

Mr. MANN. Especially after yesterday. [Laughter.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, the first objection that I see to the present proposition is one that was stated by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] when he made his point of order against a similar proposition then carried by the sundry civil bill, and that was that the Constitution of the United States prohibits the Congress from increasing the salary or increasing the emoluments of the President of the United States during his term of office, or decreasing it. It has been read in the House before, but in order that it may be again shown in the RECORD I read from the Constitution of the United States, Article XI, section 6, which provides:

The President shall, at stated times, receive for his services a compensation which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that period any other emolument from the United States or any of them.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I know that it is not of much avail to make a constitutional argument to our friends who sit on the other side of the middle aisle. But when the Constitution directly and clearly prohibits the expenditure of money, I think it is time for the whole Congress, not merely the Democratic side of the Congress, to wake up to the constitutional provision.

Mr. HAMILTON. How does the gentleman define the word "emoluments?"

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If emolument is not an advantage that is given to a man who holds the office of the President of the United States, I know of no other way to define it. If it is an advantage, and that is a correct definition of the word "emolument," then it seems to me clearly when we appropriate $25,000 to allow the President of the United States to travel at Government expense when no other citizen in the United States is in the same way allowed to travel at Government expense—it seems to me it is clearly an emolument that is given to the President of the United States and directly in opposition to the provisions of the Constitution.

Now, I do not see any good reason, I do not believe the people of the United States will find any good reason, for this appropriation of $25,000.

The only excuse that is given is that heretofore the railroads of the United States have given the President of the United States free transportation, and we are about to pass a rate bill and about to conclude in terms a provision in that bill that the President of the United States shall not ride on railroad passes any longer; and because we are going to prohibit him from riding on free passes, Congress must come along and give him an emolument in the shape of $25,000 to carry him free.

Mr. TAWNEY. Will the gentleman permit me a question?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes.

Mr. TAWNEY. In what respect does the gentleman distinguish the appropriation for traveling expenses for the President of the United States in and about the city of Washington and an appropriation for his traveling expenses outside of the city of Washington?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not understand.

Mr. TAWNEY. In what respect, in regard to the question of emolument, is there any distinction between an appropriation of $25,000 to defray his traveling expenses in the District of Columbia and $25,000 to defray his traveling expenses outside the District of Columbia?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I did not know there was any appropriation for his traveling expenses in the District of Columbia.

Mr. TAWNEY. We provide for horses and carriages for the President in the District of Columbia.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will state what I think is clearly the constitutional distinction. It is this: There is no doubt in my mind that when the Government of the United States provided for a residence for the President that was an emolument as contemplated in the Constitution of the United States. When it appropriates for the maintenance of that residence it provides for an emolument just as much as for his traveling expenses. But here is the distinction. The Constitution does not say that you shall not pass a bill to provide for emoluments for a future President of the United States. That is why I asked the gentleman before I took the floor as to whether this bill provided for the present President of the United States, or for some future President. I do not think there is any question about the constitutionality of an act if it is applied to take effect for a President to be elected at a future time.

But the object of the Constitution was clearly to prevent the President of the United States from using his high office to increase his emoluments or his salary, and at the same time, when it provided that his salary or emoluments should not be decreased, it was intended to protect the President against that power in the hands of the Congress of the United States.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman a question. If it was an emolument to furnish a new home for the President, was it not also an emolument to improve it to the extent of $680,000?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; I do not think so. I think there is a clear distinction. I think it was an emolument to the President when we furnished him a home originally, but when we furnished him a home at Government expense, that contemplated that the Government should maintain that home, and every reasonable man knows that to maintain it you have got to spend money to keep a roof on it and you have got to spend money to furnish it; and if it is right to spend a dollar, then we have the constitutional authority to spend $100,000. There is no distinction in that line whatever, but clearly that emolument was given to the President of the United States in the beginning of the Government. It is not a constitutional question now, nor would this law be a constitutional question if it was passed to-day, but not to take effect until another President of the United States was elected. But, in my judgment, to-day to pass it is clearly in contravention of the Constitution of the United States, and every man who has any respect left in him whatever for the integrity of that document ought to vote against the passage of this bill. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

In this connection I desire to place in the RECORD the definition of the word "emolument," taken from the Standard Dictionary. It is as follows:

Emolument.—The remuneration connected with any office, occupation, or service, whether as salary, fee, or perquisite.

I do not see any reason why we should give the President of the United States free transportation throughout the United States. His official duties do not require him to travel about. The President of the United States when I first came to Congress, and when many or most of the Members on the other side of this Chamber who sit on this floor to-day first came to this House, received $25,000 a year as a contingent expense for the maintenance of the cost at the White House. And that was all. That was sufficient to maintain and run the White House for Grover Cleveland. It was sufficient to maintain and run the White House for William McKinley, but to-day I understand the contingent appropriation for the maintenance and running of the White House has been increased to $70,000 a year. Nearly $50,000 has been the increase for Mr. Roosevelt's running his establishment, until to-day practically every part of the expense that the President of the United States is put to to maintain the establishment at the White House is to buy the food and provisions that go on his table. That is all, and he has $50,000 salary, and out of that he is just as competent and just as able to pay his way about the United States as a number of Congressmen at $5,000 a year.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Minnesota suggests that one official duty, perhaps, the President might have to perform would be in commanding the Army or the Navy. I desire to ask the gentleman from Alabama this question: Has any President of the United States, from Washington down to Roosevelt, ever had to leave the capital of his country to command either the Army or the Navy?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; I will state that he has not, and more than that, if the President had to leave the capital to command the Army he would go as the head of the Army, and he would be maintained in the same way that the commanding general of the Army is.

Mr. JAMES. And I would like to find out another thing from the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. TAWNEY], and that is what impending war he sees that would require the President of the United States in the field to lead the Army that he now thinks that possibly the President might have to use this $25,000 for traveling expenses?

Mr. COCKRAN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] a question. Does the gentleman contend that when the President of the United States moves from one part of the country to another discussing public questions before his fellow-citizens, he is engaged in his own amusement or in the public service?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Well, he may be engaged in both. The gentleman would have to consult the President on that proposition.

Mr. COCKRAN. No; but interpreting and judging his course by its public features and by its effect on the public mind is it not a fact that Mr. Roosevelt's speeches within the last two or three years have been more fruitful in actual legislation, as in the railway rate bill, than any other single force that can be mentioned?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; I do not think so. The gentleman and I differ on that. I think the first cause that brought about the agitation on the railway rate bill was the action of the Democratic party in the two conventions that called attention to the matter before the President had taken any position in the matter.

Mr. COCKRAN. Mr. Speaker, I agree with the gentleman as to the source of the first suggestion, but the force that gave effective direction to that Democratic idea I think the gentleman and I will agree came from the President of the United States.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Oh, I think the President of the United States deserves a great deal of credit.

Mr. COCKRAN. And I think the gentleman will agree that the constitutional evolution of this country for the last fifty years is the adoption of wholesome Democratic ideas by skillful Republican politicians. [Laughter.] The gentleman and I will not differ either, I am sure, in the view that while it may be painful for Democratic leaders to find their thunder stolen by the greater skill of their adversary, they are nevertheless inclined to rejoice in the result, since it has produced good legislation for the people.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I agree with the gentleman.

Mr. COCKRAN. I ask the gentleman, bearing all these facts in mind, whether Mr. Roosevelt's recent activities throughout this country, outside his strictly official duties, as, for instance, his discussions of important questions from public platforms, were in the nature of laborious enterprises rather than schemes of amusement?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Oh, I think that sometimes the President's trips about the United States were of advantage to the country; but sometimes the President takes a trip with his family to his summer home—sometimes his trip is for a private purpose, sometimes for a public purpose—but the utterance of a President of the United States has a world's audience no matter where he makes it, and it is just as effective made in the city of Washington as in San Francisco or Chicago.

Mr. COCKRAN. I do not believe the gentleman and I will differ as to the fact that the President's utterances are promoted both in their frequency and efficiency by his circulation among the people.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Oh, I think that is good, but I am not willing to violate the Constitution of the United States as——

Mr. COCKRAN. I submit to the gentleman that he can not violate the Constitution of the United States if he tries. There happens to be in the Constitution the means of asserting itself against even the gentleman or the House of Representatives.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will call the attention of the gentleman from New York that he and I, in taking the oath at the desk when sworn in as Members, swore we would protect the Constitution of the United States, and I propose to try to do it here. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. COCKRAN. I am quite sure nobody would suspect the gentleman of an attempt to violate it, nor would he suspect that any of his neighbors is capable of such an attempt; but where there is a division of opinion as to the constitutionality of a law, it is hardly a reason for objecting to its enactment, since the Constitution can protect itself.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Well, the Constitution may take care of itself, but I think it is the duty of a Member of Congress also to take care of the Constitution and observe his oath of office.

Mr. COCKRAN. The point I want to submit to the gentleman and our side here, and to the entire House of Representatives, is this: In the operation of our constitutional system the President has become the chief leader of public thought and exponent of public opinion—quite as much a source of valuable suggestion for the enactment of laws as a mere executive charged with enforcing the laws, and since the circulation of the President throughout the country aids practically and decisively in promoting salutary legislation, by giving effective direction to public opinion, should not his expenses incurred in rendering such important public service be borne out of the public Treasury?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Well, I do not think so. I do not agree with the gentleman about that.

Mr. JAMES. The gentleman might suggest in addition that the next time the President speaks it might be on something that would not redound to the good of the people.

Mr. COCKRAN. Let the people judge all his suggestions, but why tax him for making them?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I think every public man in the United States, Cabinet officers, Senators, and Members of the House, give their time liberally and freely to the people of the United States in great discussions, and there is no reason in the world why this House should make an exception of the President. We are going to deny free passes to every man in this House. I believe we are, and I know we will if the conferees on the rate bill carry out what I believe to be the will and the sentiment of this House.

Mr. COCKRAN. Would the gentleman deny mileage to Members?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; I do not.

Mr. RUCKER. That is fixed by law.

Mr. COCKRAN. Then, if the President travel for the public benefit, is it fair to tax him for the service he renders by compelling him to pay expenses that would be ruinous if paid out of his own pocket?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The distinction between the President and a Member of Congress is the Member of Congress's home is a long distance away from the capital, and he is expected to go home and return each year. The President of the United States is expected to reside in the capital of the United States during his term of office.

Mr. COCKRAN. Where does the gentleman find in the Constitution authority for saying that the President must be confined to any particular spot in the territory of the United States?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The Constitution of the United States contemplates——

Mr. COCKRAN. Where?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The very fact that Congress has provided a home, furnished and maintained for the President at the capital of the United States, shows the law contemplates he shall reside here.

Mr. COCKRAN. I would like to ask the gentleman if he understands that the Constitution limits the usefulness of the President, so that even if it were clearly advantageous to the country that he should travel from one end of it to the other, there is a constitutional disability on his part to evacuate, so to speak, or to emerge from the city of Washington?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The gentleman from New York [Mr. COCKRAN] did not understand me in that way. I have never contended that the President could not go where he wants to, but I say the duties of his office require him to be here, and if he desires to go somewhere else there is no reason why he should not do it.

Mr. JAMES. And his duty under the Constitution is to communicate with both Houses of Congress, suggesting needed legislation and not by stump speeches throughout the country.

Mr. COCKRAN. I will ask the gentleman if he does not agree with me that, if the expenses of the President of the United States on such journeys are not paid by the United States, one of two results must practically follow—either he must abandon these progresses around the country or he must accept free transportation from the railroads?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; I do not agree with the gentleman at all.

Mr. COCKRAN. I say, practically.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Not practically. I say that when the President of the United States has every dollar, except for the food that goes on his table, paid for the maintenance of the White House, and he gets $50,000 a year with which merely to clothe and feed his family, with no other expense, if he wants to travel about the United States and to see the people of the United States, he can better afford to do it on that salary than the Congressmen of the United States or the Senators or the Cabinet officers can on their salary.

Mr. COCKRAN. I will ask the gentleman this: Does he not make a distinction between the President of the United States traveling for his amusement—going shooting, for instance—and the President of the United States traveling through the country for the purpose of meeting the people and giving an account of his stewardship?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the gentleman from New York that where the President goes out to meet the people, in the sense that he puts it, he goes on invitation, and I have no doubt in the world that, wherever those invitations are given and the President goes out to accept one, the people of that community who have invited him will be glad to furnish him with special trains and all other conveniences at their expense and not at his.

Mr. COCKRAN. Then the gentleman's proposition is, that instead of the President taking an allowance from the Treasury of the United States for the purpose of paying these legitimate expenses, they should be paid by a special levy made upon each community that he may visit?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It is not a levy made. It is a special contribution.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] has expired.

Mr. TAWNEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to my colleague on the committee [Mr. SMITH of Iowa].

Mr. SMITH of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, some days ago I had occasion in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, considering the sundry civil bill, to in a measure discuss the question now before the House. But I wish to call attention to some matters I did not refer to at that time.

The Constitution of the United States does provide, as stated by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] that the President shall at stated times receive for his services a compensation, which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that period any other emolument from the United States or any of them. The Constitution does not provide, you will mark, that his emoluments shall not increase during his term. It prohibits emoluments aside from his compensation whether fixed before or during his term. It says that his compensation shall be fixed, and that he shall not receive within the period for which he shall have been elected any other emolument from the United States or any of them.

Let us bear in mind that the Constitution does not provide that his emoluments shall not be increased, but he shall not receive any emoluments during his term except his compensation as fixed by law. Bearing this in mind, I wish to call the attention of the House to a few authorities upon this subject. In the State of California it is provided by the constitution that the salary of county officers shall not be increased or diminished during their terms. In Kirkwood v. Soto (87 Cal., 394) the supreme court of that State said that a statute providing for the payment of traveling expenses of the county superintendent was not an increase of his salary within the meaning of the constitution of that State. And in the same case the court declared that the constitutional provision that the compensation of judges should not be increased or diminished during their term was not violated by the enactment of a statute for paying the traveling expenses of the judges.

This question was again considered in Agard v. Shaffer (141 Cal.), when the court said the distinction is between "incidental expenses of the office" and "compensation for service to be rendered." In Wheelock v. People (84 Ill., 551) it was held that the constitutional provision prohibiting the increase or diminution of compensation does not mean that the compensation shall in every instance include all expenses of the office. The same was followed in Cullom v. Dolloff (94 Ill., 330).

In Wyoming, under the law, the county treasurer was also the county assessor ex officio and authorized to appoint deputy assessors, to be paid out of the county funds. The constitution of Wyoming prohibited increasing or decreasing the emolument of a county officer during his term, and it was held that taking away from this county officer the power to appoint deputy assessors, at compensation to be paid by the county, was not a decrease of his emoluments within the meaning of the constitution. In Town against Dickey (116 Ill., 527) it is said: "The 'emoluments' is peculiarly appropriate to office, denoting in its most"——

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. TAWNEY. I yield one minute more.

Mr. SMITH of Iowa (continuing). "Denoting in its most ordinary signification the profit which is annexed to the possession of office, as salary, fees, and perquisites."

This bill does not appropriate money for the President. It appropriates money for the traveling expenses of the President, from which he can derive no possible profit. This proposed bill recognizes the fact that while the President is not under a legal obligation to travel, is yet under a duty to travel and meet the people of the country; and the people want him to travel, want him to meet them and want to meet him, and they are prepared to pay his expenses for so doing. [Applause.]

Mr. TAWNEY. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. COCKRAN].

Mr. COCKRAN. Mr. Speaker, it affords me very great satisfaction to support this proposal from the Committee on Appropriations. And I hold it a very auspicious sign that this suggestion comes from the majority of this House. For many years the Democratic party has advocated certain policies, but, for some reason or other, it has failed to get them incorporated into our political system. Within the last two or three years, however, a force has developed inside the Republican organization which has made it a wonderfully efficient instrument for securing the enactment of Democratic ideas into law. By circulating throughout this country and placing before its people certain views upon public questions, the President has already created a public opinion through which an important feature of the Democratic platform has been practically embodied in our laws; and I think it is almost inevitable that the same force, within the course of the next few years, will make many Democratic ideas dominant features of our legislation.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I would much prefer that this enactment of Democratic doctrine into law had been accomplished by Democrats. They have always had the wholesome disposition, but some way or other they lacked the effective force. But since the President has seen fit to embrace publicly some cardinal principles of Democratic faith, and the result of his adhesion is that a railroad rate bill is already on its way to the statute books, it is fair to assume that through the same force the "stand-patter" will find himself upset within the next few years. Now, I do not think we on this side should do anything which is likely to arrest or delay the march of this effective force to the accomplishment of these salutary purposes. Mr. Roosevelt's speeches in different parts of this country, I don't think anyone will deny, have been the strongest force in developing public opinion in favor of the railroad rate bill [applause], and——

Mr. JAMES. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. COCKRAN. Yes.

Mr. JAMES. Was the public sentiment wrought up throughout the country on the rate bill by the people who heard the speeches of the President or by the people who read the speeches of the President?

Mr. COCKRAN. Both, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. JAMES. Could he not have made that just as effective by messages to Congress, the constitutional manner of advising the House and Senate upon needed legislation, or by having his party in national convention declare for rate legislation, advocated by the Democratic party for ten years before he became its champion, as to have gone over the country making speeches?

Mr. COCKRAN. I do not know what other thing might have been as good or better than the thing which has actually happened. I do know Mr. Roosevelt's advocacy of wholesome measures has been during the last two or three years the most salutary influence in our public life, and I will not cast a vote to impair its efficiency or refuse a vote that will operate to promote its efficiency. [Applause.] Doubtless the gentleman is correct. Nothing has ever come to pass in this world so good that some other thing might not have been better. Mr. Roosevelt might have persuaded his party in convention to adopt resolutions in favor of the policies which he has supported so vigorously before the people, but I doubt if declarations by his party would have been half as effective as his leadership has proved itself here upon this floor.

Mr. UNDERWOOD rose.

Mr. COCKRAN. Now, I have not the time——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman declines to yield.

Mr. COCKRAN. If I had more than five minutes I would gladly yield. I wish to add for the information of this side of the House, that if this were a proposal to increase the emoluments of the President, I would agree entirely with the gentleman from Alabama. It would clearly be a violation of a constitutional prohibition, and however valuable in promoting desirable legislation this custom of Presidential progresses throughout the country has shown itself to be, I agree with him that we can not ride even to reform or improvement in the law over our own violated oaths. But the suggestion that this proposal involves any question of emolument seems to me extravagant and preposterous. An emolument is something of which the President himself must enjoy the benefit. If any part of this appropriation—any unexpended balance at the end of the year—could under any circumstances go into his own pocket, that would be an emolument, and I agree that it would be unconstitutional. But here is a proposal to pay from the Public Treasury certain expenses of the President incurred by him in the performance of certain functions which are certainly public in their character. Nobody will pretend those functions are inconsistent or incompatible with the character of his office, and no one denies that in themselves they have proved of decisive benefit to the legislation of the country, and therefore to the welfare of the people. All that remains for this House to decide is whether it will provide the means by which this salutary influence can be continued, or whether it will refuse the necessary appropriation and thus destroy its effectiveness.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yielded to the gentleman.

Mr. COCKRAN. I will yield to you if I have the time.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The Standard Dictionary gives this as a definition——

Mr. COCKRAN. Oh, I will answer a question, but I will not yield for a statement. The gentleman from Alabama can give this definition in his own time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman declines to yield.

Mr. COCKRAN. I have but five minutes. I repeat here for the information of the House that in my judgment this proposal involves no question of emolument whatever. The gentleman from Alabama holds a different opinion and he is a very capable lawyer. But if I be wrong in my opinion, and the gentleman be right, the enactment of this law can do no harm. The Constitution of the United States, as I have said, will always assert itself.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yielded to the gentleman——

Mr. COCKRAN. But the gentleman has abundant time, and I have but five minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman declines to yield.

Mr. COCKRAN. I trust the gentleman from Alabama will allow me just to complete this statement. As no one questions the value of these Presidential journeys through the country—as all admit, especially upon this side, that they are salutary influences—upon the gentleman's own statement, the only question for the House to decide is whether the expenses of them shall be paid out of the Treasury, whether they shall be advanced by railroads, with the inevitable result of establishing a claim upon Presidential forbearance and thus becoming a potential source of corruption, or whether they shall be met by voluntary subscription—by eleemosynary enterprises for popular instruction—in different localities. Of these three proposals, I believe the one recommended by the committee is the only one consistent with the dignity and the interests of the country. Therefore I favor the passage of the appropriation. [Applause.]

Mr. TAWNEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SHERLEY].

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, I desire only to take the time of the House in order that it may be apparent that some of us on this side of the aisle do not agree with the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] in his position. Speaking for myself, I have not the slightest doubt but what this bill is legal. I have been somewhat of a stickler for the Constitution in the House, but I have not the slightest doubt that this provision is in no sense an emolument and in no sense increases the compensation of the President. I believe that the law defining the duties of the President makes it proper that he should leave Washington and travel among the people. It calls upon him to give to the Congress of the United States his views on the state of the Union.

Mr. JAMES. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. SHERLEY. I will yield in a moment, if I have the time. I maintain that no President can as well be informed as to the conditions of the country and as to the views of the people by any other method as by traveling among them, meeting them, and learning directly from them their view point. I think the present President not only did good by his speeches, but I think his traveling did him a tremendous amount of good. I believe that the trip of the President to the South gave him a better appreciation of the people of the South, made him understand the actual conditions that confront us, and made him a better President for the whole people of the United States. [Applause.]

I know that he can not travel as an individual, because the time of the President of the United States is too important. He must have facilities to work as he travels. He must have a special train. He must have special facilities, and that expense ought not to be asked of the President of the United States out of his private purse, and it ought to be furnished by the nation at large. [Applause.]

Mr. TAWNEY. I now yield three minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. SULLIVAN].

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I am glad to join with my colleagues, the gentleman from New York [Mr. COCKRAN] and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SHERLEY], in support of this provision for $25,000 to pay the traveling expenses of the President of the United States. I agree with them that this can not be a party question in any sense of the word, and the vote upon this question ought not to be cast upon party lines. I do not think this is an emolument for the President. It is not an increase of his salary. It is an expense which attaches to the office of President, and unless gentlemen can upon constitutional grounds strike out the items for the maintenance of the White House itself—the $4,000 for improvements, $35,000 for repairs to the White House, $6,000 for fuel, $9,000 for conservatory and greenhouses, $3,000 for repairs of greenhouses, $18,800 for lighting the Executive Mansion and grounds, $20,000 for the contingent fund, $11,000 for the protection of the President, and $66,000 for his clerk hire—then they can not strike this item out.

I do not think we ought to belittle the office of the President by refusing these appropriations and confining him to any log cabin. We propose to keep up the White House, we propose to keep up the dignity of the office, and we propose, so far as we can accomplish that object, to allow the President of the United States to go out over the United States and discuss questions and get in touch with every section of the country. It is a wise movement, a patriotic movement, and it ought not to be rejected unless the gentlemen who object are able to prove conclusively, beyond the possibility of doubt, that there is no warrant in the Constitution for doing it. I respectfully submit that they have failed to make out a case, and that this House ought with unanimity to adopt this provision. [Applause.]

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. UNDERWOOD) there were—ayes 175, noes 66.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 176, nays 66, answered "present" 12, not voting 125, as follows:

YEAS—176.

Adams	Dawson	Hunt	Payne
Alexander	Denby	Jenkins	Pollard
Allen, Me.	Dickson, Ill.	Jones, Wash.	Prince
Allen, N. J.	Dixon, Mont.	Kahn	Pujo
Andrus	Draper	Kelfer	Ransdell, La.
Barchfeld	Dunwell	Kellher	Reeder
Barthoidt	Ellis	Kennedy, Nebr.	Reynolds
Bede	Esch	Kinkaid	Rives
Bennett, Ky.	Fassett	Klepper	Roberts
Birdsall	Fitzgerald	Kline	Rodenberg
Bonynge	Fordney	Knapp	Ruppert
Boutell	Foss	Knowland	Ryan
Brick	Foster, Ind.	Lacey	Samuel
Brooks, Colo.	French	Lafean	Schneebeli
Broussard	Fulkerson	Landis, Frederick	Scott
Brownlow	Fuller	Law	Scroggy
Buckman	Gaines, W. Va.	Lilley, Conn.	Shartel
Burton, Del.	Gardner, Mass.	Lindsay	Sherley
Burton, Ohio	Gardner, Mich.	Littauer	Smith, Ill.
Butler, Pa.	Gardner, N. J.	McCarthy	Smith, Iowa
Calder	Gillett, Mass.	McGavin	Smith, Samuel W.
Campbell, Kans.	Glass	McKinlay, Cal.	Smith, Pa.
Campbell, Ohio	Goebel	McKinney	Sperry
Capron	Goulden	McLachlan	Stafford
Cassel	Graff	McMorran	Steenerson
Chaney	Granger	McNary	Sterling
Chapman	Grosvenor	Madden	Sullivan, Mass.
Clark, Fla.	Hale	Marshall	Sulloway
Cockran	Hamilton	Martin	Tawney
Cocks	Hayes	Meyer	Taylor, Ohio
Cole	Hedge	Michalek	Thomas, Ohio
Conner	Henry, Conn.	Miller	Tirrell
Cooper, Pa.	Hepburn	Mondell	Tyndall
Cooper, Wis.	Hermann	Moon, Pa.	Volstead
Cousins	Higgins	Mouser	Wachter
Cromer	Hinshaw	Mudd	Waldo
Crumpacker	Hoar	Murdock	Wanger
Currier	Hogg	Murphy	Watson
Curtis	Holliday	Needham	Webber
Cushman	Howell, Utah	Nevin	Weems
Dalzell	Hubbard	Norris	Wiley, N. J.
Davey, La.	Huff	Olmsted	Wood, N. J.
Davis, Minn.	Hull	Otjen	Woodyard
Dawes	Humphrey, Wash.	Overstreet	Young

NAYS—66.

Adamson	Garner	Lee	Sheppard
Aiken	Garrett	Livingston	Sims
Bankhead	Gill	Lloyd	Slayden
Beall, Tex.	Gillespie	McLain	Smith, Tex.
Brundidge	Hay	Macon	Southall
Burgess	Heflin	Maynard	Spight
Burleson	Henry, Tex.	Moon, Tenn.	Thomas, N. C.
Burnett	Hill, Miss.	Moore	Towne
Butler, Tenn.	Hopkins	Padgett	Townsend
Candler	Houston	Patterson, S. C.	Trimble
Clark, Mo.	Howard	Rainey	Underwood
De Armond	Humphreys, Miss.	Rhinock	Wallace
Dixon, Ind.	James	Richardson, Ala.	Watkins
Ellerbe	Johnson	Richardson, Ky.	Williams
Finley	Jones, Va.	Rixey	Zenor
Flood	Kitchin, Wm. W.	Rucker
Floyd	Lamar	Russell

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—12.

Gaines, Tenn.	Gregg	McCleary, Minn.	Pou
Gilbert, Ky.	Kitchin, Claude	Mann	Southard
Graham	Lever	Patterson, N. C.	Weeks

NOT VOTING—125.

Acheson	Driscoll	Lewis	Sibley
Ames	Dwight	Lilley, Pa.	Slemp
Babcock	Edwards	Little	Small
Bannon	Field	Littlefield	Smith, Cal.
Bartlett	Flack	Longworth	Smith, Ky.
Bates	Fletcher	Lorimer	Smith, Md.
Beidler	Foster, Vt.	Loud	Smith, Wm. Alden
Bell, Ga.	Fowler	Loudenslager	Smyser
Bennet, N. Y.	Garber	Lovering	Snapp
Bingham	Gilbert, Ind.	McCall	Southwick
Bishop	Gillett, Cal.	McCreary, Pa.	Sparkman
Blackburn	Goldfogle	McDermott	Stanley
Bowers	Greene	McKinley, Ill.	Stephens, Tex.
Bowersock	Griggs	Mahon	Stevens, Minn.
Bowie	Gronna	Minor	Sullivan, N. Y.
Bradley	Gudger	Morrell	Sulzer
Brantley	Hardwick	Olcott	Talbott
Broocks, Tex.	Haskins	Page	Taylor, Ala.
Brown	Haugen	Palmer	Van Duzer
Burke, Pa.	Hearst	Parker	Van Winkle
Burke, S. Dak.	Hill, Conn.	Parsons	Vreeland
Burleigh	Hitt	Patterson, Tenn.	Wadsworth
Byrd	Howell, N. J.	Pearre	Webb
Calderhead	Hughes	Perkins	Weisse
Clayton	Kennedy, Ohio	Powers	Welborn
Dale	Ketcham	Randell, Tex.	Wharton
Darragh	Knopf	Reid	Wiley, Ala.
Davidson	Lamb	Rhodes	Wilson
Davis, W. Va.	Landis, Chas. B.	Robertson, La.	Wood, Mo.
Deemer	Lawrence	Robinson, Ark.
Dovener	Le Fevre	Shackleford
Dresser	Legare	Sherman

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

Until further notice:

Mr. MANN with Mr. BARTLETT.

For the session:

Mr. SOUTHARD with Mr. HARDWICK.

Mr. DALE with Mr. BOWIE.

Mr. MORRELL with Mr. SULLIVAN of New York.

Until further notice:

Mr. MAHON with Mr. WEISSE.

Mr. MCKINLEY of Illinois with Mr. REID.

Mr. POWERS with Mr. GAINES of Tennessee.

Mr. HASKINS with Mr. LEVER.

Mr. WELBORN with Mr. GUDGER.

Mr. WEEKS with Mr. STANLEY.

Mr. LE FEVRE with Mr. CLAUDE KITCHIN.

Mr. HITT with Mr. LEGARE.

Mr. DOVENER with Mr. SPARKMAN.

Mr. FOSTER of Vermont with Mr. POU.

Mr. DAVIDSON with Mr. GRIGGS.

Mr. BISHOP with Mr. CLAYTON.

Mr. GREENE with Mr. PATTERSON of North Carolina.

Mr. LILLEY of Pennsylvania with Mr. GILBERT of Kentucky.

Mr. GRAHAM with Mr. PAGE.

Mr. VREELAND with Mr. GREGG.

Mr. LONGWORTH with Mr. STEPHENS of Texas.

Mr. LAWRENCE with Mr. WEBB.

Mr. EDWARDS with Mr. BROOCKS of Texas.

For the day:

Mr. MINOR with Mr. SULZER.

Mr. BABCOCK with Mr. BOWERS.

Mr. KENNEDY of Ohio with Mr. LAMB.

Mr. MCCLEARY of Minnesota with Mr. BRANTLEY.

Mr. MCCALL with Mr. ROBERTSON of Louisiana.

Mr. OLCOTT with Mr. GARBER.

Mr. ACHESON with Mr. BELL of Georgia.

Mr. BINGHAM with Mr. BYRD.

Mr. BURKE of Pennsylvania with Mr. GOLDFOGLE.

Mr. BROWN with Mr. FIELD.

Mr. KETCHAM with Mr. HEARST.

Mr. BURLEIGH with Mr. MCDERMOTT.

Mr. HOWELL of New Jersey with Mr. PATTERSON of Tennessee.

Mr. HUGHES with Mr. RANDELL of Texas.

Mr. CHARLES B. LANDIS with Mr. TAYLOR of Alabama.

Mr. LOUDENSLAGER with Mr. SMITH of Kentucky.

Mr. MCCREARY of Pennsylvania with Mr. SHACKLEFORD.

Mr. WILSON with Mr. WOOD of Missouri.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH with Mr. ROBINSON of Arkansas.

Mr. LOVERING with Mr. SMALL.

For the vote:

Mr. SHERMAN with Mr. TALBOTT.

Mr. DEEMER with Mr. LITTLE.

Mr. BRADLEY with Mr. LEWIS.

Mr. BANNON with Mr. WILEY of Alabama.

Mr. RHODES with Mr. SMITH of Maryland.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I desire to withdraw my vote in the affirmative and to be recorded as present.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call the gentleman's name.

The Clerk called the name of Mr. GAINES of Tennessee, and he answered "Present."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

CANAL THROUGH SILETZ INDIAN RESERVATION, OREG.

Mr. HERMANN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 12080) granting to the Siletz Power and Manufacturing Company a right of way for a water ditch or canal through the Siletz Indian Reservation, in Oregon, with amendments, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the right of way is hereby granted, as hereinafter set forth, to the Siletz Power and Manufacturing Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Oregon, and its successors and assigns, for the construction, operation, and maintenance of a water ditch or canal through the lands of the United States in the Siletz Indian Reservation, in Oregon, beginning at a point on the right bank of the Siletz River, in lot 13 of section 9, township 10 south, range 10 west of Willamette meridian; running thence in a northeasterly direction through said section and terminating at a point on the right bank of the Siletz River, in lot 30 of section 4, township 10 south, range 10 west of Willamette meridian: Provided, That no rights hereunder shall attach until the Secretary of the Interior shall have determined to his satisfaction that the interests of the Indians and the public will be promoted thereby.

SEC. 2. That the right of way hereby granted shall be 50 feet in width on each side of the central line of such water ditch or canal.

SEC. 3. That before the grant of such right of way shall become effective, a map showing the definite location of such water ditch or canal must be filed with and approved by the Secretary of the Interior, and the company shall make payment to the Secretary of the Interior for the benefit of the allottees of full compensation for such right of way through their allotments, including all damage to their improvements and lands, and for damage to lands reserved for agency purposes, which compensation shall be determined and paid under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior in such manner as he may prescribe: Provided further, That the Siletz Power and Manufacturing Company, its successors or assigns, where not otherwise provided, shall, at its own expense, construct and maintain sufficient and suitable bridges across the water ditch or canal the right of way for which is hereby granted at the crossing of public roads, and be designated by the county court of the county in which they may be, failing in which the rights herein granted shall be forfeited.

SEC. 4. That the rights herein granted shall be forfeited by said corporation unless the water ditch or canal shall be constructed through the said lands within three years from the passage of this act.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded? [After a pause.] No second being demanded, the question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

DAM ACROSS MISSISSIPPI RIVER, MINNESOTA.

Mr. BUCKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 19431) permitting the building of a dam across the Mississippi River between the counties of Stearns and Sherburne, in the State of Minnesota, with amendments thereto, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to The St. Cloud Electric Power Company, a Minnesota corporation, its successors or assigns, to construct and maintain across the Mississippi River a dam, canal, and works necessarily incident thereto for water power and supply purposes, and a lock for navigation purposes, which lock shall be operated and kept in repair, as may be required by the Secretary of War, by the said company at its own expense, at any point between section 7, township 123, range 27, in the county of Stearns and State of Minnesota, and section 25, township 35, range 31, and sections 30 and 31, in township 35, range 30 west, in Sherburne County, Minn.: Provided, That the plans for the construction of such dam and appurtenant works, including a lock, shall be submitted to and approved by the Chief of Engineers and the Secretary of War before the commencement of the construction of the same: And provided further, That the said The St. Cloud Electric Power Company, its successors and assigns, shall not deviate from such plans after such approval, either before or after the completion of said structure, unless the modification of such plans shall have previously been submitted to and received the approval of the Chief of Engineers and the Secretary of War: And provided further, That there shall be placed and maintained in connection with said dam a sluiceway, so arranged as to permit logs, timber, and lumber to pass around, through, and over said dam without unreasonable delay or hindrance and without toll or charges: And provided further, That the dam shall be so constructed that the Government of the United States may at any time construct in connection therewith any further suitable lock for navigation purposes and may at any time, without compensation, control the said dam so far as shall be necessary for purposes of navigation, but shall not destroy the water power developed by said dam and structures to any greater extent than may be necessary to provide proper facilities for navigation, and that the Secretary of War may at any time require and enforce at the expense of the owners such modifications and changes in the construction of said dam as he may deem advisable in the interest of navigation: And provided further, That in consideration of the conveyance to the United States of America by said corporation, or its successors or assigns, of such suitable tract or tracts of land as may be approved or selected by the Chief of Engineers and the Secretary of War for lock or other purposes for such navigation as aforesaid, the right shall become and the same is hereby vested in the said The St. Cloud Electric Power Company, its successors and assigns, to flow and inundate with water any islands in the Mississippi River situate above said proposed site and situated southerly of the municipal limits of St. Cloud, Stearns County, Minn., which may belong to the United States of America and which have not been subjected to any entry under the homestead laws or other disposition at the time of the passage of this act, such right of flowage to be enjoyed without any compensation to be paid to the United States of America save and except the value of said lands so to be conveyed for lock or other purposes.

SEC. 2. That suitable fishways, to be approved by the United States Fish Commissioner, shall be constructed and maintained at said dam by said corporation, its successors or assigns.

SEC. 3. That in case any litigation arises from the building of said dam or locks or from the obstruction of said river by said dam or appurtenant works, cases may be tried in the proper courts as now provided for that purpose in the State of Minnesota or in the courts of the United States.

SEC. 4. That the right to amend, alter, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved, and the same shall become null and void unless the construction of the dam hereby authorized is commenced within one year after the passage of this act and completed within three years thereafter.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded? [After a pause.] No second being demanded, the question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

GRANTING LANDS TO WISCONSIN FOR FORESTRY PURPOSES.

Mr. McCARTHY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the Committee on Public Lands be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (S. 6462) granting lands to the State of Wisconsin for forestry purposes, and that the rules be suspended and the bill be passed.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to cause patents to issue to the State of Wisconsin for not more than 20,000 acres of such unappropriated, unoccupied, nonmineral public lands of the United States north of the township line between townships 33 and 34 north, fourth principal meridian, as may be selected by and within said State for forestry purposes. The lands hereby granted, except as herein provided, shall be used as a forest reserve only, and should the State of Wisconsin abandon the use of said lands for such purpose, alienate or attempt to alienate or use the same or any part thereof for purposes other than that for which granted, except upon consent of the Secretary of the Interior, as hereinafter provided, the same shall revert to the United States. If it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the Secretary that any tract or tracts of the land hereby granted are better suited for agricultural than for forestry purposes, or by reason of their isolation are not available for forest reserve purposes, he may by order consent to the sale of such tract or tracts by the State of Wisconsin upon condition that the proceeds of such sale shall be used by the said State in the reforestation of the permanent forest reserves established by said State, and that in event the lands hereby granted shall revert to the United States the said State will account for all such moneys and will pay over to the United States all sums derived from the sales of these lands and not actually used in reforestation.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. McCARTHY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and the gentleman from Nebraska is entitled to twenty minutes and the gentleman from Wyoming to twenty minutes.

Mr. McCARTHY. Mr. Speaker, a bill precisely like this came before the Committee on Public Lands and was considered. The object of the bill is to grant 20,000 acres of land to the State of Wisconsin for forestry purposes. The State has gone into the proposition on a large and scientific scale on its own behalf and has a forest reserve of its own of about 300,000 acres, in which is included this 20,000 acres of Government land. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman a question or two. How much land is given Wisconsin?

Mr. McCARTHY. Not to exceed 20,000 acres.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Well, is this a unanimous report from the committee?

Mr. McCARTHY. I think the report is unanimous; I would not say the members of the committee are all in favor of it.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. The Department recommends it?

Mr. McCARTHY. The Department recommends it, and no member of the committee has filed a minority report.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. What is the land good for?

Mr. McCARTHY. It is not good for anything at present.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. What does Wisconsin want with it, then?

Mr. McCARTHY. Wisconsin proposes to put it within her forest reserves. It is only partly covered with forests, but it will grow trees if it is properly cared for. Wisconsin has had a forest reserve of its own of 300,000 acres, and this 20,000 acres is scattered about in isolated tracts——

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Does this in any way prevent Wisconsin hereafter alienating and selling it?

Mr. McCARTHY. Yes, sir; this bill provides that in the event the State of Wisconsin fails to use it for forestry purposes only, that it shall revert to the United States.

Mr. JENKINS. I might say to the gentleman the bill has passed the Senate.

Mr. McCARTHY. The bill has passed the Senate; this is a Senate bill.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to the passage of this bill, or at least I think the matter should be pretty carefully considered before it is passed, owing to the fact that it proposes to give public lands belonging to the United States to the State of Wisconsin for a specific purpose, a good purpose, no doubt, but if I understand the attitude of the Committee on Public Lands of this House correctly, the attitude of that committee for some years past has been against any grants of land to any of the States for any purposes save for the support of common schools. I do not recall a bill having been reported from the committee for the last three Congresses that proposed a grant of land to any State for any other purpose. Now, there are a number of bills before the committee and have been for years past proposing grants of land for various purposes, bills proposing grants of land for the support of Soldiers' Homes, a bill proposing a grant of twenty or thirty thousand acres of land to the State of North Dakota for the same purpose for which the grant is made in this bill, and yet I have understood that it has been the policy of that committee—I think I am correct in that statement—that no grant should be favorably reported except for common school purposes, and then only where some peculiar condition existed that warranted such grant.

Mr. Speaker, this is a grant of 20,000 acres of land to the State of Wisconsin not for a forest reserve, but for forestry purposes. These lands are not in large compact areas, otherwise a forest reserve would be created under the Forestry Service of the United States, but the grant is of isolated scattered tracts of land which may be sold by the State, and the proceeds may be used for forestry purposes or such other purposes as the legislature of the State of Wisconsin might deem it wise to use the fund thus obtained. Now, I think that we should thoroughly understand what the bill does, and if it is to be the policy of Congress to make grants to the States for forestry purposes, for the support of Soldiers' Homes, and I know of no purpose that would appeal to patriotic Americans more than that, then bills providing for such grants now before the committee should be reported favorably.

The last meeting of the committee was held at a time when the House was in session—the first meeting it ever held under those circumstances since I have been a member of it—and favorably reported this bill and others, including a bill taking a million dollars from the reclamation fund, of which the State of my friend from Nebraska is a beneficiary, for the drainage of the Dismal Swamp. If this bill should be passed, if it is the opinion of Congress that we should enter upon the policy of making grants to the States for various purposes, let us understand it, and let us enter upon this legislation understandingly and fully appreciating the fact that if it be wise and proper to grant to the State of Wisconsin certain tracts of land, which she may dispose of and use for forestry or other purposes, then it is equally right and proper that we should make similar grants to other States for the same or other equally or more meritorious purposes.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. MONDELL. I will.

Mr. MANN. Is this land to be used with other lands for a forestry reserve?

Mr. MONDELL. Well, I do not understand that there is any considerable compact area of public lands in the State of Wisconsin that could be used for forest reserve. If there were, and it were fit for forest-reserve purposes, a forest reserve would undoubtedly be created by the present forestry administration, which is enthusiastically in favor of all the reserves possible.

Mr. MANN. Of what benefit is this land to the General Government? Was it originally pine land?

Mr. MONDELL. The gentleman might ask that same question in regard to the remaining lands in Missouri or Minnesota or the Dakotas or elsewhere. These lands are now subject to entry under the land laws. They can be sold, they can be homesteaded, or they can be disposed of one way or another.

Mr. MANN. Does not the gentleman believe that there is a large amount of land in forest States, owned by the General Government, of no value as it stands, which might possibly be turned over to the States if the States would make forest reserves upon the land and have forests or trees grown upon the ground?

Mr. MONDELL. I have tried to make it clear that I am in favor of an enlightened forestry policy, State and national, but I want to call the gentleman's attention to the fact that this bill does not propose that the State of Wisconsin shall establish a forest reserve on every 40 and 80 acre tract of Government land here and there over this territory covered by the bill. It would be impracticable to do that, and the State will not do it. It is practically a grant of 20,000 acres of isolated tracts, none of them large. The report does not indicate the size of the largest area of unoccupied public land in the State of Wisconsin, but I assume there is no area of any considerable size.

Mr. MANN. There must be certainly an area of a very large size in Wisconsin which might possibly be turned by the State into a forest reserve.

Mr. MONDELL. Well, I am speaking of public lands. There are no large compact areas of public land in Wisconsin, and the bill recognizes that condition and provides that these areas may be sold. It simply provides that the proceeds may be used for this purpose. Now, I do not insist that it may not be proper to give the State of Missouri all of her remaining public land for some purpose, the State of Arkansas all of her public lands, the State of Minnesota all of her public lands; but if we are going to inaugurate that policy, a policy we followed to a considerable extent for a long time until the Committee on the Public Lands of this House several years ago declared a different one, which it has followed consistently, and so far as I know this is the first case in which the committee has departed from this established policy of not granting land to the States for any purpose except for the support of common schools. There have been several bills reported at one time or another from the committee granting lands to the Southern States for school purposes. No other bills proposing land grants to States have been reported by the committee for years, if I recollect rightly. I think the House should at least understand that this is the inauguration of a new policy, and that we are now providing for the transfer of public lands from the United States to the States to be used by the States practically as they see fit.

Mr. MANN. Does not the gentleman think that it might be well to inaugurate the policy of trying to grow trees instead of trying to demolish all the trees in the country?

Mr. MONDELL. Well, if the House wants to grant the State of North Dakota 50,000 acres on which to grow trees, where they really need tree very badly, and the State of Wisconsin also 20,000, where trees grow naturally, but where they do not need the care and attention that they need in North Dakota, well and good.

Mr. MANN. Well, if North Dakota will agree to do it, I will agree to vote for it.

Mr. MONDELL. That is the only question. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. McCARTHY. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. ADAMS].

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. Speaker, I think the point made by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] is a good one, and that is, even if this bill does provide for a departure and a new policy, if it is a good thing in itself, the objection that it is new is hardly valid.

Now, what are the facts? In the State of Wisconsin there are 50,000 or 60,000 acres of land belonging to the Federal Government. These lands are open to entry. They are not valuable. If they had been, somebody would have bought them. The State of Wisconsin took up the same policy with reference to forestry which has been so intelligently taken up by the Federal Government. It has embarked in this business of forestry in a scientific way, and we have placed in our forest reserves in the State of Wisconsin 300,000 acres of land already and we have appointed a forestry commission, and the secretary of that commission is a gentleman who is recommended by the head of the forestry work of the United States; a gentleman of exact knowledge, of great accomplishment, and fitted for his work.

Now, all that we do in this bill is to come to Congress and present to the Senate a bill transferring from the Federal Government to the State of Wisconsin these semiworthless lands, which are capable of producing trees, conserving the moisture along the lines of the Chippewa and St. Croix rivers, which flow down to the Mississippi.

Now, then, the Senate has considered that bill. It has the backing of both Senators from the State of Wisconsin. More than that, it has the backing of the Public Lands Committee of the Senate, and has come over here backed by a unanimous vote from the Senate. Now, what do we have embodied in this measure as it comes to us? It is this: To take the semiworthless lands of the Federal Government, which it maintains at its own cost, and turn them over to the State of Wisconsin, where they will be held for forestry purposes only, under the strict limitation of this bill, and let the State of Wisconsin bear all the expense that is needed to make them a part of the great forest reserves of that State.

Mr. MONDELL. The gentleman does not contend that all of this 20,000 acres of land will be used, actually used, for forestry purposes?

Mr. ADAMS. That is just precisely what the gentleman does contend, and no other disposition can be made except with the consent of the Federal Government. It is a contract entered into by the United States Government and the State of Wisconsin, that the State of Wisconsin shall take the semiworthless land and use it for forestry purposes, and if for any reason it desires to use it for any other purpose, it must get the consent of the Federal Government to make such other disposition.

Mr. MONDELL. But there is a provision for the disposition of this land.

Mr. McCARTHY. Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that the gentleman from Wyoming is somewhat careless if he desires the Members of this body to believe that this is absolutely new legislation. I do not know, and I do not care, why he did not happen to be at the last meeting of the Public Lands Committee. It is a little too bad that he was not there so as to run the thing; but I remember, and he remembers, if he will search the cells of his recollection, that during the Fifty-eighth Congress we established an exact precedent for this business when we donated to the State of Minnesota 20,000 acres of public land for forestry purposes. Do you deny that? Then this is not new legislation. You have established a precedent heretofore, and, as stated by the gentleman from Wisconsin, I do not know of any better use that can be made of this worthless land than to give it to the State of Wisconsin.

I am reliably informed by gentlemen from the State of Wisconsin that if we want to take the 300,000 acres that she has already thrown into forest reserves, that we can take it with the greatest of pleasure, and she will take this 20,000 acres. This is an isolated tract, but it is surrounded by land owned by the State of Wisconsin, lands that have been given to the State of Wisconsin by gentlemen not moved by patriotic purposes entirely, but who desired to escape the payment of taxes on those lands, because they were not worth paying the tax on. But they will grow trees. The soil and the climate are right. It is not an experiment, as you would have to try in Wyoming and North Dakota or the arid regions. It is possible to make a reasonable success in Wisconsin; and I submit that inasmuch as we have already established a precedent for this I know of no reason why there should be occasion to suggest that we are departing upon a new policy.

This measure has been recommended by the Secretary of the Interior; and it is nothing new for the Committee on the Public Lands to lap up suggestions from that Department, the same as a cat laps milk. We have been doing everything that they suggested for us to do, and it is a bad time just now, in my opinion, to depart from our usual course of procedure. [Applause.]

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the gentleman a question before he sits down, please.

Mr. McCARTHY. Yes.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Why do you want this forest reserve? How does it better your people? I really would like to know something about it.

Mr. McCARTHY. Northern Wisconsin is a natural timber country. It has been denuded of its timber.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. I wondered why it was that you wanted a reserve there when you have so much timbered country.

Mr. McCARTHY. It has been denuded of its timber.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Who has taken it off?

Mr. JENKINS. The settlers.

Mr. McCARTHY. I suppose the settlers.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. And immense lumber concerns have taken it off.

Mr. McCARTHY. Yes.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. And you want to keep the remainder of the timber there?

Mr. McCARTHY. Yes. The State has 300,000 acres now, and is asking for these 20,000 acres, consisting of isolated tracts scattered all over the 300,000 acres.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Don't you think the Government should reserve all the timbered lands possible?

Mr. McCARTHY. Yes.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. They are being cut into lumber and the lumber sent to foreign countries.

Mr. McCARTHY. Yes.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. I am told that it is a fact that our timber is being cut, sawed up, and the lumber sent to foreign lands; and I suppose after a while we will be sending there for lumber if this is not stopped in some way or other. I am going to vote for your bill.

Mr. McCARTHY. Thank you.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Nebraska, who takes much interest in this question, very properly suggests that I am not altogether correct in my statement that this is somewhat of a new departure.

Mr. Speaker, it is true that—in the last Congress, I think it was—the Committee on the Public Lands did provide for the setting aside of a certain tract of land in a compact body in the State of Minnesota for a forest reserve, a very different thing from what is proposed to be done in this bill, and that was the only time in years that the committee has reported a bill granting any lands to any State for any purpose except for public school purposes.

Mr. McCARTHY. In view of the fact that the State of Wisconsin owns land adjacent to these isolated tracts, and when it is all thrown in it will make one compact body, I desire to ask what difference there is between this and the Minnesota case?

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, there is nothing of record—and I have investigated this matter somewhat—to indicate that the State of Wisconsin has any lands adjacent to the lands which she wishes to select under this; and, as a matter of fact, I understand that in the entire State of Wisconsin the largest amount of public land in any one county is 8,000 acres, undoubtedly scattered in a great many tracts. With that exception, there is not in the entire State more than 2,000 acres of public land in a single county, and probably nowhere more than a few acres in a compact body.

Now, I do not insist that it may not be wise to grant to the States tracts of lands for specific purposes, but I doubt very much whether this grant to the State of Wisconsin will, as a matter of fact, help very much in the conservation of the forest growth of that State. It is a grant to the State which will be used, let us hope, to good advantage. While the gentleman from Nebraska is so insistent that this is good legislation, he must recollect that the committee has refused to report favorably legislation of a similar character applying to other States of the country, legislation in which I have no interest except as a member of the committee and a Member of the House. I think I am correct in saying that this is a departure from the usual rule which has prevailed in the Public Lands Committee, and I simply desire to have the House understand that it is.

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, does not the gentleman believe that we should encourage what is known as "forestry reserve?"

Mr. MONDELL. Oh, the gentleman does believe in forest reserves and in forest reservations and in the Federal activities along that line, and I am glad to know that the State of Wisconsin is doing something in that line after all these years, after having for so long tolerated a reckless waste of her forest resources; but this bill can not establish a forest reserve by any possibility. It is land granted to the State for forestry purposes, it is true, but can not result in a compact forest reserve, and all I have to say is, that if we propose to grant to the States public land for forestry and other purposes, we should understand exactly what it is we are doing.

Mr. McCARTHY. I now yield two minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN].

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, if it be true that this is a new departure, it is a wise departure. We have been cutting off the timber of the country for years without reflecting what those will do who come after us a hundred years or more. It is impossible for private property owners, under our methods of land taxation, to retain land idle to raise pine trees on. It is perfectly feasible and proper for the State of Wisconsin, a great white pine country, to raise up a new generation of white pine trees. We are out of white pine in the country now practically, and if the Government, by giving this land to the State of Wisconsin, can obtain this growth of new timber, which, when it comes to maturity, will be of great value to the world without expense, I suggest to my friend from Wyoming that it is a better bargain to do that than it is to irrigate arid lands of Wyoming and the West at the expense of the Government, and if Wyoming were willing to take the arid lands and irrigate them at her expense, I should say give them to her. Now, we propose to give to the State of Wisconsin a few acres of land of no value to anyone on earth in order that the State may make, not merely two blades of grass grow where only one grows now, but millions of trees where none grow to-day. [Applause.]

Mr. McCARTHY. Mr. Speaker, how does the time stand?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has four minutes remaining and the gentleman from Wyoming six minutes.

Mr. McCARTHY. I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GAINES].

Mr. GAINES of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I desire to accentuate what I have already said. I think it is a wise policy, and if we have never done so before, we are not too late now, to adopt this forestry system, not only to be ruled by the Federal Government, but we should encourage State forest reserves when we cede lands to the States. Why? Because the States reserve the magnificent timber that are on these lands. As it is now the timber is being taken off by the great combinations and manufacturers for the purpose of making it into lumber, and then to a great extent shipping it out of the United States. If I had time I would draw a bill compelling every man who cuts down a tree on public lands to set out two young ones of the same kind instead. The time will come when we will not only want the timber we now have, when the people of this country, upon their farms, North and South, will have to grow timber to fence their lands and make their fires and make the lumber to build their houses. I am for State forestry reserve, I am for Federal forestry reserve, and I heartily indorse this bill. [Applause.]

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I do not understand that forests will grow any more rapidly in Wisconsin after the title has passed to the State of Wisconsin than forests will grow on the same land while the title remains in the United States Government. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] seems to think that forests will grow much more rapidly after the land has been transferred to the State. This is not a matter of forestry at all. I leave it to the House on the statement I have made.

Mr. STAFFORD. I want to ask the gentleman if the State is not better able to determine what should be its policy toward internal development than the National Government? It has determined that certain land in the State is more suitable for forestry purposes than for agricultural. Why should we not accept the opinion of the State and donate these 20,000 acres for the purpose of making one united tract?

Mr. MONDELL. The land can not be united in one tract.

Mr. STAFFORD. The State has donated thousands of acres for the purpose, and it wants these small tracts scattered through the reserve to make one uniform whole.

Mr. MONDELL. This is not a matter of forest preservation. It is a proposition to donate lands to the State for forestry purposes. If the plan is adopted, if it is a good one, it certainly is as wise to donate lands in North Dakota for that purpose as to Wisconsin.

Mr. STAFFORD. But you can't grow trees in North Dakota?

Mr. MONDELL. These lands can not be a forest reserve. This is a proposition to grant the State of Wisconsin 20,000 acres of public lands for its own uses and purposes.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A similar House bill (H. R. 2209) was laid on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PARKINSON, its reading clerk, announced that the Senate had agreed to the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 3044) to promote the efficiency of the Revenue-Cutter Service.

Also to Senate bill (S. 2948) to amend section 1 of the act approved March 3, 1905, providing for an additional associate justice of the supreme court of Arizona, and for other purposes.

Also to Senate bill (S. 4190) to amend an act entitled "An act to amend section 2455 of the Revised Statutes of the United States," approved February 26, 1895.

Also to Senate bill (S. 1540) to increase the efficiency of the Ordnance Department of the United States.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bill of the following title:

H. R. 5221. An act for the relief of Edward King, of Niagara Falls, in the State of New York.

The message also announced that the Senate had disagreed to the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 5769) to declare the true intent and meaning of parts of the act entitled "An act in relation to testimony before the Interstate Commerce Commission," and so forth, approved February 11, 1893, and an act entitled "An act to establish the Department of Commerce and Labor," approved February 14, 1903, and an act entitled "An act to further regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the States," approved February 19, 1903, and an act entitled "An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1904, and for other purposes," approved February 25, 1903, had asked a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. CLARK of Wyoming, Mr. NELSON, and Mr. CULBERSON as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed joint resolution and bill of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 6488. An act authorizing the striking of 200 additional medals to commemorate the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of Benjamin Franklin; and

S. R. 67. Joint resolution to protect the copyrighted matter appearing in the "Rules and specifications for grading lumber adopted by the various lumber manufacturing associations of the United States.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bill of the following title:

H. R. 9343. An act providing for the resurvey of certain townships of land in the county of Baca, Colo.

RELIEF OF RECEIVERS OF PUBLIC MONEYS.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 11044) authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Treasury, in certain contingencies, to refund to receivers of public moneys acting as special disbursing agents amounts paid by them out of their private funds, with amendments thereto, being in the nature of typographical errors, the letters "t" and "b" having been omitted in the words "hereafter be," which bill as amended I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any unexpended balances of appropriations for contingent expenses of land offices, for the expenses of hearings in land entries and the expenses of depositing public moneys, such sums as may have been or may hereafter be disbursed by receivers of public moneys, acting as special disbursing agents at United States land offices, before the receipt of Government funds: Provided, That no payment shall be made under this act in excess of the amount appropriated by the Congress for the particular purpose in each instance and for the fiscal year in which such disbursements were made: Provided, That all such disbursements shall have been or shall hereafter be made in pursuance of law in carrying out departmental regulations or to meet authorizations by the Commissioner of the General Land Office: Provided further, That the accounts containing such items shall have been duly approved by the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VOLSTEAD] is entitled to twenty minutes and the gentleman from New York [Mr. PERKINS] to twenty minutes.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to have an explanation of this bill.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, the object of this bill is to allow the Treasury to refund to certain receivers of public funds money paid by such receivers out of their own money. The law provides for an appropriation for the expenses of contests and other hearings in the local land offices, and also for the payment of the expense of transmitting certain moneys from the receivers of such local land offices to the public depositories. For the purpose of making these payments the General Land Office apportions to each local land office a certain amount. When that is exhausted in the local land office there is no way of making these payments except from the private means of the receivers. They have, in many instances, made small payments; for instance, for the registration of mail in transmitting the Government's money and for the fees of witnesses who are attending contests and other hearings. The Comptroller holds that money thus paid by the receivers can not be audited and repaid to them and the receivers actually lose all money that they pay out of their own pockets for the benefit of the Government, though the payment is at the direction of the General Land Office. This bill is to remedy that difficulty.

Mr. PERKINS. Is this a bill recommended by the General Land Office?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. This is a bill drawn by the Department for this relief. It does not make any appropriation.

Mr. PERKINS. It is drawn by the Department itself?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Yes.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

SPANISH TREATY CLAIMS COMMISSION.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill (H. R. 15912) to amend the act creating the Spanish Treaty Claims Commission, approved March 2, 1901, be recommitted to the Committee on the Judiciary.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin asks unanimous consent that the bill indicated be recommitted to the Committee on the Judiciary. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

SURVEY OF HARBOR AT DULUTH, MINN.

Mr. BEDE. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the House concurrent resolution No. 34, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

House concurrent resolution No. 34.

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause an examination and survey to be made of the harbor at Duluth, Minn., including the entrance thereto, with a view to determining what modifications of the present plan, if any, are desirable.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded? [After a pause.] No second being demanded, the question is on suspending the rules and passing the concurrent resolution.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the concurrent resolution was passed.

DONATION OF OBSOLETE ARMS, ETC., TO VINCENNES UNIVERSITY, VINCENNES, IND.

Mr. CHANEY. Mr. Speaker, I move to take from the Speaker's table Senate joint resolution 52, authorizing the Secretary of War to donate to the board of trustees of Vincennes University, Vincennes, Ind., such obsolete arms and other military equipments now in possession of said university, to be used in military instruction, that the rules be suspended and that the resolution be passed.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Senate joint resolution No. 52.

Resolved, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to donate to the board of trustees of the Vincennes University, at Vincennes, Ind., such obsolete arms and other military equipments now in possession of said university, to be used in military instruction.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded? [After a pause.] No second being demanded, the question is on taking the joint resolution from the Speaker's table, suspending the rules, and passing the same.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof the rules were suspended and the joint resolution was passed.

SALE OF CERTAIN LANDS TO CITY OF MENA, ARK.

Mr. MACON. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 18529) to authorize the sale of certain lands to the city of Mena, in the county of Polk, in the State or Arkansas, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to sell to the city of Mena, in the county of Polk, in the State of Arkansas, at and for the sum of $2.50 per acre, the following described lands, to wit: The fractional northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of section 6, township No. 2 south, range 30 west of the fifth principal meridian. And upon the payment of said sum the said Secretary is authorized to issue patent for said lands to said city.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded? [After a pause.] No second being demanded, the question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and two-thirds voting in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

CREATING THE MESA VERDE NATIONAL PARK.

Mr. HOGG. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 5998) creating the Mesa Verde National Park, with amendments thereto, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby reserved from settlement, entry, sale, or other disposal, and set apart as a public reservation, all those certain tracts, pieces, and parcels of land lying and being situate in the State of Colorado, and within the boundaries particularly described as follows: Beginning at the northwest corner of section 27, township 35 north, range 16 west, New Mexico principal meridian; thence easterly along the section lines to the southwest corner of the southeast quarter of section 20, township 35 north, range 15 west; thence northerly to the northwest corner of the southeast quarter of said section; thence easterly to the northeast corner of the southeast quarter of said section; thence northerly to the northwest corner of section 21, said township; thence easterly to the northeast corner of the northwest quarter of said section; thence northerly to the northwest corner of the southeast quarter of section 16, said township; thence easterly to the northeast corner of the southeast quarter of section 15, said township; thence southerly to the southeast corner of said section; thence easterly to the southwest corner of section 13, said township; thence northerly to the northwest corner of the southwest quarter of said section; thence easterly to the northeast corner of the southwest quarter of said section; thence northerly to the northwest corner of the northeast quarter of said section; thence easterly to the northeast corner of said section; thence northerly to the northwest corner of the southwest quarter of section 7, township 35 north, range 14 west; thence easterly to the northeast corner of the southwest quarter of said section; thence northerly to the northwest corner of the southeast quarter of section 6, said township; thence easterly to the northeast corner of the southwest quarter of section 4, said township; thence southerly to the northwest corner of the southeast quarter of section 9, said township; thence easterly to the northeast corner of the southeast quarter of said section; thence southerly to the northwest corner of section 22, said township; thence easterly to the northeast corner of the northwest quarter of said section; thence southerly to the northwest corner of the southeast quarter of said section; thence easterly to the northeast corner of the southeast quarter of said section; thence southerly to the northwest quarter of section 26, said township; thence easterly to the northeast corner of the northwest quarter of said section; thence southerly to the southeast corner of the southwest quarter of section 35, said township; thence easterly to the northeast corner of section 2, township 34 north, range 14 west; thence southerly along the section line between sections 1 and 2 and between sections 11 and 12 to the northern boundary of the southern Ute Indian Reservation; thence westerly along the northern boundary of said reservation to the center of section 9, township 34 north, range 16 west; thence northerly along the quarter-section lines to the northwest corner of the southeast quarter of section 28, township 35 north, range 16 west; thence easterly to the northeast corner of the southeast quarter of said section; thence northerly to the northwest corner of section 27, said township, the place of beginning.

SEC. 2. That said public park shall be known as the Mesa Verde National Park, and shall be under the exclusive control of the Secretary of the Interior, whose duty it shall be to prescribe such rules and regulations and establish such service as he may deem necessary for the care and management of the same. Such regulations shall provide specifically for the preservation from injury or spoliation of the ruins and other works and relics of prehistoric or primitive man within said park: Provided, That all prehistoric ruins that are situated within 5 miles of the boundaries of said park, as herein described, on Indian lands and not on lands alienated by patent from the ownership of the United States, are hereby placed under the custodianship of the Secretary of the Interior, and shall be administered by the same service that is established for the custodianship of the park.

SEC. 3. That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to permit examinations, excavations, and other gathering of objects of interest within said park by any person or persons whom he may deem properly qualified to conduct such examinations, excavations, or gatherings, subject to such rules and regulations as he may prescribe: Provided always, That the examinations, excavations, and gatherings are undertaken only for the benefit of some reputable museum, university, college, or other recognized scientific or educational institution, with a view to increasing the knowledge of such objects and aiding the general advancement of archæological science.

SEC. 4. That any person or persons who may otherwise in any manner willfully remove, disturb, destroy, or molest any of the ruins, mounds, buildings, graves, relics, or other evidences of an ancient civilization or other property from said park shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction before any court having jurisdiction of such offenses shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than twelve months, or such person or persons may be fined and imprisoned, at the discretion of the judge, and shall be required to restore the property disturbed, if possible.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WATSON). Is a second demanded? [After a pause.] No second being demanded, the question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and two-thirds voting in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

DEEDS, ETC., IN GUAM, SAMOA, AND THE CANAL ZONE.

Mr. BIRDSALL. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the following bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 19607) for the acknowledgment of deeds and other instruments in Guam, Samoa, and the Canal Zone to affect lands in the District of Columbia and other Territories.

Be it enacted, etc., That deeds and other instruments affecting land situate in the District of Columbia or any Territory of the United States may be acknowledged in the islands of Guam and Samoa or in the Canal Zone before any notary public or judge, appointed therein by proper authority, or by any officer therein who has ex officio the powers of a notary public: Provided, That the certificate by such notary in Guam, Samoa, or the Canal Zone, as the case may be, shall be accompanied by the certificate of the governor or acting governor of such place to the effect that the notary taking said acknowledgment was in fact the officer he purported to be; and any deeds or other instruments affecting lands so situate, so acknowledged since the 1st day of January, 1905, and accompanied by such certificate shall have the same effect as such deeds or other instruments hereafter so acknowledged and certified.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

A second not being demanded, the question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

CONEY ISLAND CHANNEL.

Mr. LAW. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 19680) directing the Secretary of War to cause an examination and survey to be made of Coney Island channel.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause an examination and survey to be made of Coney Island channel, New York, with a view to estimating the cost of securing a channel 20 feet deep and 600 feet wide at low tide, extending from deep water southwest of Nortons Point eastwardly to deep water off Rockaway Inlet and across the bar lying west of Rockaway Inlet to deep water in Jamaica Bay.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

A second not being demanded, the question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

Mr. LAW. Mr. Speaker, I wish to take this occasion to call to the attention of the House a project now under serious consideration for the extension and improvement of the commercial facilities of the port of New York, of which the measure now before the House is a most important part. The plan which is now in the course of development contemplates joint action on the part of the Federal Government and the great metropolis which will be most directly affected. Early in the session, with a view to securing cooperation on the part of the Federal Government, I introduced several joint resolutions and bills providing for surveys and preliminary examinations by the War Department of that portion of the waters surrounding the city of New York known as "Jamaica Bay."

A sudden and absolute need of increased water front and dockage facilities in and about the port of New York has arisen, caused by the marvelous growth of that city during the past few years and the tremendous increase in the commerce of its port. According to the official reports of the census taken in the year 1890, the present city of New York then had a population of 2,507,414. The census taken in the year 1900 shows a net increase of population during the ten years from 1890 to 1900 of 929,788. In ten years time this city added to its population more residents than were in 1900 to be found in any other city of the United States save Chicago and Philadelphia. The reports of the New York State census taken in 1905 show a total population for the city of New York in that year of 4,013,781, or a net increase of 576,579 over the population of 1900. Again in five years this city has added to its population more residents than in the year 1900 were to be found in any other city of the United States save Chicago and Philadelphia.

Mr. Speaker, the increase in the commerce of the port of New York has kept pace with its tremendous strides in population. The reports of the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor show the value of the exports and imports at the port of New York in the year 1890 to have been $865,478,484. The same reports show the value of the port's commerce in the year 1900 to have been $1,056,071,753. We have here an increase in the year 1900 over the year 1890 of $190,593,269. The same reports show an increase in the year 1905 over the year 1900 of $148,283,508. While I do not regard the percentage of increase of commerce at the port of New York, as compared with the percentage of increase at the other principal ports of the United States, as of great significance in considering the need of greater available water front, I may say that the greatest increase, as compared with other ports, has been during the five years from 1900 to 1905. The commerce at the port of New York shows an increase in the year 1905 over the year 1900 of 14 per cent, as against an increase of 2 per cent at Boston, a loss of 5 per cent at Philadelphia, a loss of 16 per cent at Baltimore, an increase of 38 per cent at New Orleans, and an increase of 9 per cent at San Francisco.

Mr. Speaker, the section of the city of New York that has experienced the greatest rate of increase in population during the years I have mentioned is the Borough of Brooklyn. The Federal census reports record an increase of 40 per cent in the population of Brooklyn during the ten years from 1890 to 1900, and an increase of only 29 per cent in the Borough of Manhattan. The increase in population in Brooklyn during the five years from 1900 to 1905 was 17 per cent, as against 15 per cent in Manhattan.

This borough, Mr. Speaker, with a present population of nearly one and a half millions, larger than any city of the United States of which it is not a part, save Chicago and possibly Philadelphia, has, during the past several years, been growing by such leaps and bounds as surpasses the experience of any town in the Western Hemisphere, with the possible exception of Chicago. During the ten years from 1890 to 1900 the increase in the population of the Borough of Brooklyn was 360,239. In the year 1900 there were only six cities in the United States, not including the city of New York, that had as many residents as were added to the population of Brooklyn during these years.

During the five years from 1900 to 1905 the increase in the population of Brooklyn was 192,104. Again in the year 1900 there were only eighteen cities in the United States, not including the city of New York, that had as many residents as were added to the population of Brooklyn during these five years.

Sections that were farm lands five years ago are now laid out in streets, and solid blocks of houses line these streets. The latest quarterly statement of the bureau of buildings of this Borough of Brooklyn shows that during the three months ending March 31 of the present year plans for 1,655 buildings were filed, at an estimated cost of $11,426,642.

Mr. Speaker, this enormous increase in the population of the city of New York, particularly in the Borough of Brooklyn, and the tremendous increase in the commerce of the port has created a pressing demand for increased available water-front and dockage facilities. The necessity for immediate steps in this direction was first brought forcibly to the attention of the city authorities in December last, by Hon. Edward M. Grout, the then comptroller of the city of New York, who, in a communication addressed to the commissioners of the sinking fund of the city, urged the imperative need of more water front available for dockage facilities, and called attention to the possibilities in this direction of that great arm of the sea indenting the southern shores of the boroughs of Brooklyn and Queens known as "Jamaica Bay." He pointed out the astonishing growth of those wards of Brooklyn and Queens bordering on this bay, and invited attention to the fact that these wards embrace those portions of the city most remote from the East River, where Brooklyn's commerce is now generally distributed, and that if Jamaica Bay could be opened and made safe for general commerce, it would constitute the commercial back door of that great borough. Mr. Grout recommended that the city of New York should at once take up, formulate, and execute a comprehensive scheme for the full development of the unimproved lands surrounding a large portion of the bay by acquiring or perfecting title to the unimproved shore lands and by reclaiming and filling in the salt marshes, shallow parts and hummock of the bay, and bulkheading the islands and shores throughout their entire extent.

Mr. Speaker, if this plan is followed out, and the channels opened in such a way as to best develop the locality for its future needs and opportunities, at least 120,000 feet of bulkhead around the mainland will be produced.

Acting upon the recommendation of Mr. Grout and the board of estimate and apportionment, the board of aldermen of the city of New York, on April 10 last, passed an ordinance providing for an issue of corporate stock in the sum of $25,000 to provide means for the necessary expenses of a commission of engineers to be appointed by the mayor, to prepare and submit to the board of aldermen a report upon the general improvement and development of Jamaica Bay, together with plans and estimates in connection therewith. Such commission of engineers has since been appointed by the mayor, and they have actively entered upon the discharge of their important duties.

But, Mr. Speaker, the efforts of the city of New York can avail little without cooperation on the part of the Federal Government. The city will, without doubt, be prepared to expend large sums of money in the work of improving and bulkheading the shore lines in accordance with such plans as may be recommended by its commission of engineers, but it is essential that the Federal Government shall do its part in extending and improving the natural channels of Jamaica Bay.

Extensive surveys and preliminary examinations by the War Department should be authorized by Congress at once, so that the commission of engineers representing the city may have the benefit in their work of a contemporaneous and cooperative investigation of the subject on the part of the Federal Government. It was with this purpose in view that I introduced in the House the several joint resolutions and bills, the most important of which is now before you for consideration, providing for such surveys and preliminary examinations. Their favorable consideration by the Committee on Rivers and Harbors has been strongly recommended and urged by the most representative citizens of the city of New York, including its mayor and the president of the Borough of Brooklyn. The have been the subject of urgent indorsement on the part of all the influential civic organizations of Brooklyn. The intelligent popular demand for the cooperation of the Federal Government in the enterprise I have outlined has been strongly and ably reflected in the editorial pages of the press.

Mr. Speaker, at this point in my remarks I wish to submit an editorial on the subject of the improvement of Jamaica Bay, appearing in the columns of the Brooklyn Eagle in its issue of April 9, 1906:

THE IMPROVEMENT OF JAMAICA BAY.

On Friday last the Rivers and Harbors Committee of the House of Representatives gave a hearing to the six Brooklyn Congressmen, to Congressman COCKS, of Long Island, and to a delegation from the Brooklyn League, all of whom appeared before the committee to urge appropriations for the improvement of Jamaica Bay. The hearing was directly in the interests of three bills introduced by Representative LAW, of the Fourth district. The object of those bills is to secure money for the surveying of certain channels in Jamaica Bay preparatory to their deepening, charting, buoying, and lighting.

Mr. BURTON, chairman of the Rivers and Harbors Committee, was evidently impressed by the arguments submitted, but stated that he did not see his way clear at this stage of the session to put the Jamaica Bay proposition in the class of emergency work. In other words, he did not consider it urgent enough to justify his committee submitting a favorable report upon the bills introduced by Mr. LAW. In that conclusion we think Mr. BURTON errs, and we hope that by a closer study of the entire plan and, best of all, by personal examination, he and his associates may be convinced that the improvement of the bay is really an emergency project and can rightfully be rated as such by the committee.

It is a reflection upon the rights which this community presents and for which it should command attention that the Government has not long ago examined this subject. The value of the commerce concerned in the improvement of Jamaica Bay is not less than $25,000,000 a year. That sum represents what has been achieved under the most discouraging conditions imaginable; conditions entailing delays and disasters that have retarded progress by imposing a demoralizing tax on both time and capital. Manufacturers are solidly behind the bills introduced by Congressman LAW. Freight and lighterage corporations are behind them. Shipowners are behind them. All the various interests concerned in making the waters of the bay an absolutely safe highway for steamboat excursions, fishing, yachting, and all other forms of marine recreation and profit, are united in support of them. The advantage that would accrue to commerce in general by the improvement of Jamaica Bay is suggested by the record of what has been accomplished under the unfavorable circumstances prevailing now.

The geographical relation of Jamaica Bay to the development of Greater New York is apparent from even a casual study of the map. The bay measures 6 miles east and west by 4 miles north and south. It is connected with the ocean by Rockaway Inlet. It affords a splendidly sheltered harbor, and it should be so intersected with deep water channels that every important point in the great territory surrounding it could be reached by large freight and passenger carrying craft. The duty of the Federal Government to provide such channels is obvious. The need of them is urgent, and the concession of them will be insisted upon until this or some subsequent Congress yields the point.

Mr. Speaker, I believe there is no point in navigable waters that presents a more meritorious demand for improvement by the Federal Government than does this bay. It possesses all the essential geographical features of a perfect harbor. It has a shore line of more than 20 miles in length, and is connected with the Atlantic Ocean by Rockaway Inlet, which is 11 miles east of the Narrows at the entrance to New York Harbor. It is in the collection district of the port of New York. It is intersected with an abundance of natural channels, extending from the inlet toward the shores across the bay. A considerable portion of these channels are wide enough and deep enough to accommodate the commerce that will be there attracted. Let these channels be straightened and extended; let the narrow bar at the inlet be removed, and this entire bay will be opened to general commerce.

Mr. Speaker, the city of New York is not asking the Federal Government to embark in a speculative enterprise. In its present dangerous and unimproved condition the value of the commerce of Jamaica Bay is not less than $25,000,000 a year. Over its waters during four months of the year 100,000 passengers are daily carried to and from the great summer resort known as "Rockaway Beach." Through its channels are shipped annually large quantities of road and house building material, coal, general supplies, oysters and clams, and large quantities of fertilizers, oils, boneblack, hides, iron, and tin. On its shores and islands are several large shipbuilding plants, with marine railways and machine shops.

Mr. Speaker, I submit the following statement of the commercial statistics of Jamaica Bay, gathered from answers in response to inquiries sent to manufacturers, shippers, dealers, and merchants doing business in the bay:

COMMERCIAL STATISTICS OF JAMAICA BAY.

The following steamboats operated in Jamaica Bay, some as passenger lines and some as excursion boats—are largely patronized by persons of moderate means seeking a day's outing at the seashore at small expense, and whose pleasure is greatly curtailed when the steamboats run aground and remain so for hours at a time, as is the case every summer. The rates of fare charged by the steamboats are generally less than one-half of those charged by the railroad company:

	Capacity.
Sirius	2,150
Taurus	1,650
Cepheus	1,800
Cetus	1,800
Cygnus	1,800
Perseus	1,800
Pergasus	1,800
Grand Republic	3,700
Dreamland	3,300
Richmond	1,000
Sylvester	1,000
Rosedale	1,000
Mattawan	1,000

These steamers carry almost their full capacity every day, from the 30th of May to October 1.

The following towboats and steam lighters work on the bay: Nonpareil, S. E. Bouker, Robert Palmer, Charles Runyon, H. B. Rawson, Golden Rule, Golden Ray, E. Frank Coe, Islander, Fanny McKane, Mabel & Ray, Stanwood, T. A. Briggs, Thomas A. Johnson, Dandy, Edna V. Carew, Atlantic, Guiding Star, S. L'Hommedieu, Golden Age, Golden Rod, McKeever Bros., Rover, Two Brothers, Rhoda Green, Mutual, Alfred J. Murray, Charles Kuper, Columbia, M. Holland.

The oyster and clam industry of Jamaica Bay amounts to $10,000,000

BELLE HARBOR.

Building stone, 1,000 tons, amounting to	2,000
Broken stone, 5,000 tons, amounting to	10,000
Building sand, 1,000 tons, amounting to	2,000
Coal, 500 tons, amounting to	2,000
Ice, 200 tons, amounting to	800
Brick, 250 tons, amounting to	2,500
Lime, 200 tons, amounting to	1,600
Cement, 150 tons, amounting to	1,800
Lumber, 1,000 tons, amounting to	20,000
	42,700

ROCKAWAY PARK.

Broken stone, 3,000 tons, amounting to	6,000
Building stone, 2,000 tons, amounting to	4,000
Coal, 3,800 tons, amounting to	15,200
Ice, 300 tons, amounting to	1,200
Brick, 750 tons, amounting to	7,500
Lime, 300 tons, amounting to	2,400
Cement, 100 tons, amounting to	1,200
Lumber, 250 tons, amounting to	5,000
	42,500

ROCKAWAY BEACH.

Coal, 20,000 tons, amounting to	$80,000
Broken stone, 6,000 tons, amounting to	12,000
Building sand, 1,500 tons, amounting to	3,000
Brick, 2,000 tons, amounting to	20,000
Lime, 1,500 tons, amounting to	12,000
Cement, 500 tons, amounting to	6,000
Lumber, 5,000 tons, amounting to	100,000
Ice, 5,000 tons, amounting to	20,000
	253,000

ARVERNE, EDGEMERE, AND FAR ROCKAWAY.

Broken stone, 5,000 tons, amounting to	10,000
Building sand, 500 tons, amounting to	1,000
Brick, 2,000 tons, amounting to	20,000
Lime, 100 tons, amounting to	800
Cement, 100 tons, amounting to	1,200
Lumber, 2,000 tons, amounting to	40,000
Ice, 1,000 tons, amounting to	4,000
	77,000

INWOOD AND HOOK CREEK.

Building stone, 1,000 tons, amounting to	2,000
Broken stone, 5,000 tons, amounting to	10,000
Building sand, 100 tons, amounting to	2,000
Coal, 500 tons, amounting to	2,000
Ice, 200 tons, amounting to	800
Brick, 250 tons, amounting to	2,500
Lime, 200 tons, amounting to	1,600
Cement, 150 tons, amounting to	1,800
Lumber, 1,000 tons, amounting to	20,000
	42,700

BARREN ISLAND.

There is shipped from Barren Island per year:

Fertilizer, 1,000,000 tons, amounting to	4,000,000
Grease, 25,000 tons, amounting to	750,000
Oils, 50,000 tons, amounting to	2,500,000
Bone black, 5,000 tons, amounting to	300,000
Hides, 500 tons, amounting to	25,000
Iron, 1,500 tons, amounting to	18,000
Tin, 500 tons, amounting to	12,000
	7,605,000

In addition there is received at Barren Island the following:

Ice, 1,000 tons, amounting to	4,000
Timber, 1,500 tons, amounting to	30,000
Brick, 1,000 tons, amounting to	10,000
Lime, 500 tons, amounting to	4,000
Cement, 500 tons, amounting to	6,000
Coal, 1,500 tons, amounting to	60,000
	114,000

MILL CREEK.

There is received on Mill Creek 4,000 tons of ore, amounting to	1,000,000
There is shipped from Mill Creek 3,800 tons of solder, tin, and lead, amounting to	1,250,000
	2,250,000

CANARSIE.

[Quotation from the Annual Report of the Chief of Engineers for 1904, Appendix E, p. 1027.]

Oysters and clams, 450,000 tons, amounting to	2,000,000

Lumber, coal, ice, and brick also make up a large part of the commerce. The amount was not reported.

SHEEPSHEAD BAY.

The letter from the Secretary of War to the House of Representatives of the Fifty-eighth Congress, second session, Document No. 427, on page 7, shows the following:

Brick, 25,000 tons, amounting to	$250,000
Lumber, 15,000 tons, amounting to	300,000
Coal and fuel, 10,000 tons, amounting to	40,000
Ice, 20,000 tons, amounting to	80,000
Stone, 30,000 tons, amounting to	120,000
	790,000
Total	23,216,900

Mr. Speaker, I have tried in my remarks here to-day to convey some adequate idea of the importance and urgency of this plan for the improvement of Jamaica Bay, in which the great city of New York is so deeply and vitally interested and is taking so active a part. I am aware that there will be no general river and harbor bill passed by Congress at the present session. I am aware that Congress is averse to taking up new projects at the present session. I nevertheless hope that the importance and urgency of the bill now before you for consideration, which provides for a preliminary survey by the War Department with a view to opening Coney Island channel and Jamaica Bay to general commerce, may result in its passage here to-day.

CANE RIVER, LOUISIANA.

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. Speaker, in the absence of Mr. RANSDELL of Louisiana, who asked me to take charge of this bill, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill H. R. 7083.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 7083) to repeal section 5, chapter 1482, act of March 3, 1905.

Be it enacted, etc., That section 5 of chapter 1482, act of March 3, 1905, being "An act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes," said section 5 reading, "SEC. 5. That Cane River, in Natchitoches Parish, La., is hereby declared to be not a navigable water of the United States within the meaning of the laws enacted by Congress for the preservation and protection of such waters," be, and the same is hereby, repealed: Provided, That this repeal shall not be held to furnish any ground for any claim against the United States by reason of construction of bridges, or preparation for the construction thereof, across said stream, or arising from any action taken in reliance upon the said section 5 above referred to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a second simply to have an explanation of this bill. I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. WATKINS. I will state to the gentleman that at the last session of Congress there was a clause put in the river and harbor bill condemning the Cane River, Natchitoches Parish, as being nonnavigable. Since that time the engineer in charge, Captain Hoffman, has made a report to the River and Harbor Committee that it was a navigable stream, and not being satisfied with his report, the River and Harbor Committee obtained the services of three United States engineers and under the instruction and direction of General Mackenzie they were sent down and made a unanimous report that it was a navigable stream. The committee is unanimous in declaring now it is navigable. No appropriation is asked for it.

Mr. MANN. What led the Committee on Rivers and Harbors at the last session of Congress to declare this was not a navigable stream?

Mr. WATKINS. They stated in their report the Member of Congress at that time, Mr. Brazeale, had made a statement to them which they supposed was correct, and no doubt Mr. Brazeale thought, on account of very strong recommendations that he had from planters on that river to have it closed, because they wanted permanent bridges built, that it was a nonnavigable stream, and it was on that recommendation they passed the act.

Mr. MANN. Have there been any permanent bridges built across it?

Mr. WATKINS. There have not; but there is an ordinance providing that if at this session of Congress the stream is not declared navigable there will be bridges built across it, and on account of that the committee have taken the precaution to add that if any expense has been incurred or will be incurred on the part of the Government this act does not become operative.

Mr. MANN. It seems to me very great negligence on the part of somebody. One year we declare a river is not navigable, and the next year we declare it is navigable. Now, the committee that has jurisdiction of the subject did not have its attention called to the question at all——

Mr. WATKINS. They have deliberated for six months, and on account of their investigation they——

Mr. MANN. In fact, they did not make any investigation before.

Mr. WATKINS. Perhaps not; but they have now.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I would like to state that the engineer in charge also recommended at the last session of Congress that the stream was nonnavigable, and it was largely upon the recommendation of the War Department that the Committee on Rivers and Hrbors took the steps it did.

Mr. WATKINS. I will state in that connection, however, that since that time he has stated, on personal inspection and after examination, that he finds he made an error in his first recommendation.

Mr. MANN. Is not the purpose of this now, after having this river declared nonnavigable, to have it declared navigable in order to get an appropriation for its improvement?

Mr. WATKINS. It is not; and the Committee on Rivers have ascertained upon examination that on account of the width and depth of the channel it will be impracticable to have appropriations made for the purpose of improving the navigation. But if it is allowed to remain in the condition in which it is, that it is, in fact, a navigable stream.

Mr. MANN. Is this declaration that it was nonnavigable put in the general act?

Mr. WATKINS. Yes, sir; in section known as section 5 of that act. It was put among other smaller streams declared to be navigable, and for which appropriations were made; and this was the only instance I have ever known in which a stream was declared nonnavigable on which steamboats have been running during every season for the last fifty years.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to oppose the bill, but I wish to say in this connection that the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce is the committee that, under the rules of the House, heretofore, at least, has had jurisdiction over these streams. We passed recently a general dam bill in the House, which passed the Senate a few days ago, was signed by the Speaker of the House yesterday, and I suppose it is now on its way to the President. That bill was agreed upon both by the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and by the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, the latter committee presenting it to the House with the idea that hereafter the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce would relinquish its jurisdiction over these streams, both as to dams and also probably as to the navigability of these streams, and turn that jurisdiction over to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. WATKINS. Certainly.

Mr. MANN. I will yield to you.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I simply want to say, in answer to the suggestion, that possibly the Committee on Rivers and Harbors has been a little derelict in its duties with reference to this matter; that I hardly think that is correct, because the committee took every step that was possible to take, and the methods usually taken by committees, to advise itself with reference to whether or not this stream should be declared nonnavigable. The Member of Congress from that district came before our committee and urged the proposition very strongly, and brought petitions setting out that the stream was nonnavigable. The bill, as was customary, and as I think is customary with the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, was referred to the War Department for report. It sent in a report based upon the report of the local engineer, stating that the stream was nonnavigable. Under the circumstances the committee had nothing else to do but to declare it nonnavigable. It has since been found that the local engineer erred in making his report. These are the facts in reference to the action by the committee. The committee tried to get all the information possible and took the natural steps, the steps that are usually taken, in order to secure information with reference to a matter of this kind, and the error was based upon the misleading report of the War Department, and that was probably based upon the report of the local engineer, who afterwards appeared not to have had any personal knowledge of the matter, but took the representation of those who were probably interested in having the stream declared nonnavigable. The committee was fully justified in taking the action it did, and can not justly be held responsible for any error that may have been made.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill as amended.

The question was taken; and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

RAILROAD RIGHTS OF WAY THROUGH PUBLIC LAND.

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the following Senate bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 3743) to confirm the right of way of railroads now constructed and in operation in the Territories of Oklahoma and Arizona.

Be it enacted, etc., That where, under the act of Congress approved March 3, 1875, entitled "An act granting to railroads the right of way through the public lands of the United States," or under special acts of Congress, or under the laws of the Territories of Oklahoma and Arizona, railroads have been constructed and are now in operation in Oklahoma or Arizona which may pass through any of the lands heretofore reserved for said Territories, such lands shall be disposed of subject to such railroad right or easement, but only to the extent of the right of way conferred by the said act of March 3, 1875, for such railroad purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

No second being demanded, in the opinion of the Chair two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

CONDEMNED CANNON FOR STATUE OF GEN. HENRY LEAVENWORTH.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the following House joint resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

House joint resolution (H. J. Res. 43) authorizing the Secretary of War to furnish condemned cannon for a life-size statue of Gen. Henry Leavenworth, at Leavenworth, Kans.

Resolved, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to deliver to the Gen. Henry Leavenworth Monument Committee, of Leavenworth, Kans., if the same can be done without detriment to the public service, such condemned bronze cannon as he may deem proper, not to exceed 5,000 pounds in weight, to be used in the erection of a life-size statue to the memory of the late Gen. Henry Leavenworth, at Leavenworth, Kans.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

No second being demanded, in the opinion of the Chair two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended, and the joint resolution was passed.

BRIDGE ACROSS YAZOO RIVER, MISSISSIPPI.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 11030) to authorize the counties of Yazoo and Holmes to construct a bridge across Yazoo River, Mississippi.

Be it enacted, etc., That the counties of Yazoo and Holmes, two of the counties of the State of Mississippi, duly created and organized under and by virtue of the laws of the said State, are hereby authorized and empowered to erect, construct, and maintain a bridge, by and through its proper officers, over the Yazoo River, in section 34, township 15, range 3 west, in said counties, State of Mississippi: Provided, That the plans and location of the said bridge are approved by the Secretary of War before the construction of the bridge is commenced. Said bridge shall be constructed to provide for the passage of wagons and vehicles of all kinds, for the transit of animals, and for foot passengers, under such rules and regulations as may be laid down by the proper officers of said counties under the laws of the said State of Mississippi.

SEC. 2. That the bridge shall be a lawful structure, and shall be known and recognized as a post route, and shall enjoy the rights and privileges of other post-roads of the United States, and no charge shall be made for the transmission over the same of the mails, troops, and munitions of war of the United States. Equal privileges in the use of said bridge shall be granted to all telegraph and telephone companies, and the United States shall have the right of way across said bridge and its approaches for postal, telegraph, and telephone purposes; and any changes in the said bridge which the Secretary of War may require in the interest of navigation shall be made by the person or corporation owning or operating the same at their own expense.

SEC. 3. That this act shall be null and void if actual construction of said bridge herein authorized shall not be commenced in two years and completed within three years from the date of approval hereof.

SEC. 4. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

No second being demanded, in the opinion of the Chair two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

BUREAU OF INSULAR AFFAIRS.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass, with the amendment recommended by the committee, the bill I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 4109) to increase the efficiency of the Bureau of Insular Affairs of the War Department.

Be it enacted, etc., That the Chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs of the War Department shall hereafter be appointed by the President for the period of four years, unless sooner relieved, with the advice and consent of the Senate, and while holding that office he shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of a brigadier-general.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I demand a second, in order to know more about this bill.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. HULL. This is a very simple bill, which passed the Senate in the earlier days of the session. The Committee on Military Affairs unanimously recommend its passage, with the amendment providing for four years of detail instead of a permanent office. All the other bureaus of the War Department are presided over by brigadier-generals, or those higher in office. The Bureau of Insular Affairs was small when it commenced. The law provided that the officer presiding over that Bureau should be a colonel—that is, while so serving he should have the rank, pay, and allowances of a colonel. This Bureau has grown largely. The gentleman who started in at the head of the Bureau, under the direction of the two Secretaries of War, Root and Taft, has so discharged his duties that they are anxious that this increase of rank, pay, and allowance should be given him. As the bill passed the Senate, it made the officer in charge a brigadier-general. As recommended by the House committee, it simply gives him the rank, pay, and allowance of a brigadier-general while so serving, and only provides for detail for four years at a time.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Is that the bill that is before the House for consideration now?

Mr. HULL. Yes.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Not that he is given the rank of a brigadier-general, but simply the pay and allowances?

Mr. HULL. No; he is given the rank, pay, and allowance while so serving; just the same, let me say to the gentleman, as with the officer in charge of public buildings and grounds. He may be a first lieutenant, but when the President designates him to serve as Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds, he has the rank, pay, and allowances of a colonel while he serves, and to give an Army officer the pay and allowances without the rank would not be in accordance with the absolute universal custom in these matters.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. What is the pay and allowance of a brigadier-general? How much will the Chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs receive under the operations of this bill?

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, he now receives $4,500 a year salary as colonel, because he has had twenty years' service. If this is passed, he will receive $5,500 a year.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. That is, the present incumbent, you mean?

Mr. HULL. I mean any man who is detailed under the present law.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. But suppose a lieutenant is detailed as Chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs; he would not get the longevity pay.

Mr. HULL. Oh, no; but he would get $4,500 a year under the present law, or $5,500 if this bill shall pass.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Perhaps I do not understand the importance or the necessity of putting in the hands of regular Army officers a service that is purely and entirely administrative. I do not understand why a clerk in the War Department should be called a "lieutenant" or a chief clerk should be called a "first lieutenant," because he does not perform any military duty. The Chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs does not perform military duty in any sense. His duties are altogether civil, ministerial, administrative, and I do not really understand why it should be necessary to designate the Chief of that Bureau as a brigadier-general. Now, I understand that one may be appointed from civil life into that service.

Mr. HULL. If so, his salary would not be affected by any law now on the statute books. A civilian could not be appointed unless there is a change of law.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. But if one from civil life should be appointed Chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs, he then would receive the pay, rank, and allowances of a brigadier-general.

Mr. HULL. The bill now provides for a detail of an Army officer. You would have to change the whole law.

Now, I want to say to my friend that if he would take the position that this ought not to be a bureau in the War Department, but that it should be put under some civil branch of the Government, I might not controvert his position. But he does not propose that. The law now provides for the detail of an Army officer, and that while so serving he shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of a colonel.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. What rank has a janitor or a messenger in the Army?

Mr. HULL. None at all. Neither has any civilian clerk.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Is he not a private or a corporal?

Mr. HULL. No, sir; neither is the chief clerk nor any other member of the clerical force in the Army. They belong to the civil service.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. What I am objecting to is to putting a service that is altogether civil under the control of officers of the Regular Army.

Mr. HULL. Let me suggest to the gentleman that the Chief of the Record and Pension Division originally had no military service to perform. He is a man who dealt entirely with clerical duties, and continued to do so until we changed the law and gave him the position practically of adjutant-general. Yet that man has so simplified the business in his department of the War Department and has so commended himself to Congress by his efficiency and the large saving he has made that he has been three times promoted by act of Congress, each time by an almost unanimous vote.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I understand that.

Mr. HULL. When we acquired these foreign possessions, they were by law put under the War Department. An accomplished officer of the Department, Capt. Clarence Edwards, was detailed in charge of the bureau. He has devoted his time to the work. He has by law been made a colonel while so acting, and now it is proposed by the Department simply to give him the same rank that every other bureau of the War Department has, except the one that Congress has made of a higher rank than brigadier-general.

On the suggestion of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WEEKS] I will just add to that statement that the minute any man is detailed to have charge of a bureau in the Navy Department he becomes a rear-admiral by the detail, as chief of the bureau.

Mr. GAINES of West Virginia. I was about to ask the gentleman from Iowa who holds this position and who would at this time be the beneficiary, as it were, of this increase?

Mr. HULL. Col. Clarence Edwards.

Mr. GAINES of West Virginia. The gentleman had already stated that it was Col. Clarence Edwards. I only asked the question in order that I might say that, in my opinion, knowing him well, and knowing something of the service that he has rendered, no recognition could be too high for Col. Clarence Edwards.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Then why not make him a major-general?

Mr. HULL. Because this bill is putting him on an equality with the rest. To do as suggested is not fair to others. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Mr. Speaker, I simply desire to say that I have no disposition to disparage the ability of Col. Clarence Edwards or to depreciate the character of his services. We are not legislating for Colonel Edwards or any other individual; we are making a law that is to stand for all time, and whoever in the future may be detailed and designated or appointed Chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs will go there with the rank and pay and allowance of a brigadier-general. It may be a lieutenant in the Regular Army. I supposed that this service was purely and entirely ministerial, and that the service being under civil control it should properly carry with it a civil rather than a military designation. We have, I understand, a shortage, we have an insufficient number of officers in the Regular Army. I understand that we have fewer officers than our organization requires, and yet we are detailing Regular Army officers to perform ministerial duties, and by act of Congress promoting them out of the order that the promotion would naturally and logically come. I have no doubt there are young men, commissioned officers in the Army, that would be glad to be detailed as Chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs even with the rank and pay they receive in the line.

I know that several years ago the Committee on Insular Affairs reported a bill giving the Chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs the rank and pay of a colonel. Col. Clarence Edwards, it is said, is an efficient man, and I am sure he is. There are hundreds and hundreds of efficient men in the Regular Army. They are all cultured, skilled gentlemen in the line of their profession. There is no better class of men on the face of the earth, but occasionally one may be fortunate enough to be detailed to a position of this kind, and he is promoted way beyond what his deserts may be, not individually, but in relation to his fellow-officers.

What I am objecting to is giving to this office the position and rank and pay of brigadier-general. If the bill were confined to the present incumbent and limited to him, I would not say a word, because I know he is an efficient man and a capable officer. The administration of that bureau is not peculiarly difficult. I do not believe it requires any greater ability than the administration of many other bureaus. I do not believe it is good policy now to exalt that particular bureau so much as this resolution proposes to do. It will only be two or three years probably until the incumbent is given the rank and pay of a major-general, and probably he will be put on the retired list as a lieutenant-general if he is especially accommodating and affable to Members of Congress.

Mr. HULL. How does this exalt that bureau of the War Department when it puts it on an equality with all the other bureaus?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. They may be all too high. Are they all brigadier-generals?

Mr. HULL. All brigadier-generals and all the chiefs of the bureaus of the Navy Department are rear-admirals.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I think there ought to be a reorganization of the civil administration of the War Department.

Mr. HULL. But first let us make them all equal.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. I think the Department had better be reorganized and put on a civil basis.

Mr. LACEY. I would like to ask the gentleman from Indiana a question. Is it not true that Colonel Edwards has to deal with Spaniards, and is it not true than anything lower than the brigadier-general does not go with the Spaniard at all; he looks upon rank as being absolutely essential?

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Well, that is the only good argument I have heard in favor of the bill, and I make no further opposition to it. [Laughter.]

Mr. HULL. I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GROSVENOR].

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, if there is no opposition I do not want to say a word, but the bill ought to pass. I wish to say that our party of American tourists which went to the Philippine Islands to study the conditions there came in contact with Colonel Edwards, and we learned all about that which he had gone through in the organization and perfection of the bureau of the War Department relating to these islands. I want to testify, and in that I would be supported by every gentleman who was with us were he present, that on every hand was evidence of the high qualifications and fitness of Colonel Edwards for the place.

Now, there is nothing involved in this question except whether we will take the important bureau of the War Department and put it on an equality with the other bureaus of the same Department of similar importance, and in doing so fortunately we confer this slight advance on a worthy and most capable officer. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WATSON). The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Iowa to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that two-thirds had voted in favor thereof.

Mr. RUCKER. Mr. Speaker, I demand a division.

The House proceeded to divide; when Mr. RUCKER withdrew his demand for a division.

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

CHECKING OF BAGGAGE BY COMMON CARRIERS.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 20017) to regulate the checking of baggage by common carriers, with an amendment thereto, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That any common carrier engaged in interstate commerce shall hereafter check baggage presented to it to its destination where the presentation of such baggage is accompanied by the presentation of transportation in any form to the destination of said baggage; that said common carrier shall, upon the presentation of such transportation, check said baggage to its destination, whether over connecting common carriers or whether over common carriers which may be reached by transfer or otherwise in any city or town where the route of one common carrier terminates and another common carrier begins, provided the cost of such transfer from depot to depot is tendered. Any refusal of any common carrier to check baggage as herein provided shall be deemed a misdemeanor, and shall be punishable, upon conviction, by a fine of not more than $1,000 for each infraction thereof.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded. [After a pause.] No second being demanded, the question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and two-thirds voting in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

QUALIFICATIONS OF JURORS IN PORTO RICO.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 5512) defining the qualifications of jurors for service in the United States district courts in Porto Rico, which I send to the Clerk's desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the qualifications of jurors as fixed by the local laws of Porto Rico shall not apply to jurors selected to serve in the district court of the United States for Porto Rico, but that the qualifications required of jurors in said court shall be that each shall be of the age of 21 years and not over 65 years, a resident of Porto Rico for not less than one year, and having a sufficient knowledge of the English language to enable him to duly serve as a juror: Provided, That the exemption from jury duty allowed by the local law shall be respected by the court when insisted upon by veniremen: And provided further, That the juries for said court shall always be selected and drawn in accordance with the laws of Congress regulating the same in the United States courts.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded? [After a pause.] No second being demanded, the question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and, two-thirds voting in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

CAPT. EJNAR MIKKELSEN.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 4954) authorizing Capt. Ejnar Mikkelsen to act as master of an American vessel, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Capt. Ejnar Mikkelsen is hereby authorized to act as master of any vessel of the United States purchased by him while on an expedition in her to the Beaufort Sea, any act of Congress to the contrary notwithstanding.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded? [After a pause.] No second being demanded, the question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and, two-thirds voting in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

FORTIFICATIONS ON DEER ISLAND, IN BOSTON HARBOR.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusettts. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 6333) authorizing the Secretary of War to acquire for fortification purposes certain tracts of land on Deer Island, in Boston Harbor, Massachusetts, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to acquire, for fortification purposes, from the city of Boston, two certain tracts of land on Deer Island, in Boston Harbor, Massachusetts, containing together about 100 acres above mean low-water mark, the said tracts being marked on the ground by certain monuments, and to pay for the same not to exceed the sum of $250,000 from funds heretofore appropriated for purchase of sites for fortifications and seacoast defenses: Provided, That the city of Boston shall build a masonry wall, which shall be approved by the Secretary of War, at least 10 feet in height above the ground level, extending across said Deer Island, to separate the portion of said island hereby authorized to be acquired from the remaining portion of said island; and shall remove the piggery from the portion of the island hereby authorized to be acquired, and discontinue interments in the cemetery within said area, and shall permit the United States Government to connect its water mains with the city's water supply mains on said island, and furnish water to the Government at current rates: Provided further, That before making payment for the said land the Secretary of War may require the city of Boston to execute such valid agreement or obligation as he may consider necessary to insure full compliance with all the requirements of the foregoing proviso.

SEC. 2. That the United States shall be liable for any damage to the property of the city of Boston or to the works of the North Metropolitan Sewerage System located on said island that may be caused by the firing of guns in time of peace from batteries erected within the area that may be acquired as aforesaid; and the Secretary of War is authorized and directed, whenever any such damage occurs, to ascertain and determine what would be a reasonable and proper compensation to pay the city of Boston and shall certify the same to Congress for consideration.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. KEIFER. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection. [After a pause.] The Chair hears none; and the gentleman from Massachusetts is entitled to twenty minutes, and the gentleman from Ohio to twenty minutes.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, this is an act which authorizes the Secretary of War to acquire certain land on Deer Island in the harbor of the city of Boston for fortification purposes. It does not carry any appropriation, but authorizes him to expend $250,000 from funds heretofore appropriated for fortification purposes for the acquisition of this land. There are about 100 acres of land upon which the United States Government proposes to erect a barracks. It is a proposition which has for a long time received the attention of the War Department, which regards it as absolutely essential for the completion of the fortifications of that harbor. The only question before them was how to acquire the land. They could have taken it by condemnation, but they chose rather to negotiate for its purchase, and the mayor of the city of Boston for the last month or so has been negotiating with the Secretary of War, and after much difficulty they have arrived at an agreement, which you are asked by this bill to consummate. The agreement is to pay $250,000. The city of Boston is to build a 10-foot wall across the island and remove a piggery, and these works will cost the city $75,000, so that it will receive net $175,000. In the opinion of the Secretary of War, the land, if taken by right of eminent domain, would cost the United States Government a half million of dollars, and it is regarded by the Secretary as a great saving of money to acquire it by purchase.

The only provision in the bill to which anyone can possibly object is that in section 2, which provides damages for the city of Boston caused by the firing of heavy guns in times of peace. The Secretary and the city authorities in Boston have arrived at an agreement upon that proposition, and it is this: That if damages do result they are to be ascertained and determined by the Secretary of War and certified to Congress for its consideration. The city of Boston will have no representation upon that board which will fix those damages. The adjudication will be solely in the hands of the War Department, and that adjudication will be certified to Congress, and Congress then may or may not appropriate the money. So it would seem that the interests of the United States Government are protected to the fullest extent.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. The bill fixes a liability on the part of the Government for damages, does it not?

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Yes.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. And whatever method may be now provided for their ascertainment might later on be changed. The gentleman of course would expect the War Department to ascertain the damages according to established methods, and the Government would pay whatever damages may be inflicted upon private property in the use of this ground?

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. No.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Why not?

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. The Government will not pay any damages to private property under the terms of the bill. The only ones entitled to collect damages are the municipality of Boston and the North Metropolitan Sewerage System, which, I may explain, is a system the expenses of which are paid for partly by the State of Massachusetts and partly by the city of Boston.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Now, what property, aside from the sewerage system, does the municipality own in that vicinity that might possibly be damaged?

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. There is a penal institution for men and one for women, and there is a pumping station for the sewerage system, and there is a large sewage pipe which runs under the bay and on the grounds on Deer Island, which is discharged ultimately into the sea at some distance.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. There are a hundred acres of land it is proposed to acquire, are there?

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Yes.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. And the price is $2,500 an acre?

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Yes.

Mr. KEIFER. I would like to ask the gentleman whether any committee of either House of Congress has ever made any formal report on that; and if so, where it can be found?

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Yes; the Committee on Appropriations, of which the gentleman is a member, considered the matter for the last two days, and made a report which would have been unanimous except for the gentleman from Ohio, who was the only opponent.

Mr. KEIFER. That is all.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. I reserve the balance of my time, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. KEIFER. Now, Mr. Speaker, I think the question I put to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. SULLIVAN] and which the House ought now to understand as his answer thereto, shows that without this measure ever having been before a subcommittee of either House of Congress, without any subcommittee or committee of either House of Congress ever taking any testimony or making any formal investigation, this matter is brought here. It is true that on statements somewhat like those we have heard here this afternoon a majority, at least, of the Committee on Appropriations authorized the gentleman to do what he has just done, to wit, to move to suspend the rules and pass this bill. And it comes here in that way. Now, let us see what it is. It is an extraordinary measure in the fact that there is no evidence anywhere going to show the absolute necessity for this grant for the purposes of fortification at this time.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEIFER. Wait until I get through with my statement and then you can ask all the questions you please. The distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts says in advocacy of the passage of this measure that it makes no appropriation at all. This statement is misleading. The bill undertakes to provide for the application of $250,000 of a former appropriation to buy about 100 acres of land somewhere on Deer Island, in the harbor of Boston. That $250,000 is required immediately. That sum might be better used, according to the statement made this morning by the Secretary of War, to buy and improve a fortification site at Cape Henry, at the mouth of the Chesapeake Bay, which he told us, what all agree is true, was the key to all of this region of our country in case we should have a war. If we had this $250,000 to buy a site and place modern guns there, it would close the Chesapeake Bay and the Potomac, protect Norfolk, Boston, Annapolis, and the city of Washington from any war fleet without expending a single other dollar at any of the places on that bay or river. So that argument does not go.

But the gentleman says that the Government has retained in this measure the right to determine the amount of damage to the city of Boston and the North Metropolitan Sewerage System. First, Mr. Speaker, that is clearly not true, as shown by the reading of the bill. Clearly the gentleman heard the Secretary of War say this morning, in effect, in answer to my question, saying that that was not the bill at all. That was a method we might try, of course, but we bind ourselves by the opening paragraph of section 2 of this bill to pay all damages to the city of Boston and the North Metropolitan Sewer System that may accrue at any time. We pledge ourselves to pay all damages for the occupation of the land we propose to buy; we say that the Secretary of War may make a report to Congress as to the damages, but, as the Secretary of War said this morning, that was not an exclusive method by which damages might be ascertained, and hence that part of the gentleman's statement is absolutely without foundation. Now, we have a law, Mr. Speaker, a long time on the statute books, which requires the Secretary of War and other public officers, in the acquisition of public lands for public purposes, to acquire a perfect title, free from conditions, so that the Government may use it as it pleases. I will cite it later. Here, all through, we are getting an imperfect title. We get, according to section 1 of the bill, a sort of title or right of occupancy for fortification only, and then there are a number of reservations, especially as to the rights of the sewerage system on the same land. We have got a piggery there; what that means I do not know.

Mr. SOUTHARD. Will the gentleman yield for a question——

Mr. KEIFER. We have got also there, so far as I know, a cemetery, which we may have to maintain——

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman yield to his colleague?

Mr. KEIFER. Yes, sir.

Mr. SOUTHARD. Is there any estimate as to the amount of damages that will likely accrue?

Mr. KEIFER. There is no estimate, and we are to determine it by whatever may happen from now to doomsday. We are pledging ourselves to an eternal payment of damages to the city of Boston and to the North Metropolitan Sewerage System of that city, or the State, for I understand the State of Massachusetts has some indirect interest in that system.

We dredge and probably take care of the harbor of Boston rightfully, I suppose. Boston has land there that it could give us for fortifications, but it wants us to buy it at an enormous price—with a piggery and a cemetery on it—and with rights reserved in it, and then we are required as a condition to pay damages for evermore in case we use it for the special and only purpose for which we acquire it. Gentlemen act as though that was not here in the bill, but it is here. Such legislation will overthrow a policy as to acquiring land for Government purposes well settled long ago and a wise one. Let me read the first part of section 2 of the bill:

> That the United States shall be liable for any damage to the property of the city of Boston or to the works of the North Metropolitan Sewerage System located on said island.

Now, I understand that something over a million dollars has been expended in one sort of public improvement or another on the island outside of this great valuable sewerage system. And if it should turn out that when we commence firing guns on that island these buildings were found unsafe, were injured or rendered unfit for the use for which the city now uses them, and the sewerage system was destroyed, or something of that kind, we might have to pay over a million of dollars damage, or, at least, we would have to repudiate if we did not do that. It is said that if we acquired this land by condemnation, we might have to pay twice as much as $250,000. We have no assurance that that is true. But that might be a very cheap way out of this matter if we must acquire this land now at all. We do not know in the first place whether we want the particular tract of about 100 acres in that locality.

There is no emergency requiring that, and we do not want it as bad as we want other things in other places. Now, Mr. Chairman, it is said that in the acquisition by condemnation proceedings we would still be liable for damages. That was the theory that the gentleman advanced this morning, but the Secretary of War, after being examined—and he is a good lawyer, and was a good judge—reached the conclusion that I now state to you, to wit, that when we condemn property for a particular use of one individual, we, in the condemnation proceedings, acquire a title that is good against any claim of damages to the adjacent property of the one from whom we condemn it. That is good law in every part of this country, as far as I know, and the Secretary of War is with me as to that.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. May I inquire, in order to complete the Secretary's statement, in justice you ought to say that he said in his opinion that the jury in condemnation proceedings in fixing the amount of damages would have a right to take into consideration the damages likely to arise by reason of the acquirement.

Mr. KEIFER. That would be the result everywhere.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. So that the damages would be paid for in any event.

Mr. KEIFER. Mr. Speaker, I have some matters that I desire to look at, and if I have any time left, I want to reserve it.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN].

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, lest the impression might prevail that no testimony was taken in connection with this investigation, I wish to say that the Secretary of War was before the committee and was questioned as to the advisability of making this purchase and paying the price which is provided in the bill. He said that undoubtedly the price proposed to be paid was a reasonable one, and that the conditions under which the purchase proposed to be made were reasonable; that if he undertook under the authority which he now has to secure this land by condemnation a jury which might be impaneled to hear the case would have the right to determine what the possible damages might be for all time to come, and that it would in all likelihood capitalize that supposed damage and fix the price accordingly, and that he believed further that there was no possibility, to say nothing of the probability, of any damage of any consequence occurring for which the United States would be liable if the land was purchased under the terms of the bill now under consideration.

The only thing that is owned by the city of Boston on the island is the prison, and this prison is located some distance from the proposed fortification. We have the word of the Secretary of War to the effect that if the guns were fired, as would be the case if the fortification was constructed, it would be altogether likely that no damage would occur except perhaps the breaking of glass in some of the windows of the prison, and that that damage would be inconsequential.

Mr. KEIFER. There are other buildings there besides that.

Mr. MADDEN. There are no buildings, as I understand it, except the prison. Is that true?

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. The prison buildings and the pumping station controlling the sewage.

Mr. MADDEN. Now, as to the question of damaging the sewer.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Right there, if I may interject. The Secretary of War stated that the guns fired would be subcaliber guns, and that in no likelihood there would be any damage, and if there were any damage it would be inconsequential.

Mr. MADDEN. As to the question of the sewer, there can be no possible damage inflicted upon the sewer, unless by some chance some of the glass should be broken in the windows in the pumping station which controls the movement of the sewage; and this would amount to nothing of importance. There is no private property anywhere within 4 miles of the proposed fortification. I think I am right in that.

Mr. CRUMPACKER. Will the gentleman explain about that piggery?

Mr. MADDEN. The city of Boston has a lot of offal, accumulated on account of the prison, and they have a number of pigs to clean this up, as I understand it; and they are to be moved to some other quarter of the island. There is no danger of any damage being done to the hogs, as I believe.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I submit that every member of the Committee on Appropriations, except the gentleman from Ohio, believed, and believes now, that the proposition contained in the bill called up by the gentleman from Massachusetts is reasonable.

Mr. HAMILTON. I desire to submit an inquiry. Are those hogs slaughtered for human consumption?

Mr. MADDEN. We did not go into the question of whether they were slaughtered or inspected. [Laughter.] That there is any damage at all there, damage that should be paid for by the United States, I do not believe, and that the Government is assuming any responsibility for the payment of any damage nobody believes.

Mr. SOUTHARD. Does the War Department ask for this land, or does the community want to sell it?

Mr. MADDEN. The War Department is asking for the land, as I understand it, and they have been in negotiation with the authorities of the city of Boston, and have reached an agreement which is embodied in the bill now under consideration; and the only condition upon which this bill proposes that the Federal Government assume responsibility for damages is that such damage as may occur because of the firing of cannon shall be estimated by the Secretary of War and submitted to the Congress for its consideration. There is no liability assumed which is obligatory upon the Government, but the matter is left entirely to Congress to adjudicate. [Cries of "Vote!"]

Mr. KEIFER. Is the gentleman from Massachusetts through?

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. KEIFER. I do not care to take any further time than is necessary to have the House fairly understand this question. If we are to enter upon a policy, for the first time in the history of this country, of acquiring property with defective title, having upon it cemeteries and piggeries and prisons and other things, and we are expected to occupy it and control it thus encumbered, then we are in a situation to do it at the present time. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] says that everybody on the committee was in favor of this peculiar thing but myself. He pays me a rather high compliment; but I understand that there were others who had the same ideas as the Secretary of War and I had as to the character of the bill. I expressed my objection to the bill when it was being considered in the committee. Only a few weeks or months ago the mayor of the city of Boston was offering this land, as I understand from the gentleman from Massachusetts, to the United States for $75,000 with certain strings to it not half as bad as those attached by the present bill. If we desire to acquire this property before it becomes necessary for fortification purposes, we ought to consider first whether we do not need other fortification sites more than we do this one.

Mr. HAMILTON. What new necessity has arisen for further fortifications at Boston?

Mr. KEIFER. I think the present necessity grows out of the desire of the city of Boston to get rid of the piggery at $250,000. [Laughter.] I think that is the size of it, all around. This negotiation has been going on for a good long time, and it has been urged and pressed, and yet we have not had full time for the consideration of this bill. No report has been made showing the necessity for the about 100 acres on this island at the high price asked for it—$2,500 an acre—with limitations on the title and conditions as to its use as expressed in the bill.

Mr. KELIHER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman kindly state whether or not the proposition was first made by the city of Boston to the War Department, or was the initiative in the matter taken by the War Department?

Mr. KEIFER. I am not able to say from whom the initiative came, but I have gathered from the talk that we have had that the mayor of Boston has been here several times negotiating about this matter, and at one time he was willing to take $75,000 for the tract; but he said to the Secretary of War a little later that the common council of the city of Boston would not agree to that, but that they would take $250,000, with these restrictions in the matter, and these provisions for paying damages in case any resulted. Gentlemen try to minimize the clause here that requires us to pay damages, and say they think there would be little or no damage. Why are they so anxious to put the requirement to pay damages in the bill if none were likely to result from the use of the land by the Government? My belief, from what I have been able to gather, is that the damages would be vastly larger than any jury would award for the value of this land in a condemnation proceeding. It might turn out that they would say that this sewerage system could not operate there alongside of fortifications; that it was so nearly adjacent to the fortifications and guns that the buildings might be shattered and their public works damaged, and that therefore they must be moved away, in which case the Government would be called on to pay for the whole system. So as to other property on the island. I do not believe in getting the piggery, and then having a pig in a poke besides.

Mr. KELIHER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KEIFER. Certainly.

Mr. KELIHER. Is it not a fact that the engineers of the War Department have carefully considered this scheme for years and declared that it is absolutely necessary to obtain this ground to make the fortifications in Boston Harbor what they should be, and is it not a further fact that the National Government has sought this location from the city government of Boston and that the city has displayed no particular desire to dispose of it to the National Government?

Mr. KEIFER. I am not able to answer that question, except that there has been no evidence brought before the committee so far as I know that anything of the kind has happened. I do understand from the Secretary of War that it is a place where they can put guns, and they might want to fire them, but gentlemen from Massachusetts have just said they think they never will have occasion to fire them, and hence there will be no damage. If that is so, we do not want the land.

Mr. KELIHER. If the gentleman from Ohio wants to be fair and wants to discuss this proposition upon its merits, he must admit——

Mr. KEIFER. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman can not put a question that will indicate that he wants to be fair, I do not yield to him.

Mr. KELIHER. All right.

Mr. GILBERT of Kentucky. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. KEIFER. Certainly.

Mr. GILBERT of Kentucky. I want to know whether the Secretary of War approves of the bill and the manner in which this proposition is presented.

Mr. KEIFER. I do not so understand him. He called attention to section 355 of the Revised Statutes, which requires a perfect title to lands that are acquired, and that is the section to which I desire to call special attention. With all the talk we have had, I think we have had no testimony that would enable us to determine the several important questions. One is the present necessity of this site for the fortification, over other places, and the other is whether this is a proper way to acquire a site on the island, if we want to acquire one now, in Boston Harbor. I need not say that Boston ought to be grateful for the protection of her harbor. We are keeping it in order so that vessels can sail in and out of there, and I have no objection to that; but she ought not to strike a hard bargain with us for a piece of land, and then ask the Government to be forever bound to pay damages if it is used for the purposes it is acquired for.

I wish to read from section 355 of the Revised Statutes, edition of 1878, as I now have it before me:

> No public money shall be expended upon any site or land purchased by the United States for the purposes of erecting thereon any armory, arsenal, fort, fortification, navy-yard, custom-house, light-house, or other public building, of any kind whatever, until the written opinion of the Attorney-General shall be had in favor of the validity of the title, nor until the consent of the legislature of the State in which the land or site may be, to such purchase, has been given.

All these wise provisions of our law are to be overridden by the passage of this bill.

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. KEIFER. Yes.

Mr. HEPBURN. Have you not ignored entirely the idea that this is classic ground—Boston classic ground—that it gives us control of Pull-and-be-damned Point, and of Sherley Gut channel, together with the Piggery and the mouths of their sewers? [Laughter.]

Mr. KEIFER. I am very much obliged to the gentleman from Iowa, and I have no doubt that what he suggests by the question is exactly the truth. [Laughter.]

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I will yield two minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. KELIHER].

Mr. KELIHER. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Ohio insists that he is in doubt as to what the attitude of the Secretary of War is on this proposition. I desire to say for his information that the two Senators from my State, Senator LODGE and Senator CRANE, with my colleague Mr. WEEKS and my colleague Mr. SULLIVAN, and the mayor of the city of Boston, discussed this matter with the Secretary of War. Its terms were gone over very carefully and the Secretary left us with the understanding that he was to submit this proposition, which he has, and it comes before the House as agreed upon by the city of Boston and War Department. If the gentleman from Ohio wants to be fair, and if he is doubtful as to the attitude of the Secretary of War, let me tell him that these facts which I state are absolutely correct.

Mr. KEIFER. I had an interview with the Secretary of War this morning, and so I am a little later in obtaining information than the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I could not interrupt the gentleman from Ohio each time he made a misstatement, because that would destroy the continuity of his remarks, and as he would not then be able to proceed for more than thirty seconds at one time I could not be cruel enough to do it. [Laughter.] Therefore I waited until he concluded his speech. It is very evident to me, and it must be to the House, that the cemetery and the piggery and the sewer have weighed so heavily on the gentleman's mind that his imagination has become superheated and he is not capable of seeing clearly the merits of this bill. I would not say that the gentleman has deliberately misstated the facts, nor would I criticise him personally, but only in his official capacity as a member of the committee.

The committee met yesterday, and there was some doubt in the minds of the committee on the proposition. At their request it was postponed until to-day, and I called up the Secretary of War on the telephone and asked him if he would not send a letter to the committee stating his views. He replied that he would prefer to come here. He came on his own suggestion and not mine, to advocate this bill before the committee. There is no man who heard his statement this morning, unless he is oblique in his mental processes, who could be capable of stating that the Secretary of War does not advocate this bill and has not advocated it from the beginning. It is not a proposition of the city of Boston, it is a proposition which proceeded from the Secretary of War in the beginning. He has fathered it, he stands sponsor for it. Boston is not making a good bargain with the United States; it is giving the land for half its value. So far as I am concerned, I do not think it is a good bargain for the city of Boston. Boston will be obliged in the near future to seek other land for her penal institutions, which will cost much more than she will get from the United States on this proposition.

The Secretary of War called a meeting and the Massachusetts delegation was there, the mayor of Boston and a representative of the Merchants Association of Boston were also there; the whole matter was discussed, and as a result Senator LODGE took the bill in charge in the other branch of Congress.

I wish to say here that the Secretary of War drew this bill himself and gave it to Senator LODGE, and that bill has passed the Senate.

Mr. KEIFER. Let me ask the gentleman, did not the Secretary of War this morning say to the committee that the bill was not drawn in the language that he supposed it was?

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. He did not.

Mr. KEIFER. He said the language relating to the damages was entirely different from what he supposed, and that he thought that the Government had a right to determine the damages.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. I will say, so that there may be no misunderstanding, that I made a suggestion to the Secretary of War on the question of damages for the purpose of elevating the claims from the status of claims which would go to the Committee on Claims, so as to empower the Appropriations Committee to pass upon them, and he accepted that suggestion and put it in the bill, but that does not change the fact that he drew the bill and is sponsor for it and fathered it before the Appropriations Committee this morning.

Mr. LILLEY of Connecticut. Do I understand the city of Boston owns this land?

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Yes.

Mr. LILLEY of Connecticut. And they are asking the Government to pay $25,000 an acre for it?

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Two thousand five hundred dollars an acre.

Mr. LILLEY of Connecticut. There are 100 acres of it?

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Yes.

Mr. LILLEY of Connecticut. Making $250,000.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars; $2,500 an acre, and 100 acres. That may be a high price for land in the district of the gentleman from Ohio, but it is not in Boston.

Mr. LILLEY of Connecticut. What evidence have we that it is a fair price?

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. The Secretary of War admitted to the committee this morning that if it went to a jury under condemnation proceedings the Government would pay $500,000 instead of $250,000.

Mr. LILLEY of Connecticut. But the Government does not buy the land; it simply gets the privilege of fortifying it.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. That is not so; the Government gets absolutely a clear title to the land and erects fortifications upon it.

Mr. LILLEY of Connecticut. And can do with it what it chooses to?

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Absolutely, in the way of fortification or anything else.

Mr. LILLEY of Connecticut. But does it have a warranty deed free of all incumbrances, and can it do anything with it it chooses?

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. I have not seen the deed which will be drawn, but I assume that the Government will get a fee simple absolutely. I have not heard it stated otherwise. This bill of course had to be drawn so as to state the purpose for which the land is required, but I have not any doubt that the Government could use it for any purpose.

Mr. LILLEY of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me a high price for land on Deer Island.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. That is only because the gentleman is not familiar with Deer Island.

Mr. LILLEY of Connecticut. I am familiar with it.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Then I trust the gentleman will never become more familiar with it than he is now, because there are only penal institutions there; but it is valuable land and it is worth half a million dollars, and the Secretary of War has admitted that.

Mr. LILLEY of Connecticut. Have we any evidence of that fact?

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Does the gentleman doubt the statement of the Secretary of War?

Mr. LILLEY of Connecticut. I doubt whether he knows anything about the value of land on Deer Island.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. The Secretary of War has had it under consideration for six months.

Mr. LILLEY of Connecticut. That would not make him a competent judge of the value of land on Deer Island.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Does the gentleman suppose for a moment that the Secretary of War has not sent men to inquire the value of this land? If he does suppose that, he impeaches the good judgment of the Secretary, which I am not willing to do.

Mr. LILLEY of Connecticut. Is there any evidence to show that he has done that? Does he say that he has done it?

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. I am not willing to assume that the Secretary of War was foolish enough to act without receiving evidence on that proposition, and it would certainly have been an unwise thing for him to do if he did act without information on the subject.

Mr. LILLEY of Connecticut. If any Member of this House ever saw Deer Island I am sure he would think that it was an expensive piece of land at $250 an acre.

Mr. SULLIVAN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield one minute to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WEEKS].

Mr. WEEKS. Mr. Speaker, I submit that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER] has done neither himself nor this question justice in the discussion which he has given it, and incidentally I want to state that the geography of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HEPBURN] is faulty in that Pull-and-be-Damned Creek is in New Hampshire and not in Massachusetts. I was present during the negotiations for the purchase of this property. The Secretary of War has been negotiating with the city of Boston for nearly a year for its purchase. There were two real estate experts present who informed me and informed the Secretary of War and the mayor of the city of Boston that this property was easily worth $500,000. Negotiations were completed on the basis of $250,000, the only additional consideration being that if any damages are done to city property in time of peace, which means the penal institution buildings which are located there, those damages shall be adjudicated and paid for, the Secretary of War having the controlling voice in that adjudication. There is not any question about the necessity for this purchase. It is carrying out the great scheme for the defense of the port of Boston, and the purchase of this particular piece of land is necessary to complete the line of defenses. A clear title will be given to the Government when the purchase is completed.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. KEIFER) there were—ayes 180, noes 31.

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

ELECTION AND TERM OF OFFICE OF MEMBERS OF CONGRESS.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass House joint resolution (H. J. Res. 120) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States providing for the election and term of office of Members of Congress, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

House joint resolution No. 120.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), That the following amendment to the Constitution of the United States be proposed to the several States, the same to be valid and to become a part of said Constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of said States, namely:

"ARTICLE XVI.

"SECTION 1. Senators.—Senators shall be elected by the people of the several States for a term of six years. A plurality of the votes cast for candidates for Senators shall elect, and the qualifications to vote for Senators shall be the same as for Members of the House of Representatives. When vacancies happen by resignation or otherwise in the representation of any State in the Senate, the same shall be filled for the unexpired term thereof, in the same manner as is herein provided for the election of Senators: Provided, That the executive thereof shall make temporary appointment until the next general or special election held in accordance with the statutes or constitution of such State: And provided further, That this amendment shall not be construed as vacating the office of any Senator who has been elected prior to its adoption.

"SEC. 2. Members of the House of Representatives.—The term of office of Members of the House of Representatives shall be four years."

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. RUCKER. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. Speaker. I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and the gentleman from Nebraska is entitled to twenty minutes and the gentleman from Missouri to twenty minutes.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. Speaker, this joint resolution provides for two things. To begin with, I might say that it is a provision for an amendment to the Constitution of the United States. The first section provides for an amendment providing for the election of Senators by direct vote of the people. The second section provides that the term of office of Members of the House of Representatives shall be four years. In the limited time at my disposal, I do not care to go into a full discussion of those two propositions. The first one has been discussed upon many occasions throughout the country and upon the floor of this House. No less than four or five times an amendment providing for the election of Senators by a direct vote of the people has been passed here by a practically unanimous vote.

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman a question. What demand has there been of the committee or in the House or anywhere for an increase in the length of service of the term of a Member of Congress from two to four years?

Mr. NORRIS. I propose to devote most of my time to that.

Mr. LACEY. We have voted on the other proposition, but this is a new matter. I have voted several times for the first proposition. This is a new matter that I understand no one has asked for.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. Speaker, I believe the suggestion made by the gentleman from Iowa is perhaps a good one. I presume upon that first proposition we have all discussed, and heard it discussed to our hearts content. I was about to say, when the gentleman from Iowa interrupted me, that the first time that proposition passed the House was on January 16, 1893; the second time May 11, 1898; the third time April 13, 1900, and the fourth time February 13, 1902.

I was about to remark, inasmuch as it has been passed so often and discussed so fully and so fully understood, I would pass on to the other proposition.

Mr. MURDOCK. Just a minute before you go into that. Do you realize it is not possible under the suspension of the rules for this House to vote for one of those propositions and against the other?

Mr. NORRIS. I do. I think we all realize that.

Mr. RUCKER. I want to ask the gentleman in that connection, if he will yield to me to offer an amendment to strike out section 2.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. Speaker, on the question of amendment I want to say I would be very glad indeed if this could come before the House, so that there might be a full and complete discussion with the power to amend in any way that might be deemed wise and judicious by the House, but you will all realize that under the circumstances it is impossible on account of other things that the House has been considering and will consider for us to give to this the full discussion that I believe myself it ought to have. Now, it comes to us from the committee of which I am a member and of which the gentleman who is now interrupting me is also a member——

Mr. RUCKER. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. NORRIS. But it is not within my power, as I understand it, to permit or agree to an amendment to be offered here, as much as I would be glad to do so. There are some amendments that I would like——

Mr. RUCKER. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. NORRIS. I will yield to the gentleman in a minute. There are some amendments I would like to favor myself. This bill as it comes now is not as it was originally introduced by me before that committee, but it is the judgment of the committee, after full consideration, that it should be put in this form, and it comes before us in this form. Now I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. RUCKER. I want to ask the gentleman from Nebraska if he would yield for me to ask unanimous consent for a separate vote on the second proposition?

Mr. NORRIS. Well, if we can have an agreement for a full discussion on both of these propositions, I would be very glad to do that; but it must follow that we can not have the same discussion here that we had in the committee, where we have had it up for consideration a great many times. I want to discuss the merits of the proposition if the gentleman will let me alone, and get to this proposition of the election of the Members of Congress for four years.

Inasmuch as the proposition to elect Senators by direct vote has so often received favorable consideration in the House and has been so fully discussed both on the floor of the House and throughout the country, and the sentiment of the House as well as of the people in general having become crystalized on the subject and almost unanimous in favor of its adoption, I do not deem it necessary to go into a lengthy discussion of this branch of the subject or to recapitulate the reasons which moved the committee to recommend its adoption.

The second proposition contained in the proposed amendment to the Constitution, extending the term of office of Members of the House of Representatives from two years to four years, is practically a new question, although the injustice both to the Member and to the country in general on account of this short term has long been recognized.

Under the existing provision Members of the House of Representatives are elected in November, but do not actually begin their official duties until a year from the following December. Their term of office has practically half expired before they take the oath. Before they are fairly started in the work for which they were elected they are plunged into a campaign for renomination. Their attention and energy are diverted from their official duties in the capital city to the local political contests in their respective districts. This is an injustice to the Member and is likewise unfair to the people he represents.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. NORRIS. I will, if the gentleman will make it short.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Could not Congress obviate all these injustices by passing a law changing the time of the meeting of Congress rather than fritter its time away trying to amend the Constitution?

Mr. NORRIS. No reason in the world, except, I will say, I do not believe they could. They could pass a law making a different time for the convening of Congress. That they could do under the present Constitution, but they have never been able to agree upon a time to do that on account of the term of office expiring, as it does, on the 4th of March. No one has ever been able to name a different date for the convening of Congress to which sufficient valid objection can not be offered to prevent its adoption.

A longer service than two years is required in the House before a Member can expect to have any voice in the actual solving of national legislative problems or in the shaping of the Government's policies. It is a recognized and well-known fact that the Congressional district which changes its Representative every two years has practically no voice in national legislation.

In a country like ours, controlled by political parties, each standing for different and sometimes antagonistic policies of government, it is but just and fair that sufficient time be given for the party successful before the people to properly inaugurate and fairly test the policies and principles for which that party stood in the election. Two years is not sufficient time for any party to inaugurate the policies so approved by the people and give them sufficient trial to fairly and justly test their effectiveness and wisdom. Under our present system a party placed in power as a result of a campaign and election on some plain issue will often find itself dethroned and cast out before it has had time to enact into law, much less given a fair trial, the principles and policies approved by the people at the election.

It is a recognized truth that the necessary expense connected with a membership in the House of Representatives is frequently prohibitive to many able Members whose wise counsel our country can not well afford to lose. Many of the most able and efficient Members are continually withdrawing from the work, for the sole reason that they can not afford, for pecuniary reasons, to remain. It has become quite generally understood that a poor man can not afford to retain a seat in the House of Representatives. The greatest item of expense connected with the retention of a membership in the House is the cost connected with the nominating primaries and conventions, the campaigns, and the elections. The extension of the term of office to four years would materially lessen such expenses, and would thereby enable men in moderate circumstances to live within the limits of the salary.

The national election at which Members of the House of Representatives are chosen always has a depressing and unhealthy effect upon all branches of business, and there is always during such campaigns and elections an uncertainty in business affairs throughout the country and a hesitancy on the part of business men in the extension and enlargement of their investments. This condition can but result in detriment and injury to the prosperity of the entire country.

Mr. YOUNG. Is not the logic of that whole thing we should adopt a monarchy and not have any election?

Mr. NORRIS. No; I think if the gentleman wants to be reasonable and wants to be just, and I think he wants to be, he would not make any such assertion or intimate that any such thing follows. An uncertainty in the future policy of our Government, to be determined at an election, always retards our commercial advancement and affects the prosperity of our entire people. The possibility also that a policy once adopted may be cast aside within two years is likewise detrimental to our advancement. The proposed change would tend to give stability and take away the uncertainty now existing.

There is a sentiment throughout the entire country that we have too many elections. The people are not free from the unpleasantness of one political controversy before they are thrust into another. They have become tired of and disgusted with the continual political quarrel and strife.

The people are tired of this continuous drama, and as a result are inclined to give no attention to the primaries and the conventions—the very foundation of our political system—the forum wherein the country's interests can best be guarded and protected.

With an election every two years the political grafter who thrives on partisan strife and on the nervous uncertainty controlling candidates for office is able to live from one election to another by the boodle secured at his unholy business. The adoption of the proposed amendment would render it less possible for this creature to ply his trade.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Are there any of those fellows out in Nebraska?

Mr. NORRIS. There are a good many of that quality out on the Pacific coast, I will say to the gentleman from Washington. I have heard of some of them even living in his State, where such things might be found to exist. Now, Mr. Speaker, when it is said that this is a matter that is a new proposition, I will say I do not believe it has been brought before us in an official way, but it is something that has come face to face with every Member of this House. It is apparent to all of us that we can not perform our duty in justice to ourselves or to our people and have an election every two years as well as we could if the term was four years. It is perfectly proper, as we all know, that men who come here should be able to give their entire attention to public affairs, but as a practical truth, if they stay here, it is necessary for them to pay more or less attention—generally more—to political matters that go on at home in which they have a personal interest, while their attention ought to be attracted and given to public questions in which the entire people have an interest. Now, I know, Mr. Speaker, it was said the framers of the Constitution intended that this House should be close to the people. I agree with that sentiment and the adoption of this amendment will not take away that idea from the Constitution.

Men of great ability and honor often refuse to become candidates for the House of Representatives because they know that before they become familiar with the duties of their office they will be compelled to again enter the arena of political controversy to retain it. It was no doubt the idea of the framers of our Constitution that Members of the House of Representatives should be close to the people and be required to frequently give an account of their stewardship. A change in the term of office from two to four years would be no violation of this principle, but would better enable Members to devote their energies and abilities to the actual service of the country and their constituents. Four years is not so long that there could be any valid objection from that source. The history of many of our States where the terms of office have been lengthened from two years to four years gives ample proof for this assertion. It is likewise true that the experience of States where some of the officials are elected for a term of four years and some for a term of but two years shows that the officials serving a four-year term are more efficient than officials serving a two-year term.

There is nothing sacred, that I know of, in the two-year term. If a short term makes Congress better, then we ought to change the tenure to one year. Then we would enjoy the distinction of going out of office before we got in, or at least within a month or two of it.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time. How much time have I remaining?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has seven minutes remaining.

Mr. GILBERT of Kentucky. Will the gentleman consent to a question? You seem to assume in your argument that there are a multitude of good reasons why a United States Senator should be elected by a popular vote. I have been reading a good many things in my life, but I have never seen any sensible, tangible reason why that fundamental principle of the Government should be departed from. Now, will you please state to the House some good reason why that fundamental doctrine should be abandoned?

Mr. NORRIS. I would say to the gentleman that at the beginning I was diverted from the course of giving some reasons by the gentleman from Iowa, who suggested that this part of the question relating to Representatives was a new one, and I went on to that argument. There are a great many reasons, and if I had the time I could give them to the gentleman from now until to-morrow morning, and the gentleman has heard them and he has read them. But he has made up his mind so fully, I presume, against my theory of the election of Senators by the people that he would vote against it anyway, no matter what I might say, and I desire to reserve some of my time to answer what may be offered on the other side.

Mr. GILBERT of Kentucky. Could you suggest a single amendment to the Federal Constitution that would disturb and disrupt the Government in as many different particulars as that amendment would?

Mr. NORRIS. I think I could give a good many, but I will not do it now, because I have not the time.

Mr. ADAMSON rose.

Mr. NORRIS. I will yield to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. ADAMSON].

Mr. ADAMSON. I wish to call to your attention and ask you if States that desired popular expression as to the choice of Senators can not arrange to do so at the primary elections in the parties in the State?

Mr. NORRIS. I think so, and a great many of them have, and that is another great argument why the people want this changed.

Mr. MURDOCK. Do not the people of Nebraska to-day, and not the legislature, elect the Senators?

Mr. NORRIS. Practically; and if that be true, why not make it true in reality instead of just a fiction?

Mr. HINSHAW. The people of Nebraska come as near electing their Senators by direct vote as it is possible under the existing system, perhaps, but the people of Nebraska choose their Senators in a State convention made up of delegates from counties, elected in conventions usually and not in primaries, and it is to get nearer to the sentiment of the people themselves, so that they can express themselves in primaries and directly at the polls that this idea ought to prevail, as far as the election of Senators is concerned.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. RUCKER] is recognized.

Mr. RUCKER. Mr. Speaker, the first section of the pending resolution has been frequently before this House for action. A similar resolution has passed the House at least twice, in the last four terms, by a very large vote each time. I, like the gentleman from Nebraska, shall waste no time in discussing the proposition of electing Senators by popular vote, because I take it this House is substantially unanimously in favor of it. This resolution is almost identical with the one that passed a year or two ago, introduced by my colleague from Missouri [Mr. LLOYD]. Indeed this resolution, excepting the second section, is a substantial copy of the Lloyd resolution. But this resolution, Mr. Speaker, involves and injects into the controversy a new issue, one that has never before been presented to Congress, so far as I am advised; one, too, I want to say, that has back of it no public sentiment or demand whatever. No person, no legislature, no public opinion, no constituents are asking us to prolong our term of office. On the contrary, our constituents are sometimes glad of the opportunity afforded them by the Constitution, as it now stands, to shorten our political and official careers. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the House be permitted to vote on the two propositions separately.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri asks unanimous consent for a division of the question. Is there objection?

Mr. CAPRON and Mr. GILBERT of Kentucky. I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Rhode Island and the gentleman from Kentucky object.

Mr. RUCKER. I am very sorry gentlemen do object, because it embarrasses gentlemen who heartily favor one proposition, but who do not favor the other. It seems to me there can be no good reason why gentlemen would not willingly declare themselves and express their judgment upon these questions separately.

Mr. GILBERT of Kentucky. The objection, so far as I am concerned, is based upon the fact that I am opposed to both amendments.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Why not let them be voted upon separately?

Mr. GILBERT of Kentucky. By putting them together increases the chance of defeating them.

Mr. RUCKER. No one desires to defeat the proposition to elect Senators by popular vote, and therefore I wish the gentleman from Kentucky would withdraw his objection; and I wish the gentleman from Rhode Island would withdraw his objection also.

Mr. Speaker, I regret very much that my good friend from Rhode Island objects to this request for unanimous consent; and I hope that he will yet withdraw the objection.

Mr. CAPRON. I would like to do any possible thing that would accommodate my friend personally; but here is a matter of constitutional objections, and I can not yield, because I think they ought to go together.

Mr. RUCKER. Give the House a chance to vote its judgment upon these important measures.

Mr. CAPRON. I believe there are other things that we ought to be doing that are of more importance than to consider these two propositions.

Mr. RUCKER. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman insists, we shall be obliged to vote on the two questions together, and this will imperil, if not defeat, the will of the House in the proposition contained in section 1.

Mr. Speaker, I now yield five minutes to my colleague from Texas [Mr. GILLESPIE].

Mr. GILLESPIE. Mr. Speaker, I do not care to occupy the time of the House for five minutes. I merely want to state my position on this bill. I favor the first proposition of this bill—that is, to elect United States Senators by a direct vote of the people. There is a demand for that from all over this country. The legislatures of most of the States have adopted resolutions calling for this amendment to the Constitution of the United States. It is true many of these States, through their party primaries, are accomplishing this result in that way; but I would put it beyond the power of any political manipulators to deprive the people of any State of the right to vote directly for their United States Senators.

Mr. Speaker, there is no demand whatever for the second proposition in this bill—that is, that the terms of office of Members of Congress should be increased to four years. I am opposed to it, even if I thought there was a demand for it. I would say to the people of the United States, "Hold the whip hand over your Member of Congress. If he indicates by his service in Congress he is a worthy man, you can keep him there; but if the least suspicion crops out that you are deceived in your Member of Congress, keep it in your power to make a change at the first and shortest time possible." That is all I care to say, Mr. Speaker, on the proposition. [Loud applause.]

Mr. RUCKER. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to my colleague from Missouri [Mr. DE ARMOND].

Mr. DE ARMOND. Mr. Speaker, on numerous occasions since I have been a Member of this House, and every time I have had the opportunity, I have voted for an amendment to the Constitution providing for the election of United States Senators by the people. I would gladly vote for such an amendment now. We are not privileged, however, to vote for that amendment or against that amendment alone, but coupled with it is a new and strange proposition, to amend the Constitution so as to double the length of the term of Members of the House of Representatives. I am opposed to that, and when it is necessary for me to vote against both propositions in order to vote against one, or to vote for both propositions in order to vote for one, I have no hesitancy in the world in saying that I shall cast my vote against the double proposition as it stands; not because I am opposed to the election of Senators by the people, but, although I am in favor of that, I shall vote against this pending proposition, because to vote "aye" is to vote for a proposition to amend the Constitution so as to double the length of the term of Representatives in Congress. How anyone who is a student of current events, still less how anyone who has experience or observation in this House, can be of the opinion that it is advantageous to the country, that it is for the welfare of the people, to elect Representatives for four years instead of two years is beyond my comprehension.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DE ARMOND. Yes; for a question.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I have so high a regard for the gentleman from Missouri——

Mr. DE ARMOND. That is all right. Just put the question.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. That I want to ask him for his opinion on this proposition: The President is elected for four years——

Mr. DE ARMOND. Oh, I do not care anything about that.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. And I want to ask the gentleman——

Mr. DE ARMOND. I will have to go on——

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Why he should not support the policy of the Administration by electing Members of the House for the same period as the term of the President? The question is new, and I should like to have the judgment of the gentleman from Missouri upon it.

Mr. DE ARMOND. It is very evident that the gentleman from Kansas has not thought of it before, even to the extent of being able to ask his question in an ordinarily intelligent way. The fact that the President is elected for four years would afford just as good an argument, or a better argument, for electing Senators for four years only. What argument it affords for electing Members of the House of Representatives for four years is beyond my comprehension, and I have thought about it. Therefore I conclude that it is not yet within the grasp of the gentleman from Kansas, who confesses he has not thought about it. Now, the object of representative government is to keep the government, as nearly as possible, as long as possible, and as effectually as possible, within the control of the people. Can that better be done by electing the House of Representatives for four years than by electing it for two years? Of course, every individual Member, viewing the matter simply from his own individual standpoint, would prefer an election for four years to an election for two, or an election for ten years rather than an election for four years; but the real question that we ought to consider here, the one that I am trying to consider, and the one upon which I propose to vote, is not what may be best or most agreeable to us individually or collectively, but what is best and safest and soundest and most American for our fellow-citizens, the people.

I think it is in the nature of a shame to couple these two propositions. The one proposition has received, time and time again, the approval of the House of Representatives, but it gets no consideration from the Senate, and now it is to be weighted down by the other proposition. It can not be done in good judgment if it is done in good faith. The great Nebraskan, once upon a time, when he was a Member of this House, brought this proposition before it, not hampered and curbed and loaded with an odious proposition, but single and alone, so that the man who was in favor of bringing the Government closer to the people, by permitting them directly to elect their own members of the United States Senate, might express himself in that way by voting "aye" upon the proposition. But now we have it, through the wisdom of the committee, through the perverseness of the committee, through the honesty but bad judgment of the committee, or through deceptive purposes and hypocrisy—I know not how or why—we have the propositions so coupled that the one is to be weighted and loaded down by the other. I regret that the condition is what it is, but such being the condition, I have no trouble at all for myself in voting "no." Give us the one proposition, plain and distinct, and it will go through this House by an overwhelming majority, practically without opposition. Give us the other single and distinct, and I believe it will be voted down overwhelmingly. Coupled together, I for one am against the hybrid. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. RUCKER. Mr. Speaker, how much time have I remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. CAMPBELL of Ohio). The gentleman has six minutes.

Mr. RUCKER. I yield to my colleague from Missouri [Mr. TYNDALL].

Mr. TYNDALL. Mr. Speaker, since the American ship of state landed at Plymouth Rock conditions have changed somewhat, but we have been getting along nicely under the present system of representation in this country. I admit, Mr. Speaker, as we all know and admit, that as conditions change in this country it is necessary for us to change our tactics and our customs. I have been petitioned, as doubtless other Members of the House have been petitioned, by the people of this country relative to the first section of this resolution, and that is to elect Senators by direct vote of the people. And, Mr. Speaker, I am in favor of that. I believe that the American Congress should stand as close to the American people as possible.

I say, Mr. Speaker, we have been petitioned to vote for and inaugurate the first section of this resolution. I for one have not been petitioned. I have heard nothing from my constituents relative to the second section of the resolution. My people have not petitioned me to inaugurate myself into another term as a Representative, and I do not know as other gentlemen have been requested to do so by their constituents. I believe, Mr. Speaker, that the people ought to have a lick at us every two years. I do not hesitate to say that it might be best to have a lick at us a little oftener than that. [Laughter and applause.] I will say that it might not be a bad thing if this Congress were cleaned out oftener than it really is. [Laughter and applause.] We ought to stand as near the people as possible.

What is it that Congressmen want? Do they desire to be farther removed from the people? Are Congressmen afraid to stand in reach of the people? I say turn the voters loose, let them at us as often as possible. If we are no good, if we are not worthy of our hire, if we can not give an account of our stewardship, then let us disembark from the ship of state and take to our little red boat and float off up that river whose waters are at all times said to be savory. Now, Mr. Speaker, it might be a good thing for Congressmen to be elected for four years, but of that I have serious doubts, and we should at least wait till the people say something about it and demand a chance to vote on a constitutional amendment to that effect. One thing I do know, and that is, the people would like to get in a little closer touch with the Senate of the United States. The Senate is too far away. It is out of striking distance of the people. I say now and here let the people at the Senate. Turn the voter loose. The common people are at this day demanding through petitions and memorials to let them get nearer instead of farther from the American Congress, and I say open the door and let them in. Mr. Speaker, this is a Government of the people, by the people, and for the people. This House has twice passed a resolution to submit to the people a right to vote on a constitutional amendment by which Senators could be elected by the direct vote of the people, and as many times the Senate has turned it down. You see, the Senate is now too far from the common people. It stands off there at a safe distance and in easy circumstances, and almost bids defiance, turns a deaf ear to petitions and memorials of the voter. We must not forget that ours is a democratic form of government and that we are servants of the people and not the people our servants. I think I see some danger in our hedging in a little too much on the rights of the people and centering too much power in the three great branches of our Government and the different Departments thereof. Sir, I don't think the immortal Lincoln ever uttered a truer or more important expression than that "he was not afraid to trust the American people." That expression should be engraven in our hands. Mr. Speaker, I will therefore not take any steps to increase the term of a Congressman to four years till I hear from home.

Mr. RUCKER. Mr. Speaker, I now yield two minutes to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, it is almost an idle waste of time, for I have no time to discuss the real questions involved. We have lived one hundred and three years under this Constitution since there was any amendment to it, except the three that were made in the storm and stress of war; two of those amendments are practically ignored in the country, and the other partially so, showing that these heated changes of the Constitution make no impression on the people of the country.

Nobody is asking for this extension of the election of Congressmen. No State, or very few States, will consent to the change of the Constitution in regard to the election of Senators. Nobody believes that during the lifetime of any man now living the Senate of the United States will ever be brought to the condition of agreeing to that constitutional amendment, and then the necessary number of States, through the instrumentality of our machinery, which is provided, will not vote for such a change in the Constitution. That is not all of it. This matter of selection of United States Senators was one of the compromises of the Constitution. There would not likely have been any Constitution; there would not have probably been any Government such as this without it, and for over one hundred years we have stood by it. Now, the proposition is to get the House of Representatives, under a debate of twenty minutes on a side, to undo that fundamental proposition in our governmental structure and go off into an experiment of that character. I do not believe, Mr. Speaker, that it is a wise expenditure of effort. [Applause.]

Mr. RUCKER. Mr. Speaker, I now yield a minute and a half to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WILLIAM W. KITCHIN].

Mr. WILLIAM W. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I merely wish to state that the overwhelming majority of this side of the House would be very glad to favor the first proposition of the resolution, the election of Senators by the people, and it is to be regretted very much that the gentleman saw fit to make his motion in such a manner that we could not vote for that. We have voted for it repeatedly in the past and passed it overwhelmingly. It is in accordance with our national platform declaration. It is unfortunate that united to it is this other proposition to extend the terms of the Members of the House, which it seems will defeat the Senatorial proposition.

I favor the first because it is giving to the people a better control over a branch of the Government. I oppose the second proposition because it is taking from the people a part of the control they now have over their Representatives. The tendency of all governments in developing is to deprive the people of power. We ought to take advantage of every opportunity, we who serve the people, to give back to the people the most direct control over their Government. The gentleman says in his report that this is practically a new proposition—extending the length of term of the Members of the House. I agree with him that it is practically a new proposition, and it is one which the people have not asked us to pass. I believe the people would be and should be jealous of extending our terms. If one serves them properly and they like him they can reelect him. Let the people in the States suggest this amendment if they desire our terms to be extended. [Applause.]

Mr. RUCKER. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. LAMAR].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Florida is recognized for half a minute.

Mr. LAMAR. Mr. Speaker, I am very much in favor of the election of Senators by a direct vote of the people. I would be very much opposed to extending the term of Representatives longer than two years. Unable to vote upon the first without voting for the second proposition, I shall vote against both. In the State of Florida we have practically accomplished the first by a direct nomination of Senators in a primary vote by political parties. [Applause.]

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. COCKRAN.]

Mr. COCKRAN. Mr. Speaker, it is with profound regret that I find myself compelled to dissent, even partially, from a view placed before the House by the distinguished gentleman from Missouri, Judge DE ARMOND. To some extent I sympathize with the position that he has taken. I am very sorry both of these proposals are linked together, although I favor each. The linking of two proposals wholly distinct, each of which is favored by some who oppose the other, furnishes every person who is opposed to one in his heart that he believes to be popular a good excuse for voting against it, while professing ardent desire for its passage, and thus escape from an obvious duty without the necessity of taking a perilous position before his constituency. I do not say this with reference to anybody here, though it might apply possibly to gentlemen in another place.

I believe Senators should be elected by the people. I think such a method of selecting them a natural evolution of our political system. But that proposal is entirely distinct from the one extending the term of a Representative to four years, and in my judgment both should have been submitted separately to this House. Under this procedure the opponents of each suggestion will be united, and the adoption of both is seriously imperiled.

Mr. Speaker, it is to the proposal to extend the term of Representatives in Congress that I desire to address myself. I sympathize most keenly with everyone who wishes to make vigorous the control of the people over their Representatives and over every branch of the Government. It is precisely for that reason that I believe in extending this term. This is the popular branch of our political system. Popular control of the Government can be made effective only by making this House efficient. This House is the one branch of our Government that according to all testimony is steadily declining in power, and its decline is obviously a decrease in the direct influence of the people over legislation. To what must this decline of the House be attributed? To two causes—a defect, a fatal weakness in its structure as established by the Constitution, and almost inconceivable folly in the method of organization established by itself.

Sir, it is no exaggeration to say that the House is organized for disorder and incapacity. Look at it. This vast barnlike Chamber of itself is enough to make impracticable anything like intelligible debate. The distances between Members in different parts of this Hall are such that conversation is seldom regarded as an interruption. In the resulting din and confusion it is impossible to follow, or even understand the proceedings. I sit in a part of the House now where for all that I can hear of the debates I might as well be out of the Chamber. To learn what the House is doing I must leave my seat, and this is forbidden by the rules. To participate in the proceedings of the House I must therefore violate its rules. I can be attentive to my duties only by becoming disorderly in my behavior. Under the rules I am out of order now, for I am speaking from another Member's seat. If I attempted to speak from my own, I would be inaudible in a large part of the Hall.

Surely, sir, it is not extravagant to say that the House seems to have embraced diligently every opportunity of reducing itself to incapacity by keeping itself in disorder. Against the absurdities of its own organization a complete remedy, of course, is always in its own hands. But the gravest cause of its incapacity is in the term of its Members, and this can be remedied only by a constitutional amendment.

The Congress does not convene till the month of December preceding the choice of its successor. From the very moment he takes his oath of office before this desk each Member is plunged into the throes of a struggle for reelection. How can he perform his duties impartially and fearlessly while three-fourths of his attention must be distracted by the exigencies of his own position? You may say that the honest and efficient Member will neglect his personal interests and devote himself exclusively to his representative duties. Well, Mr. Speaker, what duty can be higher than seeing that his district is well represented? [Laughter.] And he must think himself the very best Representative his district could find or else he could not justify himself in coming here.

The House is reduced to this position: In the first—the longer and more important—session every Member is striving for renomination and reelection from the very hour he is sworn in until the adjournment, and in the second session he has either been beaten, in which case his interest in legislation is sensibly reduced, if not wholly extinguished, or else he has been reelected, in which case his sense of security is apt to be too great for efficiency. [Applause and laughter.] His whole service, except under very exceptional conditions, is confined to two sessions. In the first everything tends to make him incapable, and in the second to make him indifferent. [Laughter.] We declare at every stage that the House is declining in influence. Yet we lose no chance to push it farther along the downward slope. To me the wonder is not that the House has declined in consequence, but that any of its consequence survives.

We organize ourselves with rules which are conceived apparently in distrust of our own honesty. Every experience of this House proves that when it is left to the control of its own majority it evolves legislation of the very highest excellence; yet we surrender ourselves to three gentlemen (wiser perhaps than any other three, but not so wise as the whole 400 who compose our membership), and to this narrow minority we intrust the entire control and direction of our proceedings, holding to ourselves at most merely a right to approve or to veto their proposals. And this upon the ground openly stated that if left to ourselves we would perpetrate enormities or follies. All this would be impossible in a House whose Members had such a term of office that they could become acquainted with each other and by knowledge of their different capacities and qualities learn to cooperate effectively for wholesome legislation. Why has the Senate grown at the expense of this House, although the framers of the Constitution intended that we should be the dominant feature of our political system? Because the Senate is a continuous body! Every member holds for six years. They find themselves bound together by a hundred influences growing out of extended association, and however they may differ on other matters they stand always unitedly for the dignity and the power of their Chamber. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. RUCKER. Mr. Speaker, I now renew the request I made a few moments ago, and ask unanimous consent that the House may vote on these two propositions separately.

Mr. CAPRON. And, Mr. Speaker, I renew the objection that I made to that request.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I have had the honor to introduce in several Congresses a joint resolution providing for the submission of a Constitutional amendment for the election of Senators by direct vote of the people. On the first day of this session of Congress I introduced such a resolution. It was an exact copy of the resolution adopted by this House in the Fifty-seventh Congress, and similar to resolutions passed in several other Congresses. The people of Missouri, from which I come, have through the State legislature repeatedly memoralized Congress to pass such a resolution. This demand comes from all our people without regard to party, and the memorial to Congress has been passed, both when the legislature has been Democratic and when it has been Republican. Every political organization, so far as I know, that has made any declaration at all on the subject, has announced itself in favor of the election of Senators by direct vote of the people.

The representatives of all parties have voted for such legislation in this body, and I have no doubt that a vote on that proposition would now hardly receive a dissenting vote. It is unfortunate that a measure so universally indorsed should be coupled with an entirely new proposition which the people have not considered nor decided upon. I very much doubt whether the people would change the length of term of a Member of this House. It appears to me that if the term was not satisfactory there would somewhere have been a demand for legislation. Certainly, whether the people favor the longer term or are opposed to it, this House—and the people, when the matter is submitted to the States—should have the right to vote separately on these propositions.

I greatly regret that no opportunity is given to give expression on each proposition, and that a just and meritorious measure, indorsed by nearly everyone, both in and out of Congress, should be so greatly handicapped or destined to defeat at the inception as this seems to be.

I believe in bringing government as near to the people as possible, and the election of Senators by direct vote would be a long step in that direction.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the joint resolution.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Speaker, is a motion in order to divide this question?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is not.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. NORRIS) there were—ayes 89, noes 86.

So (two-thirds not voting in favor thereof) the motion to suspend the rules and pass the joint resolution was rejected.

AMENDING SECTION 5136, REVISED STATUTES OF THE UNITED STATES.

Mr. PRINCE. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Banking and Currency, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill H. R. 8124 as amended.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 8124) to amend section 5136 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, permitting national banking associations to make loans on farm lands as security, and limiting the amount of such loans.

Be it enacted, etc., That the seventh subdivision of section 5136 of the Revised Statutes of the United States be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"Seventh. To exercise by its board of directors or duly authorized officers or agents, subject to law, all such incidental powers as shall be necessary to carry on the business of banking; by discounting and negotiating promissory notes, drafts, bills of exchange, and other evidences of debt; by receiving deposits; by buying and selling exchange, coin, and bullion; by loaning money on personal security; by loaning money upon notes, bonds, or other evidences of debt, secured by mortgages or other instruments of security on unencumbered farm lands situated in the State, Territory, or District where such association is located, worth, exclusive of buildings, on a conservative market valuation, double the amount of the loan thereon: Provided, That any such loan on farm-lands security shall not be for a longer term than twelve months: Provided, however, That not more than 25 per cent of the total capital and surplus of such association shall at any time be invested in such farm-lands securities: Provided further, That applications for loans upon notes, bonds, or other evidences of debt secured by mortgages or other instruments of security on unencumbered farm lands shall be made in writing and approved in writing by a majority of the board of directors; and by obtaining, issuing, and circulating notes according to the provisions of this title. But no association shall transact any business except such as is incidental and necessarily preliminary to its organization until it has been authorized by the Comptroller of the Currency to commence the business of banking."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is a second demanded?

Mr. GILLESPIE. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. PRINCE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The gentleman from Illinois is entitled to twenty minutes and the gentleman from Texas is entitled to twenty minutes.

Mr. PRINCE. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, this is a bill introduced by Mr. LEWIS, one of the Members from the State of Georgia. The purpose of it is to amend the national banking act of 1864, so as to allow the loan of money on unencumbered farm lands situated in the State, Territory, or District where such association is located, worth, exclusive of buildings, on a conservative market valuation, double the amount of the loan thereon: Provided, That any such loan on farm lands security shall not be for a longer term than twelve months: Provided, however, That not more than 25 per cent of the total capital and surplus of such association shall at any time be invested in such farm lands securities: Provided further, That applications for loans upon notes, bonds, or other evidences of debt secured by mortgages or other instruments of security on unencumbered farm land shall be made in writing and approved in writing by a majority of the board of directors. Those are the amendments suggested in this bill to the present national banking law. The purpose of it is to loan money on farm lands under the provisions as suggested in the bill. The committee that had this matter in charge gave it careful consideration and practically unanimously favored the measure. There is one minority view on the question. The House should know fully how the committee stood upon that question, so that they can intelligently vote for or against the measure. This measure has been carefully considered and recommended by the National Bankers' Association that met here recently in the city of Washington. There seems to be a demand for this class of legislation, both on the part of the country banks and on the part of the farmers who deal with the country banks in different parts of the country. I have heard, as a Member, no objection coming to the Committee on Banking and Currency against this proposed measure. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. YOUNG. Will the gentleman permit a question? There was so much confusion on the floor we could not hear the bill read or the first part of the gentleman's speech. Do I understand that this bill permits national banks to loan 25 per cent of their capital on real-estate security?

Mr. PRINCE. No, sir. I would say this, that not more than 25 per cent of the total capital and surplus of such association shall at any time be invested in such farm-land securities in the State, Territory, or District where such association is located, worth, exclusive of buildings, on a conservative market valuation, double the amount of the loan thereon. Does that answer the gentleman?

Mr. YOUNG. Then it does permit 25 per cent of the capital and surplus to be loaned within the State by a national bank?

Mr. PRINCE. Yes.

Mr. YOUNG. Does the gentleman think that is a good asset to pay depositors in case of a run when it is as large an amount as that?

Mr. PRINCE. I do. Speaking from Illinois, I know of no security under the sun that is better than a loan on Illinois dirt, and I think that can be safely said in all parts of our country to-day where, especially before the loan can be made, application must be made in writing and approved in writing by a majority of the board of directors.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. PRINCE. I do.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Did the gentleman from Illinois or the committee take into account the effect that this measure would have upon commercial paper—that is, upon the business paper of the community where there is no real-estate security to place back of it?

Mr. PRINCE. Yes, sir; in answer to that I will say——

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Would not the effect be that the money of the banks would seek investment in real estate security and be withdrawn from the use of the commercial interests of the community?

Mr. PRINCE. In answer to that, Mr. Speaker, the bill, as originally drawn, had the words "real estate" in it. Gentlemen upon the Committee of Banking and Currency, representing all parts of our country, the commercial interests as well as the agricultural interests of the country, struck out the words "real estate" and limited it to farm lands, meaning thereby that the real estate in the cities could not be used as security for obtaining money from the national banks. They further made the provision that such loan on farm lands security should not be for a longer time that twelve months. So that the opportunity of the money becoming liquid and flowing and getting into circulation would be carried by that provision. Going even further, they made a provision that this application should be made in writing, and the approval of it should be in writing by a majority of the board of directors. It was gone over carefully and thoroughly, and all of the provisions that they thought might in anywise affect the interests were guarded as best they could, as shown by the committee's amended bill.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PRINCE. I will yield to my colleague.

Mr. MADDEN. Does the gentleman believe that, if a stringency in the money market should arise, demanding the banks to make available all of the assets of the banks to meet emergencies, mortgages on farm lands or other lands could be immediately turned into cash?

Mr. PRINCE. In answer to my colleague from Illinois, I would say we considered that, and it is my opinion, speaking from what I heard in the committee, that there is no better security, no security that could be more promptly liquidated, than good farm land, payable within twelve months.

Mr. HINSHAW. Will the gentleman permit me a question?

Mr. PRINCE. Yes, sir.

Mr. HINSHAW. There is no provision in this bill, is there, for the restriction of the amount of the loan, as compared with the value of the real estate?

Mr. PRINCE. Yes. I reserve the balance of my time, Mr. Speaker, if there are no further questions.

Mr. GILLESPIE. Mr. Speaker, I yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL].

Mr. HILL of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I would be very sorry indeed to see this bill come in here at any time. I am far more sorry to esee it come in at the present time. This country has just suffered a loss of $300,000,000 at San Francisco which must be met by the abstraction of commercial funds from its resources within the next year or two. This bill means now making it possible to withdraw from commercial use about $350,000,000 more in the next twelve months. Not that I say that it will be done, but the law authorizes such a withdrawal from funds which now, by law, are absolutely devoted to commercial uses, the transaction of business, and manufacturing enterprises.

Mr. PRINCE. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HILL of Connecticut. Certainly.

Mr. PRINCE. I would like to ask my former colleague on the committee, if, as matter of fact, they are not now doing it by indirection in violation of the law?

Mr. HILL of Connecticut. I do not think it is being done to any great extent. I think it may be done to some extent, but I do not know of any reason why this Congress should validate a wrong act, for it is wrong in principle, essentially.

But there is no question about this fact, gentlemen. We are rapidly approaching the season of the crop requirements of this country, and if we judge by last year's experience, when interest rates went to 25 per cent and higher, we shall need all of the commercial funds there now are in the transaction of the regular commercial business of the country, without withdrawals of any for real estate speculation, for whether we intend it or not that would be the ultimate result of this legislation.

In addition to last year's experience, San Francisco will require a very large sum of money to make good the losses there.

Now, we have national bank capitalization, surplus, and undivided profits which amount to fourteen hundred millions of dollars, devoted exclusively to business transactions in this country. This bill steps in and authorizes 25 per cent of that to be eliminated from that use and locked up in real estate security. Whether it will be done or not, I do not know. It authorizes it to be done, and it is a dangerous thing to do at any time, and far more dangerous to-day than it has been in the experience of any man now sitting on this floor. If this bill were to pass at all, it should be amended in several very important particulars. What is the value of farm lands? Who makes the value under the terms of this bill? Does it mean raw prairie or improved farms? It ought to have specified, not that it is a farm, but it should be land under cultivation and improved. Who is going to determine the value—the man who owns it or the man who makes the loan? Perhaps it may be the same man in both cases. Should not the assessed valuation for purposes of taxation or some other fixed basis of valuation be prescribed if deposits payable on demand in national banks are to be loaned out in this way?

Now, then, another proposition. Twenty-five per cent of the capital and surplus. Why, you gentleman have just passed a bill within forty-eight hours limiting loans on Government bonds and other negotiable securities to 30 per cent of the capital, and yet you turn around and now propose to authorize the lending of 25 per cent of the capital and surplus—and that might mean all the capital, and more too—on unimproved farm lands.

Mr. PUJO. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. HILL of Connecticut. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. PUJO. Is it not the understanding of the gentleman that this authorization to loan 30 per cent of the capital and surplus was not as a whole, but that it is as to one individual?

Mr. HILL of Connecticut. I understand. But the gentleman knows just as well as I do that this bill is infinitely broader than the bill which you have just passed, in that you authorize as a foundation for loans, to the extent of one quarter of the whole capital and surplus, unimproved farm lands, whereas you have just made a limit on negotiable securities to a firm or corporation of 30 per cent of the capital. If I had been here I would have offered an amendment limiting it to 20 per cent. I believe in conservatism in banking; and, gentlemen, this proposition which is submitted here is in violation of the experience of all ages, from the beginning of banking in the world down to now, and certainly from the time of John Law, in France, down to this minute.

Now, I do not question the statements made here as to the value of farms all over this country. Why limit it to farms? Is not property on Pennsylvania avenue here in Washington, on Lake street in Chicago, on Wall street in New York, just as good security as any farming lands of the South or West?

Mr. KAHN. And does not fluctuate as much.

Mr. HILL of Connecticut. And does not fluctuate as much. Why limit it to farm lands, when San Francisco, in ashes today, wants to borrow on unquestionable value of real estate on Market street?

Mr. GAINES of West Virginia. Just as property in West Virginia coal mines is negotiable anywhere.

Mr. MARSHALL. Does the gentleman think that if this bill should become law that the total amount of real estate loans would be increased yearly or by the amount which he has mentioned?

Mr. HILL of Connecticut. I will make this reply to the gentleman: The bill is very specious. It provides that all loans shall be for not to exceed one year. The gentleman, like myself, is a banker. He knows that that does not cover renewals. He knows that a national bank can hold real estate for five years before selling it. He knows that the loan as specified in this bill differs absolutely from the fee simple title which the bank would have in case it had to foreclose its mortgage; and while I was cautious, and limited it to $350,000,000, I say to you, gentlemen, as a banker, that under the terms of this bill it is possible to put five times that amount into real estate loans in this country, or $1,750,000,000. It is a dangerous proposition any way you can fix it.

Mr. MARSHALL. Is it not a fact that the real estate loans are supplied from some source?

Mr. HILL of Connecticut. Oh, yes.

Mr. MARSHALL. And is it not a fact that the part of them that will be supplied by the national banks will not materially increase the total, and because of that there will be no material amount of money taken away from commercial use?

Mr. HILL of Connecticut. I feel an embarrassment in speaking on this proposition. It is a question that does not particularly affect us in New England. In New England we have four times the loanable capital in savings banks and trust companies that we have in national banks, and you could not make a law of this kind that would materially affect us in New England. I am speaking to you, gentlemen, on the general good of the country. From time immemorial the commercial money of the country has been segregated and kept apart from the real estate funds of the country. It is dangerous to mix them up. It is dangerous to the country banks.

Mr. PRINCE. Is not the gentleman fully familiar with the fact that in the first national-bank act they had power to loan on real estate?

Mr. HILL of Connecticut. How long did that last? One year. It was repealed at the end of twelve months.

Mr. PRINCE. Without the slightest argument in Congress.

Mr. HILL of Connecticut. No argument was necessary, because they found it was dangerous.

Mr. PRINCE. There is not the slightest evidence in the debates showing the reason why.

Mr. HILL of Connecticut. The gentleman is taking my time. I am willing to rest absolutely on the fact that it was in the law when it was enacted, and that the Congress was compelled to repeal it when it revised the law one year later. It is not there now, and no national bank to-day can hold real estate except for a banking house for a longer period than five years, and it can acquire none except in the collection of a debt previously incurred. Now, I say, it is dangerous to the country banks.

I want to say one word to the Members here from the larger cities. You gentlemen representing banks in the larger cities must remember that to a great extent the reserve city banks are responsible for the carrying of the country banks through commercial crises. It may not be a pleasant thing to say, but it is true; and I want to say to you, gentlemen in the country, with the 1,755 small banks of under $50,000 each, look out for your reserves if any proposition of this kind goes through. The reserve city banks will not accept real estate security in satisfaction of depleted reserves, so that it is dangerous not only for the cities, but dangerous for the country as well. [Applause.]

Mr. GRAHAM. It is too slow an asset.

Mr. GILLESPIE. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. PERKINS].

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I wish to give a little information to the House in answer to a remark made by the gentleman from Illinois in presenting this bill, as to the possibility of turning into money real estate assets with sufficient rapidity to be consistent with the safety of a national bank, and I shall not advance any views of my own, but shall give to the House the actual experience of the State which I represent.

This bill provides that loans may be made up to 50 per cent of the valuation of farms. Anybody would have said, and everybody did say, that farms in western New York, an old portion of the country thoroughly settled, free from speculation, were worth $100 an acre, and in 1890 you could have sold them by hundreds for $100 an acre. Loans were made upon those farms to the amount of millions by the great savings banks of western New York, to the amount of $20,000,000 in the city of Rochester, where I myself live. Fortunately the national banks, the banks of discount, were not allowed to make real estate loans, but they were taken by the savings banks, and every director of a savings bank said, "Our best assets are loans at $50 an acre on farm lands in western New York."

Well, Mr. Speaker, what happened? The long depression came. The price of wheat went down to the lowest figure ever known. The agitation about the currency came, political troubles came, and the savings banks of the city of Rochester alone were obliged to take farm lands right in western New York, right in the valley of the Genesee, to the amount of millions of dollars. If they had been banks of discount, obliged to furnish their customers the money to meet the needs of a commercial community, they would have gone into liquidation, but there is no such demand made upon a savings bank. The funds left with it are left for permanent deposit. Their solvency was recognized, but it took those banks over ten long years before they could sell, at prices that would make them whole, the lands foreclosed on farm loans in western New York. They held them, prices finally rose, the price of land that would not have sold in 1895 for $50 rose to $60, $75, and $80, and now, ultimately, our savings banks have been enabled to liquidate their losses, to turn that real estate into money, and have practically cleared up their real estate accounts.

Mr. HILL of Connecticut. I would like to ask the gentleman if it isn't true in some States of the Union after court decrees have been made on mortgage losses the period of redemption runs from six months to three years?

Mr. PERKINS. Yes; especially in the Western States.

Mr. HILL of Connecticut. That could hardly be called an available asset?

Mr. PERKINS. It could not, and I want to say that the actual experience of banks in the best part of the United States, in parts free from real estate speculation, shows that if national banks had been allowed to invest in these securities and had done so, one-half of the national banks in western New York would have been closed. [Applause.]

Mr. GILLESPIE. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say that I am opposed to this bill, and was opposed to it from the beginning. Now, it is argued here that because the National Bankers' Association indorsed this proposition that this House ought to pass it. Our national bankers, a great many of them, are getting off on wild-cat schemes. The National Bankers' Association also indorsed the proposed ship subsidy. That association is getting to be a regular political machine.

Mr. Speaker, this proposition, to my mind, is in opposition to the purposes of the national bank, which is a commercial institution for the temporary resting place of the funds of the community, to be used to meet emergencies as they arise and not for investing funds on long-time loans such as real estate securities must necessarily be.

A twelve months' mortgage to a farmer is of no advantage. His loan must be from one to five years to be of much benefit to him as a farmer. His land is his capital, and if it is tied up by a mortgage he needs plenty of time to pay it off. He does not want a short three, four, six, or twelve months' loan, because it is of no advantage to him, especially where he has to secure it by mortgaging his land.

The majority say in their report that this is for the benefit of the farmer. I submit to this House that no farmers' organization has ever demanded this legislation; no farmer, so far as I know, has ever demanded this legislation. It is only demanded or recommended by our National Bankers' Association, and it is for the purpose of getting the little banks in the agricultural section to aid the great city banks of this country in their scheme of getting every financial institution in this country within control of the national banking system of the United States. You see they have cut out the loans on city real estate. It is just a little inducement thrown out to the country bankers over the country, and the scheme is to destroy every State financial institution. That is a part of their programme; they want the trust and savings bank feature engrafted upon the national banking system. This is an inducement to the small banks all over the country to get them in line with their main programme, which is finally to drive out of business all State or local financial institutions and force them all to come under the national system.

Mr. Speaker, I believe this bill is vicious and not in the interest of the farmer, who is only used as a buffer. The reason given in the beginning of our national banking system for not allowing banks to loan upon real estate was that it was not the purpose of those favoring this system that the banks should become large landholders. This danger, Mr. Speaker, is greater to-day than it was then, for national banks are more numerous now than then. This bill ought to be defeated. [Applause.]

Mr. PRINCE. I now yield two minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SIBLEY].

Mr. SIBLEY. Mr. Speaker, all through the country, owing to the restrictions placed on national banks, the people are forming trust companies, because there is denied to the bank the right to loan upon what ought to be considered the best security in the world—real estate. The gentleman from Connecticut said it would ruin the country banks. I do not believe it has one element of danger in it. The national bank in rural districts would loan upon its local real estate, upon the farm, we will say, at 5 or 6 per cent, and would hypothecate these mortgages with a trust company or a great life insurance company, negotiating them at the rate of 4 or 4½ per cent, guaranteeing payment of these loans or mortgages at maturity. When you deny the right to loan upon country real estate you are discrediting the value of the property in that local community. I have heard no argument against this that, in my judgment, should appeal to this House to vote against the bill. I am aware that I do not know as much about banking as my friend from Connecticut, but I have had a little bit of experience in that direction.

Mr. HILL of Connecticut. The gentleman has not been troubled so much as I have to keep his bank account straight. [Laughter.]

Mr. SIBLEY. Oh, I have been on both sides of the bank counter in my day. But I can not understand why a stock certificate, which may be a watered stock, which may have a fictitious value, should be considered a better security than the absolute real estate at a fair valuation.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman a question. The gentleman says the banks would turn the mortgages over to the trust companies. Will he tell the House that the national banks are organizing the trust companies and owning them and when they turn the mortgages over to the trust companies they are simply operating a subterfuge on the public?

Mr. SIBLEY. Absolutely, Mr. Speaker, they are doing it, because under the present banking law they can not loan on real estate, and therefore trust companies are springing up in every town of five or ten or fifteen thousand people throughout the length and breadth of our Federal domain, and except there be some revision of our national-banking laws as affecting country banks they will be driven out of existence by the trust companies.

Mr. PRINCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. PUJO].

Mr. PUJO. Mr. Speaker, I consider this one of the fairest bills that has ever been brought before this House for consideration and favorable disposition. The complaint now is that the farming classes of this country are driven to the Shylocks, to the men that make loans at 25 and 30 and 50 per cent, who take trust deeds and cut-throat mortgages; and now when a committee of this House gives the membership of the House an opportunity to allow the farming interests of the United States to borrow money to an extent not exceeding 50 per cent of the value of their real property, there is a cry that it will be an injury to the farming classes. Mr. Speaker, the circulation throughout the United States to-day exceeds $500,000,000. Bonds to an equal amount are deposited to secure that circulation. Those bonds bear, at the lowest rate of interest, 2 per cent. The agricultural lands of the United States, and the people owning these agricultural lands, help to pay the interest on these bonds, and yet they are precluded and prohibited from going to a national bank and borrowing money from it by giving a mortgage upon their property. Why is this discrimination?

In 1863 the Congress of the United States authorized national banks to lend money upon real estate. It is true that that act was subsequently repealed in 1864, no doubt owing to the fluctuations in the value of real estate because of the war. Since 1864 up to the present time, while there may have been no petitions presented to Congress, yet there is hardly a Member of this House who does not know and who has not heard of complaints that have been made by farmers of his section because they could not go to national banks and borrow money by giving a mortgage on their farms. The capital stock of the national banks exceeds $800,000,000. If this bill is passed, it will bring in, you might say, an available asset for the purpose of lending money exceeding $200,000,000.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. PRINCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to my colleague on the committee, the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CALDERHEAD].

Mr. CALDERHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I have agreed with my friend, the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL], so long about the theories of banking and currency that it is a little bit of a surprise to myself to differ with him now. He is so anxious to make the currency of the country entirely available for commercial paper that he overlooks the practical uses of it in the widely distributed interior of the country. I think it is true that the original act authorizing national banks permitted them to loan upon real estate, and that that clause was repealed within two years. I think he ought to remember that in the whole of that two years there were only 316 national banks established. The country had so little confidence in the banking system at the time that it became necessary to restrict the powers and operations of the national banks as much as possible to induce the country to begin the establishment of banks for the purpose of providing currency.

Mr. HILL of Connecticut. The gentleman will also remember that when that change was made they forbid a national bank holding real estate for more than five years. Now, why did they do that?

Mr. CALDERHEAD. I think it was for the purpose of preventing the banks from speculating in real estate, for one thing.

Mr. HILL of Connecticut. Why, certainly.

Mr. CALDERHEAD. I think that is probably the reason. There were a good many other reasons that influenced the Congress to limit the power at the time they were attempting to induce the country to accept the national banking system.

Mr. HILL of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman another question. I have just as much confidence in the judgment of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CALDERHEAD], after several years' experience with him on the committee, as I have in the judgment of any other Member of the House. Does he not admit that this is a proposition to radically change in twenty minutes, to an extent of 25 per cent of the capital stock and the surplus, the entire character of the present national banking system?

Mr. CALDERHEAD. No; I do not admit that.

Mr. GROSVENOR. And will not the gentleman also admit that this bill has been introduced in three different Congresses previously and reported favorably three times?

Mr. CALDERHEAD. Oh, this bill has been reported three times to the House and once passed the House. The thing that I desire to reply to particularly to the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. HILL] is this, that it does not withdraw from the currency of the country the amount of money that he says, and that banks that are engaged in the business that his bank is engaged in will not invest money upon one-year loans upon farms. It is true, as he says, that in New England they desire to confine the banks strictly to commercial banking. But he overlooks the fact that the business of the interior of the country is producing the raw material upon which his country uses its capital in manufacturing.

There are nearly 1,800 small banks of $25,000 capital in agricultural districts competing for business with State banks, who can make the loans we authorize. And, notwithstanding what gentlemen may say, these small land loans for one year are all quick assets. The value of the security is determined by the directors of the local bank, and they must sign their approval of the loan in writing. The large banks find it to their advantage to confine their business to commercial banking. The small banks are at their mercy unless they can make the loans the agricultural business of their patrons demand, or they must go out of competition with their neighbor State banks, who have this privilege. No small bank will become a mortgage land bank for the purpose of failing. The money loaned in this way will not be tied up, but will immediately enter the channels of business. Remember that the reserves of banks are always tied up and do not enter commercial business, but are a constant limitation on the loans proposed in this bill as well as on commercial business.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired. [Applause.]

Mr. PRINCE. Mr. Speaker, I now yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MCCLEARY].

Mr. CALDERHEAD. Before that time is taken I desire to extend a few remarks in the RECORD on this subject.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. PRINCE. As I figure, there are four minutes left me; I may be mistaken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has three minutes remaining.

Mr. MCCLEARY of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, some six or seven years ago, when my friends HILL and CALDERHEAD and PRINCE and I were all on the Committee on Banking and Currency, this question of allowing the smaller national banks to make loans on real estate under proper safeguards came up. I took occasion at that time to write to every small bank in the United States whose name I could get hold of. I sent out more than 2,500 letters, not only to small national banks, but also to small State banks in the country, submitting to them a series of questions on the matters involved. I got back over 2,000 replies. Nine-tenths of all those replies were favorable to the main proposition. Some of these replies came from men who had been in the banking business for fifty years and had passed through all sorts of crises. Their judgment was that the most stable and most easily convertible security they had in time of trouble was that based upon well-selected real estate.

I confess that I approached the inquiry with my prejudices all against the proposition. I had thought of a national bank as essentially a commercial bank. A commercial bank receives deposits subject to check. Being in no sense a savings bank, the purely commercial bank should not pay interest on deposits. Its loans should all be on commercial paper redeemable at short intervals, so that it will always have maturing assets with which to pay current demands upon it. Such was and is my view of the purely commercial bank.

But as the answers to my inquiry came piling in, my views as to the small banks in the country towns began to change. It occurred to me that perhaps the judgment of men who had successfully managed banks more years than I had lived was worthy of my careful consideration. It occurred to me that perhaps their experience in piloting their institutions successfully through sunshine and through storm for many years was worth as much as my theory on the subject.

These level-headed men put it to me in this way: In the cities, with their multitudinous demands, each kind of bank can find its field of service, the commercial banks furnishing the means for production and exchange, while the savings banks furnish the means for providing the instruments of production and exchange. But in the smaller towns and villages "the bank" must serve the purposes of both commercial bank and savings bank. It must receive the deposits of the merchant and the small manufacturer subject to check, and the depostis of the farmer and the workingman, who desire to make time deposits drawing interest.

On the deposit side they all act as savings banks as well as commercial banks, They desire now to have the privilege of rendering the savings bank service, to a limited degree, in the matter of loans also. That is the purpose of the pending bill. And having in mind the exceedingly valuable body of expert testimony comprised in the letters to which I have referred, I favor the purpose of this bill. Had I not been transferred from the Committee on Banking and Currency to the Committee on Appropriations shortly after I had made the investigation referred to, I would probably have pushed some such bill as this at that time. In my judgment, the kind of amendment to the national-bank act proposed in the pending bill would render these banks more useful to the farming communities in which they are located and whose interests they are intended to serve.

Mr. HILL of Connecticut. May I ask the gentleman a question? As a conservative man, do you not think if your bill should pass it should include not only loans, but renewals thereof? Do you not think it should prescribe how the valuation should be fixed on the property on which the loan is to be made? Do you not think it should have some limitation upon the 10 per cent capital and the whole surplus when you have within a day or two fixed a much smaller limit on loans made on other securities? Is there any special charm about the improved farm land that does not obtain in regard to improved city property or Government bonds or other securities where title passes by delivery of the property?

Mr. MCCLEARY of Minnesota. My friend's catechism is rather long.

Mr. HILL of Connecticut. The bill needs amending——

Mr. MCCLEARY of Minnesota. My friend——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Minnesota has expired. The gentleman from Texas has one minute.

Mr. GILLESPIE. I do not care to use it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds have not voted in favor of the bill——

Mr. PRINCE. Mr. Speaker, let us have a division and find out.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois asks for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 91, noes 66.

Mr. MACON. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays. [Cries of "No!"]

Mr. PRINCE. No, Mr. Speaker; I hope the gentleman will not insist on that.

Mr. MACON. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the request for the yeas and nays. If the gentleman who represents the bill does not want to vote for it, of course I do not. As a Representative here, I have the right to ask.

SENATE BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, Senate bill and joint resolution of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and referred to their appropriate committees as indicated below:

S. 6488. An act authorizing the striking of 200 additional medals to commemorate the two-hundredth anniversary of the birth of Benjamin Franklin—to the Committee on the Library.

S. R. 67. Joint resolution to protect the copyrighted matter appearing in the "Rules and Specifications for Grading Lumber Adopted by the Various Lumber Manufacturing Associations of the United States"—to the Committee on Patents.

S. 5136. An act to amend the act creating the Spanish Treaty Claims Commission, approved March 2, 1901—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bill of the following title:

S. 1442. An act to increase the efficiency of the militia and promote rifle practice.

PURE-FOOD BILL.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I submit the following privileged report from the Committee on Rules.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL] submits a privileged report, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this order, and daily thereafter after the disposal of business on the Speaker's table, if there be any, and consideration of such conference reports as may be called up, the House shall resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill S. 88, "An act for preventing the manufacture, sale, or transportation of adulterated or misbranded or poisonous or deleterious foods, drugs, medicines, and liquors, and for regulating traffic therein, and for other purposes," and after general debate, which shall continue not over six hours and which shall be confined to a discussion of the bill, the amendment in the nature of a substitute, reported by the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, shall be considered under the five-minute rule; and after the consideration of the said amendment in the nature of a substitute, both in general debate and for amendment, shall have continued not more than twelve hours, the committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with the substitute amendment and with such amendments to the said substitute as may have been agreed to; and thereupon the vote shall be taken on the substitute, the amendments thereto, and on the bill to the final passage without intervening motion or appeal: Provided, That at any time the committee may rise informally to enable conference reports, Senate amendments to general appropriation bills, or business on the Speaker's table to be considered in the House.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, the rule just reported has relation to the pure-food bill, and it provides for its consideration immediately after the adoption of the resolution, and for twelve hours thereafter, subject, of course, in the meantime, to the consideration of conference reports, House bills with Senate amendments on the Speaker's table, and privileged matters in general. Six hours are to be devoted to general debate, which is to be confined to the subject-matter of the bill. The remaining six hours, if the committee desires that length of time, are to be consumed in the discussion of the bill under the five-minute rule. The bill is open to amendment, and at the end of twelve hours is to be reported to the House without intervening motion. As I have already intimated, an arrangement is made for the consideration from time to time, as the necessity may arise, of conference reports and other privileged matters.

I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS].

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, it goes without saying that the minority members of the Committee on Rules opposed calling the previous question upon this resolution in this manner, and we shall protest against it by casting our votes against it.

Now, Mr. Speaker, in order that there may be more time for discussion of the merits of this very important bill, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DE ARMOND] and myself, constituting the minority members of the Committee on Rules—the tolerated members of the Committee on Rules, if the Speaker will permit the expression—have agreed not to consume any of the time in discussing the rule itself or the demand for the previous question, but to let that time go to the discussion of the merits of the proposition.

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL] demands the previous question.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, in order to save the time of the House, I call for the yeas and nays upon the adoption of the previous question.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 143, nays 72, answered "present" 14, not voting 165, as follows:

YEAS—143.

Allen, N. J.	Fordney	Knowland	Rodenberg
Barchfeld	Foss	Lacey	Samuel
Bartholdt	Foster, Ind.	Lafean	Schneebeli
Bennet, N. Y.	French	Landis, Frederick	Scott
Birdsall	Fulkerson	Law	Sherman
Bonynge	Fuller	Lilley, Conn.	Smith, Cal.
Boutell	Gaines, W. Va.	Littauer	Smith, Ill.
Brick	Gardner, Mich.	McCall	Smith, Iowa
Burton, Del.	Gardner, N. J.	McCarthy	Smith, Samuel W.
Butler, Pa.	Gilbert, Ind.	McCleary, Minn.	Smith, Pa.
Calder	Gillett, Cal.	McKinney	Smyser
Calderhead	Goebel	McMorran	Snapp
Campbell, Kans.	Graff	Madden	Southwick
Campbell, Ohio	Grosvenor	Marshall	Sperry
Capron	Hale	Martin	Stafford
Cassel	Hamilton	Miller	Steenerson
Chaney	Haugen	Minor	Stevens, Minn.
Chapman	Hayes	Mondell	Sulloway
Cocks	Hedge	Moon, Tenn.	Tawney
Cole	Henry, Conn.	Morrell	Taylor, Ohio
Conner	Hepburn	Mouser	Thomas, Ohio
Cooper, Wis.	Higgins	Mudd	Townsend
Cousins	Hinshaw	Murdock	Tyndall
Cromer	Hoar	Needham	Volstead
Crumpacker	Howell, N. J.	Norris	Waldo
Currier	Howell, Utah	Olmsted	Wanger
Curtis	Hubbard	Otjen	Watson
Cushman	Huff	Parsons	Webber
Dalzell	Hull	Payne	Weems
Dawes	Jenkins	Perkins	Wharton
Dawson	Jones, Wash.	Pollard	Wiley, N. J.
Denby	Kahn	Prince	Wilson
Driscoll	Keifer	Reeder	Wood, N. J.
Ellis	Kennedy, Nebr.	Reynolds	Woodyard
Esch	Klepper	Rives	Young
Fassett	Knapp	Roberts

NAYS—72.

Adamson	Gill	Kitchin, Wm. W.	Russell
Beall, Tex.	Gillespie	Lamar	Ryan
Brundidge	Goldfogle	Lee	Sheppard
Burgess	Goulden	Lindsay	Sherley
Burleson	Granger	Livingston	Sims
Burnett	Hay	Lloyd	Slayden
Candler	Hellin	McNary	Small
Clark, Fla.	Henry, Tex.	Macon	Smith, Md.
Clark, Mo.	Hill, Miss.	Meyer	Smith, Tex.
Cockran	Hopkins	Moore	Spight
De Armond	Houston	Padgett	Sullivan, Mass.
Dixon, Ind.	Howard	Patterson, S. C.	Talbott
Ellerbe	Humphreys, Miss.	Rainey	Taylor, Ala.
Finley	Hunt	Ransdell, La.	Thomas, N. C.
Fitzgerald	James	Richardson, Ala.	Wallace
Floyd	Johnson	Richardson, Ky.	Wiley, Ala.
Garner	Jones, Va.	Rucker	Williams
Garrett	Keliher	Ruppert	Zenor

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—14.

Broussard	Gregg	Mann	Southard
Gaines, Tenn.	Kitchin, Claude	Murphy	Weeks
Glass	Kline	Pujo
Graham	Lever	Robertson, La.

NOT VOTING—150.

Acheson	Darragh	Kennedy, Ohio	Pou
Adams	Davey, La.	Ketcham	Powers
Aiken	Davidson	Kinkaid	Randell, Tex.
Alexander	Davis, Minn.	Knopf	Reid
Allen, Me.	Davis, W. Va.	Lamb	Rhinock
Ames	Deemer	Landis, Chas. B.	Rhodes
Andrus	Dickson, Ill.	Lawrence	Rixey
Babcock	Dixon, Mont.	Le Fevre	Robinson, Ark.
Bankhead	Dovener	Legare	Scroggy
Bannon	Draper	Lewis	Shackleford
Bartlett	Dresser	Lilley, Pa.	Shartel
Bates	Dunwell	Little	Sibley
Bede	Dwight	Littlefield	Slemp
Beidler	Edwards	Longworth	Smith, Ky.
Bell, Ga.	Field	Lorimer	Smith, Wm. Alden
Bennett, Ky.	Flack	Loud	Southall
Bingham	Fletcher	Loudenslager	Sparkman
Bishop	Flood	Lovering	Stanley
Blackburn	Foster, Vt.	McCreary, Pa.	Stephens, Tex.
Bowers	Fowler	McDermott	Sterling
Bowersock	Garber	McGavin	Sullivan, N. Y.
Bowie	Gardner, Mass.	McKinlay, Cal.	Sulzer
Bradley	Gilbert, Ky.	McKinley, Ill.	Tirrell
Brantley	Gillett, Mass.	McLachlan	Towne
Broocks, Tex.	Greene	McLain	Trimble
Brooks, Colo.	Griggs	Mahon	Underwood
Brown	Gronna	Maynard	Van Duzer
Brownlow	Gudger	Michalek	Van Winkle
Buckman	Hardwick	Moon, Pa.	Vreeland
Burke, Pa.	Haskins	Nevin	Wachter
Burke, S. Dak.	Hearst	Olcott	Wadsworth
Burleigh	Hermann	Overstreet	Watkins
Burton, Ohio	Hill, Conn.	Page	Webb
Butler, Tenn.	Hitt	Palmer	Weisse
Byrd	Hogg	Parker	Welborn
Clayton	Holliday	Patterson, N. C.	Wood, Mo.
Cooper, Pa.	Hughes	Patterson, Tenn.
Dale	Humphrey, Wash.	Pearre

So the previous question was ordered.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Until further notice:

Mr. SLEMP with Mr. GLASS.

Mr. DEEMER with Mr. KLINE.

For the balance of the day:

Mr. BEIDLER with Mr. BROUSSARD.

Mr. BOWERSOCK with Mr. PUJO.

Mr. ANDRUS with Mr. WATKINS.

Mr. BRADLEY with Mr. LEWIS.

Mr. LORIMER with Mr. ROBERTSON of Louisiana.

Mr. ALEXANDER with Mr. AIKEN.

Mr. WACHTER with Mr. UNDERWOOD.

Mr. NEVIN with Mr. SOUTHALL.

Mr. PALMER with Mr. MAYNARD.

Mr. MOON of Pennsylvania with Mr. MCLAIN.

Mr. FLETCHER with Mr. FLOOD.

Mr. DICKSON of Illinois with Mr. DAVIS of West Virginia.

Mr. COOPER of Pennsylvania with Mr. DAVEY of Louisiana.

Mr. BENNETT of Kentucky with Mr. BUTLER of Tennessee.

Mr. BEDE with Mr. RHINOCK.

Mr. BATES with Mr. BANKHEAD.

Mr. ADAMS with Mr. TRIMBLE.

Mr. DUNWELL with Mr. TOWNE.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The question was taken; and the resolution was agreed to.

Mr. PAYNE. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER. One moment. Pending that, the Chair will lay before the House the following personal requests:

Mr. STEENERSON asks for a reprint of the bill H. R. 10502 and the report thereon.

Mr. FRENCH asks unanimous consent to file minority views on the bill (S. 3687) relating to use of reclamation funds for drainage of land in North Dakota.

Without objection, the requests will be granted.

There was no objection.

The motion to adjourn was then agreed to.

Accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 32 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATION.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following executive communication was taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

A letter from the assistant clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting a copy of the finding filed by the court in the case of Harriet L. Young, administrator of estate of Solomon Young against The United States—to the Committee on War Claims, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions of the following titles were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several Calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. LACEY, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 2732) for the protection of wild animals in the Grand Canyon Forest Reserve, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4973); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. HINSHAW, from the Committee on Patents, to which was referred the House joint resolution (H. J. Res. 174) limiting the gratuitous distribution of the "Rules and Specifications for Grading Lumber Adopted by the Various Lumber Manufacturing Associations of the United States" to the Senate, the House of Representatives, and the Department of Agriculture, reported the same with amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4978); which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. MONDELL, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to which was referred the bill of the House (H. R. 19575) granting 10 per centum of the gross receipts from forest re- for Grading Lumber Adopted by the Various Lumber Manufac- the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4979), which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

Mr. FLETCHER, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 5028) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of Thomas F. Callan, alias Thomas Cowan, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4972); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. SULLOWAY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6268) granting a pension to Helen G. Hibbard, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4975); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CALDERHEAD, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6301) granting an increase of pension to William C. Long, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4976); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

Mr. CHANEY, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to which was referred the bill of the Senate (S. 6365) granting a pension to Edward S. Bragg, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 4977); which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. CALDERHEAD: A joint resolution (H. J. Res. 177) authorizing the Secretary of War to furnish a bronze cannon, with its carriage, limber, and all accessories, to Junction City Post, No. 132, Grand Army of the Republic, Department of Kansas—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. GARDNER of Michigan: A resolution (H. Res. 599) to pay Nellie M. Wakefield for services as assistant to the docket clerk—to the Committee on Accounts.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions of the following titles were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BENNETT of Kentucky: A bill (H. R. 20322) granting an increase of pension to Jackson Polly—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BUCKMAN: A bill (H. R. 20323) granting an increase of pension to Michael Weber—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CALDERHEAD: A bill (H. R. 20324) granting an increase of pension to Nehemiah Brooks—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CHAPMAN: A bill (H. R. 20325) granting an increase of pension to George Brown—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FOSTER of Indiana: A bill (H. R. 20326) granting an increase of pension to Jacob Snyder—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FULLER: A bill (H. R. 20327) granting a pension to Elizabeth A. Downie—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HEDGE: A bill (H. R. 20328) to correct the military record of Walter Perrine—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HERMANN: A bill (H. R. 20329) to reimburse S. R. Green, late postmaster at Oregon City, Oreg., for moneys lost by burglary—to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 20330) for the relief of S. R. Green—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. KINKAID: A bill (H. R. 20331) granting an increase of pension to Richard H. Shapland—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KNAPP: A bill (H. R. 20332) granting an increase of pension to Charles N. Phelps—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MOON of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 20333) for the relief of William G. Blackwell—to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. OVERSTREET: A bill (H. R. 20334) for the relief of John R. Heaston—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SMITH of Illinois: A bill (H. R. 20335) granting a pension to W. W. Hopper—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, committees were discharged from the consideration of bills of the following titles; which were thereupon referred as follows:

A bill (H. R. 20296) for the relief of A. L. Robb—Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads discharged, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

A bill (H. R. 20301) for the relief of Howard F. Esterline—Committee on Invalid Pensions discharged, and referred to the Committee on War Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, the following petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. BARCHFELD: Petition of Mid-Continent Oil Producers' Association, against the pipe-line amendment to rate bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. BENNETT of Kentucky: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Jackson Polly—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, petition of James E. Hurst et al., for law granting soldiers a service pension—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Mary T. Scott—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BURKE of Pennsylvania: Petition of Dr. J. T. Little, for the original-package bill (H. R. 13655)—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of C. C. Miller, for bill H. R. 13655 (Littlefield original-package bill)—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Louis Freedman, against the Dillingham-Gardner bill, relative to tax on immigrants—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

Also, petition of Mid-Continent Oil Producers' Association, against the pipe-line amendment to rate bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. CROMER: Paper to accompany bill for relief of John R. Heaston—to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. FULLER: Petition of Mid-Continent Oil Producers' Association, against the pipe-line clause in rate bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. GRAHAM: Petition of J. D. Fraser, for bill H. R. 13655 (Littlefield original-package bill)—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of Mid-Continent Oil Producers' Association, against pipe-line clause of the rate bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. GROSVENOR: Petition, by letters, protesting against the passage of the eight-hour bill, from the following cities: Tacoma, Wash., and Lancaster, Ohio—to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. HOPKINS: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Mary Shearer—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. HUFF: Petition of Mr. Ritts, of Butler, Pa., against the pipe-line amendment to rate bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. LINDSAY: Petition of Mid-Continent Oil Producers' Association, against the pipe-line clause of the rate bill—to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, petition of American citizens of German birth in mass meeting at Cooper Union Hall, New York City, for furtherance of arbitration treaties—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of New York State commission to the Jamestown Ter-Centennial Exposition, for liberal appropriation for the Jamestown Exposition—to the Committee on Industrial Arts and Expositions.

By Mr. NORRIS: Petition of citizens of Nebraska, against religious legislation in the District of Columbia—to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. REYNOLDS: Paper to accompany bill for relief of Adam Leonard—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, paper to accompany bill for relief of Joseph Snowden—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RUPPERT: Petition of National German-American Alliance and representatives from many German organizations, held at Cooper Union, New York City, for arbitration treaties, etc.—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Also, petition of New York State commission, for national aid to the Jamestown Exposition—to the Committee on Industrial Arts and Expositions.

Also, petition of Central Federated Union, of New York, against the Littlefield pilotage bill—to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, petition of 3,000 citizens assembled at Cooper Union Hall, New York City, for appointment of an immigration commission—to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. STERLING: Paper to accompany bill for relief of J. W. Mareau—to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SULLIVAN of New York: Petition of German societies of New York City, for furtherance of arbitration treaties—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. VAN WINKLE: Petition of Union 8 of Cigar Makers' International Union, Hoboken, N. J., for bill H. R. 18752—to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SENATE.

THURSDAY, June 21, 1906.

Prayer by Rev. JOHN VAN SCHAICK, Jr., of the city of Washington.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when, on request of Mr. HOPKINS, and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Journal stands approved.

PANAMA CANAL.

Mr. HOPKINS. I submit an amendment intended to be proposed to the bill (S. 6191) to provide for the construction of a sea-level canal connecting the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, and the method of construction. I ask that the amendment be printed, so that it will be back by 3 o'clock.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The amendment will be printed.

APPROPRIATION FOR POSTAL SERVICE.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Postmaster-General, recommending that the balance of the appropriation made under the act of May 3, 1906, to meet emergencies in the postal service in the State of California occasioned by earthquake and fire, available until June 30, 1906, be made available for the next fiscal year, as it is not believed that this special service can be discontinued at the close of the present fiscal year; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

INTRODUCTION OF REINDEER IN ALASKA.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, in response to a resolution of the 14th instant, the report of Dr. Sheldon Jackson upon "The Introduction of Domestic Reindeer into the District of Alaska" for 1905; which, on motion of Mr. NELSON, was, with the accompanying maps and illustrations, referred to the Committee on Territories, and ordered to be printed.

NEW GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the Public Printer submitting an estimate of appropriation for erecting iron shutters on the Jackson alley side of the new Government Printing Office, $12,000; which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 6146) to authorize the Black River Bridge Company to construct a bridge across the west or smaller division of the Ohio River from Wheeling Island, West Virginia, to the Ohio shore.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills:

H. R. 118. An act to amend sections 713 and 714 of "An act to establish a Code of Law for the District of Columbia," approved March 3, 1901, as amended by the acts approved January 31 and June 30, 1902, and for other purposes;

H. R. 13543. An act for the protection and regulation of the fisheries of Alaska;

H. R. 15513. An act to declare and enforce the forfeiture provided by section 4 of the act of Congress approved March 3, 1875, entitled "An act granting to railroads the right of way through the public lands of the United States;" and

H. R. 16290. An act to postpone until 1937 the maturity of $250,000 of 4 per cent United States bonds held in trust for the benefit of the American Printing House for the Blind.

The message further announced that the House insists upon its amendments to the bill (S. 5769) defining the right of immunity of witnesses under the act entitled "An act in relation to testimony before the Interstate Commerce Commission," and so forth, approved February 11, 1893, and an act entitled "An act to establish the Department of Commerce and Labor," approved February 14, 1903, and an act entitled "An act to further regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the States," approved February 19, 1903, and an act entitled "An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1904, and for other purposes," approved February 25, 1903; disagreed to by the Senate, agrees to the conference asked for by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. JENKINS, Mr. LITTLEFIELD, and Mr. DE ARMOND managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolution; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 5998. An act creating the Mesa Verde National Park;

H. R. 7083. An act to repeal section 5, chapter 1482, act of March 3, 1905;

H. R. 11030. An act to authorize the counties of Yazoo and Holmes to construct a bridge across Yazoo River, Mississippi.

H. R. 11044. An act authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Treasury, in certain contingencies, to refund to receivers of public moneys acting as special disbursing agents amounts paid by them out of their private funds;

H. R. 12080. An act granting to the Siletz Power and Manufacturing Company a right of way for a water ditch or canal through the Siletz Indian Reservation, in Oregon;

H. R. 18529. An act to authorize the sale of certain lands to the city of Mena, in the county of Polk, in the State of Arkansas;

H. R. 19431. An act permitting the building of a dam across the Mississippi River between the counties of Stearns and Sherburne, in the State of Minnesota;

H. R. 19607. An act for the acknowledgment of deeds and other instruments in Guam, Samoa, and the Canal Zone to affect lands in the District of Columbia and other Territories;

H. R. 19680. An act directing the Secretary of War to cause an examination and survey to be made of Coney Island channel;

H. R. 20017. An act to regulate the checking of baggage by common carriers;

H. R. 20321. An act to provide for the traveling expenses of the President of the United States; and

H. J. Res. 43. Joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to furnish condemned cannon for a life-size statue of Gen. Henry Leavenworth, at Leavenworth, Kans.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT presented a memorial of the National German-American Alliance of Philadelphia, Pa., remonstrating against the adoption of a certain amendment to the sundry civil appropriation bill excluding alcoholic beverages from Soldiers' Homes; which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a resolution adopted by Hartranft Post, No. 3, Department of Oklahoma, Grand Army of the Republic, of Guthrie, Okla., expressing to the Senate of the United States their deep sense of gratitude for the privilege of statehood conferred upon that Territory; which was referred to the Committee on Territories.

Mr. DICK presented petitions of sundry citizens of Tiffin and Burton, in the State of Ohio, praying for the enactment of legislation to prevent the impending destruction of Niagara Falls on the American side by the diversion of the waters for manufacturing purposes; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of Northfield, Wooster, New London, Delaware, Norwood, Alliance, Washington, and Bellefontaine, all in the State of Ohio, praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy; which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented memorials of sundry citizens of Massillon, West Alexandria, Cleveland, and Cincinnati, all in the State of Ohio, remonstrating against the passage of the so-called "parcels-post bill;" which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented a memorial of Safety Lodge, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, of Toledo, Ohio, remonstrating against the adoption of a certain amendment to the so-called "railroad rate bill" to prohibit the issuance of passes to railroad employees and their families; which was referred to the conference committee on the railroad rate bill.

He also presented memorials of sundry citizens of Wapakeneta, Marietta, Lima, and St. Marys, all in the State of Ohio, and of Gulfport, Miss., remonstrating against the adoption of a certain amendment to the so-called "railroad rate bill" relative to pipe lines; which were referred to the conference committee on the railroad rate bill.

He also presented petitions of the Woman's Christian Temperance Unions of Cleveland, Marietta, Lowellville, and Mount Vernon, all in the State of Ohio, praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the closing on Sunday of the Jamestown Exposition; which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of Westerville, Harrisville, Washington, Alliance, Orrville, Cincinnati, New Washington, Chardon, Warren, Norwalk, Caldwell, Ada, Zanesville, Uhrichsville, Cleveland, Warsaw, Wellington, Cambridge, Shelby, Columbus, Sherwood, Amanda, Milford Center, Centerburg, Ohio City, Toronto, Chillicothe, Gallipolis, Crooksville, West Liberty, Dayton, Huntsville, New Carlisle, all in the State of Ohio, praying for the enactment of legislation to amend the postal laws relative to newspaper subscriptions; which were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of Springfield, Fruitdale, Cleveland, Strasburg, Cincinnati, Good Hope, New Straitville, Palestine, Bushs Mill, Miamisburg, and Canton; of State Council, of Canton; Magnetic Council, No. 231, of Bellbrook; Coshocton Council, No. 65, of Coshoction; St. Paris Council, No. 224, of St. Paris; Price Hill Council, No. 210, of Cincinnati; Continental Council, No. 253, of Port William; O. W. Holmes Council, No. 41, of Canton; Washington Council, No. 12, of Canton; Butler Council, No. 93, of Hamilton; Flag of Our Union Council, No. 160, of Ravenna, and New Moorefield Council, No. 107, of New Moorefield, all of the Junior Order United American Mechanics, and of the State Council of Ohio, Daughters of America, of Cincinnati, all in the State of Ohio, and of Robert P. McRae, of St. Albans, W. Va., praying for the enactment of legislation to restrict immigration; which were referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. BURNHAM presented the memorial of J. H. Robbins, of Dover, N. H., and the memorial of Edwin G. Eastman, of Concord, N. H., remonstrating against the repeal of the present anti-canteen law; which were ordered to lie on the table.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. BLACKBURN. By direction of the Committee on the District of Columbia, I report back the bill (S. 3602) to prohibit the killing of wild birds and wild animals in the District of Columbia. I report it back adversely, with a written report, and ask its indefinite postponement, an identical bill, or substantially the same bill, having been reported favorably and sent to the Calendar.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be postponed indefinitely.

Mr. FOSTER, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 17600) to grant authority to change the names of certain sailing vessels, reported it without amendment.

Mr. BERRY, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment:

A bill (H. R. 13106) granting to the Batesville Power Company right to erect and construct canal and power stations at lock and dam No. 1, upper White River, Arkansas;

A bill (H. R. 18596) to enable the Secretary of War to permit the erection of a lock and dam in aid of navigation in the White River, Arkansas, and for other purposes;

A bill (H. R. 19566) to authorize the Coraopolis and Osborne Bridge Company to construct a bridge over the Ohio River;

A bill (H. R. 19850) to authorize the Monongahela Connecting Railroad Company to construct a bridge across the Monongahela River in the State of Pennsylvania; and

A bill (H. R. 20097) to authorize the board of supervisors of Coahoma County, Miss., to construct a bridge across Coldwater River.

Mr. WARREN, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 6492) to correct the military record of James Devlin, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. McCUMBER, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 1217) granting an increase of pension to Spillard F. Horrall;

A bill (H. R. 7254) granting an increase of pension to Isum Gwin;

A bill (H. R. 19033) granting an increase of pension to Moses S. Rockwood;

A bill (H. R. 13318) granting an increase of pension to Odom Butler; and

A bill (H. R. 17015) granting an increase of pension to Osbert D. Dickey.

Mr. SCOTT, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 6082) for the relief of Stephen A. West, reported it with an amendment.

Mr. MILLARD, from the Committee on Interoceanic Canals, to whom was referred the amendment submitted by himself on the 15th instant, proposing to pay George R. Butlin, J. B. Haynes, and Ernst H. Djureen $500 each for services in the preparation of an analytical index to testimony taken before the Senate Committee on Interoceanic Canals, intended to be proposed to the general deficiency appropriation bill, reported favorably thereon, and moved that it be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and printed; which was agreed to.

Mr. BULKELEY, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom were referred the following bills, submitted adverse reports thereon; which were agreed to, and the bills were postponed indefinitely:

A bill (S. 2295) to grant an honorable discharge to Nathan P. Randall; and

A bill (S. 1204) to award a medal of honor to Maj. John O. Skinner, surgeon, United States Army, retired.

Mr. HOPKINS, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 19519) to extend the privileges of the seventh section of the act approved June 10, 1880, to the subport of Superior, Wis., reported it without amendment.

Mr. HEMENWAY, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (S. 265) to correct the record of discharge of Amos Dahuff, reported it with amendments, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. SCOTT, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to whom was referred the bill (S. 544) to provide for the erection of a public building in the city of Great Falls, Mont., reported it with amendments.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER BRIDGE AT ST. LOUIS.

Mr. STONE. I am directed by the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 20210) to authorize the city of St. Louis, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Missouri, to construct a bridge across the Mississippi River, to report it with an amendment, and I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The Secretary read the bill; and there being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The amendment of the Committee on Commerce was to insert a new section, as follows:

SEC. 2. That for the purpose of carrying into effect the objects of this act the city of St. Louis may receive, purchase, and also acquire by lawful appropriation and condemnation in the States of Illinois and Missouri, upon making proper compensation, to be ascertained according to the laws of the State within which the same is located, real and personal property and rights of property, and may make any and every use of the same necessary and proper for the construction, maintenance, and operation of said bridge and approaches consistent with the laws of the United States and of said States, respectively.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

RED RIVER BRIDGE AT OSLO, MINN.

Mr. BERRY. I am directed by the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 20119) to authorize the village of Oslo, Marshall County, Minn., to construct a bridge across the Red River of the North, to report it favorably without amendment.

Mr. NELSON. I ask for the present consideration of the bill just reported by the Senator from Arkansas.

The Secretary read the bill; and there being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHESAPEAKE AND DELAWARE BAYS.

Mr. GALLINGER. I am directed by the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 21) authorizing the President of the United States to appoint a commission to examine and report upon a route for the construction of a free and open waterway to connect the waters of the Chesapeake and Delaware bays, to report it favorably without amendment, and I ask for its present consideration.

The Secretary proceeded to read the joint resolution.

Mr. HALE. Was the joint resolution just reported?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It has just been reported by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER], who requested unanimous consent for its present consideration. It is being read for the information of the Senate.

Mr. HALE. It is a very grave question whether the Government ought to commit itself to any more of these schemes. I shall ask that it go over until I can examine it.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The joint resolution will go to the Calendar.

Mr. GALLINGER. It has been partly read. I suggest that it be read through.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, the Secretary will complete the reading.

The Secretary resumed and concluded the reading of the joint resolution.

Mr. HALE. Let it go over.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. It will go to the Calendar.

PARK AT CRAWFORD, NEBR.

Mr. WARREN. I am directed by the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 19181) to grant a certain parcel of land, part of the Fort Robinson Military Reservation, Nebr., to the village of Crawford, Nebr., for park purposes, to report it favorably without amendment. The bill is a very short one, is of an important local nature, and I ask that it may have immediate consideration.

The Secretary read the bill; and there being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WORKS OF RIVER AND HARBOR IMPROVEMENT.

Mr. MALLORY. I am directed by the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 20266) to amend an act entitled "An act authorizing the condemnation of lands or easements needed in connection with works of river and harbor improvement at the expense of persons, companies, or corporations," approved May 16, 1906, to report it favorably with an amendment. I call the attention of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. DOLLIVER] to the bill.

Mr. DOLLIVER. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill just reported by the Senator from Florida.

The Secretary read the bill, and there being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The amendment of the Committee on Commerce was, on page 2, line 2, after the word "operating," the first word in the line, to insert "locks, dry docks, or other works, to be conveyed to the United States free of cost, and of constructing, maintaining, and operating;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That an act entitled "An act authorizing the condemnation of lands or easements needed in connection with works of river and harbor improvement at the expense of persons, companies, or corporations," approved May 16, 1906, be amended so as to read as follows:

"That whenever any person, company, or corporation, municipal or private, shall undertake to secure any land or easement therein, needed in connection with a work of river and harbor improvement duly authorized by Congress, for the purpose of conveying the same to the United States free of cost, or for the purpose of constructing, maintaining, and operating locks, dry docks, or other works to be conveyed to the United States free of cost, and of constructing, maintaining, and operating dams for use in connection therewith, and shall be unable for any reason to obtain the same by purchase and acquire a valid title thereto, the Secretary of War may, in his discretion, cause proceedings to be instituted in the name of the United States for the acquirement by condemnation of said land or easement, and it shall be the duty of the Attorney-General of the United States to institute and conduct such proceedings upon the request of the Secretary of War: Provided, That all expenses of said proceedings and any award that may be made thereunder shall be paid by the said person, company, or corporation, to secure which payment the Secretary of War may require the said person, company, or corporation to execute a proper bond in such amount as he may deem necessary before said proceedings are commenced."

SEC. 2. That the said act of May 16, 1906, be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

LAKE ERIE AND NIAGARA RIVER TUNNEL.

Mr. NELSON. I am directed by the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (S. 6493) to authorize the city of Buffalo, N. Y., to construct a tunnel under Lake Erie and Niagara River, to erect and maintain an inlet pier therefrom, and to construct and maintain filter beds for the purpose of supplying the city of Buffalo with pure water, to report it favorably with an amendment, and I submit a report thereon. I call the attention of the Senator from New York [Mr. PLATT] to the bill.

Mr. PLATT. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill just reported by the Senator from Minnesota.

The Secretary read the bill, and there being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The amendment of the Committee on Commerce was, on page 1, line 12, after the word "light," to strike out the period and insert a colon, and then strike out "also to construct and maintain filter beds between the new channel in Black Rock Harbor and Bird Island pier, and extending from the northerly line of Hudson street produced, along the line of the new channel not more than 3,300 feet;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That it shall be lawful for the city of Buffalo, in the State of New York, to construct and maintain a tunnel under Lake Erie, Niagara River, Black Rock Harbor, and the United States lands known as Fort Porter, extending from a point 1,000 feet, more or less, southeasterly of the Horseshoe Reef light 11,000 feet to the present pumping station of the city of Buffalo, and to erect and maintain an inlet pier therefrom, said inlet pier to be located not more than 1,100 feet southeasterly of the present Horseshoe Reef light: Provided, That the top of the said tunnel shall be located at least 40 feet below mean lake level, and that the city of Buffalo shall maintain a light from sunset to sunrise on the inlet pier at its own expense.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RAILROAD SIDINGS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. ALLEE. I am directed by the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 19682) authorizing the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to permit the extension and construction of railroad sidings in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, to report it favorably with amendments, and I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

The Secretary read the bill.

Mr. HALE rose.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I hope the Senator from Maine will not object.

Mr. HALE. After this I shall feel constrained to call for the regular order. To-day has been devoted by the order of the Senate to the consideration of the canal bill, which is to come up as soon as the routine morning business is concluded, and a vote is to be taken at 3 o'clock. There are half a dozen Senators who want to speak, and their time is now being taken up by these bills.

After this, Mr. President, I shall object to the consideration of anything, and call for the regular order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill just read?

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The first amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia was, on page 1, line 7, after the word "property," to insert "owners on the west side of Sixth street;" so as to read:

That from and after the passage of this act so much of Sixth street in Center Eckington, excepting that part lying between the north and south building lines of V street, shall be completely vacated and abandoned for public use and shall revert to the abutting property owners on the west side of Sixth street, and the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are hereby authorized to permit the extension and construction of two railroad sidings across V street, between Fifth street and the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad right of way.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to add a new section at the end of the bill, as follows:

SEC. 4. This act may at any time be amended or repealed, and no party shall be entitled to damages or to compensation of any kind in case the sidings or structures authorized by this act are required to be discontinued or removed.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. ALLEE, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill (S. 6391) authorizing the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to permit the extension and construction of railroad sidings in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, submitted an adverse report thereon; which was agreed to, and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

LANDS IN CHOUTEAU COUNTY, MONT.

Mr. CARTER. From the Committee on Public Lands I report back favorably without amendment the bill (H. R. 19916) withdrawing from entry certain public lands in Chouteau County, Mont., and leasing the same to the board of trustees of the Montana College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, and I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

Mr. HALE. I have just announced that, in the interest of the Senators who desire to speak on the canal bill, I shall object to the consideration of any further bills. I had already made that announcement.

Mr. CARTER. Very well.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. BULKELEY introduced a bill (S. 6505) granting an increase of pension to Theodore Morgan Benton; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. BENSON introduced a bill (S. 6506) granting an increase of pension to Henry Z. Bowman; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying paper, referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. CARTER introduced a bill (S. 6507) to provide for the disposal of certain lands within the abandoned military reservation of St. Michael to persons claiming the same and having improvements thereon for the purposes of trade; which was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. PENROSE introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 6508) granting an increase of pension to John M. Johnson; and

A bill (S. 6509) granting a pension to Sarah Virginia Richardson.

Mr. BURROWS (for Mr. ALGER) introduced the following bills; which were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Pensions:

A bill (S. 6510) granting an increase of pension to Sarah R. Williams; and

A bill (S. 6511) granting an increase of pension to Rudolph Papst.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS—APPALACHIAN FOREST RESERVE.

On motion of Mr. SIMMONS, it was Ordered, That the originals of the illustrations accompanying Senate Document No. 84, Fifty-seventh Congress, first session, relating to the proposed Appalachian Forest Reserve, be taken from the files of the Senate and delivered to the Department of Agriculture.

FORTIFICATIONS APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. PERKINS submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14171) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, for the armament thereof, for the procurement of heavy ordnance for trial and service, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 4.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 2 and 5, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 1, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "five hundred thousand dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in the last line of said amendment insert "one hundred and sixty-five thousand dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 6, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "four hundred thousand dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

GEO. C. PERKINS,
F. E. WARREN,
JNO. W. DANIEL,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

WALTER I. SMITH,
J. WARREN KEIFER,
JOHN J. FITZGERALD,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles, and referred to the Committee on Commerce:

H. R. 7083. An act to repeal section 5, chapter 1482, act of March 3, 1905;

H. R. 11030. An act to authorize the counties of Yazoo and Holmes to construct a bridge across Yazoo River, Mississippi;

H. R. 12080. An act granting to the Siletz Power and Manufacturing Company a right of way for a water ditch or canal through the Siletz Indian Reservation, in Oregon;

H. R. 19431. An act permitting the building of a dam across the Mississippi River between the counties of Stearns and Sherburne, in the State of Minnesota; and

H. R. 19680. An act directing the Secretary of War to cause an examination and survey to be made of Coney Island channel.

H. R. 11044. An act authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Treasury, in certain contingencies, to refund to receivers of public moneys acting as special disbursing agents amounts paid by them out of their private funds; was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

H. R. 19607. An act for the acknowledgment of deeds and other instruments in Guam, Samoa, and the Canal Zone to affect lands in the District of Columbia and other Territories; was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

H. R. 20017. An act to regulate the checking of baggage by common carriers; was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

H. J. Res. 43. Joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of war to furnish condemned cannon for a life-size statue of Gen. Henry Leavenworth, at Leavenworth, Kans.; was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

BYRON K. MAY.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States; which was read:

To the Senate:

In compliance with the resolution of the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring) of June 14, I return herewith Senate bill No. 1510, entitled "An act granting an increase of pension to Byron K. May."

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, June 18, 1906.

Mr. McCUMBER. The President having returned, pursuant to the concurrent resolution of the Senate, the bill (S. 1510) granting an increase of pension to Byron K. May, I move that the bill be laid upon the table. The claimant under the bill died after it reached the hands of the President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

If there be no further concurrent or other resolutions, the morning business is closed.

PANAMA CANAL.

Mr. HALE. I call for the regular order.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The morning business is closed, and the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business under the unanimous-consent agreement.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 6191) to provide for the construction of a sea-level canal connecting the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, and the method of construction.

Mr. KITTREDGE. If it is agreeable to the Senate, I wish to submit some remarks at a quarter past 2, closing the debate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. CULLOM. Mr. President, I desire to address the Senate very briefly on the pending bill to determine the type of the Panama Canal.

The country is to be congratulated on the fact that, after a century of waiting, Congress has determined that a canal shall be constructed under American control across the Isthmus, and we are now considering the last general legislation that will be necessary to insure the completion of the canal.

The people of the country are not so much concerned over the type of the canal as they are over the fact that they want an American canal constructed across the Isthmus in the shortest possible time.

EFFORTS TO SECURE A CANAL.

There has never been, Mr. President, within my knowledge, a question which was discussed so long in Congress without definite result as the question of an isthmian canal.

It was a live question when I entered the House in 1865, and all during my term of service there has scarcely been a session when there has not been more or less discussion over an isthmian canal.

We have spent millions in investigating routes and years of time in the removal of treaty obligations which stood for half a century as an effectual barrier against the construction of any canal across the Isthmus. It has only been within the past five years that any real progress toward securing a canal has been made.

Senators remember very well the long discussion which we had over the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, and the ratification of the first and second Hay-Pauncefote treaties, providing for a neutral canal, to be constructed at the expense of the United States and to be under our sole management and control. We were all in favor of the Nicaraguan route at one time, but, fortunately or unfortunately, as the future will determine, we secured an option on the Panama route, and then the discussion was reopened and long continued as to which route should be selected.

I desire to say that I had the honor of making a brief speech in favor of the Nicaragua route before it was known that we could possibly secure the other, and since that time I have been in favor of the Panama route.

THE SPOONER ACT.

The Spooner Act was passed, the route was determined, we determined that we would have a canal, work was actually commenced on the Isthmus, and I assumed, of course, that the Spooner Act settled it that we were to have a lock canal. But that question was agitated; it was submitted to a board of consulting engineers, who, unfortunately, could not agree; there was criticism, and the President preferred that Congress should have an opportunity to express itself on the question whether the canal should be a lock or a sea-level canal, and if Congress prefers to remain silent he has determined to construct a lock canal, as he has a right to do under the Spooner Act.

THE SPOONER ACT CONTEMPLATED A LOCK CANAL.

When the Spooner Act was passed I think it was almost the unanimous opinion in Congress that a lock canal was to be constructed. It is true that there was some talk of building first a lock canal and gradually converting it into one at sea level, but, so far as I now remember, it was not suggested that we build a sea-level canal in the first instance. From the report of the Board of Engineers we know now that it would cost more than $200,000,000 to convert a lock canal into one at sea level, and if we are to construct a sea-level canal at all, we should do it now. But it is also plain to me, from the reports of the Board of Consulting Engineers, that a lock canal is practicable; that it will meet every requirement of commerce; that it is equal in every respect, and in many respects superior, to the so-called "sea-level canal," and there seems to me no reason why we should go to the enormous expense of constructing the sea-level canal recommended.

THE LOCK CANAL.

I am in favor of the so-called "lock canal." I have studied carefully the majority and minority reports of the Board of Consulting Engineers, and also the report of the Commission, and I do not think there is any question but that the lock canal, with a summit level at elevation of 85 feet, is preferable to the sea-level canal recommended by the majority of the Board. The truth is, both canals are lock canals, and it is impossible to have a canal at sea level across the Isthmus without one or more locks. This is true, as is well known, on account of the 20-foot tide.

THE IDEAL SEA-LEVEL CANAL.

At first I was much impressed, as I suppose other Senators have been, with the idea of a sea-level canal. My idea of a sea-level canal was a broad, straight waterway connecting the Atlantic and the Pacific at sea level throughout, through which the commerce of the world could pass without interruption, costing practically nothing for mere operation. If such a canal could be constructed, it would be, as has been stated, the ideal canal; but such a canal is impossible, not only on account of the tide, but on account of the enormous cost, too great for even this Government, with its unlimited resources, to undertake. The sea-level canal recommended is far different, having one great lock a thousand feet long, narrow, curved, costing more to maintain, when interest charges are taken into consideration, than the lock canal.

BOTH CANALS ARE PRACTICABLE.

I was much pleased in reading the reports of the Board of Consulting Engineers and of the Commission to find that they all substantially conceded that either type of a canal can be constructed, so whichever type Congress may select, we are sure to have a canal, and money spent on either type will not be wasted.

REASONS FOR PREFERRING THE LOCK CANAL.

Mr. President, I base my preference for the lock canal, with an 85-foot summit level, on the reasons set forth in the minority report of the Board of Consulting Engineers, on the report and recommendation of the Commission, on the recommendation of the chief engineer, Mr. Stevens, on the recommendation of the Secretary of War, and finally on the recommendation of the President, under whose Administration this great work has been commenced, and who has done more than any of his predecessors to bring about the construction of an isthmian canal.

WEIGHT OF EVIDENCE IN FAVOR OF LOCK CANAL.

I think the weight of evidence before the Senate is in favor of the lock canal.

Mr. Noble, Mr. Abbott, Mr. Stearns, Mr. Ripley, Mr. Randolph, of the Board of Consulting Engineers, than whom there are no abler engineers in this or any other country, join in an admirable report recommending the lock canal. The Isthmian Canal Commission, consisting of Messrs. Shonts, Magoon, Hains, Ernst, and Harrodd, recommend the lock canal. Mr. Stevens, who has proved himself to be entitled to the first rank among practical engineers, and who is more familiar with the work and with conditions on the Isthmus connected with the work than any other engineer, approved the adoption of the lock canal and strongly recommended to the Commission that it give its official voice in favor of such a type.

On the other hand, we have the recommendation of the majority of the Board of Consulting Engineers, consisting of Messrs. Davis, Parsons, Burr, Hunter, Guerard, Tinchuzer, Welcker, and Quellennec, and Mr. Endicott, of the Commission, recommending the sea-level type.

The engineers of this country who are familiar with the practical working of lock canals are in favor of the lock canal; the foreign engineers are in favor of the sea-level type. The President says that the foreign engineers are more familiar with the Suez Canal, a sea-level canal, which explains this preference.

I would place great faith in the mere recommendation of our own great engineers, and when their recommendation is supported by the able minority report before the Senate, it is sufficient to convince me that we should adopt the lock canal.

TIME AND COST.

It being admitted that both canals can be constructed and that both are practicable, I attach more importance to the question of time and expense than to any other consideration.

TIME.

First, as to the question of time. It is admitted, I believe, that the lock canal can be constructed in eight and one half or nine years. The majority of the Board claim that the sea-level canal can be constructed in from twelve to thirteen years. Mr. Stevens thinks it will take eighteen or twenty years, and the President says that it will take twice as long to construct a sea-level as a lock canal. Others claim it will take twenty-five years or more. There is much difference of opinion as to the time, but certain it is that it will take years longer—an indefinite length of time longer—to make the enormous excavation at the Culebra cut, where at one point an excavation must be made so that the sea-level canal when constructed would have an embankment on each side of nearly 600 feet, to construct the sea-level canal.

We have waited for a canal for more than fifty years—at least since we entered into the Clayton-Bulwer treaty in 1850—and I want a canal constructed, so that the present generation, who will bear the cost of it, will enjoy some of its benefits. The question of time to me is a very serious consideration.

We know how long it will take to construct a lock canal. We do not know with any degree of definiteness how long it will take to construct a sea-level canal, except that it will take years longer. That element alone is of sufficient importance to induce us to favor the lock type.

COST.

Then there is the question of cost. The lock canal will cost less than $140,000,000. It is admitted by all that the sea-level canal will cost to exceed a hundred million dollars more, and the Isthmian Canal Commission and Mr. Stevens claim that it will cost $132,000,000 more to construct the sea-level than the lock canal. It is admitted by everyone that it will cost vastly more to build a sea-level canal of sufficient width in order that vessels of the largest size may pass each other at all points with safety.

A hundred and thirty-two million dollars is an enormous difference. It is an enormous amount of money; and I do not think there is a country or government in the world excepting our own that would hesitate one minute in selecting the type of a canal, it being admitted that both types are practicable, by which this enormous amount of money can be saved.

THE CANAL WILL BE A PAYING ENTERPRISE.

No one can tell now whether the canal when constructed will become a paying enterprise from a commercial standpoint. It is to our credit that the question of profit has not entered into the construction of this great waterway. We want the canal, and the people want it, even if it will not pay annually for its own maintenance. But, in my judgment, the canal will pay. We can not probably expect, at least for years to come, that it will be patronized by the world to the extent that the Suez Canal has been patronized. De Lesseps, than whom there was no better judge, was willing to spend millions for the construction of the Panama Canal, feeling sure that it would be a great paying investment. The Suez Canal, I am informed, has paid to its stockholders in one year, over and above all the expenses of operation, many millions of dollars. The lock canal can accommodate about as much commerce as can the sea-level canal, and whichever type is selected, I am sure, will not prove a failure from a financial standpoint.

At the same time, if we can save over a hundred million dollars on the initial cost, we should do so.

COST OF MAINTENANCE.

The cost of maintaining the sea-level canal will be less than the cost of maintaining the lock canal, owing, of course, to the increased number of locks; but when we take into consideration the interest charge on the increased cost of the sea-level canal, we are informed by the Commission that the cost of operation and maintenance, including fixed charges, will be less by some $2,000,000 per annum for the lock than for the sea-level canal.

COMPARISON OF TWO TYPES.

Now, as to the description of the two types of canal, in my judgment, there is no question but that the lock canal recommended by the minority of the Board is superior to that type of sea-level canal recommended by the majority. It is not the ideal sea-level canal. Such a canal, of course, would be superior to any canal that could be devised.

As to width and depth, the lock canal proposed is much superior to the sea-level canal.

WIDTH AND DEPTH.

In my judgment, the width proposed in the sea-level canal is inadequate.

The lock canal will be 1,000 feet wide for 19 miles of its length, or over 38 per cent. It will be over 500 feet wide for over 10 miles of its length. It will be less than 300 feet wide for only one-eighth of its length, and for more than two-thirds of its length it will be 500 feet wide or more, and it will be nowhere less than 200 feet wide. There will be one or two lakes provided where vessels can turn and retrace their course, if desirable.

Now, compare this with the sea-level canal. The sea-level canal for nearly one-half its length will be only 150 feet wide and for nearly five-sixths of its length it will not exceed 200 feet. It will be necessary to have regular stopping places where vessels of large dimensions can pass each other, as for a majority of the distance the canal will not be of sufficient width for large vessels to pass even at reduced rates of speed.

This is a most important feature. The tendency is toward larger and speedier vessels, and the comparatively great width of the lock canal will prove of the greatest advantage.

The report of the Commission sets forth very clearly the advantage of this increased width in the lock canal.

The following appears, in substance, from the report (p. 83):

PASSING OF VESSELS.

In the sea-level canal it will be necessary for one of two ships of medium or large size about to meet to make fast to mooring piles while the other passes at reduced speed. The broad channels afforded by the lock canal with summit level at elevation of 85 feet will enable ships to pass through them at much greater speed and with much greater safety than in the narrow channels of the sea-level canal, and as there will be only a small proportion of channel less than 300 feet wide in the lock canal very little loss of time will occur at meeting points; but in the sea-level canal, with its narrow channel all the way across the Isthmus, the time lost at meeting points will be considerable, even with moderate traffic, and will increase with great rapidity as traffic increases. With ships approaching in dimensions those contemplated by the act of Congress—the Spooner Act—the transit across the Isthmus even with a small traffic would require more time in the proposed sea-level canal than in the lock canal.

There is another great objection to the sea-level canal, as recommended by the Board. Their plan contemplates a canal with numerous curves.

The Commission has stated that in the narrow channels of the sea-level canal night navigation will be more hazardous than day, and ships will probably move at lower speed than assumed for the calculation of time of transit. Unless ships arrive very early in the day they will not be able to pass through the canal by daylight on the day of arrival, but will have to submit to the delays of night navigation or tie up until next day. Taking, for example, a tonnage of 20,000,000, the annual loss on the basis of earnings of one-half mill per ton mile would not be less than $1,500,000, which, capitalized at 3 per cent, shows that an expenditure of $50,000,000 would be justified to avoid such a delay. The Commission concludes by stating (p. 84):

> By the adoption of the summit-level canal instead of a sea-level canal, the time of transit is shortened, not only without additional cost, but with a large saving.

The lock canal is also superior in the matter of depth, an important feature for larger vessels.

So in the general description of the canal—in curvature, in width, and in depth—the lock canal has very much the advantage of the sea-level type.

SAFETY.

There has been considerable discussion of the relative safety of the two types of canal. It is self-evident that the more gates and locks there are the more danger there is for accidents. The sea-level canal has one lock, the lock canal has several, and of course there is a possibility of accident every time the vessel enters the lock, but the possibility is a very small one. We have had more experience with locks than any other country. Our canal at Sault Ste. Marie has three times the traffic of the great Suez Canal. The latter is a sea-level canal and the former a lock canal. The lock canal at the Soo has given the utmost satisfaction, and few, if any, accidents have occurred.

Then, again, the plans proposed for the lock canal provides for duplicate locks, reducing the probability of delay of traffic, by reason of accident to the lock, to the very minimum.

The result of an accident by which a vessel should be sunk in the sea-level canal is much greater than in the lock canal here proposed. Owing to the narrow channel of the sea-level canal, if a great vessel should sink, it would entirely obstruct the passage. At but a very few points on the lock canal would this result occur. Such an accident is not improbable. At one time a vessel sunk in the Suez Canal, which delayed traffic for nine days, causing a loss of hundreds of thousands of dollars not only to the canal itself, but to the commerce passing through it.

In either type of the canal a vessel might be sunk, but there is much less probability of its delaying traffic in the lock canal than there is in the sea-level canal.

DESTRUCTION DURING WAR.

I think it is probably conceded that during war the lock canal could be more easily destroyed by an enemy. I do not place much stress on this objection. Either type of canal is susceptible of destruction by a hostile fleet, but, in my judgment, neither would ever be destroyed in time of war. The Hay-Pauncefote treaty contemplated that this shall be a neutral canal, open alike in time of peace as in time of war to the commerce of the world. Elaborate rules of neutrality are laid down; and I do not think there is any nation that would destroy the canal dedicated by us, as it has been, to the free commerce of the world. But if the United States should be at war, we would take as much care to protect the canal as we would our own coast. If thought to be in danger, we would protect its approaches as well as throughout its entire length. If an enemy should overcome us, and desired to do so, they could as easily destroy the sea-level as the lock canal.

RÉSUMÉ OF REASON IN FAVOR OF LOCK CANAL.

For the reasons I have given, Mr. President, I am strongly of the opinion that Congress should either pass a law selecting the lock canal, or should leave it in the hands of the President, who has advised us that if we do not express to the contrary he will proceed, under the Spooner Act, to construct a lock canal. To sum up the reasons in favor of the lock canal: We know how long it will take to construct it. We know it will not exceed nine years. With the sea-level canal, it is indefinite. It may take eighteen, it may take twenty-five years. If we select the lock canal, the present generation will enjoy its benefits. The canal is to be for all time, but if we select the sea-level type, only future generations will enjoy its benefits. The lock canal will cost from one hundred to one hundred and thirty-two million dollars less than the sea-level canal, an enormous amount for even this nation. Both canals are thoroughly practicable, and one will accommodate as much of the commerce of the world as the other. The lock canal is wider and deeper and has less curvature than the sea-level canal—important considerations, as I have attempted to show. It will provide a quicker passage for large vessels; and taking into consideration its cost, it will cost far less to operate and maintain it; and in time of war it can be as easily defended as can the sea-level canal.

maintain it; and in time of war it can be as easily defended as can the sea-level canal.

Mr. KITTREDGE. Mr. President, I understand that the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] desires to address the Senate on the unfinished business.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, if no Senator is ready to go on with the debate on the canal bill, I should like, by unanimous consent, to run the sundry civil appropriation bill until the debate is resumed on the canal bill. Of course I do not want to interfere, but I can use up the time very profitaby to the Senate if no Senator is ready to speak on the canal bill.

Mr. HOPKINS. I will say to the Senator from Maine that an arrangement was made that the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. SPOONER] should address the Senate on the canal bill this morning. I do not see him in the Senate at the present time, and, of course, I do not want any arrangement made that will prevent his having an opportunity to speak.

Mr. HALE. If I get the appropriation bill up by unanimous consent, I shall withdraw it, of course, if any Senator is ready to speak on the canal bill.

Mr. MILLARD. Mr. President, will the Senator from Maine allow me a moment?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Maine yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. HALE. Certainly.

Mr. MILLARD. I merely want, Mr. President, to make a correction, which I think should be made, of a statement appearing in the RECORD of yesterday, on page 9106, in the portion of the letter of Mr. Hunter which was read by the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. KITTREDGE]. I should like to have the Secretary read the paper which I send to the desk.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

In the item of $5,005,000 of cost of the lock canal, found upon page 95 of the report of the Board of Consulting Engineers, is included an amount for clearing the wide channel of trees, brush, etc.

At the head of that statement is found a reference to a detailed statement of the estimated cost of building a lock canal at 85 feet level, cited as Appendix T, which is to be found upon page 425 of the aforementioned report, and from which the following extract is made:

Excavation from Gatun locks (mile 7.74) to Obispo (mile 31.25), making channel 45 feet deep and not less than 500 feet wide for 23.51 miles, of which 15.92 miles is not less than 1,000 feet wide.

Earth excavation in the dry, 600,000 cubic yards, at 40 cents	$240,000
Indurated clay excavation at Gatun, 130,000 cubic yards, at 70 cents	91,000
Earth excavation (dredging), 12,960,000 cubic yards, at 25 cents	3,240,000
Rock excavation in the dry, 1,160,000 cubic yards, at $1.15	1,334,000
	4,905,000
Cutting trees in Gatun Lake	100,000
Total	5,005,000

Mr. MILLARD. That statement is verified by the testimony of the chief engineer on page 255, volume 1, of the printed testimony. I simply call the attention of Senators to the fact that Mr. Hunter is mistaken in the statement that there is no provision made for clearing out the trees, the brush, and the jungle there is in the Gatun Lake. I also wish to say that this morning I had an interview with the chief engineer, who tells me that ample provision is made for such work and that the channel at Gatun will be a thousand feet wide.

Mr. FORAKER. Will the Senator state again from whom he got the information he just gave?

Mr. MILLARD. A portion of it I took from the report of the Board of Consulting Engineers. What I stated last was from the chief engineer, who stated it to me this morning.

Mr. FORAKER. And his statement is that there is a proper provision made in the estimates for clearing off of a channel a thousand feet wide for a certain distance and of a different width for another distance through this lake?

Mr. MILLARD. Yes, sir; provision is made in the estimates for clearing a channel a thousand feet wide.

Mr. FORAKER. What is the amount of that estimated cost?

Mr. MILLARD. The entire appropriation is a little over $5,000,000, but the appropriation for the particular work of clearing away the roadway is $100,000. That will be found in the printed testimony.

Mr. FORAKER. Did the engineer in that conversation give you any idea of the character of the growth that covers this land that is to be submerged?

Mr. MILLARD. It is a growth that is natural to that country. There are only a few trees scattered over the country; but there is a growth that is natural to that region, which is probably from 10 to 40 feet high. You might call it a jungle, except where the river is.

BUREAU OF INSULAR AFFAIRS.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 4109) to increase the efficiency of the Bureau of Insular Affairs of the War Department, which was, in line 4, after the word "President," to insert "for the period of four years, unless sooner relieved."

Mr. LODGE. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment made by the House of Representatives.

The motion was agreed to.

COMMITTEE SERVICE.

Mr. CLAY. I desire to tender my resignation as a member of the Committee on Commerce.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The junior Senator from Georgia asks to be excused from further service on the Committee on Commerce. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I desire to tender my resignation as a member of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from North Carolina asks to be excused from further service on the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. Without objection, he is excused.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Mr. President, I ask that the Senate authorize the assignment of the Senators named in the list which I send to the desk to the various vacancies on committees there indicated.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Kentucky submits a resolution, which will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That the following appointments be made to fill vacancies in the committees of the Senate: Mr. CLAY on Appropriations, Mr. TALIAFERRO on Finance, Mr. SIMMONS on Commerce, and Mr. OVERMAN on Public Buildings and Grounds.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. B. F. BARNES, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had approved and signed the following acts:

On June 19:

S. 280. An act to provide a life-saving station at or near Greenhill, on the coast of South Kingston, in the State of Rhode Island;

S. 2270. An act for the relief of Nicola Masino, of the District of Columbia;

S. 4250. An act to further protect the public health and make more effective the national quarantine;

S. 4376. An act to relinquish all the interest of the United States of America in and to a certain lot of land lying in the District of Columbia and State of Maryland, formerly belonging to John C. Rives, deceased; and

S. 5811. An act to amend section 3646 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended by act of February 16, 1885, as amended by act of March 23, 1906.

On June 20:

S. 2624. An act granting an honorable discharge to Henry G. Thomas, deceased, Company C, Second Kentucky Cavalry;

S. 4806. An act to regulate the landing, delivery, cure, and sale of sponges;
S. 1976. An act granting a pension to William N. Dickey;
S. 2294. An act granting a pension to Michael Reynolds;
S. 3735. An act granting a pension to Phebe W. Drake;
S. 6264. An act granting a pension to Cornelius Sullivan;
S. 257. An act granting an increase of pension to Caleb T. Bowen;
S. 1254. An act granting an increase of pension to Orlando H. Langley;
S. 1422. An act granting an increase of pension to George L. Wakefield;
S. 1936. An act granting an increase of pension to Lorenzo W. Smith;
S. 2501. An act granting an increase of pension to Jessie E. Foster;
S. 2566. An act granting an increase of pension to George H. Rodebeaver;
S. 2853. An act granting an increase of pension to Bridget Quinn;
S. 3122. An act granting an increase of pension to Erastus C. Clark;
S. 3168. An act granting an increase of pension to Obadiah Derr;
S. 4047. An act granting an increase of pension to William Morehead;
S. 4318. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry S. Bennett;
S. 4375. An act granting an increase of pension to David McCredie;
S. 4390. An act granting an increase of pension to Rebecca A. Alexander;
S. 4391. An act granting an increase of pension to Abner R. Barnes;
S. 4459. An act granting an increase of pension to Edwin K. Lamson;
S. 4550. An act granting an increase of pension to Henry Moody;
S. 4651. An act granting an increase of pension to Rufus M. Ashley;
S. 4741. An act granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Workman;
S. 4961. An act granting an increase of pension to William Ickes;
S. 5038. An act granting an increase of pension to James Richards;
S. 5148. An act granting an increase of pension to Mildred McCorkle;
S. 5155. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles H. Van Dusen;
S. 5195. An act granting an increase of pension to Sidney H. Cook;
S. 5262. An act granting an increase of pension to Frank N. Nichols;
S. 5353. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas W. Carter;
S. 5447. An act granting an increase of pension to Oliver H. Hibben;
S. 5543. An act granting an increase of pension to William A. Humrich;
S. 5598. An act granting an increase of pension to Almond Greeley;
S. 5860. An act granting an increase of pension to James N. Davis;
S. 5810. An act granting an increase of pension to Thomas McGowan;
S. 5870. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel H. Morrison;
S. 5877. An act granting an increase of pension to Charles O'Bryan;
S. 5898. An act granting an increase of pension to Louisa A. Clark;
S. 5952. An act granting an increase of pension to Hyacinth Dotey;
S. 6006. An act granting an increase of pension to William H. Crouch;
S. 6041. An act granting an increase of pension to James N. Brown;
S. 6065. An act granting an increase of pension to Ellen M. Dyer;
S. 6138. An act granting an increase of pension to Eliza P. Norton;
S. 6141. An act granting an increase of pension to Ransom C. Russell;
S. 6154. An act granting an increase of pension to Edwin Freeman;
S. 6155. An act granting an increase of pension to Samuel H. Davis;
S. 6164. An act granting an increase of pension to Julius S. Cuendet;
S. 6168. An act granting an increase of pension to Calvin Lambert;
S. 6187. An act granting an increase of pension to Martha Jane Bolt;
S. 6188. An act granting an increase of pension to Sarah Young;
S. 6192. An act granting an increase of pension to John Coker;
S. 6222. An act granting an increase of pension to John A. Alden;
S. 6272. An act granting an increase of pension to Harvey Gamble; and
S. 4184. An act to ratify, approve, and confirm an act duly enacted by the legislature of the Territory of Hawaii to authorize and provide for the construction, maintenance, and operation of a telephone system on the island of Oahu, Territory of Hawaii.

On June 21:

S. 59. An act providing for the establishment of a uniform building line on streets in the District of Columbia less than 90 feet in width;
S. 4170. An act to amend an act approved March 3, 1891, entitled "An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, and for prior years, and for other purposes;" and
S. 4268. An act changing the name of Douglas street to Clifton street.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the regular order of business be temporarily laid aside, and that the sundry civil appropriation bill be laid before the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Maine asks unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside and that the sundry civil appropriation bill be laid before the Senate. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 19844) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, and for other purposes.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, when any Senator desires to go on with the unfinished business, I shall, of course, withdraw the appropriation bill.

The reading of the bill had been completed and certain amendments had been passed over. I wish to call up the amendments on pages 154 and 155, and I ask that the committee amendments be agreed to, if there be no further objection to them.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Is there objection to agreeing to the amendments? The Chair hears none.

Mr. MALLORY. What are the amendments?

Mr. HALE. I can state them. The first is the amendment on page 154, beginning in line 21, and the second is on page 155, beginning in line 10, both in relation to the marshals and district attorneys in southern California and Idaho. The amendments were reported by the Committee on the Judiciary. They went over last night.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendments.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. HALE. Now, Mr. President, I wish to call up the amendment on pages 153 and 154, to which I ask the attention of the Senator from Wisconsin. It was at his request that this amendment was passed over.

Mr. SPOONER. Is that the amendment in regard to the preparation of law indexes?

Mr. HALE. Yes.

Mr. SPOONER. I hope the Senate will not agree to the amendment of the committee. The preparation of the indexes which are provided for by that clause of the bill involves a very small expenditure of money. I have looked into the matter with a good deal of care, and I think it very important that the work should be done, and done under the auspices under which I am sure it will be done if the provision is left in the bill; that is, under the auspices of men in the Library who are lawyers and well educated. It is a matter which will make it of very great value. It is not a code. As I understand, it is proposed to have it in the Library, so that if a Senator wants to know the statute law upon a particular subject he can obtain the information, and obtain it accurately in a very few moments. There is nothing of a job in it. The Senator will understand that the well-educated lawyer is a man admirably adapted for that sort of work, and that work ought not to be done by laymen. There are different methods of indexing statutes.

Mr. HALE. If the Senator will allow me, I will say that the committee had very little information in regard to the matter, and struck it out on the suggestion that the House itself had not completed its consideration. I am not sure but what the House has since then, under a suspension of the rules, voted for a proposition that covers the matter. The main object of the Senate amendment was that information might be gotten in conference or by action on the part of the House. That is why the committee struck out the provision.

Mr. SPOONER. The matter was very carefully examined by Mr. LITTLEFIELD, who went into it, I am informed, very thoroughly. I myself have felt very greatly, and I suppose other Senators have also, the need of an accurate and thoroughly well-prepared index of the statutes. The amendment involves a small sum. There is no committal by Congress to any publication of it hereafter. It will be made in the Library; it will be kept there; it will cover all phases of every class of subjects dealt with by our statutes, and it will be of very great value to Senators and Members of the other House.

There are other provisions in the bill, one of which, I notice, involves an appropriation of $10,000 for a work which does not approximate in importance, no matter how well it may be done, this matter. I refer to the republication of the organic acts, etc. There has already been one edition. It will only be necessary to add to it, perhaps, the organic act for Oklahoma, and I hope not soon, although it is possible it may turn out otherwise, that of Arizona, embracing New Mexico. It is provided in this bill that $10,000 shall be paid for a republication of that work, which is historical only——

Mr. HALE. If the Senator from Wisconsin, who is a member of the Judiciary Committee, having this more in charge than the Committee on Appropriations, is entirely certain in his own mind that the amendment is right, and that it is according to the action of the House, and that nothing since has been done, I am willing that the amendment shall be disagreed to. I think perhaps it would be safer to agree to it, and then in conference I will say to the Senator, unless more information comes, I should be in favor of the Senate receding. I leave that to the Senator himself.

Mr. SPOONER. If I were not thoroughly impressed with the idea that it was an important work which ought to be done, and that it will be well done, I would not support it. The only evidence I have is that the House agreed to it, which I find in this bill. I know nothing about any subsequent action of the House. I know it was looked into by Mr. LITTLEFIELD, who is a very careful man. I know the House embodied it in this bill, which represents the judgment of the House upon it; and I think it is wise legislation.

Mr. HALE. It is a question, not of the work being well done, but whether this provision does cover what the Senator wants and what the House wants and what Mr. LITTLEFIELD wants. Of course, if the Senator is confident of that, and the amendment is disagreed to, then it will not be open at all in conference.

Mr. SPOONER. Let the House provision be agreed to with an amendment, so as to have it open in conference.

Mr. HALE. That is a good suggestion.

Mr. SPOONER. I move to amend, then, in line 24, page 153, by striking out the words "seven hundred and twenty dollars" and inserting "six hundred dollars."

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Wisconsin proposes an amendment to the amendment, which will be stated by the Secretary.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out in line 24, on page 153, "seven hundred and twenty" and insert "six hundred," so as to read "six hundred dollars."

Mr. SPOONER. That will leave it open in conference?

Mr. HALE. Yes; that leaves it open.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment to the amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment to strike out the clause as amended.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. HALE. The next amendment is on page 102. I have been waiting for the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. MCLAURIN]. I see he is in his seat, and I call up the amendment. Let the Secretary state it.

The SECRETARY. On page 102, after line 9, the committee propose to insert the following:

For the traveling expenses of the President of the United States, his attendants and invited guests traveling with him, to be disbursed at the discretion of the President, $25,000.

Mr. MCLAURIN. Mr. President, to keep the record straight, I withdraw the appeal I took from the decision of the Chair yesterday evening. I wish to thank the Senator from Maine for waiting until my return to the Chamber. I had been out to make a call upon a sick Senator, and I did not expect this bill to be taken up to-day, because I believed from the reading of the unanimous-consent agreement for taking a vote on the canal bill that that bill was to be considered immediately after the routine morning business.

Mr. President, this amount is a small sum for the United States Government, so far as that is concerned. It would hardly be felt by the Government. It is not on that account that I object to the amendment. But I object to it because of the principle contained in it. I do not believe that in principle it is right. I do not believe it is in conformity with our idea of government; at least the idea of government which was entertained by the founders of the Government.

That feature which more attracts me to the country than anything else is the form of government which recognizes the equality of all the people of the country before the law. When the President of the United States is elected he is elected to perform the functions of an office created under the Constitution. I do not believe he is a different man from what he was before. It does not make a man a better man because he is selected to be President of the United States. True it is, if a man who has the elements of manhood in him is elevated to a responsible position, the very responsibility is calculated to develop those elements of manhood in him. But it does not make him a better man than he was before, and he is not selected for the purpose of giving him a dignified position or for the purpose of making him better than the remainder of the people of the country, or for the purpose of giving him any distinction or any title. But he is elected because according to the form of our Government it is necessary that some man shall be selected out of all the voters of the country to discharge the functions of this important office.

The same thing may be said with reference to the Senators and Representatives and the judicial officers of the United States. I have no patience with the idea of paying men for dignity and speaking about the dignity of the position. The dignity of a man is in the man himself, and the position of the man who labors either with his brain or with his hands, who either does mental or manual labor, is as dignified as that of a man in any other position. The man who delves in the mine to bring up the ore that is used, the man who follows the plow to make the corn and the wheat and the other produce which go to support the life of the people of the country are in as dignified a position as anybody else. That is what our Government recognizes; that is what our form of government means; and the simplicity of the form of government attracts me more than anything else about the Government, together with that part of the system of government which recognizes the equality of every man before the law.

I have no objection to a man using his wealth in any way he pleases, if he has acquired it honestly. If a man upon an equal footing with everybody else goes out and by mental effort or manual effort or in any other way acquires wealth, I have no objection to his utilizing it in any way he sees proper. But I do object to taxing the people of the country, even the most infinitesimal tax, for the purpose of making a class distinction.

Dignity is innate. I like that dignity which is innate; that which is developed by energy, exercse, exertion; that which comes from within, and that which does not come from without. All the powers of office that you can bestow upon a man, all the influence of wealth that he can acquire, can not give him dignity if he has no innate dignity.

Now, what is the proposition here? It is that the President shall be given $25,000 for his traveling expenses. Is there anything in the Constitution that ever contemplated anything of the kind? Why should he be given any amount of money for his traveling expenses? I am willing—not only am I willing, but I am desirous—that the President shall be paid a salary commensurate with the responsibilities and the duties that devolve upon him as an officer and in the position to which he has been elevated, but I am not willing that the United States shall establish a principle that because a man is in high position he is better than the man in low position. Where will this thing end? If the President, because he is in the highest position in this country, must have this distinction, and this discrimination must be made in his favor, then the man who is next highest to him ought to have the next discrimination, and the man who is next highest to that man ought to have the next discrimination in his favor. And so by this kind of legislation you commence at the bottom and you take the man who says "gee" and "haw," the man who delves in the mines, the man who works for his living with his mind and muscle, and you go one step above, on, on, on, until you get the whole load upon him.

> Honor and shame from no condition rise;
> Act well your part, there all the honor lies.

It is said that the President must have $25,000 to pay the traveling expenses of whom? Of himself? No, no; not that alone; but the traveling expenses of the President and his attendants and invited guests. Who are to be his attendants? I suppose, I do not know, but I just take it upon construction, that it is intended to mean those of the Secret Service who go along with the President for the purpose of protecting him against real or imaginary harm. I do not believe the President of the United States is in any danger of harm from anybody. True it is that three Presidents have been assassinated, but a great many other men have been assassinated who were not Presidents.

But if it be necessary to take along the attendants, who are to be the invited guests? Is this to be an electioneering tour that the President is to take over the country, and to take along the newspaper men who will give out to the press that which the President desires shall be given out and who will conceal that which he desires shall be concealed?

I wish to say here, lest it slip my memory at some other time, that I have no reference to the present incumbent of the White House. I would have these remarks apply to every President alike, of whatever party, of whatever political conviction, and whatever views he may have which, as has been said, it is intended by this kind of gallivanting over the country to disseminate and impress upon the people of the country. I would just as soon that the $25,000 should go to the present incumbent of the White House as to any other man who may occupy it. He would be just as much entitled to it as any other man who may occupy the Presidential chair. There ought to be no such discrimination in favor of any man as to permit him to take newspaper correspondents such as he desires to take along with him and to exclude such as would not give out such information as he desired to be given out.

Is this intended to permit him to carry along newspaper correspondents? I have seen it advocated, upon the principle that the President is expected to disseminate certain views; that he is a leader of opinion and of thought in the country, and that his thought, whatever it may be, must be, by the country paying his expenses, impressed upon the body politic of the country by his going out among the people and discussing with them and impressing upon them his peculiar views and tenets upon any question.

One man has gone so far as to say that the President never would have been able to have raised the public mind to that tension which would have enabled the passage of the rate bill had it not been for the fact that he gallivanted about over the country and impressed his views upon the people of the country. Mr. President, a long time ago, when the present occupant of the White House was in full accord with the party that was fighting that sort of legislation, there was all over this country Democratic speakers, led by William J. Bryan, one of the greatest men ever produced in this country, advocating the doctrine of railroad rate regulation—advocating legislation which would prevent discriminations and differentials in rates; and the President finding the country ripe for that, recommended it to Congress, and then the people had some hopes of it being enacted into law, because the President, being at the head of his party and he calling upon his party to enact legislation, the country expected it to be done. It was not because it was necessary for him to go over the country to impress his views upon the people of the country, but the people of the country were behind this sentiment, this principle, and this doctrine before it ever occurred to the President to send his famous message to Congress in 1904.

As I was saying a while ago, if newspaper correspondents are to be permitted to go with the President on these junketing trips, I want it to be by an amendment to this amendment, which will permit every correspondent of every newspaper in all this country, without distinction of party politics, to go along in that crowd and see what the President is doing, and report it impartially to the people, and let both sides of it be reported.

Mr. SPOONER. If the Senator will permit me, he could eliminate the objection to which he is now speaking by offering an amendment prohibiting any newspaper correspondent from traveling with the President.

Mr. McLAURIN. No, sir; I think the whole amendment ought to be eliminated. But if any newspaper man is to go, I am in favor of all of them going, if they desire to go. I should like to have the whole newspaper profession go on one of these trips and let them see what is going on and let them have some voice in the education of the people as to the opinions the President is intending to disseminate.

I have here a newspaper article which I wish to read. I do not know whether this is exactly the place in what I have to say where I want to read it, but I wish to put it in the RECORD. It is upon this idea of the President being not only the President of the United States, the Executive officer, but the legislative officer and the judicial officer of the country. Before I get away from what I was saying just now—the Senator from Wisconsin spoke about eliminating the objection by not allowing newspaper men to accompany the President. If this amendment is to go through, I want some other people to be put in there. I think the Vice-President ought to be permitted to go over this country and let his views be known to the people, because there might come another calamity of assassination of the President, and the Vice-President would become President, and his views likewise should be before the people of the country.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. McLAURIN. With pleasure.

Mr. McCUMBER. The Senator from Mississippi being an excellent lawyer, I want, while he is on his feet, to call his attention to a provision in the Constitution, and ask him as a lawyer whether or not the amendment is not absolutely against the constitutional prohibition. I call his attention to section 1 of Aricle II of the Constitution, which provides:

> The President shall, at stated times, receive for his services a compensation—
>
> Not salary, but compensation—
>
> which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that period any other emolument from the United States, or any of them.

And then I desire to call the Senator's attention to the reading of this amendment:

> For the traveling expenses of the President of the United States, his attendants and invited guests traveling with him, to be disbursed at the discretion of the President, $25,000.

Is not this $25,000 to be paid to the President? Is it not in effect additional compensation, and even if it be not considered as compensation, does it not come clearly under the definition of emoluments of office? And are we not going straight up against the prohibition of the Constitution, which was inserted for the very purpose of preventing Congress from taking away from the President during his incumbency in office any of his emoluments or any of his compensation because of disfavor, and also to prevent our adding to it during his period of incumbency because of any favor? I ask that as a legal proposition.

Mr. HALE. Will the Senator from Mississippi let me say a word?

Mr. McLAURIN. With pleasure.

Mr. HALE. The committee which put this provision onto the bill as an amendment took consideration of the question presented by the Senator from North Dakota. Undoubtedly, if the amendment is adopted, it will have to take its chance first with the Comptroller. Whether the Comptroller of the Treasury will pass these payments, which he must if they are to meet the approval of the Department, or will arrest them upon the ground that this sum is an emolument and is forbidden by the Constitution, I can not say, and no other Senator can say. It is like other things which, in the discretion of Congress, are done, but finally, when it comes to the crucible of the law officers or of the courts or of the Comptroller, the provision has to take its chance. Notwithstanding that, the committee, in its discretion, reported this amendment, which must take its chance.

Of course any Senator who thinks it is an emolument can not conscientiously vote for it, but will vote against it. But it is not a point to be raised to throw the amendment out, that in the end it may be determined to be unconstitutional. It is for Senators in their own minds to decide whether they will vote for it.

Mr. McCUMBER. Will the Senator from Mississippi permit me one word further?

Mr. McLAURIN. With pleasure.

Mr. McCUMBER. The Senator from Maine, I think, meets the whole question upon that point when he says that no Senator can conscientiously vote for this amendment unless he believes that it is not an emolument. I believe no Senator who takes an oath to support the Constitution of the United States will vote for a proposition which he believes to be unconstitutional. I believe, further, that we can practically satisfy any Senator present that this is an emolument. It has been decided over and over again in like cases that everything of that character is an emolument of office and that it is an increase of the salary or compensation. If that be true, then certainly we have no right to adopt this amendment.

There is another proposition, of course, which is whether or not a point of order will lie against the amendment. I expect to raise a point of order when I get the floor at some future time, and upon a different proposition, as I understand, than that which formed the basis of the point of order which was raised by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. McLAURIN].

Mr. McLAURIN. Mr. President, the constitutionality of every question when it is raised must first be passed upon by every Senator for himself. He owes it to the country as well as to his constituents, and he owes it to himself, if there is any constitutional question in it, to satisfy himself whether that is a valid objection, whether the provision proposed to be adopted impinges the Constitution or not.

Now, that responsibility can not be shifted to the Comptroller or anybody else. It must be decided by the legislative body. It is one of the principles of construction, when judicial tribunals are called upon to construe a statute and when its constitutionality is questioned, that the Congress is presumed to have carefully considered the question and to have decided that it is constitutional; and that has great weight with the court.

I did not raise the constitutional question on this matter. The Constitution seems not to be considered when legislation is objectionable, and when legislation is desired those who desire it generally treat the Constitution as an antiquated document. I remember discussing some years ago a constitutional question and some Senators treating the Constitution with derision, as if the Constitution had anything to do with any legislation of Congress.

I therefore did not raise the constitutional question; but I hold that whatever it is, the simplicity of our form of Government is being invaded whenever we undertake to make any distinction in favor of any class or any man, it does not make any difference how high his position. I do not believe, as I have said before in this desultory talk that I am making, that there ought to be any discrimination before the law between the highest official in the land and the humblest private citizen. It does not make any difference who he is, the law is made for him, the law is executed for him. Those who have the distinction of being called out from the great mass of the American people to execute the laws ought not to have any discrimination made in their favor, but they ought to be called upon to obey the law, just as the humblest citizen in the country is called upon to obey it.

There has been too much disposition here to allow the will of the President to override the will of Congress and to allow the President to think for Congress. Here Senators when they begin to discuss questions say the President will be satisfied with this or the President will not be satisfied with it; that this amendment meets the opinion or the approval of the President, and therefore he asks that the Senate adopt it, or that it is disapproved by the President and therefore he asks that the Senate do not adopt it.

It were better for each department of the Government to confine its attention to its own business, the executive to that which is executive and administrative, the legislative to that which is legislative, and the judicial to that which is judicial. It were better, if the President desires to make any communication to Congress or to give his views on any question pending before Congress, on any question which he thinks ought to be legislated about, that he should do so by message, as was contemplated by the Constitution when it was framed by the makers of the Constitution.

Here is a little article that strikes me as being very sensible and very forcible. I find it in the Washington Post of yesterday morning, June 20:

CONGRESSIONAL INDEPENDENCE.

Every intelligent reader of this paper will bear us out in the declaration that it is not a partisan, but an onlooker in Vienna and an independent commentator on current events, political and general; and yet we have opinions, and they are as dear to us as are those of the stalwartest Republican or the Bourbonest Democrat to him.

Under our system the only lawgiver in this nation is the Congress, and if there is one thing that ought to preserve its political chastity and legislative integrity, though the heavens fall, it is the Congress. It is first in the Constitution; it was the firstborn of the matchless statecraft of the fathers; to it was given the purse.

As a lawgiver the President's position is that of a negative quantity—at least that is what the Constitution says about it—and he can only advise or partially veto. That is all he has got to do with legislation.

We hold to the paradox it is better to do the wrong thing the right way than to do the right thing the wrong way—that is to say, it is better that Congress pass a bad law as the result of its own free and independent deliberation than to enact a good law at the dictation of the Executive. A vicious law can be repealed; a wound of the independence of Congress makes an ulcer, and it might easily grow to be a cancer.

To speak the plain truth, Congress is flat on its back right now with more ulcers than Lazarus had sores. It has done things it did not want to do, and has left undone things it wanted to do. It has been completely overshadowed in the Government. And was it for this that the Long Parliament fought a king for seven years in the old country?

It would do Congress a power of good to study the history of the proposed legislation of the British Parliament, known as "Mr. Fox's India bill," which was defeated by the "King's friends." Over here we call them "cuckoos."

This paper is the friend of the President and it is the friend of Congress; it is also and likewise the friend of its country.

I am the friend of the President. I am the friend also of this Government. I am the friend of this country. It is my country, and I love the country as a patriot ought to love his country. It is for that reason I do not desire to see any encroachment made upon our form of government, which has for its basic principle the equality of every man before the law, and also the proposition that there shall be no class discrimination in legislation in this country—that the humblest man in the country, as he walks the street, is the equal before the laws of his country of any other man how high soever his position may be.

The office of President of the United States is a great office, I agree. But however great it is, it is made for the purpose of executing the laws in obedience to the Constitution and statutes of the United States and not for the purpose of dignifying any man or exalting any particular man. When a man occupies that position, he ought to occupy it as the servant of the people, put there to execute the laws of the people. It is enough distinction coming to a man that he is selected by all of the American people to occupy that position.

Mr. President, there are some fifteen or sixteen million voters in the electorate of this country. Out of that number I suppose there might be found ten or twelve million, many of whom would be equal to the position, who would be glad to occupy the position and pay their own traveling expenses, wherever they desired to go over the country. He would not desire to go with a retinue following him. He would not desire to go with his invited guests, whether they be a few selected out of the many newspaper correspondents of the country to publish only what he desires to publish and to conceal that which he desires to be censored; but he would be willing to go and pay his own expenses, without any retinue of that kind following him.

The present Executive, whom I like very much, and who is a genial man, has been a rather expensive luxury to this country, in addition to the salary he has received. I believe there has been put upon the Mansion since he has occupied it something like $400,000. He has a yacht at his disposal. He has carriages and horses, and they are kept up by the Government. He has coachmen also. It seems to me that this discrimination in his favor ought to be sufficient.

Mr. HALE. What does the Senator say?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from Maine?

Mr. McLAURIN. Certainly.

Mr. HALE. Does the Senator from Mississippi say that the Government furnishes the President's coachman?

Mr. McLAURIN. I did not catch what the Senator said.

Mr. HALE. Neither did I catch what the Senator said. I thought he stated it as a proposition that the President already had his coachman furnished by the Government.

Mr. McLAURIN. Let me read here to the Senator from Maine and to the Senate on page 101 of the bill:

Executive Mansion: For ordinary care, repair, and refurnishing of Executive Mansion, and for purchase, maintenance, and driving of horses and vehicles for official purposes, to be expended by contract or otherwise, as the President may determine, $35,000.

For extraordinary repairs of the Executive Mansion, to be expended by contract or otherwise, as the President may determine, $35,000.

For fuel for the Executive Mansion, greenhouses, and stable, $6,000.

For care and maintenance of conservatory and greenhouses, $9,000.

For repairs to greenhouses, Executive Mansion, $3,000.

There are $35,000 here for the "purchase, maintenance, and driving of horses and vehicles for official purposes."

Mr. HALE. Yes; that Executive Office is the same as every departmental office. No Secretary of any Department, no Assistant Secretary, and no bureau officer has any business to use for his family and his private purposes any public carriage.

Mr. McLAURIN. Will the Senator allow me to ask him if they do not do it?

Mr. HALE. I do not know of anybody who does. If I did know, I certainly would help to make a fuss about it. They have no right to do it.

Mr. McLAURIN. Does not the President use a carriage that is provided by the Government and horses for himself?

Mr. HALE. Not for his private use any more than the Secretary——

Mr. McLAURIN. But what does the Senator call "private use?"

Mr. HALE. Anything that is outside of official business. It is the same with the President as it is with the Secretary. Every Department has a carriage and a horse, and the Secretary uses it for official purposes if he visits another Department or if he comes to Congress. Congress allows him that and appropriates for it. But when it comes to the family use and for social purposes, for visiting or for anything that is not official, any official—I do not care who he is—who transcends the principle that is involved in all these appropriations is wholly and entirely wrong. I do not think that a Cabinet minister in Washington ever uses or pretends to use for visiting or for any social function the official carriage or wagon that is used for official purposes.

Mr. McLAURIN. What about the President?

Mr. HALE. And I have no doubt the President does not. I am very sure he does not.

Mr. McLAURIN. Does the Senator know of the President's having any carriage horses or carriage in this city that is not purchased by the Government?

Mr. HALE. I have not looked into that; but I have no doubt whatever that the President's horses that draw his carriages that take his family and his visitors about Washington, into the country or anywhere, are purchased by him, kept by him, and the coachman employed, hired, and paid for by him. I should be very much surprised if I found that anything else was the fact.

Mr. McLAURIN. Will the Senator allow me to ask him if it is not a fact that there is kept what is known as the "President's yacht," The Sylph, and that the President uses that for his own private purposes?

Mr. HALE. That is another question, Mr. President.

Mr. McLAURIN. It is on the same principle.

Mr. HALE. No; it is not on the same principle.

Mr. McLAURIN. It is the same principle.

Mr. HALE. It is not the same principle. Congress legislates and in terms takes into hand the question of carriages every year in the appropriation bills.

Now, the question whether the President takes a Government vessel and goes on a cruise in a ship owned by the Government, run by the Government, crews paid for by the Government, whether the President gets on board, goes down the river, or goes along the coast, is another question. Congress has never taken that up.

Mr. McLAURIN. Will the Senator answer me the question whether it is a fact that he does that? I am not objecting to that. I raise no question about that. I am objecting to this appropriation. I asked the Senator whether the carriage horses and carriages that are kept by the President are purchased by the President with his private funds, and the Senator does not seem to know whether the President uses the Government carriages and carriage horses or not. I want to know if the Senator knows whether the President uses the yacht that is spoken of as the President's yacht for his private purposes.

Mr. HALE. No; I do not know.

Mr. McLAURIN. The Senator is the chairman of the committee that has control of naval affairs.

Mr. HALE. I know at least that it is not the President's yacht.

Mr. McLAURIN. I understand that.

Mr. HALE. It is not in any way the President's yacht. It is not used for the President's purposes alone.

Mr. McLAURIN. But is it not called the President's yacht?

Mr. HALE. The Senator may call it so.

Mr. McLAURIN. Is it not called so in public? I have not called it anything; but is not that what it is called in the press?

Mr. HALE. That may be. A great many things are called in the press.

Mr. TILLMAN. Will the Senator allow me?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. McLAURIN. When the Senator from Maine gets through I will yield to the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HALE. That the President sometimes gets on board of—I think it is the Mayflower—a Government vessel, takes an outing, goes down to the sea and goes along the coast, or gets on board the Dolphin and does that, I have no doubt. In my day every President that I have known has done that, and nobody objects. It does not add——

Mr. FORAKER. If the Senator from Mississippi will allow me, I should like to ask whether anybody objects to that. Is not the President the chief of the Army and the Navy?

Mr. McLAURIN. I will yield to the Senator from South Carolina, and then I will yield to the Senator from Ohio. When the Senator from Maine is through I agreed to yield to the Senator from South Carolina.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. McLAURIN. When the Senator from Maine shall have concluded, I will.

Mr. TILLMAN. I wish to ask the Senator from Maine a question, with the permission of the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. McLAURIN. I have no objection if the Senator from Maine has none.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Mississippi yields.

Mr. TILLMAN. Are not the President's official duties so continuous, in a manner, are not his mind and his time so fully occupied with his official work or with work which he considers it necessary to perform, that he never has a moment of his own except for the recreation or the exercise necessary to health? Practically, I mean, of course.

Mr. HALE. Undoubtedly.

Mr. TILLMAN. Then if he uses the stables and the horses provided by the Government is it a proper and legitimate thing for him to do? And if it is necessary for us to consider the question as to whether he pays for those horses or not, I think the Senator from Maine, after having disputed the proposition advanced by the Senator from Mississippi, owes it to himself and to the Senate to make the inquiry. He can send a telegram or he can get a message to the White House and ascertain just what is the fact in the matter of the use of the horses, stables, and coachman, etc., provided for at the bottom of page 101:

> Executive Mansion: For ordinary care, repair, and refurnishing of Executive Mansion, and for purchase, maintenance, and driving of horses and vehicles for official purposes, to be expended by contract or otherwise, as the President may determine, $35,000.

I think the Senator from Maine could very easily discover whether or not there are other horses, whether there is another stable, whether there is a private coachman or not. I do not think it makes much difference whether there is or whether there is not; but having disputed the proposition of the Senator from Mississippi, I think he owes it to us to find out.

Mr. HALE. I do not care about getting any information. I have no doubt about it myself. If the Senator has any doubt, he can do that. I have no doubt that the President's private horses and carriages, equipage, and everything that is connected with his family visitors and his friends and social duties are bought and paid for and maintained by the President himself. I have no doubt whatever about that.

Now, when you come to the matter of going on board a yacht—the Mayflower or the Dolphin—the President is a busy man, and he is the better competent to do his whole duty, to perform his engrossing duties, because once in a while he takes an outing. I do not know of anybody who is inclined to complain because the President does that. So I am not at all troubled about anything of this kind. I do not think the President is exceeding in these things the law or the natural privileges of the place.

Mr. McLAURIN. I now yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. FORAKER. I should not have interrupted as I did. I beg the Senator's pardon. I was not aware that other Senators had asked the privilege of interrupting. I only wanted to ask a question, and I did ask it, out of order, probably; but I have no doubt it is in the RECORD. However, I can repeat it to the Senator.

The question I asked was simply whether or not Senators were remembering that the President is Commander in Chief of both the Army and the Navy. I suppose if, in his judgment, it is necessary to go aboard a ship and sail about somewhere, there is nobody to question his right to do it, unless it be some gross abuse of it, which I do not understand anybody charges. Certainly there has been no ground for it under the present Administration.

I will say to the Senator I do not feel called upon to make answer to what he has been talking about; but, as I understand it, charges similar to those he has been calling attention to might have been made against any President we have had. They are all provided for by Congress—that is to say, we make appropriations for all the different purposes that are named.

They may be a little bit larger, but I imagine not very much larger than they have been heretofore. They are certainly no larger than the natural growth of the necessities would seem to require.

Mr. McLAURIN. I suggest that——

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, I rise for a question.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from West Virginia will state his question.

Mr. SCOTT. I understand the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. KITTREDGE] has given notice that at fifteen minutes after 2 he will proceed to close the debate on the canal bill. There are several of us who would like to say just a few words on that subject before the Senator from South Dakota makes his final speech, and if the debate on this bill runs a little longer I would suggest that we would all be cut out.

Mr. McLAURIN. I want, before that is done, if the Senator from West Virginia will not raise any objection to it, to put the record straight. The Senator from Ohio has his predicate wrong. I never made any charge against the President. He speaks about the charges I have made or charges similar to these being made. I made no charge against the President. I merely stated that when Congress provided carriages and vehicles and coachmen and yachts for the President, I made no objection to it, but I thought that was sufficient, and it ought not to go to the extent of making an appropriation to pay the traveling expenses of the President and his guests. That was all I said. Then the Senator from Maine interrupted to ask me a question, if there was any coachman provided by the Government for the President.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President——

Mr. McLAURIN. If I am mistaken about that, I want to be corrected. I would not make a misstatement in reference to the facts.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from Maine?

Mr. McLAURIN. Certainly.

Mr. HALE. Let me appeal to the Senator. We are taking up this time by the grace of Senators in charge of the Panama Canal bill, and several Senators wish to have the opportunity of a two or three minutes' talk on that bill. I ask that the Senate resume the consideration of the unfinished business.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. McLAURIN. Mr. President, I just want to put myself right in the RECORD, and to say that I was not making any charge against the President.

Mr. HALE. This will come up as soon as the canal bill is disposed of. I shall then ask the Senate to resume the consideration of the appropriation bill.

PANAMA CANAL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 6191) to provide for the construction of a sea-level canal connecting the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, and the method of construction.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, for a great many years I have been thoroughly of the opinion that the building of a canal across the Isthmus should be a sea-level canal. I have given the subject careful consideration. From information I have been able to obtain from those better posted, and the fact that we are compelled to vote upon the type of canal hastily and without giving some of us an opportunity to examine the hearings taken before the committee, and desiring above all things that we may have a canal and that, should I live out my allotted time, I may be permitted to see it in operation across the Isthmus of Panama, I am inclined to favor the proposition of a lock canal. I feel this way because it can be built so much quicker and so much cheaper; and we are told by so eminent an engineer as Mr. Stevens, a gentleman in whose ability and honesty of purpose I have every confidence, that this canal can later be made into a sea-level canal of the kind I have always felt we should have—of 400 or 500 feet in width. Therefore, Mr. President, when I vote this afternoon on the canal question I shall register my vote for a lock canal. But at the same time, if a sea-level canal could be built in a reasonable length of time of the proper width and dimensions, I should certainly adhere to the conviction I have held for years—in favor of that type of canal.

Mr. FORAKER. Mr. President, I do not care to discuss this question beyond saying something similar to that which has just been said by the Senator from West Virginia.

I remember, when the proposition was before the Senate some time ago as to whether we should adopt the Panama or the Nicaragua route, I was greatly influenced in favor of the Panama route, as no doubt many other Senators were by the fact stated at page 11, according to the print I have before me, of Report 783, part 2, Fifty-seventh Congress, first session, where the Interoceanic Canal Committee, or a majority at least of its members——

Mr. KITTREDGE. A minority.

Mr. FORAKER. Yes; it was a minority report. I was looking to see. A minority of the members of that committee set forth the advantages of the Panama route as contrasted with the Nicaragua route, and then, after they had enumerated nine specific advantages, they added the following:

> In addition to these facts stated by the Commission are the two following, not referred to by them, but which have become of controlling importance, viz:
>
> 10. It is recognized that a sea-level canal is the ideal. The Panama Canal may be either constructed as a sea-level canal or may be subsequently converted into one. On the other hand, no sea-level canal will ever be possible on the Nicaragua route.

The proposition thus stated by the minority members of the committee at that time was discussed very elaborately in the Senate, and I remember that it had a controlling influence with other Senators than myself in voting to adopt the Panama instead of the Nicaragua route.

That report was signed by Senators Hanna, Pritchard, MILLARD, and KITTREDGE. From that time I supposed it was in everybody's mind that a sea-level canal was the ideal canal, and that at the proper time, if not at the beginning, we would construct a sea-level canal.

It was never determined, I believe, that we should construct a sea-level canal at the beginning or that we should construct one at all, but that we should construct a canal on the Panama route, and we would locate it there in preference to any other route, because we might, if we saw fit to do so, make of it a sea-level or, in other words, an ideal canal.

Now, like the Senator from West Virginia, I had remained of the idea ever since until within the last two or three months, when this discusison was commenced, that it was the part of wisdom to build a sea-level canal, and I supposed that would be the result of the investigations that were being made by the committee. I did not have time, because occupied with other work, to follow the hearings before that committee and read the testimony as it was taken and printed from day to day for the benefit of the committee and for the benefit of Senators.

I was therefore somewhat unprepared when, a few days ago, it was insisted that we should settle this matter at this time by voting upon it. I then made a request that there might be further time than was proposed to be given us in order that we might investigate this subject and read the testimony to obtain further information. With quite a number of other duties pressing upon me, I have not yet been able to read all of that testimony, but I have read enough of it to find that there is a positive difference of opinion among the ablest engineers of the country, not only as to whether we should prefer and build at this time a sea-level canal or a lock canal, but a wide difference of opinion among those engineers as to what kind of a lock canal we should build if we determine to build a lock canal.

The minority of the Committee on Interoceanic Canals have reported in favor of a lock canal at an 85-foot level. There was testimony before that committee—and it seemed to me to be in many respects very persuasive testimony—in favor of the proposition that if we build a lock canal it should be at a 60-foot level. A great many things were said in favor of the 60-foot-level lock canal that seemed to me to give it an advantage over the 85-foot lock canal. So it is, as a result of reading after those learned engineers who have been on the ground and who have made investigations, and who have given us the benefit of what they learned by means of these investigations—as a result of reading that there is still to my mind a good deal of doubt as to what is the wisest and best thing to do.

But we are to vote, and every Senator must speak for himself in a few minutes. There is no time to investigate further, and I propose, although with some misgiving as to whether that is the wisest thing to do, to follow what has been indicated as the preference of those who have the greatest responsibility with respect to this canal. The President, the Secretary of War, the House of Representatives, the engineer in charge, Mr. Stevens, who, so far as I can judge, reading after him, is a very able engineer and a very fair-minded man, all concur that they want a lock canal, and are so insistent upon that as the result of their investigations that, in view of their responsibility, I do not feel, under the circumstances, like voting for a different kind of canal as to which, if they were to go on with the construction of it, would be proceeded with on their part with a great deal of misgiving as to its wisdom.

Now, it is not necessary for me to stop and point out what the troubles are. I am satisfied, however, that the dam at Gatun will be a safe dam, but I am not satisfied as to the safety of the locks, or that the ground under the dam will be safe as against percolations or erosions, or whatever it is proper to call them, of the water that will be brought to bear upon it; in other words, the gulches in the indurated clay, as pointed out on these maps which hang on the walls, are shown by the testimony to be filled with a different kind of material from that which is found elsewhere where the dam will be situated, and are already shown to have water in them. What the result of this will be I do not know, but as the men who have the responsibility and who have investigated the subject prefer to take that responsibility rather than any other, I am compelled, aside from all question of relative cost, to leave it to them to determine.

I might point out a number of difficulties, but I want to say further only that I have reached this conclusion not because I think the sea-level canal would be a failure if it were constructed in accordance with the report of the majority. As I understand, it is proposed to be 150 feet in width at the bottom where it passes through the dirt, and where it passes through rock it is to be 200 feet wide at the bottom, so that its narrowest part is not where the rock is, as has been all the while repeated here, but where it would not do so much harm if a ship trying to pass another should meet with the accident of running against the side of the canal. We have been told how a ship would be crushed by going against the rocks.

I do not know of anything else that it is necessary to comment upon. I have no fear, so far as I am concerned, as to the success of a sea-level canal on account of the tidal lock. That does not present any such difficulty as was suggested here yesterday; at least it does not convey any such difficulty to my mind. The tidal lock would be situated differently from the locks at the Gatun dam. If there should be any accident in connection with those locks, there would certainly be a very disastrous result, but not necessarily any disaster whatever if there should be an accident of an ordinary kind in connection with the tidal lock.

But, as I have intimated before in reference to this matter, I did not take the floor for the purpose of discussing it. I only took the floor to express the doubt I have and the regret I have that I can not vote as I propose to vote with greater satisfaction to myself.

Mr. KITTREDGE. Mr. President, the advocates of the lock canal express the opinion that the period of nine years to construct the lock canal is too great and that eighteen to twenty or twenty-five years will be required to build the one at sea level. The minority of the Board of Consulting Engineers estimate the time as nine years and fifteen years, respectively. Mr. Burr, in his testimony before the committee, stated that by working two shifts of men, instead of one, the time of construction for the sea-level canal would be reduced to less than ten years. Mr. Parsons, who was the engineer for the New York subway, a work which cost thirty-five millions, and was finished in less time than he had estimated as necessary, stated to the committee that in his opinion the sea-level canal would be finished in eleven years. Mr. Hunter, a member of the Board, and chief engineer of the Manchester Ship Canal, in a letter recently presented to the Senate, states that after a careful consideration of all the facts and conditions and the arguments of the minority of the Board, that he is confident that the Culebra excavation, the work that measures the time for completion of the whole undertaking, can be finished in ten years, and that the time estimated by the minority of the Board for the completion of this plan is far too short.

He points out that the Gatun and other dams can never be accepted as safe and secure unless cut-offs of some kind are carried down through the silt and alluvium, upon which it is proposed to base them, so as to absolutely stop the subsurface flow.

Mr. HOPKINS. Before the Senator gets to the Gatun dam and the question of the length of time—he has quoted the evidence of Professor Burr and others—I wish to ask if in their testimony they make any statement as to the number of cubic yards that can be excavated per shovel?

Mr. KITTREDGE. Mr. President, they do; and I will cover that point a little later on.

Mr. HOPKINS. Very well.

Mr. KITTREDGE. I will take your own engineers.

Mr. HOPKINS. I want to make a suggestion when the Senator reaches that point.

Mr. KITTREDGE. Mr. Hunter also expresses the belief that the magnitude as to quantity of masonry in the proposed six locks at three sites and as to the time of completing them has been underestimated; that with a proper allowance of time for curing these defects and to complete the lock canal, construction must be extended for several years. This is the opinion of the greatest canal engineer in England, thoroughly practical in every sense, and whose achievements stand as monuments of his ability and genius.

Mr. John F. Wallace is another whose opinions concerning these questions are important. He was the chief engineer of the Panama Canal for thirteen months, having left the position of chief engineer of one of the great railroad systems of the United States, and has held many responsible engineering positions with several great systems, in the discharge of which duties he had the direction of expenditures of from $10,000,000 to $30,000,000 annually. He is also a past president of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

As above stated, having been the chief engineer of the canal when a reorganization of the Commission for the construction of the canal was effected, he was retained in the position he had then held for nearly a year and was also made a member of the Commission itself. His duties were thus much extended and enlarged by order of the President. Mr. Wallace has had larger experience in the work of steam-shovel railway excavation and transportation than any engineer in the world, and is an authority on the kind of construction operations that will very largely predominate at Panama. On page 569 of the engineers' testimony he says, in effect, that he can not find any basis for the opinion that the difference in time required for constructing the two types of canal could possibly exceed three years, qualifying this statement in this way:

> But, considering that the work on the sea-level canal is plain, ordinary, everyday work of digging and hauling away what is dug, I do not believe that very much additional time would be required for the sea-level canal.

He also calls attention to the fact that the time may very well be much shortened by working at night as well as by day, the latter having been the basis of his original figures. Again, on page 608, he says:

> I doubt very much whether six large locks, with an immense amount of concrete and structure that has got to be put in by labor more or less skilled and put in in forms, and depending upon material coming there just in right quantities and at the right time—I doubt very much whether the central excavation could not be taken out at Culebra for a sea-level canal as soon as the six immense locks could be constructed. It is an open question in my mind. I think the minority have underestimated the time it will take to construct these locks.

And further on Mr. Wallace repeats and reiterates his opinions as above given.

To summarize, it comes to about this: That eight of the engineers of the Consulting Board and the former chief engineer express the opinion that the maximum time for constructing the sea-level canal will be from twelve to thirteen years, allowing for the 20 per cent additional time, as I explained in my former remarks in the Senate. Several of them, including those who have had most experience in construction work of the kind presented, place the time at eleven, ten, and even nine years. If there are any men in the world better qualified to make estimates of time to build the canal, I do not know where to find them.

The minority of the Board expresses the belief that it will take at least six years longer to excavate the sea-level canal than the lock plan they recommend.

In the hearing before the committee Mr. Noble repeats this opinion, but Mr. Stearns does not appear to have touched upon this subject in his testimony. General Abbott addressed a letter to the committee on the general question, but does not refer to the time of construction. Mr. Stevens, the present chief engineer, in the hearings before the committee makes no comment upon the estimate of time required to accomplish the work on either plan; but in his letter to the Commission, dated January 26, 1906, and which is printed in connection with the two reports, he says:

> I also believe that the difference in time required for construction as between the two types will be very much greater than reported, and I would not care to set a less time than eighteen or twenty years for the building of the sea-level canal, while I am firmly of the belief that the time as shown in the minority report for the construction of the high or 85-foot summit level is ample.

In this connection it is interesting to note the testimony which Mr. Shonts and Mr. Stevens recently gave before the committee of the House upon this question. On the 23d day of April Mr. Shonts addressed a letter to the Secretary of War, in which, among other things, he says:

> Chief Engineer Stevens during the month of March, without making any special effort, but following the general policy of work herein outlined, removed 240,000 cubic yards of material, with an average of 10.7 steam shovels working. The reports up to the 15th of this month indicate a still greater degree of efficiency in excavation. He believes that by July or August he will have forty shovels installed, and will be in a position to remove approximately 1,000,000 cubic yards per month. The actual cost for material handled during March, figuring in contractor's expenses, was 53½ cents a cubic yard.

It is not a difficult mathematical proposition to figure out the length of time, according to this statement, that would be required to construct the sea-level canal. He states that with forty shovels operating in July or August he can remove 1,000,000 cubic yards per month. In a year, therefore, he will excavate 12,000,000 cubic yards. There are to be excavated in the great Culebra cut only 110,000,000 cubic yards, requiring, therefore, according to his statement, not eighteen, twenty, or twenty-five years, but a little more than nine years to make that excavation; and all concede that the time to construct the sea-level canal is measured by the excavation of this cut. It is to be observed that his estimate is based upon the use of only forty shovels, and it is conceded that at least eighty shovels may be profitably employed in this cut. If the latter figures were employed, it requires no argument to demonstrate that the work can be completed in a still shorter period.

Mr. Shonts is supported in this statement. On page 113 of the testimony given by Mr. Stevens before the House committee, he says:

> In March we got rid of 250,000 yards of stuff. * * *

On page 96 he says:

> At Culebra cut the work we have been doing, under Mr. Wallace and under myself, has been done with the old equipment, which is out of date, which is too small, which is not economical to use; and it would have been poor business judgment to go ahead and make yardage and take out that cut with that equipment. In that sense of the word there has been no great loss of time, and the only use I have made of that equipment, both engines and cars, has been simply in preparing for the new equipment, getting in new tracks and new yards, and things of that kind. In other words, the only modern equipment we have had since I have been there has been the shovels. No cars; no engines; nothing of the sort, all of which are now arriving.

So, then, it appears that, nothwithstanding all these handicaps, Mr. Stevens dug out and carried away from Culebra cut 240,000 cubic yards of earth and rock, besides, according to his statement, drilling and blasting ahead for 361,000 cubic yards of additional rock work.

The statements of Mr. Randolph, of the minority of the Board of Consulting Engineers, whom the Senator from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS], no doubt, well knows, as he was the chief engineer of the Chicago Drainage Canal, upon this subject are interesting. Mr. Randolph has had an extensive and valuable experience in conducting large engineering works where numbers of steam shovels have been used, notably in the Chicago Drainage Canal. Respecting the sea-level canal as planned by the majority, he said:

> I regard the plan as entirely feasible and practicable, and I believe that it can be carried out within the estimate of cost. If a sea-level canal is to be built, this is the practicable route.

I read from page 137 of the report of the Board of Consulting Engineers.

On page 405 of the report of the Board, Mr. Randolph submits an estimate of the plan required to make the Culebra excavation, stated at 106,000,000 yards. He assumes that each shovel will work only nineteen day of ten hours each, and remove only 500 cubic yards per day, whereas the maximum capacity of these shovels is 3,000 cubic yards per day when permitted to work without interruption. But with these figures as a basis, he declares that 93 steam shovels would do the work in ten years, and 117 in eight years. These, be it remembered, are figures of one of the minority engineers.

In this connection, I repeat the statement made by me in the remarks I submitted to this body some time ago. Every structure and every feature connected with the sea-level canal has met the approval of all the engineers of the Consulting Board, minority as well as majority. There are no doubts respecting this type of canal. The doubt begins when it is proposed to construct a lock canal.

In this connection it may be interesting to read just a word from the testimony of General Hains, of the Isthmian Canal Commission, so highly praised by some of the Senators speaking for the lock canal. I read from page 727 of the testimony of engineers before the Committee on Interoceanic Canals:

> Senator MORGAN. General, if the country between Gamboa and Pedro Miguel was as open and as easy of being cut through by digging or by dredging as the country between Bohio and Gamboa, would you prefer a lock canal across between Gamboa and Pedro Miguel to a sea-level canal through that same area?
>
> General HAINS (after a pause). I do not know that I could answer your question offhand; but I am rather inclined to think, Senator, that I would prefer a sea-level canal under those circumstances.

Then his objection to a sea-level canal, Mr. President, is not based on any feature except the excavation of 57,000,000 cubic yards from the Culebra cut—for that is the exact figure agreed upon by all the members of the engineering board—and because of that excavation he asks and the minority of the Committee on Interoceanic Canals asks, this body to recommend and advise the construction of a lock canal. He would have this Government balk at the job of excavating 57,000,000 yards of material, covering a distance of only 8 miles and a fraction, and 85 feet lower than the lock canal.

Mr. Hunter estimates that each shovel will work twenty days in a month, and gives an average daily output of 800 yards, while Mr. Wallace estimates that the daily output would be 1,000 yards per day and twenty days per month. In this connection it should not be forgotten that the steam shovels have a capacity in favorable material of 3,000 cubic yards per day, which Mr. Stevens confirms.

I contend that the data at hand and the most competent engineers in the world, men of the most extensive practical experience, fully warrant the opinion expressed by the majority, that the time required for the completion of the sea-level canal is but slightly, if any, longer than would be required in the building of the lock canal with its six enormous locks and fully five miles of dams.

It has been stated here, Mr. President, that "a great many vessels are unable to enter Suez because the width and depth are not sufficiently great."

Let us see about this. The battle ship Mikara, with 76 feet beam, and the cruiser Good Hope, of 78 feet beam, have passed through that canal—and I refer to the report of the Board, page 177, and the engineering testimony, page 824. It should be remembered, Mr. President, that in the Suez Canal the maximum depth is 31 feet and the bottom width is only 108 feet, as against 150 feet bottom width in the proposed sea-level canal at Panama, and 40 feet draft of water.

Lloyd's Register of Shipping gives the beam of all existing vessels by name. There are but four vessels in existence with a beam greater than 78 feet, which is the beam of the Good Hope, and they are the British battle ships Agamemnon and Lord Nelson, and the Russian battle ships Pavd and Perasvanni. There is not a commercial vessel afloat with beam of over 77.7 feet, and only two are building that will have a beam of 88 feet.

Attention is here called to the notable event of the passage of a huge craft through the Suez Canal—the great dry dock Dewey, 500 feet long, and 150 feet broad—a huge iron box, not a ship, but a monster, without any power of its own, towed through the Suez Canal without accident or mishap, and without interrupting traffic an hour. That statement is based upon the report of the Navy Department.

The minority say that the Suez Canal has 13 miles in curves, and the Panama sea level would have 19, or 6 miles more than the other. Also, that the Suez Canal has at times a current of 2½ miles an hour, in which "large vessels do not steer well," and they ask "How would such vessels get on under such circumstances in a curvature four and one-half times that in Suez?" If the Senators who had used the testimony had quoted their authority a little further they would have done better. The testimony and the report read "However, the navigation is never interrupted on account of the current." (See p. 176 of Report of the Board of Consulting Engineers.) It would seem that the minority supposes that if a canal 50 miles long has over 13 miles in curvature, the navigation of it by large vessels would be attended with insuperable or very great difficulty; and yet every vessel of the tens of thousands that have already passed Suez, including hundreds of our 10,000-ton ships, have had to turn several curves of shorter radius by 1,000 to 2,000 feet than any proposed in Panama. One of these has a curve 50 per cent sharper—that is, a radius only half as long.

The Kiel Canal has 23⅞ miles in curvature out of 58, and yet the great battle ships of Germany are passing it daily.

At Manchester there is one curve of 3,300 feet radius, with bottom in the curve of 135 feet, against Panama of 8,200 feet radius and 200 feet bottom width, and yet vessels 470 feet long and 25 feet draft are daily passing these curves with the greatest ease.

Great stress is laid by the minority upon the awful things that would happen to vessels navigating the Panama Canal in the portion where tributary streams bring in their quota of water and create currents varying from 1 mile to 2.64 miles per hour; and in another place the minority of the committee says "the Consulting Board concede that the amount of water to be led into the canal during the wet season will make a current between Obispo and the shores of Limon Bay varying from a mile an hour to 2.64 miles, according to the rainfall and flood."

The Board of Engineers has made no such admission or concession. They have said that sluices are provided for in the Gamboa dam capable of discharging 15,000 second-feet of water, the average annual flow of which will not reach 5,000 second-feet. The Board also says that if 15,000 feet should be discharged, and the tributary streams below were all at maximum flood at the same time, the current developed would never exceed 2.64 miles an hour, and as no flood has been known to last more than about sixty hours, the time during which such a maximum current could exist would not exceed a half dozen days in any year, for there has never been a year since observations began in 1882 when the rivers were in flood more than twice, and then for but two or three days at a time.

The majority demonstrates that never for more than a week or so each year will the current exceed 1 mile an hour, and this is all predicated on the assumption that all the flow from the Chagres at Gamboa will seek exit to the Atlantic, whereas, in fact, a very considerable part, estimated at one-third, will flow toward the Pacific. It is extremely doubtful if it will ever reach 1½ miles an hour.

Now, to what purpose is all of this? To discredit the sea-level plan. But the minority have apparently forgotten that Mr. Noble, who is twice referred to by the minority of the committee as the "dean of American engineers," told the committee that, in his belief, the plan of the majority for controlling the Chagres floods and the flow of the tributary streams was adequate and satisfactory.

A comparison with Suez is altogether favorable to Panama. It is not half as long. It will be about one-third deeper. It will be nearly 40 per cent wider in its narrowest part. It will have nearly one-third greater area in cross section. It will have much less abrupt curvature. It will be much easier to navigate by large vessels. It will have currents of no greater velocity than exists in Suez and which does not retard navigation. It will require no more, if as much, dredging to maintain; and, finally, it will be a better canal in every way; but if a canal of the small dimensions of Suez as it is now existed at Panama, it would be a much better canal than the one desired by the minority—a high-level multilock one.

It would accommodate 99 per cent of all the vessels that now are afloat, and so far meet the requirements of the United States that the canal problem would be deemed to be solved, if a transit like Suez now existed at the Isthmus of Panama.

But it does not exist at Panama, and this nation has undertaken to construct one of capacity adequate to accommodate not 90, but 100 per cent of all vessels in existence and in expectation.

The sea-level canal proposed by the Board of Consulting Engineers will do this, and no plan yet proposed providing high lift locks will do it.

It was claimed during this discussion that De Lesseps began the construction of the canal at Panama on the sea-level plan and failed because a sea level was not the better canal at that place.

The first effort to raise funds failed, and then De Lesseps had an examination made by certain engineers of his own selection, and they reported that a sea-level canal could be constructed at a cost of $166,800,000. It should be borne in mind, however, that the canal then proposed was practically of the dimensions of the Suez Canal, which had been then recently constructed—26 feet draft and 72 feet bottom width.

The next attempt to raise money for the project was successful. Monsieur De Lesseps at once commenced work, and the Isthmus was soon teeming with life and activity, but no surveys had been made or matured plans proposed, and no data existed to show what would be the magnitude of the undertaking.

Had De Lesseps spent two years' time and two or three million dollars in surveys, studies, and preparation, a vast sum would have been saved and the work really and substantially advanced. Meanwhile the press, especially that of France, was subsidized to aid the financial schemes of the promoters, and vast sums were spent in the propaganda in bribing and corrupting those who had the power to retard the work or to levy blackmail.

Yet the work went on and the laboring force and equipment were rapidly expanded, so that in 1887 some 17,000 men were employed.

The total amount of money raised—$246,000,000—was quite sufficient had it been properly expended to have completed a sea-level canal of dimensions equal in respect to width and depth of channel to those of Suez; but it has been estimated that the actual expenditures on the Isthmus, outside of useless machinery bought and shipped to Panama from France, did not exceed at the time of the collapse $50,000,000 or $60,000,000, although, when attempting to sell the enterprise to the United States, it was claimed that over $100,000,000 had been spent on the Isthmus.

By 1887 it became evident even to sanguine De Lesseps that his ability to raise money was fast disappearing. Grasping at straws, he reluctantly accepted an alternative of introducing temporary locks of small size, to be made wholly of metal, these to be later removed and a sea-level canal to result. He announced that this programme could and would be carried to completion, and that the canal in five years from 1887 would be passing vessels and earning a revenue out of the surplus with which he would finish the sea-level canal a few years later. Apparently De Lesseps believed this, and work was immediately begun in excavating the lock pits.

But the French investors had lost all faith in the enterprise. The last efforts to raise money, by the issue of lottery bonds, failed, and in 1889 the bankruptcy of the French company was announced.

It has been asserted by a member of the minority of the canal committee that this collapse was due to the fact that an attempt had been made to achieve the impossible—a sea-level canal. This is a wholly unjustified opinion for which no proof can be cited. The result would have been exactly the same had the lock plan been adopted originally instead of later.

The two and only causes of failure were, first, the beginning of construction work without any adequate studies or preparations, and, second, because approximately four-fifths of the capital raised was dissipated, squandered, and lost, principally in France. The type of canal attempted to be made had nothing to do with the collapse. The outcome beggared and ruined a great many of the French people and resulted in the criminal conviction and incarceration of many of the leading spirits in the swindle. De Lesseps himself died a few years later, a convicted criminal. I make no hazard in repeating that had proper measures been taken in advance, and honesty and intelligence characterized the effort, both on the Isthmus and in France, a sea-level canal 26 feet deep and 75 feet bottom width would have been open to the shipping of the world and in general use by the year 1895.

From 1889 to 1894 no work was done at Panama save to care for property. In 1889 a commission to study the situation was convened by the receiver of the old company, and it reported in 1890, a date when the criminal prosecution of the promoters, directors, and contractors of the defunct company was being carried on in the French courts for frauds and embezzlements of all kinds and bribing the national legislature. It was seen to be useless to attempt to complete the canal on any plan that would involve the expenditure of a large sum, for the public was disgusted with the very name "Panama." It was, however, hoped that in time this feeling would pass away and the stench of the past be forgotten. A scheme involving the minimum of expenditure in time and money was proposed as an alternative—a lock canal—but the French public and the world's investors would have nothing to do with it, and so the work languished until 1894, when a feeble reorganization was effected, composed largely of the old promoters and contractors, some of whom, to escape conviction for fraud and embezzlement, subscribed to the capital stock of the new company, which resumed work feebly in the year stated with a capital of some $11,000,000.

The policy was to continue work in a small way, with the hope that the past would be forgotten by degrees and that later funds could be raised to complete a canal of small dimensions, but this hope proved elusive. There was a little work done on the Culebra and Empire summits, but the limited capital was rapidly vanishing. It was evident that another collapse was impending. L. N. B. Wyse again appeared on the scene with a scheme for a lock canal and M. P. Bunau-Varilla, who claims to have been the author of the provisional lock plan proposed to De Lesseps, wrote a book—indeed, two books—to show how easy it would be to make a provisional lock canal and later to transform it to one at sea level.

The company next resorted to a commission or committee of scientists to galvanize the enterprise into life and to convince the public that the scheme was realizable on a commercial basis and that profits to investors were in sight.

This committee consisted of six Frenchmen, two Germans, two Americans, one Belgian, one Englishman, one Russian, and one Colombian. They were in session over two years and reported in 1898, but result was nil so far as concerned resuscitation of the scheme. Another body of engineers appointed by the French company, four Frenchmen and one American, indorsed the report of the earlier committee for a small, inadequate, and entirely unsatisfactory lock canal. That these three commissions did not know very well that their project was but a makeshift it is impossible to believe; at all events the French and European public knew it and would have nothing to do with a plan that proposed to hoist the world's commerce and navies over a hill 100 feet high when they also knew that the Suez shares were selling at four or five times their face value, and that the profits of this sea-level route were increasing year by year.

The French company, which had set two or three thousand men at work in 1894, reduced this force steadily, so that by 1900, after all three reports of the commissions and committees had proved ineffective, they had reduced the number of men to about a thousand.

About this time an effort was made to Americanize the "enterprise," as they called it, to recharter the company under the laws of New Jersey, the French company to transfer to the other all property, rights, and interests; for it was painfully evident to the French promoters of the Panama Canal that never in the world could a dollar be raised for a private company if the United States should take up Nicaragua, which then seemed probable. The old Panama bonds were then selling for but two or three dollars per share, as reported on the Bourse. This last spasm also fell flat, for the capitalists of the United States would not subscribe for a dollar of the new stock, and the result was abortive.

About this time the Walker Commission reported that the executed work at Panama and Panama Railroad stock was worth $40,000,000. Here was a ray of hope, and it was seized upon with eagerness. The final result is well known.

But all this does not signify that the route is an impracticable one or that the property is not worth what we paid for it—the contrary is the case. Perhaps by waiting a few years we could have had the unfinished work for nothing, for the company was on the verge of collapse. But the course pursued by the Government was a wise one, for it removed many troublesome questions and enabled us to secure at Panama the ideal canal—one at sea level—and which would have been opened ten years ago had the French people gone about it in the right way and excluded fraud, bribing, and graft.

The attempts to patch up a provisional makeshift failed, as was inevitable, for Panama is no place to build a lock canal. There, and there only, in America can the ideal canal be realized—one at sea level—dividing the continents and joining the oceans at one uniform level.

It is probable, indeed almost certain, that considering the disastrous, tragic ending of the French attempt, it was beyond the power and capacity of any corporation to raise the necessary capital to complete this task. But it is quite within the ability of this nation to show to the world a finished interoceanic transit route in ten or eleven years—a canal of type, dimensions, and capacity to afford convenient passage for the largest existing ships as well as those that may be reasonably anticipated and that will endure for all time and remain throughout the ages as a monument to American energy, perseverence, brains, and integrity.

Mr. President, I yield the floor, so that the junior Senator from Ohio [Mr. DICK] may occupy the remaining five minutes.

Mr. DICK. Mr. President, Senators will remember that when in a former Congress we changed from the Nicaraguan to the Panama route, one of the determining factors in the controversy was that at Panama we might do what was impossible at Nicaragua, namely, construct a sea-level canal. In my judgment when that determination was made the action was not more important than what we shall determine now in our vote to settle the type of canal we shall build. We can understand with this great diversity of testimony, expert and otherwise, how honest men may honestly differ as to which is the better. But having changed my vote from support of the Nicaraguan route to that of the Panama route, I have failed thus far to find reasons which compel me to recede from my position in favor of a sea-level canal across the Isthmus of Panama, or to change my judgment and convictions.

We are called upon to determine on short notice and after very limited debate the type of canal which the United States shall construct. This enterprise is undoubtedly the greatest project ever undertaken by any government, involving as it does the expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars.

It is generally admitted that we must spend at least two hundred million dollars and years of time in the construction of the canal, whether it be a lock or a sea-level canal, and in my judgment the people of the United States care less whether it shall cost a few millions more or take a few more years of time, than that when completed it shall be an entire success.

It is a tremendous undertaking, and while it may prove as profitable an investment as the Suez Canal, yet, on the other hand, the traffic which passes through it may prove disappointing and the enterprise may never return interest on the investment. We have, however, engaged in the task, and can not draw back. The cost is so stupendous that no aggregation of private capital would undertake the work. We can not permit any foreign government to engage in the project, and the United States can not now retrace its steps, but must prosecute the work to a successful end.

What object should be kept in view in realizing this dream of centuries—a ship canal across the Isthmus of Panama? Should we construct the best kind of a canal, one which will be adequate to meet all probable demands, or shall we be content with the cheapest canal which can be constructed in the briefest time?

It is difficult for me to bring myself to look at this question in the way in which it is considered by the chairman of the Committee on Interoceanic Canals. In his remarks recently delivered in this Chamber, he said (p. 8703):

> In my view of the subject we are expected by the people to provide for a practical canal at the least possible cost, to be constructed in the shortest possible time.

We can not agree that the people have given any such mandate in this matter. What they want is not a canal sufficient for the needs of to-day or to-morrow, but a canal sufficient to meet all future demands which may reasonably be expected.

We are building this canal, not for to-day, but for the centuries, and the element of time, as well as the element of expense, while matters to be considered, it is true, nevertheless weigh little compared with the success of the project, which may be determined by the character or type of canal.

The statute under which the site of the canal was acquired and the work has so far been prosecuted, provides that the canal "shall be of sufficient capacity and depth as shall afford convenient passage for vessels of the largest tonnage and greatest draft now in use and such as may be reasonably expected." There has been no intimation, so far as known, that the public is demanding any less to-day in the capacity of the proposed canal than it demanded at the time that act was passed, and so, we repeat, the people have never said, and in all probability never will say, that time and cost are the sole elements to be considered in deciding upon the type of the canal which is to connect the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

The problems connected with the construction of this canal are essentially such as must be solved through the aid of expert evidence. What is the most feasible kind of canal to be constructed, a sea-level or a lock canal; and if the latter, how many locks shall there be, and what shall be the height of the various levels, are questions that can be answered only with the assistance of the highest engineering skill known in the world. From the time that Ferdinand De Lesseps, the great Frenchman who constructed the Suez Canal, turned his energy and ability to piercing the Isthmus of Panama, a great many engineers and engineering boards have wrestled with the problems involved in the construction of a ship canal between the Atlantic and the Pacific. As to the type of canal to be finally selected for the United States, there can be no question at all that, other things being equal, a sea-level canal is preferable to a lock canal. When private capital was engaged in this enterprise, the question of time and the question of cost was of much more relative importance than it is now, since the United States has engaged in the enterprise. The limitations imposed upon the French company engaged in the work called forth a report favoring a lock canal. The superior advantages, however, of a sea-level canal have been fully recognized by every person who has paid any attention to the subject. It is admitted by the President himself in his remarks to the Board of Consulting Engineers, when he received them at Oyster Bay, September 11, 1905. In the course of his remarks on that occasion he said:

> There are two or three considerations which I trust you will steadily keep before your minds in coming to a conclusion as to the proper type of canal. I hope that ultimately it will be proved feasible to build a sea-level canal. Such a canal would undoubtedly be best in the end, if feasible, and I believe that one of the chief advantages of the Panama route is that ultimately a sea-level canal will be a possibility.
>
> If to build a sea-level canal will but slightly increase the risk and will take but little longer than a multilock, high-level canal, then of course it is preferable; but if to adopt the plan of a sea-level canal means to incur great hazard and to insure indefinite delay, then it is not preferable. If the advantages and disadvantages are closely balanced, I expect you to say so. I desire also to know whether, if you recommend a high-level, multilock canal, it will be possible after it is completed to turn it into or to substitute for it in time a sea-level canal without interrupting traffic upon it.

This Board of Consulting Engineers, which the President called to his assistance, consisted of nine citizens of the United States and one engineer nominated, respectively, by the British, German, and French Governments, the Government of the Netherlands, and the consulting engineer of the Suez Canal. All these gentlemen were men of high standing and skilled engineers. To them was given the task of considering the various plans proposed for the construction of the canal and to report their conclusions after having considered and decided the questions presented to them. After making a careful study of all of the problems involved in the undertaking, this Board presented two reports, a majority report signed by eight members of the Board, recommending that the sea-level type be adopted for the Panama Canal, and a minority report signed by five members, recommending a lock canal at an elevation of 85 feet above sea level. The Board found that at Panama alone is a sea-level canal in open cutting feasible, and expressed no doubt of the practicability of such a canal.

The canal recommended by the Board has a depth of 40 feet, with a bottom width of 150 feet in earth, with side slopes adjusted to the nature of the ground, so as to give a surface width of from 302 feet to 437 feet. In rock the section is to be altered so as to have a bottom width of 200 feet and a surface width of 208 feet. At the Pacific end the canal is to be protected by a tidal lock located between Ancon and Sosa hills. It is also stated that this width will be sufficient to permit steamers to maintain a speed of 6 to 8 knots per hour, and to allow two ordinary merchant steamers to pass each other on the line of the canal without stopping.

Outside of the considerations of time and cost, two important elements must be kept constantly in mind in determining the type of this canal. It is not only to be a commercial highway, uniting the two oceans, over which it is hoped will pass a never-ending stream of merchant ships, but, what is of greater importance, the canal is to be part of the military and naval defense of the United States. It will double the efficiency of our Navy by permitting our battle ships and cruisers to move quickly from our Atlantic coast line to our Pacific coast line, and vice versa, without rounding Cape Horn.

These two considerations make it absolutely imperative that that type of canal be adopted, other things being equal, which will be the safest and the least liable to accident and interruption of traffic.

Year after year we are constructing larger ships both for commerce and for war purposes, and the canal should be large enough and adequate enough and practical enough to admit of the transportation of all these ships without hindrance and without danger. The size of battle ships has been constantly increasing, until they have reached the dimensions of the Dreadnaught class, a marine monster which Germany, Japan, the United States, and possibly other nations may equal. The engineers report it would be almost impracticable to lock a ship of this class up and down in the proposed lock canal. Of what value would the canal be to this country if in time of great national peril it would be impracticable to send our largest battle ships through it? The Atlantic liners are steadily increasing in size, and there is promise that before many years we shall see them 900 feet long and 90 feet in beam. It would be equally impracticable to send such vessels through a lock canal. The American people will not be satisfied with that type of canal. What they demand is the very best canal which money and brains and brawn can produce, and they will not be satisfied with any temporary expedient.

I can not forget, either, Mr. President, that in most of these discussions and in nearly all of the testimony, it is generally admitted that the sea-level canal is the ideal canal, and nearly everyone who has discussed the matter has admitted that the lock canal is but an intermediate construction, which, at some future time may be developed into a sea-level canal. We had better, Mr. President, take the time now and pay the expense necessary to construct that which shall be durable and permanent, and which shall answer the necessities and requirements for all time in the future.

A sea-level canal possesses the incomparable advantage of being a final and completed enterprise. Nearly every supporter of a lock canal regards such construction as a half-way measure, as merely the beginning of what is in time to be changed to a sea-level canal. The President frankly avowed that position in the remarks quoted above. The Board reported that it was practicable from an engineering standpoint to change any lock canal to a sea-level canal, but that it would be impracticable from a financial standpoint until the capacity of the canal was taxed by the increase of traffic, which would be remote, and declared that if a sea-level canal is to be constructed in the near future it should be built at once.

One of the main considerations to be kept in mind is the absolute necessity of securing safe and uninterrupted navigation across the Isthmus when the canal shall be ready for traffic. No one will deny that a sea-level canal is superior to a lock canal in this respect. The sea-level canal will require only one lock, which will be needed at the Pacific end because the tide there rises as high as 20 feet as against an ebb and flow at Colon of only 2½ feet. The engineers tell us, however, that this lock will only be required one-half of the time, so that the destruction of that lock at most would disable the canal only one-half the time. The absolute necessity of guaranteeing safe and uninterrupted passage through the canal when opened to commerce convinced the Board of Consulting Engineers that a sea-level canal was imperative. Accidents which have occurred in the past few years in the lock of the Soo Canal and in the Manchester Ship Canal, and which escaped very serious results only by the narrowest of margins, give warning that a lock canal at Panama might by some such accident be destroyed beyond possibility of repair within several years. In view of the conflict of expert opinion on the possibility of danger arising from this source, the only prudent plan to follow is to adopt a canal type which obviates that danger entirely.

We are told that the channel of a lock canal will be wider than the channel of a sea-level canal, and therefore boats can make better time through the former. In the many miles of lake navigation which the lock-canal advocates hold up to us as proving beyond question the superiority of that type of canal, a channel must be excavated, and it will have the disadvantage of being a submerged channel, such as exists in Lake St. Clair and the Detroit River, in the Great Lakes.

Such channels must be marked by lines of buoys or otherwise, and will retard the speed of vessels as much as will the channel of the sea-level canal. The Board gives the assurance that vessels can make the passage through a sea-level canal in several hours better time than through a lock canal. It is even more apparent that more vessels can pass through a sea-level canal within a given time than can pass through an 85-foot level canal with three locks, or lifts, at both ends.

The cost of maintenance is admittedly much less in the case of a sea-level canal, and the possibility of disabling it in time of war or of an interruption to traffic at any time is so incomparably less that these considerations alone should decide the issue for that type of a canal unless the elements of time and cost preponderate strongly in favor of a lock canal.

We have neither the time nor inclination to enter upon a discussion of the complicated engineering problems involved. They have been presented ably and exhaustively in this Chamber. It is a case where experts differ, but there are a few points which are clear even to a lay mind. The type of canal which presents the fewest engineering problems, which will be the simplest in construction and at the same time will be the cheapest to maintain, the easiest to defend, and the most invulnerable to accident, the type which can handle the greatest traffic, will be permanent and lasting, is the sea-level canal. It will cost more and require a longer time to construct it, it is said. Will not this greater cost and longer time be counterbalanced by the superior qualities of a sea-level canal? Of course there is impatience to see the canal completed as soon as possible. I can understand that the men connected with the construction work, the executive officers in control, and even the legislative department charged with the duty of providing means to build the canal are anxious to see the work completed within their official life; but that is a minor consideration and of no consequence compared to the responsibility and duty of Congress to legislate for the best canal possible. I am satisfied that this difference in time and cost of construction explains the strong sentiment in favor of a lock canal. It is equally apparent that this difference has been greatly overestimated. As the Board well says:

> The time required for the construction of a ship canal across the Isthmus is one of the main elements of the whole subject. If the execution of the work in accordance with any one plan could be completed within a reasonable time while the execution of the work under another plan of equal merit could be realized within a less time, it is clear that the latter plan should be adopted. If, however, there are two plans, both feasible and each involving an amount of work which can be accomplished within a reasonable period, it is clear that the execution of that plan requiring the longer period may be justifiable if the advantages thereby gained are sufficient or more than sufficient to compensate for the delay. If the work required under the less desirable plan can be finished within ten or eleven years, while that under the more desirable plan would require but two years longer, the small delay in the passage of the first vessel through the waterway might easily be neglected in comparison with the advantages secured under the better plan.

The time of construction and the cost under any plan is largely conjectural. The report of the Board gives strong assurance to the faith that a sea-level canal will not require more than two or three years longer time than the lock canal, and that the actual difference in cost will not exceed fifty to seventy-five million dollars. It is even possible, in view of the delays which may arise in constructing the locks called for by that type of canal, that a sea-level canal can be finished sooner than the other type.

In the opinion of many competent witnesses, the quickest way to construct a canal is to let it out to private contractors. It is notorious that Government work is much more expensive than private work, even when the two are identical in character. There is plenty of evidence from the Isthmus that laborers and foremen and engineers engaged on the canal work are not, as a rule, working as hard as they would be if working for private employers. There is little question that American contractors can build a sea-level canal in less time and for less cost than the Government can construct a lock canal.

Why not construct a canal which, when completed, will eliminate all possible competition in transportation of freight across the Isthmus? The Mexican Government is spending some $50,000,000 in terminal facilities for its short transcontinental railroad across the Isthmus of Tehauntepec. If we build a sea-level canal at Panama, a Mexican canal at this point will never materialize. If we construct a lock canal, and it proves remunerative, we need not be at all surprised to see a competing canal constructed at Tehauntepec.

We have not dwelt on the liability of Panama to be disturbed by earthquake shocks. There is a record of many earthquakes, and some very destructive ones, occurring on the Isthmus. They may occur again. It does not require any argument to show that a sea-level canal is less liable to damage from such eruptions than would be a lock canal. This consideration is not without weight.

The majority of the experts favor a sea-level canal, and the arguments they present in support of their position have not been satisfactorily answered. I favor the type of canal which presents the fewest doubts and will be the most durable, believing the American people will indorse that decision when they finally understand the case. We can even afford to wait a few years and to spend a few more millions to secure the best canal.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The hour of 3 o'clock has arrived.

Mr. DICK. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. HALE. I dislike to interfere with the Senator from Ohio, because he is always so reasonable, but the Senate has never had the practice of extending remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. DICK. Then I withdraw my request.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the bill.

The Secretary read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That a sea-level canal, connecting the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, be constructed in accordance with the report and plans of the Board of Consulting Engineers for the Panama Canal created by the order of the President, dated June 24, 1905, in pursuance of an act entitled "An act to provide for the construction of a canal connecting the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans," approved June 28, 1902.

Mr. HOPKINS. I offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from Illinois proposes an amendment, which will be stated by the Secretary.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That a lock canal be constructed across the Isthmus of Panama connecting the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, of the general type proposed by the minority of the Board of Consulting Engineers, created by order of the President dated January 24, 1905, in pursuance of an act entitled "An act to provide for the construction of a canal connecting the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans," approved June 28, 1902.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment just read.

Mr. KITTREDGE. I move that the amendment be laid on the table, and on that question I call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. HOPKINS. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CLAY (when Mr. BACON's name was called). My colleague is necessarily absent from the Senate. He is paired with the junior Senator from Missouri [Mr. WARNER]. If my colleague were present he would vote "yea."

Mr. BAILEY (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. ELKINS]. He is absent, and I therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. NELSON (when Mr. CLAPP's name was called). My colleague is unavoidably absent, attending the funeral of the late Congressman Lester. If he were present he would vote "nay."

Mr. PROCTOR (when Mr. DILLINGHAM's name was called). My colleague is necessarily absent. He is paired with the senior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN].

Mr. SCOTT (when the name of Mr. ELKINS was called). My colleague is absent from the city, but he is paired with the Senator from Texas [Mr. BAILEY], as announced by that Senator.

Mr. HALE (when Mr. FRYE's name was called). My colleague is absent, but he is paired with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. GEARIN]. Otherwise my colleague would vote "nay" and the Senator from Oregon would vote "yea."

Mr. FULTON (when his name was called). I have a general pair with my colleague [Mr. GEARIN], who is not present. It has been arranged to transfer that pair to the absent Senator from Maine [Mr. FRYE], and I therefore will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. GAMBLE (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Nevada [Mr. NEWLANDS]. It has been arranged whereby that pair shall be transferred to the junior Senator from Nevada [Mr. NIXON], and I will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. PENROSE (when Mr. KNOX's name was called). My colleague is absent, and will be absent for the remainder of the session. He has a pair upon this bill and any questions arising in connection with it with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. MCCREARY]. I make this announcement now to stand for all other votes arising on the bill.

Mr. LONG (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Idaho [Mr. DUBOIS]. By arrangement that pair is transferred, so that the Senator from Idaho [Mr. DUBOIS] is paired with the junior Senator from Michigan [Mr. ALGER], and I will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. MCCREARY (when his name was called). I am paired on this bill with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. KNOX]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

Mr. MCENERY (when his name was called). I am paired with the junior Senator from New York [Mr. DEPEW], who is absent. I therefore withhold my vote. If he were present I should vote "nay."

Mr. MORGAN (when the name of Mr. PETTUS was called). My colleague is detained from the Senate to-day. He is paired, however, with the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. CRANE]. If my colleague were present he would vote "yea."

Mr. PILES (when his name was called). I was paired with the junior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE]. I understand that he subsequently paired with the junior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. CLAPP]. If that be correct, I desire to vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. TILLMAN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. DILLINGHAM]. He is absent. A pair has been arranged between the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. MONEY], who is absent, and the Senator from Vermont [Mr. DILLINGHAM], and that allows the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN] and me to vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. WARREN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. MONEY]. By the arrangement just mentioned by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN], the Senator from Mississippi will stand paired with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. DILLINGHAM] for the day, and the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN] and I are at liberty to vote. I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. STONE. I wish to announce that my colleague [Mr. WARNER] is absent, attending, on the order of the Senate, the funeral of the late Representative Lester. He is paired with the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON]. I do not know how he would vote.

Mr. WETMORE. I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. ALDRICH] is paired with the Senator from Colorado [Mr. TELLER]. If present, my colleague would vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 31, nays 36, as follows:

YEAS—31.

Ankeny	Culberson	Latimer	Platt
Berry	Daniel	McCumber	Rayner
Blackburn	Dick	McLaurin	Simmons
Burnham	Foster	Mallory	Stone
Burrows	Frazier	Martin	Taliaferro
Carmack	Gallinger	Morgan	Tillman
Clark, Mont.	Hale	Nelson	Whyte
Clay	Kittredge	Overman

NAYS—36.

Allee	Cullom	Heyburn	Perkins
Allison	Dolliver	Hopkins	Piles
Benson	Dryden	Kean	Proctor
Beveridge	Flint	La Follette	Scott
Brandegee	Foraker	Lodge	Smoot
Bulkeley	Fulton	Long	Spooner
Burkett	Gamble	Millard	Sutherland
Carter	Hansbrough	Patterson	Warren
Clark, Wyo.	Hemenway	Pearose	Wetmore

NOT VOTING—22.

Aldrich	Crane	Gearin	Nixon
Alger	Depew	Knox	Pettus
Bacon	Dillingham	McCreary	Teller
Bailey	Dubois	McEnery	Warner
Clapp	Elkins	Money
Clarke, Ark.	Frye	Newlands

So the Senate refused to lay on the table Mr. HOPKINS's amendment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The question recurs on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. HOPKINS].

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. HOPKINS, the title was amended so as to read: "A bill to provide for the construction of a lock canal connecting the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, and the method of construction."

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HALE. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 19844) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, and for other purposes.

Mr. McCUMBER. I wish to ask the Senator from Maine if he expects to dispose of the bill this afternoon?

Mr. HALE. I can only say that I certainly hope and believe that it can be disposed of. One of the subjects of controversy upon the bill has been eliminated by the action of the Senate upon the Panama Canal bill, which has just passed from the consideration of the Senate. That in effect disposes upon the appropriation bill of that question.

So nothing is left now except the amendment relating to the traveling expenses of the President, and possibly one other amendment. I should hope that we may easily this afternoon, it now being but a little after 3 o'clock, dispose of these disputed questions, so that the bill may go to the House of Representatives and we may get into conference upon it.

I can not, of course, limit debate, nor will any appeal of mine, I presume, interfere, but I should hope that Senators will appreciate the real stress of weather that we are under and the necessity of sending this bill to the House of Representatives so that we may have an early conference upon it, in order that we may adjourn on Thursday or Friday or Saturday of next week.

That is all, Mr. President, that I can say in reply to the Senator.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, I will state my reason for asking the question. As the Senator knows, the Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON] is necessarily absent. It would have been impossible but that one of the Senators from Georgia should have attended the funeral of their late colleague in the other House. The Senator from Georgia has attended that funeral and has not yet returned. In a talk which I had with him before leaving he expressed himself very strongly upon the pending amendment, and signified his intention of opposing it on the floor, and a set purpose to do so. I am satisfied that he did not expect that the matter would come up and be disposed of before he could be present.

Under the circumstances, it seems to me that the Senator from Maine ought not to attempt to press this amendment to a final vote during the absence of the Senator from Georgia. I am certain myself that I do not wish to delay this matter, but I am equally certain that the Senator from Georgia does desire to be heard upon the amendment.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, I am equally certain from my knowledge of the Senator from Georgia that he would not expect at this time in this emergency that the pending bill should be delayed because he is absent. I should be the last man who would do him any discourtesy. I know that generally he was aware of the fact that the bill would be brought up and would be pushed as fast as possible. I can not consent, simply because he is absent, to delay a bill in which everybody is interested. I am entirely willing to take my chances of being subjected to any censure on the part of the reasonable Senator from Georgia, who is now absent. I will very willingly take that responsibility.

Mr. McCUMBER. It is possible the Senator from Maine can see a greater exigency in the matter of this bill, and the saving of twelve hours in the time it shall pass the Senate, than some of the other Senators. For my part I do not see why it is of any greater concern to be immediately gotten out of the way than any other appropriation bill. All appropriation bills must be passed before Congress adjourns, and why this bill should be singled out to be regarded as a case of wonderful emergency that can wait for nothing else, and not even for a Senator to return from a funeral who is four hours absent now from the time of return, seems to me to be rather strange.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, this bill has not been singled out. It takes its regular course. We are within a week of the time when every Senator hopes to adjourn. I am doing nothing unusual or unreasonable in asking the Senate to stick to the bill until it is passed.

The Senator from Georgia has no more local interest in the pending amendment than any other Senator. It does not affect his State alone. It is a general subject in which he has general interest. As I have said, I am willing to take the chances of being censured or found fault with by that Senator when he returns. No man appreciates the condition of the business of the Senate better than the absent Senator from Georgia.

Mr. McCUMBER. Yet, notwithstanding the fact that the Senator is willing to take any chance of censure, it does not seem to me that that is the basis on which we should consider whether or not we should drive this bill through without reference to Senators being absent. That is not the only question involved in the bill. Undoubtedly the Senator from Georgia being necessarily absent, would not censure anyone, but, as a matter of courtesy, from the fact that I know he would like to be heard upon it, and from the fact that I know he intended to be heard upon it, it seems to me there is nothing before us that demands this wonderful rush upon this particular bill.

Mr. HALE. Let the question before the Senate be stated by the Chair.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The pending amendment will be stated by the Secretary.

The SECRETARY. On page 102, after line 9, the Committee on Appropriations reports to insert:

For the traveling expenses of the President of the United States, his attendants and invited guests traveling with him, to be disbursed at the discretion of the President, $25,000.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. McCUMBER. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. CARTER. It will be recalled by Senators that the announcement was made by me that immediately after the vote on the canal bill I should move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business. The desire of the Senator from Maine to attempt the conclusion of the pending bill this evening constrains me to withhold that motion for the time being.

I will say to the Senator and to the Senate that the making of the motion seems to be in conformity with an understanding which will be quite disconcerted unless the executive session is held this evening; and in order that we may not pass the evening without the executive session, I desire to say now that at the hour of 5 o'clock, unless this bill shall sooner be disposed of, which I hope may be the case, I shall move an executive session, and I hope the Senator from Maine will concur with that motion.

Mr. HALE. That seems to me entirely reasonable, Mr. President.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senator from North Dakota will proceed.

Mr. McCUMBER. The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. McLAURIN] had the floor, and I presume is still entitled to the floor upon the discussion of the pending amendment. I shall be very glad to yield to him. I know he has not finished his remarks.

Mr. McLAURIN. I will say to the Senator from North Dakota, if he desires to proceed now and will do so, it will be very satisfactory to me to go on after he shall have concluded.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, I am opposed to this amendment on two grounds. The first ground is a constitutional one. The second is upon principle. Lest I may be misunderstood, I wish to say now that in exact harmony with, I believe, every Senator on this floor, I am in favor of giving the President a salary that will be commensurate with his high official position.

If that salary is $75,000 or $100,000 per year, I am in favor of voting such salary, to commence at such time as the Constitution provides, for the benefit of this great office. But I am not in favor of this method of increasing his salary.

It may be that there are Senators here who care little whether they go over the Constitution or whether they crawl under it, so that they reach the particular point they have in mind, but I hope that for the sake of our own reputation we will give proper and honest consideration to every constitutional question that is properly raised in a great matter of this kind.

This provision is worded not to be an appropriation for the benefit of the Executive office for the payment of expenses in caring for the Executive Mansion or other proper appropriation, but is worded, and undoubtedly worded, with the intent that the salary of the President shall be increased this year $25,000.

I wish to call attention, Mr. President, to the peculiar language that is used in this amendment. It reads:

For the traveling expenses of the President of the United States, his attendants and invited guests traveling with him, to be disbursed at the discretion of the President, $25,000.

How is the President, who disburses this money at his discretion, to disburse it unless the money is in his hands for the purpose of disbursement? There is no provision that this money shall be disbursed by the Comptroller of the Treasury upon vouchers by the President or anyone else, but the one who is to use his discretion in the matter of the disbursement is the President of the United States himself. Therefore the money must necessarily come into the hands of the President and be by him disbursed.

I am fortified in this position by the absence of all provisions like those contained in other like laws providing for expenses of the executive or judicial departments, requiring a voucher for any expenses before such expenses are paid.

Then the result of this is what? Simply an additional payment of $25,000 per year compensation for the President of the United States.

Mr. President, the salary of the President of the United States, under the Constitution and under which we are presumed to be acting, is limited to the amount that has been fixed prior to his incumbency in that office, and it is limited both as to compensation and also as to any other emolument incident to this great official position.

Section 1 of Article II of the Constitution provides that—

The President shall, at stated times, receive for his services a compensation, which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that period any other emolument from the United States, or any of them.

I first call attention to the fact that ordinarily our laws fixing compensation for Federal officers, executive or otherwise, and also in the States generally, adopts the word "salary" instead of the word "compensation." The word "salary" has a much more limited definition. It is understood to be a fixed sum to be paid to a person for a fixed service, generally paid weekly, monthly, or yearly. The word "compensation" will include, of course, in all cases salaries, but it will go beyond what is generally understood by the term "salary," and will cover any other thing that is of benefit, that compensates, that offsets for a service, a certain sum of money or any other thing of value.

So the word "compensation" as used in this provision of itself is broad enough to cover any character of emolument that amounts to a benefit to the President of the United States.

It is evident that the word "compensation," as I stated, has a much broader meaning. Webster definites "compensate" as follows:

To make suitable return to or for, as for services, loss, etc.; give an equivalent or recompense to or for; requite; remunerate.

It is even broader than that in its general acceptation. In general understanding it means any benefits that are received to counterbalance any services rendered.

The same author defines "salary" as follows:

A periodical allowance made as compensation to a person for his official and professional service or for his regular work.

Mr. President, the Constitution wisely provided that the compensation of the Executive shall neither be increased nor diminished during the term for which he has been elected.

The purpose of that constitutional provision was to prevent Congress from increasing the compensation of the Executive for any favor that Congress might receive from the Executive, and, further, to prevent any punishment of the Executive because he may have come, during his incumbency, into disfavor with the Congress of the United States.

Now, this $25,000 for traveling expenses is unqualifiedly an additional compensation. It does not make any difference whether it is given by a direct appropriation for salary or whether it is given under the guise of compensation for some purpose which he may use or he may not use, and which may cover that service ten times over or may not cover it, it is a benefit. It is something received by him as a gratuity in addition to that which he would receive had not this law been enacted.

Mr. President, this being a new favor, a benefit, it is clearly inhibited, in my opinion, under the Constitution of the United States. But under the terms of this same constitutional provision, and for the very purpose of making it impossible by reason of the granting or withholding of a favor for Congress to influence the Executive one way or the other, the fathers who adopted this Constitution went further than the mere matter of compensation, and declared that no emolument of any character whatever should be added to the compensation or emolument that was already provided for the Executive.

Now, what is the meaning of the word "emolument?" Senators will agree with me that, while "compensation" is much broader than the word "salary," so, too, "emolument" may be broader than either the word "compensation" or the word "salary." Webster defines the word "emolument" as follows:

The remuneration connected with any office, occupation, or service, whether as salary, fee, or perquisite; compensation.

Let me ask the Senator from Maine if this is not a perquisite in addition to the salary? Is not the effect of it to give a benefit in addition to what the Executive is receiving now under the provisions of law? The American and English Encyclopedia, which every Senator understands, bases its definitions upon the weight of an authority, and after collecting a list of authorities, gives this as the general definition of the word "emolument," as construed by the courts of the United States:

I especially invite the attention of Senators to this definition. On page 1204 of the American and English Encyclopædia we have the word "emolument" defined as follows:

A profit arising from office or employment; that which is received as a compensation for services, or which is annexed to the possession of office, as salary, fees, and perquisites; advantage; gain, public or private.

Mr. President, that is a pretty broad definition, but an examination of the authorities will show that it has as its foundation the great weight of judicial decision in the United States. Compare that with the pending amendment, which reads:

For the traveling expenses of the President of the United States, his attendants and invited guests traveling with him, to be disbursed at the descretion of the President, $25,000.

You will understand, Mr. President, that this goes further than the mere question of the traveling expenses of the President of the United States. It gives a perquisite, a gain to the office, in that by reason of it the power of the President is supreme to say whether or not the law, which will be enacted at this session of Congress against any Member of Congress or anyone else riding upon a free pass, may be abrogated or set aside at a moment's notice by the Executive of the United States. If the Senator from Indiana [Mr. HEMENWAY] desires to ride from Maine to California and the railway company should grant him transportation and he should accept that transportation, the prison doors are open for him; but if the President says to the Senator from Indiana, "As a personal friend of mine I should like to have you accompany me upon a trip without the cost of one cent for transportation," then the Senator from Indiana need not look to prison bars or fines or have any fear. In other words, the power is placed immediately in the hands of the President to say when the law shall be effective and when the law shall not be effective to any particular person.

Mr. President, I have always believed that there has been one principle in the Constitution of the United States which stands out grandly above all other principles, and there is embodied in the Declaration of Independence language which is immortal to every American citizen, that "all men are created equal"—not equal, Mr. President, in the sense of intellectuality or honesty or anything of that character, but equal under the laws of the United States; equal to stand for punishment for disobedience by any law that shall be enacted; equal to be guarded by every law that should receive the sanction of the Congress of the United States or that should receive the sanction of any State legislature in the Union.

We for the first time in the history of the United States propose to say that we will abandon this old landmark. I deprecate that in these later days we are gradually losing sight of some of the grandest principles, not only of our Constitution, but of the Declaration of Independence. This grand old standard of American citizenship has done more than any other declaration since the world began to uplift humanity, to say to the child, "You are as important under the law and under the same flag as any American citizen from the most lowly up to the Chief Executive of this great country." It implants in the heart of every child the conviction, the feeling that he is equal to any other man in the country; that the law which governs him governs every other man, from the President down. That principle, Mr. President, has made for the American people the grandest manhood and the noblest womanhood that the world has ever seen. I for one insist that the moment you take away from the American people their belief in the sublimity of that declaration, the moment you say to one of them, "You are to be governed by a certain law if you are a private citizen; you are to be governed by another law if you hold an official position, and you are superior to some laws if you hold the highest official position, or the law may be abrogated at any time or under any circumstances or conditions," you violate that principle, create a disrespect for all law, and weaken your foundation of stable self-government. For that reason, Mr. President, I am opposed to this amendment.

If we want to grant an additional compensation to the President of the United States, why are we not brave enough to stand up here and grant it? I admit the Constitution will not allow us to grant it, unless we give it in futurity, but having that right, believing that with the great official position he holds it is necessary for him to entertain in a manner that very few private citizens could entertain and that it is necessary for him to travel, then we should give him a compensation that will be sufficient for that purpose. The old American principle has always been that the laborer is worthy of his hire. And I want to see maintained the proposition that we will pay men for their services; that we will pay our officials what those services are worth; that in a great office like that of the President of the United States we will pay a sum that will be commensurate with the dignity of that office. When we step beyond that we have adopted a new, a European policy, and that policy is not to appropriate a certain definite salary to cover all duties expected or imposed, but is a policy to appropriate for a great army of attendants. We may have in the future our Knight of the Bath, we may have the Knight of the Garter, we may have the Chamberlain, we may have the Keeper of the Keys of the Executive Mansion, all of them to be specifically appropriated for, and we may continue ad infinitum.

It seems to me a better policy, a more American policy, to say that the President shall have a given compensation, a given salary, and then let him employ his own attendants, let him have his own carriages; give him such a salary so that he can keep his own carriages; give him such a salary that he can pay his expenses in traveling, the same as any American citizen.

But, Mr. President, that is not the purpose of this amendment as I read it. The only purpose of it is to create an additional compensation, because the President is to receive this sum, whether he spends one dollar of it or not. As I read this proposed law, I do not understand that he is to give any vouchers. He has simply to ask for $25,000, or one-fourth of that each quarter, and then he will receive the full amount upon his request. There is no provision whatever for any vouchers. If it were intended, Mr. President, to be merely for the traveling expenses of the President, why should it not read "for his traveling expenses, not to exceed the sum of $25,000?"

Mr. HEMENWAY. Mr. President, I call the attention of the Senator to the language of the provision:

> For the traveling expenses of the President of the United States, his attendants and invited guests traveling with him, to be disbursed at the discretion of the President, $25,000.

Under that language the President could not use a dollar of that money for any other purpose than for traveling expenses.

Mr. McCUMBER. What does the Senator understand by this portion of the provision—"to be disbursed at the discretion of the President?"

Mr. HEMENWAY. To be disbursed at the discretion of the President for traveling expenses, and for no other purposes. He has no right to disburse at his discretion a single dollar except for traveling expenses, and he can not expend a dollar of this money for any other purpose.

Mr. McCUMBER. On the contrary, he is not compelled to spend a dollar for that purpose; but this $25,000 is given him. Why, then, is there not a provision that it shall not exceed $25,000?

Mr. HEMENWAY. There is a provision in the general law that no deficiency shall be created, and the President of the United States would hardly violate the law by exceeding the amount appropriated in this item.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, I do not give the language the same construction which the Senator gives it, but that is immaterial upon my proposition. The principle of the thing is this: It is making one law to govern one man and another law to govern another man.

Mr. HEMENWAY. Mr. President——

Mr. McCUMBER. I will yield in a moment.

But a few years ago we had practically this same question before Congress in another form, and that was to protect the President of the United States, making it an offense to commit an assault upon the President of a certain character, which assault upon another person might be punished only by a fine of five or ten dollars; making it a death penalty to point a gun at the Secretary of State, and making it not even a misdemeanor to point a gun at the Attorney-General of the United States, thereby making a clear distinction between individuals—making the body of one more sacred than that of the other.

Mr. President, that is the proposition I oppose in this bill. It simply says that the President of the United States may determine who shall be his guests. That is all right. But it further provides that he can take any number and he can pay their expenses in traveling from one place to another—not necessarily the members of his family, not the members of his Cabinet, but any person that he sees fit—and the expense is paid by the Government, where in the case of anyone else it would be considered criminal if he accepted any like service. In other words, I can travel from Maine to California with the President and the Government will pay for it, but if I travel in any other manner half way across the State of Maine into another State, I am guilty of a heinous offense if I do not pay for my transportation.

Mr. HEMENWAY. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. McCUMBER. Certainly; I yield.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I wish to state that the Senator makes a mistake. This provision is for paying the traveling expenses of the President of the United States when he goes off on his trips to the different States. He does not go, I suppose, because he is anxious to make such trips, but committees come from all the States of the Union and invite him to visit their States. Necessarily the newspaper men desire to be on the same train on which the President travels, and it is right and proper that they should go on the train with the President. The people of the United States want to know something about the trip, and they get the information from the newspaper men who accompany the President. When he gets to the border of the State which my distinguished friend represents, no doubt he and his colleague, the governor of the State, and other prominent men of the State meet the President at the border line; and they are then taken on his train. It is to cover the expenses of carrying such guests that we propose to give to the President this $25,000 for traveling expenses. It is no discrimination in favor of the President as against you and me. We are not in such demand as is the President. We are not met by delegations and committees from the different States of the Union to invite us, as they do the President, to undertake such trips.

Mr. McCUMBER. I want the Senator to bear in mind that, while he may not be in the same demand as is the President of the United States, he is in demand as a public official; he is in demand in the State of Indiana, which he so ably represents upon this floor. The same reason would justify taking the Senator and making him an exception to the general law, although it might be on a smaller scale, because the demand might not be so great as would justify taking the President and making him an exception to the general law. Therefore we might say that the Senator from Indiana, to meet the requirements or the demands of the people to see him and get his opinion, should have his salary raised 50 per cent, or that $2,500 should be given him to pay his traveling expenses. The reason will apply in the one case just as much as in the other. It would be excepting him from the provisions of a general law.

Mr. HEMENWAY. There is where the Senator makes a mistake. There is no increased salary proposed here; there is no gain to the President.

Mr. McCUMBER. I am not basing the objection on an increase of salary, but on the simple proposition that the Senator is basing it upon, that the President should have his expenses paid. I believe in fixing a salary that will be sufficient to defray such expenses, but I do not believe in appropriating a sum of money that makes a distinction between the Executive and any other citizen of the United States.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator allow me to interrupt him?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. McCUMBER. Certainly.

Mr. TILLMAN. I should like to ask the Senator from Indiana [Mr. HEMENWAY] whether, in his judgment, it would be permissible, in the event Congress should grant this $25,000 for traveling expenses, for the President to use the money in going into States for campaign purposes? For instance, if there was a doubtful Republican State—we will say North Dakota—and our friend the Senator from North Dakota over there should feel that he needed some little help and that a "swing around the circle" by the Executive might benefit Republican politics out that way, would it be permissible for the President to utilize this money, granted in this way, for such a purpose, or would it be intended merely as a donation by Congress to let the President travel in any part of the country as a great statesman to enlighten all the people in a nonpartisan way?

Mr. HEMENWAY. There is no trouble about this provision. The traveling expenses of the President of the United States are to be disbursed at the discretion of the President. The President could use the fund to go anywhere in the United States he wanted to and upon any mission he wanted to go, because the matter is left wholly within his discretion; and we would have to rely upon the discretion of the President of the United States as to whether or not he would use this money for political purposes. I think it safe to say that the present Executive of the United States would not use it for political purposes.

Mr. TILLMAN. Of course the limitations upon the appropriation, if it is made, would leave it to the discretion of the President to expend it according to his own judgment.

Mr. HEMENWAY. That is it.

Mr. TILLMAN. And the Senator thinks it would be impossible for the present Executive or any one of his successors—for if we start this it will go on indefinitely—to use this money for political traveling and going around to help out "the lame ducks" who want to get back to the Senate or to the House of Representatives, for instance.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I will say to the Senator from South Carolina that I do not believe the people of the United States will ever elect from either party—Democratic or Republican—a President who would use this fund for political purposes or for the purposes of making a political campaign. I have too much faith in the judgment of the Democratic party and of the Republican party and of all other parties to believe that they will ever nominate and elect a man who would take a fund provided by Congress and use it for the purpose of making a political campaign.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, we get somewhat away from the principle at the base of all this discussion; and that is the American principle of nondistinction between any officials or between American citizenship. The Senator can not possibly avoid the conclusion that this appropriation does make a distinction.

Once more I want to asssert that I believe the President should receive a salary sufficient so that he can travel over the United States, if he so desires, and, in addition to that, it should be sufficient, so that he may take a friend with him if he desires; but I do not believe that it is the American policy that we should single out one of the great number of Federal officials in the United States and say to that one: "The Government, in addition to your salary, will not only take you around the country, but any one you may designate." The President may have his friends go with him.

I do not for a moment suppose that this power would be unjustly used. That is not the question. The question is whether it is an unjust power—this creating a distinction in citizenship. Mr. President, every American breathes exactly the same free air in this country, and whenever you pass a law whereby you give certain rights to certain officials that are not granted to every American citizen you write on our national banner wherever it may float over our broad domain the word "falsehood." That banner does not stand for any such distinction.

Mr. HEMENWAY. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. McCUMBER. Certainly.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I ask the Senator, when you elect a President of the United States, do you not grant him powers you do not have? When you are elected Senator from your State, do you not have powers that your constituents do not have? When you elect a Member of the House of Representatives, does he not have power that his constituents do not have? When you elect your members of the legislature, do you not give them powers that some one else does not have? There is nothing in the proposition of all being absolutely equal in power. Every time you elect a man to an office you confer upon him a power that other people do not have.

Mr. McCUMBER. The Senator is bound to take his own construction. I did not use the word "power" in that sense. A path master in a township has a power that the average citizen does not have, and every supervisor above him has still greater powers. So with every official in every State and in the Government of the United States; each has powers that are special to his office, but he has not got the right—that is the point—he has not got a right or privilege under the law that is different from the right of any other American citizen. That is the only matter in dispute here. The Senator can not by any possible theory or any character of argument assume that the official power should give certain rights to some that are not granted to every citizen. For instance, the right, for the benefit of one citizen, to disobey a particular law the application of which is common to every citizen. That is the objection that I have to the provision, Mr. President, upon principle.

Now, let us see if there are any further objections upon constitutional questions.

Mr. CARMACK. Will the Senator permit me to interrupt him?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. McCUMBER. Certainly.

Mr. CARMACK. I merely want to suggest to the Senator that this appropriation is not at all necessary for the execution of any power conferred upon the President by the Constitution and laws of the United States.

Mr. McCUMBER. I think every Senator understands that. The appropriation is not necessary to carry out any of his official functions whatever. It is for the convenience of the President, and that convenience may benefit the public, but that don't make it an official function.

The Senator from Montana [Mr. CARTER] the other day made a suggestion that the Postmaster-General should give to every Senator free transportation over all the postal routes of the United States. That privilege would be considered as connected with the office of Senator. I do not think that proposition would receive a great deal of support by the people of the United States; yet the ground, the position, the reason for it was exactly the same as the Senator urges in this matter, namely, that the President may become acquainted with the people and the people may become acquainted with the President.

But outside of that there is this policy of building up a great army of underlings—instead of by paying a direct salary, of paying for and appropriating for certain purposes—as is done in all the monarchies of the world, and is done in France to-day. It is this, Mr. President, that I hope to avoid as much as possible. The moment we treat these individuals to be appropriated for in a manner different from that in which we treat others, the moment that we step outside of the old American principle of paying a salary, and then letting the recipient of that salary do what he sees fit with it, that moment we are adopting a course that has been adopted for hundreds of years in the old countries.

I deprecate the gradual tendency of the American people, partially by education, to ape the manners, the customs, and so forth, of the monarchies of the old world. I stood, Mr. President, but a few years ago under the Dome of this Capitol on a very solemn occasion. There was the bier of our beloved President McKinley. Surrounding that bier were the representatives of foreign governments, in all the regalia and in all the trappings of royalty. I could not but feel—and I say it without the least purpose of criticism of the foreign method—I could not but feel as I compared these men, these representatives of the great nations, with all their bangles, with all their spangles, with all their ribbons, with the plainly dressed American citizen, Theodore Roosevelt, as he stood by the bier of the great martyred President, and by his side our ex-President, Grover Cleveland—I say I could not but feel more patriotic; I could not but feel a deeper and grander love for the simplicity of the American character and real worth of American citizenship, and my heart could not but throb a little more rapidly with patriotic zeal for a country that produced such standards of manhood as I saw there that day. And yet we try to ape conditions in the Old World, and we insist more than ever that our foreign representatives shall surround themselves with all the gaudiness, the style, and so forth, that surround the foreign official, and that they shall become of them and like them.

Ah, my friends, let us travel in the old countries and let us see the distinction between the classes. There you look, on the one hand, into the lowest degree of poverty; far above that you observe great wealth, each vividly contrasting with the other, conditions that have been brought about by just this character of distinction that you are beginning to make to-day in holding one class of citizenship above another class. The result, then, has been to lift one up higher by greater and greater appropriations to care for the royal families, while the others are dragged down deeper and deeper into the dregs of poverty.

We see in this grand old country of ours no such distinction. We see American manhood from the laborer up to the President of the United States. I for one want to maintain that principle. I want every American citizen to feel that God Almighty never made any man whose rights are different from or greater than his own.

Mr. HEMENWAY. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. McCUMBER. Certainly.

Mr. HEMENWAY. In view of the remarks of the Senator from North Dakota, one would think there was danger of the President of the United States purchasing royal robes, surrounding himself with royal attendants, and all that kind of business if this appropriation be granted. Now, is it not just the reverse? The Czar does not go out among his people. These royal personages of whom the Senator talks do not go out among their people.

We are trying to provide an appropriation for traveling expenses for Theodore Roosevelt, the President, whom the Senator has eulogized, in order that he may get out and see the people and shake hands with them and mix with them. There is nothing here that tends to royalty or the breaking down of the good, old-fashioned American way of shaking hands and getting together. The amendment merely tends to bring the people and the President together by giving the President a proper allowance for traveling expenses, so that he may get out and see people who might never have the pleasure of seeing the President of the United States unless he visited their State.

Mr. McCUMBER. Oh, Mr. President, the Senator begs the question again. That is not the question at all. It is a question of principle, I say, and the principle which I have enunciated before is as respects making a distinction between citizens. Once acknowledge that distinction, and it will gradually grow and produce one of two things, either the condition of the Old World, which I have pointed out, or that which is a thousandfold more liable to occur—to drive us into socialism or paternalism. Paternalism I acknowledge to be the inevitable result of all social evolution. It is that thing which is sure to come. It is that thing which ought to be as slow as possible in coming, because the moment that you destroy individuality, that moment you destroy those functions which make for the grandest manhood and womanhood, and we want the field of opportunity always open for individual effort. But at the same time we do not want to create even in the President of the United States an individuality—not official position, but an individuality—distinct from that of the average American citizen; and that is all I claim in this case.

It is not the meager $25,000. Give the President a salary of $500,000, if it is necessary, but we should not legislate a distinction in citizenship based upon official position under the guise of enabling the President to mingle with the people.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Maine?

Mr. McCUMBER. With pleasure.

Mr. HALE. Why does the Senator keep harping, I will say, upon the proposition that he is willing to increase the salary of the President? He knows we can not do that.

Mr. McCUMBER. I know we can do it at the proper time.

Mr. HALE. We can not do it so as to apply to the present occupant of the office of the Presidency. That is a thing with which we have nothing whatever to do. The Senator, I think, appreciates that as much as I do. We can not raise the salary of the present President.

Mr. McCUMBER. We are living under a Constitution. Neither the Senator from Maine nor I made that Constitution, and we ought not to try to avoid it. Because we can not jump over it, we ought not to attempt to crawl under it.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. President——

Mr. McCUMBER. I yield to the Senator from Texas.

Mr. BAILEY. I simply wish to ask the Senator from Maine, if he is anxious to increase the salary of the President of the United States, why not increase it now for the next Administration? As far as I am concerned, I think the honor of the office, together with the salary, is quite enough as it now stands. I did not know that it is absolutely necessary that the present incumbent of that office should have additional compensation, for that is what it is. But if it is necessary that anybody should have it, probably he is the one who needs it. I understand the expenses at the White House have been increased something like $100,000 under this Administration. Of course, I do not know that that is true. If it is true, all I have to say is that the present President has cost more and been worth less to the country than anyone we have ever had.

Mr. McLAURIN. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. McCUMBER. I yield.

Mr. McLAURIN. I wish to make a suggestion in response to what was said by the Senator from Maine, that the Senator from North Dakota knows we can not increase the salary of the present President of the United States. I should like to know of the Senator from Maine whether he means that we can not do that directly, because this seems to be an effort to do that indirectly which it must be admitted we can not do directly.

Mr. McCUMBER. That we may have no misunderstanding as to what we must mean by the word "emolument," I will concede that we may furnish the President, as we have in past times, the Executive Mansion. That is Government property. It does not belong to the President. We may make it larger or may make it smaller. We may have one attendant to care for it or we may have a hundred to care for it. We may increase the expense from $60,000, as it was a year ago, to $113,000, the amount which I understand is recommended for this year. We can do that without any question. That is not personal to the President. We may furnish all the help that is necessary. That is not a perquisite of the office itself. But when we appropriate a sum of money for the Executive, which sum of money is to be used at his discretion to defray his traveling expenses as Executive or to defray the expenses of any friends whom he wishes to have travel with him, that is a perquisite or an emolument which goes with the office; and that is prohibited by the Constitution of the United States.

Let me call the Senator's attention to another case. I have not had time to go very far into this question or to look up authorities particularly since the matter was brought up for consideration last evening. But I give you again the definition that is given by the encyclopedia. That is:

> Emolument is a profit arising from office or employment; that which is received as a compensation for services, or which is annexed to the possession of office, as salary, fees, and perquisites; advantage, gain, public or private.

Now, will anyone say that this is not an advantage; that the sum of $25,000 to pay expenses is not a gain; that this sum is not a public or a private advantage for the incumbent of the office; and if it is such, it is certainly an emolument.

Mr. McLAURIN. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. McCUMBER. Yes, sir.

Mr. McLAURIN. On that point I wish to call the attention of the Senator to the case of Reg. v. Postmaster-General (3 Queen's Bench Division, 428), where the Queen's Bench Division and the court of appeals of England held that traveling expenses are emoluments. This you will find in the tenth volume of the American and English Encylcopædia of Law, second edition, page 1205.

Mr. McCUMBER. I read the case just a few moments ago, before I commenced to speak on the subject. But I think I can give you one that comes nearer home and will better apply to our conditions.

Article 3, section 13, of the constitution of Pennsylvania provides that no law shall increase or diminish any public officer's salary or emolument after his election or appointment. The word "emolument," used in connection with the salary in the constitution of Pennsylvania, must necessarily mean exactly the same as the word "emolument" used in connection with the word "compensation" in the Constitution of the United States. In the case of Apple v. Crawford County (105 Pa. State, 300), in construing this constitutional provision, the court were construing the word "emolument," and they say:

> We think the word imports more than the word "salary" or "fees," and because it is contained in the Constitution in addition to the word "salary" we ought to give it the meaning which it bears in ordinary acceptation. By the definition above given it imports any perquisite, advantage, profit, or gain arising from the possession of an office.

It was held in a similar case that this came within the definition of the word "emolument," and it was held that the additional fee could not be given. Peeley v. York County (113 Pa. State Reports, 18) follows the same line. It is also followed in Fox v. Lavanna (4 Pa. County Court Reports).

In the case of McLain v. The People (9 Colo., 193), the court says:

> To hold that "emolument" as used in the connection in which it appears in this statute—

A similar statute—

> means any accretion, increment, gain, or profit to the office is, we think, manifestly in accord with common sense and common usage, as well as with the established rules for the interpretation of the English language and for the construction of statutes.

Again, the American and English Encyclopedia of Law, page 385, defines the word "compensation;" and you will see that it is broad enough, even without the other, to cover what I consider the objectionable point. It says:

> The term "compensation," as ordinarily used, includes all forms which the remuneration of public officers may take, whether salary, or fees, or percentage, or commission, or mileage—

Is not this equivalent to mileage, because all payments are made upon the mileage basis practically?—

> or special appropriation or allowances for necessary expenses.

It seems to me that this comes clearly within the inhibition of the Constitution.

I call attention now to the Illinois statute. Section 10 of article 10 of the constitution of Illinois provides:

The county board shall fix the compensation of all county officers with their necessary clerk hire, stationery, fuel, and other expenses: Provided, That the compensation of no officer shall be increased or diminished during his term of office.

In this case the county board fixed the compensation of the county treasurer to include fuel, stationery, and clerk hire. It was held in the case of Kilgore v. The People (76 Ill., 548) that this compensation, by extra fees for clerk hire or otherwise, could not be increased.

I believe that, taking the general acceptation of the word "emolument" and taking the judicial decisions, brief though they may be, which I have given to the Senate, we may justly base our position upon the proposition that these emoluments can not be increased during the present incumbency. Suppose that an amendment had become a law four years ago providing that the Chief Executive, in addition to his salary, should have the sum of $25,000 a year for other purposes, or that $25,000 a year should be expended yearly for the use of the President of the United States to pay his traveling expenses. Does any Senator claim that we could legally and properly cut that off at any time after having fixed it at the beginning of a term to apply to the office after that date? And if we can not take it away, neither can we add it.

Mr. SPOONER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. McCUMBER. With pleasure.

Mr. SPOONER. Would not the answer to the Senator's question depend entirely upon a further question, whether or not this is compensation within the meaning of the word as used in the Constitution?

Mr. McCUMBER. Whether it is an emolument.

Mr. SPOONER. No; whether a compensation.

Mr. McCUMBER. Compensation or emolument. Neither can be increased so as to apply to the present incumbent.

Mr. SPOONER. Very well. The Senator says it is salary.

Mr. McCUMBER. No; I say it is emolument. An emolument is something that is received as a gain, and if a grant is made in connection with the President's office of an emolument, we can not take it away so as to affect the present incumbent.

Mr. HEMENWAY. Suppose the President did not travel at all. Would he get a cent of this money?

Mr. McCUMBER. That is not the question at all.

Mr. SPOONER. I want to put another question.

Mr. McCUMBER. Whether he accepted it, he would be entitled to it. That is the provision, and the question is whether we can take away that to which he is entitled. That is the proposition.

Mr. SPOONER. Does not the Senator think that the word "emolument" as used in the Constitution was intended to be used in the sense of compensation?

Mr. McCUMBER. It is broader, I think.

Mr. SPOONER. Let me read——

Mr. McCUMBER. I think "compensation," as used in the Constitution, means a certain thing which all understood it to mean at that time. It is to be assumed that the people who adopted the Constitution would not have used an additional word if it was understood at the time that the words were synonymous.

Mr. SPOONER. Let me call the attention of the Senator to the language of the constitutional provision.

Mr. McCUMBER. I have it here.

Mr. SPOONER. I know the Senator has.

The President shall, at stated times, receive for his services a compensation, which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that period any other emolument from the United States, or any of them.

The word "other," it seems to me, throws a great light on the word "emolument" as there used. Is it not intended to prevent, under any device, a real increase of compensation? Of course the meaning which the word shall have must be determined by reference to the context, the language in connection with which it is employed.

Mr. McCUMBER. In construing any section of a statute, we must adopt a construction that will carry into effect the reasons for its adoption. The first question that would naturally be asked is why that provision in the Constitution was adopted? What is it to prevent? What wrong is it to cure? And considering what it is intended to prevent will assist us in determining what construction should be given to it.

Mr. SPOONER. What is it intended to prevent?

Mr. McCUMBER. It is intended to prevent Congress attempting to coerce the Executive by taking away any of his salary, his compensation or emoluments, and it is intended also to prevent Congress, by reason of any favor that it may receive or any number of favors, from adding to the compensation or emoluments of the President. Both are prohibited.

Mr. SPOONER. Does not the word "emolument," as used in the Constitution, evidently mean something which the President is entirely at liberty to put in his pocket?

Mr. McCUMBER. No, indeed. The definition that is given to the word "emolument," as used in constitutions, is exactly the same as defined by the courts in decisions which I have read. "Emolument" does not necessarily mean anything you may put in your pocket. It means anything that gives a benefit, a privilege, an advantage that would not accrue except by reason of the law which granted it. The right to ride free over the railways of the United States, under a law granted to the Executive of the United States, would be an emolument. It would not be something he could put in his pocket.

Mr. SPOONER. If the Senator will permit me, the Supreme Court of the United States had occasion once to place a construction upon the word "emolument." This was a controversy between the collector in New York and the United States on an accounting. Under "the act of 1802, the compensation of the collector was derived from three sources: First, fees allowed for the services already referred to; second, commissions on the duties received, and, third, a share of the fines, penalties, and forfeitures."

Congress passed an act by which it was provided—

That whenever the annual emoluments of any collector, after deducting the expenses incident to the office, shall amount to more than $5,000, the excess shall be accounted for, and paid into the Treasury. The act was not to extend to fines, forfeitures, and penalties, a share of which the collector was entitled to, under the twentieth section of the act of 2d March, 1799 (1 Stat. L., 697).

It was over these emoluments and the liability of the collector to account to the United States for them under the statute that the question arose. The court say:

The provision in this act, therefore, that whenever the annual emoluments, after deducting the expenses, exceeded the amount of $5,000, the excess should be accounted for, necessarily embraces in the limitation the fees as well as commissions belonging to the office, and would have embraced also the fines and forfeitures had it not been for the proviso to the act taking them out of the limitation.

The argument would be quite as strong in favor of excluding the commissions as in the case of fees, as the one can in no more appropriate sense be regarded as emoluments of office than the other, and thus the limitation would become a nullity.

These terms denote a compensation for a particular kind of service to be performed by the officer, and are distinguishable from each other, and are so used and understood by Congress in the several compensation acts; they are also distinguishable from the term "emoluments," that being more comprehensive and embracing every species of compensation or pecuniary profit derived from a discharge of the duties of the office; and such is the obvious import of it in these acts.

Now, will the Senator, in connection with that decision, go back to the language of the Constitution, because, in order to get at the meaning of the word as it is used there we must determine the intention of the framers of the Constitution in its use. If the Senator will permit me for just a moment, I will read it:

The President shall, at stated times, receive for his services a compensation, which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that period any other—

Referring to the word "compensation"—

any other emolument from the United States or any of them.

Now, is it not quite clear that that language was inserted to prevent Congress from surreptitiously or through any mere device, by annexing fees to the office, from increasing the salary or increasing the compensation?

Mr. NELSON. May I ask the Senator from Wisconsin a question?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. McCUMBER. I yield.

Mr. NELSON. If the traveling expenses were limited strictly to official duty, the Senator from Wisconsin might be correct, but it relates to traveling expenses in general, official and not official.

Mr. SPOONER. That occurred to me.

Mr. NELSON. If you give a traveling expense outside of official duties, is it not one form of emolument?

Mr. SPOONER. That has occurred to me, but I am assuming this: The President of the United States acts under oath. He is sworn to execute the laws of the United States as they relate to others and as they relate to himself. He has no right under the Constitution, I think, to spend this money except for traveling expenses while engaged in official duty. When is the President not engaged in official duty?

Mr. HEYBURN. I should like to ask the Senator a question.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. McCUMBER. I yield.

Mr. HEYBURN. Is not the objection, if there is an objection to this amendment, that it authorizes the President to disburse the bounty of the Government to his invited guests? Is not that the strongest objection to it, if there is one?

Mr. SPOONER. That is open to debate.

Mr. HEYBURN. It would be competent for us to provide for the expenses of an officer of the Government, but can we provide that that officer of the Government may in turn extend the bounty of the Government to a private citizen?

Mr. SPOONER. It is not a matter of bounty. The theory is not that it is a bounty. If in any sense whatever——

Mr. HEYBURN. It is a courtesy, then.

Mr. SPOONER. It is not a courtesy. If in any sense whatever it could be construed to be a bounty, it would seem to be a violation of the constitutional provision.

Mr. HEYBURN. Then it is a privilege which violates the interstate-commerce law.

Mr. SPOONER. In what respect?

Mr. HEYBURN. In that it authorizes the President to permit a private citizen to do something—that is, to ride free on a railroad—which he could not do otherwise than by the bounty of the Government.

Mr. SPOONER. It might be very important, in the discharge of official duty, that the President should invite some one to accompany him as his guest.

Mr. HEYBURN. How could an invitation to a private citizen to be entertained by the President when he travels be a part of the President's official duty or help in the performance of it? I am in favor of making provision for the traveling expenses of the President. But I want to see it done in such a way as not to be in violation of the Constitution.

Mr. SPOONER. I am not speaking of the details of this provision. I am only calling the attention of the Senator from North Dakota to the question whether, under the decisions to which I have directed attention and under the language of the constitutional provision, he does not give too broad a construction to the word "emolument," as used in that instrument?

Mr. MALLORY. Will the Senator from North Dakota yield to me for a moment?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. McCUMBER. I yield.

Mr. MALLORY. I should like to ask the Senator from Wisconsin if I understand him aright. Do I understand him to contend that the word "emolument" is synonymous with the word "compensation" as used in that clause of the Constitution?

Mr. SPOONER. I do not see how the framers of the Constitution, who knew how to use words and who used perhaps as well, if not better, than any other body of men ever assembled the words which expressed aptly their purpose and their intention, could have used the word "other," qualifying the word "emolument," unless they intended by the word "emolument" to refer to such an appropriation by the Congress as would constitute an increase in the compensation of the President.

Mr. MALLORY. As I understand the Senator's interpretation of this language, it is that the word "compensation" has reference to the President's salary, and the word "emolument," in the clause "any other emolument," is properly placed in the same category as "compensation" and is equivalent to the word "salary."

Mr. SPOONER. Yes; gain or profit under some guise, which he may take to himself.

Mr. MALLORY. If that is so——

Mr. McCUMBER. I call the attention of the Senator to the fact that the word "salary" is not used. It is "compensation."

Mr. MALLORY. If the interpretation of the Senator from Wisconsin is correct, I call his attention to the last three words in the same clause:

> And he shall not receive within that period any other emolument from the United States, or any of them.

Certainly the Constitution did not contemplate that any of the States would be paying the President a salary or any compensation. It might possibly have contemplated that they would pay him something, but not of the character of salary or compensation for his services to the United States.

Mr. SPOONER. But it contemplated they might give him something that would be his after they paid it.

Mr. MALLORY. Undoubtedly; but not as compensation.

Mr. SPOONER. It would be emolument in the nature of compensation, for it would practically increase the annual sum which he received as President of the United States. Of course it was not intended that any State should be making presents of money to the President of the United States.

Mr. MALLORY. Undoubtedly; or presents of any kind, money or anything else. If it prohibited the States from doing it in the same clause and in the same language as it is prohibited to the United States, why should a distinction be drawn? Why should you not hold that the word "emolument" there refers to any gift or consideration that may be given to the President?

Mr. SPOONER. What does the Senator make of the word "compensation?" There is only one word in this clause to which the word "emolument" must refer.

> The President shall, at stated times, receive for his services a compensation.

Mr. MALLORY. That undoubtedly means salary.

Mr. SPOONER (reading):

> Which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that period any other emolument.

What does the word "other" refer to? It must refer to something, to some word which precedes it.

Mr. MALLORY. Does the Senator wish an answer?

Mr. SPOONER. Yes.

Mr. MALLORY. It undoubtedly refers to compensation. I do not question it; but then it goes on further and prohibits the States from giving the President this same emolument; and it is not reasonable to suppose that the framers of the Constitution contemplated that the States should be paying the President a salary. The conclusion would be that it prohibits States from giving the President a gratuity or making a present or doing anything to influence his action.. Now, if it is prohibited to the States, the same language prohibits it to the United States. That is my conclusion.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, the Senator from Wisconsin seems to attempt to make this amendment read with an entirely different intendment from that which was adopted by the committee which reported it. Let me ask the Senator from Wisconsin right here what official function is there on the part of the Executive of the United States which requires him to travel for the purpose of performing his official duties?

Mr. SPOONER. Suppose the question was one of building fortifications in some particular place, or acquiring a site for a fort, or to determine where a part of the Army should be located permanently, has the Commander in Chief of the Army, if he thinks it to be his duty, no right to decide the location and judge for himself as to the action for which he will be responsible?

Mr. McCUMBER. Oh, Mr. President, he has a right, but there is no law compelling him to do that.

Mr. SPOONER. May it not be his official duty?

Mr. McCUMBER. I think not.

Mr. SPOONER. Suppose the President of the United States, Congress not being in session, conceived it to be his duty to verify for himself conditions which have recently become quite notorious in Chicago, in order that he might know, as he has a right to know, not at second hand, but at first hand, would it not be in the discharge of an official duty?

Mr. CARMACK. Mr. President——

Mr. McCUMBER. Oh, Mr. President, you could carry that to any extent. You can say that with reference to his appointments. If there is a person living in California who is recommended for an official position, you can say that it is the function of the President of the United States to go to the State of California to see him personally, because he would know more about him, and he could, by an examination of the man personally, tell by talking with him better than by correspondence whether he would be fitted for any position. But those are not understood to be the particular functions of the President of the United States.

Mr. HEMENWAY. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. McCUMBER. I yield to the Senator from Tennessee first, as he addressed the Chair first.

Mr. CARMACK. I wish to suggest to the Senator that none of the traveling expenses of the President, so far as I have ever heard, have been for any such purposes as that suggested by the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. SPOONER. I was endeavoring to answer the question put to me by the Senator from North Dakota as to what conceivable circumstances might give rise to the official duty of the President to travel.

Mr. CARMACK. The point is, further, what is the necessity for any such appropriation as this. As a matter of fact, we know that the President has never done any traveling for any purpose of performing his official duties—at least I have never heard of his having done so. While one may imagine cases in which he might do it, he has never done so as far as I know, and therefore there does not appear to be any necessity for this appropriation.

Mr. HEMENWAY. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. McCUMBER. I yield to the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. HEMENWAY. Mr. President, in order that there may be no misunderstanding as to the object of this amendment, I will state that I prepared the amendment and had it referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and there was no disposition or desire on my part, when I drew the amendment, to limit the traveling expenses to official trips. The idea of the amendment is that when a delegation from one of the States of the Union comes and asks the President to visit their State that he may go, that he may take on his train a sufficient number of newspaper men, as is customary, that he may take on his train, when it enters the border of the State, the governor and the reception committee and the gentlemen who necessarily and naturally go to meet him.

Now, then, just one minute more, if the Senator will permit me?

The VICE-PRESIDENT. The Senate will receive a message from the House of Representatives.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. W. J. BROWNING, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had disagreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 18750) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, and for other purposes, recedes from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 6, 7, and 10, and agrees to the same with amendments in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate; recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 56, and agrees to the same; further insists upon its disagreement to the residue of the amendments to the bill, asks a further conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. FOSS, Mr. LOUDENSLAGER, and Mr. MEYER managers at the conference on the part of the House.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions; and they were thereupon signed by the Vice-President:

S. 1031. An act granting to the State of California 5 per cent of the net proceeds of the cash sales of public lands in said State;

S. 1649. An act providing for the retirement of petty officers and enlisted men of the Navy;

S. 3263. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a port of delivery at Salt Lake City, Utah;"

S. 3414. An act providing for a public highway on the east side of Fort Sherman abandoned military reservation, Idaho;

S. 5512. An act defining the qualifications of jurors for service in the United States district court in Porto Rico;

S. 5989. An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Missouri River in Broadwater and Gallatin counties, Mont.;

S. 6234. An act to authorize the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company, of Montana, to construct a bridge across the Missouri River in Lewis and Clarke County, Mont.;

S. 6451. An act to provide for a commission to examine and report concerning the use of the United States of the waters of the Mississippi River flowing over the dams between St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn.;

H. R. 3459. An act for the relief of John W. Williams;

H. R. 4580. An act for the relief of Blank & Parks, of Waxahachie, Tex.;

H. R. 5221. An act for the relief of Edward King, of Niagara Falls, in the State of New York;

H. R. 9343. An act providing for the resurvey of certain townships of land in the county of Baca, Colo.;

H. R. 16472. An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, and for other purposes;

H. R. 18536. An act providing for the subdivision of lands entered under the reclamation act, and for other purposes;

H. R. 18600. An act to amend section 10 of an act of Congress approved June 21, 1898, to make certain grants of land to the Territory of New Mexico, and for other purposes;

S. R. 47. Joint resolution granting condemned cannon for a statue to Governor Stevens T. Mason, of Michigan; and

S. R. 66. Joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to receive, for instruction at the Military Academy at West Point, Mr. Jose Martin Calvo, of Costa Rica.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Maine?

Mr. McCUMBER. I yield.

Mr. HALE. I ask that the action of the House of Representatives on the naval appropriation bill be laid before the Senate.

The VICE-PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 18750) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, and for other purposes, receding from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate Nos. 6, 7, and 10, and agrees to the same with amendments in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate; receding from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 56, and further insisting upon its disagreement to the residue of the amendments to the bill, and requesting a further conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. HALE. I move that the Senate further insist upon its amendments still in disagreement, that it disagree to the amendments of the House of Representatives to the amendments of the Senate and agree to the further conference, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Vice-President appointed Mr. HALE, Mr. PERKINS, and Mr. TILLMAN, as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 19844) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, and for other purposes.

Mr. HEMENWAY. Mr. President——

Mr. McCUMBER. I yield to the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I make this statement so that there can be no misunderstanding on the part of the Senate as to what I believe the pending amendment provides for.

As far as the traveling expenses of the President himself are concerned, they would not amount to a thousand dollars a year. It is a very small item that goes to paying the expenses of the President himself. It is for the accommodation of the people. Already from various places over the United States the richer States and richer colleges invite the President to come, and they propose to pay his expenses while the States far distant and the States that do not care to pay the expense out of their treasuries of course can not make these offers.

This constitutional argument seems to me to be splitting hairs. Here is the proposition: Does the President gain one bit by this provision being passed? Can it in any possible way add 5 cents to his salary? I say "No." Then there is no compensation, there is no gain, there is no emolument.

The President does not travel as a matter of pleasure. He travels because of the desire of the people of the United States. They want to see him. They are anxious for him to come to their States. The people are anxious to see him, and he goes, following the custom that has grown up now, with his train prepared, with a certain number of newspaper people, with provision for receiving the guests, the committees, the governors, the Senators or Members of Congress, the prominent citizens who go to meet the Presidential train. Now, that is all there is of it.

Then what is the use to stand here for hours and talk about the Constitution? We have got into such a habit of discussing the Constitution here in the Senate that no single question can come up but what we have hours of constitutional argument. When you go to the meat of this proposition, what is it? You do not add one single red cent to the salary of the President. You do not add in the way of emolument or gain or profit one single red cent. You simply say, "Here, the people of the country want the President to come and see them. We have got to prepare for him;" and we put in a provision for traveling expenses. If he does not travel at all, he does not get anything—not one red cent—but if he does travel, we pay the expenses of the trip. Why? Because the people of the United States want him to travel. It is the people who want to see him, and the people of the United States are willing to pay his expenses. They do not want him to accept courtesies from railroad companies, and they do not want the railroad companies to pull his train free. They want to pay for it, and they are able to pay for it.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. McCUMBER. I yield.

Mr. CARTER. I suggest to the Senator from Indiana that in order to meet the great constitutional objection a provision might be added to the effect that the President should pay for his own meals to the Secretary of the Treasury, to the end that no gain could possibly come to him.

Mr. HEMENWAY. If that amendment would satisfy the gentlemen who are opposing the amendment, I think we could raise money enough in the Senate in a few minutes to provide for the President's meals, if they are afraid that is a perquisite. Furnishing the White House, under the argument of the Senator from North Dakota, is a perquisite. Putting a guard there at his door to guide our people through and show them the White House is a perquisite.

Mr. McCUMBER. I yielded to the Senator for him to explain what had been intended by the amendment.

Mr. HEMENWAY. If the Senator thinks I am occupying too much of his time, I beg his pardon.

Mr. McCUMBER. I do not object, except that I am about occupying the time the Senator from Montana [Mr. CARTER] proposed to take on another matter.

Mr. HEMENWAY. I will take the floor in my own right when I have the opportunity to do so, and will conclude what I have to say in about two and a half minutes.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, you see the difficulty here. Again the Senator from Wisconsin makes the proposition that the President would not take advantage of this provision, except for the purpose of performing the functions of government. The Senator who drafted the amendment now explains it exactly as I understood to be its real intendment, that the President could travel and the Government could pay his expenses, and pay the expenses of any invited guests he might ask to travel with him, so that the people would not have to pay it if they were called upon, and so the President would be free from accepting it.

Now, the Senator says this does not add one nickel's benefit to the President. He says he does not gain a single nickel. If he travels and expends in traveling the whole $25,000, he gains or saves 500,000 nickels, and that which is saved and that which is gained is, under the law, an emolument, and the Constitution says that the emoluments of the President shall not be increased during his incumbency in office.

Mr. HEMENWAY. Mr. President——

Mr. McCUMBER. I have only a minute's time, and we will take up this question again to-morrow.

Now, Mr. President, we get back here again to the spirit of the provision in the Constitution, the very spirit that the Senator from Indiana has forgotten. It was to prevent just exactly such things as this that that provision was placed in the Constitution of the United States.

I know that there are a great many here who think that we deal too much with the Constitution; but, Mr. President, it is a pretty good instrument to follow. It has a great many provisions that were sound then and are sound to-day and will be sound so long as the Republic exists. It will be well for the Senator from Indiana as well as the rest of us to give it a little consideration before passing any law that is liable to be in conflict with it.

It is $25,000 this year. What is it to be next year? Fifty thousand dollars? If I do not vote for $50,000 next year I incur or may incur the hostility of the Executive. The Constitution intended to protect me against any hostility on the part of the Executive by reason of recording my vote in a manner that will be for or against his personal interests; and therefore it provided that Congress should not have the power either to take away from the President's compensation or to add to his salary as compensation any emolument which would be beneficial to him during his incumbency in office. It was to continue the good relations and prevent any strained relations between the Executive and Congress that this provision was placed in the Constitution. That Constitution has served us up until to-day. No great complaint has ever been made against it. It will serve us for two years more. We can then raise the salary of the President of the United States to such an extent that he can possibly afford to pay for some of his friends and not have the Government of the United States pay for them.

Mr. President, I agreed to close at 5 o'clock, and will do so now. I will probably continue this discussion to-morrow.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President——

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Maine?

Mr. CARTER. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. HALE. It is very evident that the appropriation bill can not be passed to-night. I regret this very much, but the Senate desires an executive session. I will simply say that I shall ask the Senate in the morning after the routine business to take up the bill and end it. There are only two amendments, this and one other, to be disposed of, and, although the Senator has intimated that, resting over to-night, he will occupy a good part of to-morrow, I trust he will help us in getting the bill through to-morrow.

Mr. CARTER. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. CLARK of Montana. Will the Senator yield to me a few moments? I am obliged to leave the city this evening, and I desire to call up a bill which will give rise to no debate.

Mr. CARTER. I will withdraw the motion for that purpose.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT GREAT FALLS, MONT.

Mr. CLARK of Montana. I ask for the consideration of the bill (S. 544) to provide for the erection of a public building in the city of Great Falls, Mont., which was reported to-day. It was read and passed by the Senate a week ago to-day, but was recommitted to make certain amendments, which have been agreed upon, and they were reported by the committee to-day. I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The Secretary read the bill; and there being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to its consideration.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds with amendments.

The first amendment was, on page 1, line 12, before the word "hundred," to strike out "three" and insert "two;" and in the same line, after the word "hundred," to insert "and twenty-five;" so as to make the clause read:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to acquire, at a cost not exceeding $20,000, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, a site and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, including fireproof vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, for the use and accommodation of the United States post-office and other Government offices in the city of Great Falls and State of Montana, the cost of said site and building, including said vaults, heating and ventilating apparatus, elevators, and approaches, complete, not to exceed the sum of $225,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, to strike out, on page 2, from line 14 to line 11 on page 3, in the following words:

If, upon consideration of said report and accompanying papers, the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem further investigation necessary, he may appoint a commission of not more than three persons, one of whom shall be an officer of the Treasury Department, which commission shall also examine the said proposed sites, and such others as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate, and grant such hearings in relation thereto as they shall deem necessary; and said commission shall, within thirty days after said examination, make to the Secretary of the Treasury written report of their conclusion in the premises, accompanied by all maps, statements, plats, or documents taken by or submitted to them in like manner as hereinbefore provided in regard to the proceedings of said agent of the Treasury Department; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon finally determine the location of the building to be erected.

The compensation of said commissioners shall be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the same shall not exceed $6 per day and actual traveling expenses: Provided, however, That the member of said commission appointed from the Treasury Department shall be paid only his actual traveling expenses.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ORA P. HOWLAND.

Mr. CARTER. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will ask the Senator if he will yield to me that I may ask unanimous consent for the consideration of an urgent pension bill. It will take but a moment.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. CARTER. I will yield to the Senator; but I will state that after the bill to which he has referred has been disposed of I can not yield further.

Mr. GALLINGER. I thank the Senator. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 1326) granting an increase of pension to Ora P. Howland.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to place on the pension roll the name of Ora P. Howland, late of Company H, Second Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Heavy Artillery, and to pay him a pension of $24 per month in lieu of that he is now receiving.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LANDS OF MENOMINEE INDIANS, WISCONSIN.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I ask that the Senator from Idaho [Mr. DUBOIS] and the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. CLAPP] be excused from further service on the conference committee on the bill (H. R. 13372) to authorize the sale of timber on certain of the lands reserved for the use of the Menominee tribe of Indians, in the State of Wisconsin, and that the vacancies be filled by the Chair.

The VICE-PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered, and the Chair appoints the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. GAMBLE] and the Senator from Missouri [Mr. STONE] to fill the vacancies.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. CARTER. I renew my motion that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After forty minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened, and (at 5 o'clock and 45 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Friday, June 22, 1906, at 12 o'clock m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate June 21, 1906.

NAVAL OFFICER OF CUSTOMS.

J. Stuart MacDonald, of Maryland, to be naval officer of customs in the district of Baltimore, in the State of Maryland, to succeed William T. Malster, whose term of office will expire by limitation June 22, 1906.

UNITED STATES ATTORNEY.

John C. Rose, of Maryland, to be United States attorney for the district of Maryland. A reappointment, his term having expired on June 10, 1906.

UNITED STATES MARSHAL.

John F. Langhammer, of Maryland, to be United States marshal for the district of Maryland. A reappointment, his term expiring July 16, 1906.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE.

Charles M. Hough, of New York, to be United States district judge for the southern district of New York. An original appointment under the provisions of the act approved May 26, 1906, entitled "An act to appoint an additional judge for the southern district of New York."

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION.

Elmer E. Brown, of California, to be Commissioner of Education, vice William T. Harris, resigned.

PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY.

Ensign John C. Fremont, jr., to be a lieutenant (junior grade) in the Navy from the 7th day of June, 1906, having completed three years' service in his present grade.

Lieut. (Junior Grade) John C. Fremont, jr., to be a lieutenant in the Navy from the 7th day of June, 1906, to fill a vacancy existing in that grade on that date.

P. A. Paymaster David C. Crowell to be a passed assistant paymaster in the Navy, with the rank of lieutenant, from the 15th day of April, 1906.

The following-named passed assistant paymasters to be passed assistant paymasters in the Navy, with the rank of lieutenant, from the 7th day of June, 1906:

James A. Bull,
Frank T. Watrous,
Arthur S. Peters,
Edwards S. Stalnaker,
Chester G. Mayo,
Jere Maupin,
James F. Kutz, and
Arthur S. Brown.

Asst. Naval Constructors Julius A. Furer and William B. Fogarty to be assistant naval constructors in the Navy, with the rank of lieutenant, from the 15th day of April, 1906.

Asst. Naval Constructors Sidney M. Henry and Lewis B. McBride to be assstant naval constructors in the Navy, with the rank of lieutenant, from the 7th day of June, 1906.

Civil Engineers De Witt C. Webb, Walter H. Allen, and James V. Rockwell to be civil engineers in the Navy, with the rank of lieutenant, from the 7th day of June, 1906.

APPRAISER OF MERCHANDISE.

J. Carlyle Wilmer, of Maryland, to be appraiser of merchandise in the district of Baltimore, in the State of Maryland, to succeed C. Ross Mace, resigned.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE ARMY—MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

To be assistant surgeons, with the rank of first lieutenant, from June 20, 1906.

Albert Gallatin Love, of Tennessee.
Harold Wellington Jones, of Missouri.
Omar Walker Pinkston, of Missouri.
Mathew Aaron Reasoner, of Illinois.
Henry James Nichols, of New York.
Louis Hedven Hanson, of Wisconsin.
Lucius Locke Hopwood, of Iowa.
Charles Ernest Freeman, of Missouri.
Ferdinand Schmitter, of New York.
Howard Alden Reed, of Pennsylvania.
Henry Blodgett McIntyre, of Vermont.

COMMANDERS IN THE NAVY.

The following-named commanders, who have already been confirmed, to take rank from dates set opposite their names, to correct the dates of their promotions caused by the retirement of Lieut. Commander Franklin J. Schell, who was due for promotion and retired before qualifying therefor:

John G. Quinby, to take rank from July 1, 1905;
James H. Glennon, to take rank from July 8, 1905;
Percival J. Werlich, to take rank from September 8, 1905;
William R. Rush, to take rank from September 9, 1905;
Harry S. Knapp, to take rank from September 30, 1905;
William L. Rodgers, to take rank from December 27, 1905;
Roy C. Smith, to take rank from January 7, 1906;
Robert S. Griffin, to take rank from January 22, 1906;
Albert N. Wood, to take rank from February 10, 1906;
Edward Lloyd, jr., to take rank from February 12, 1906;
Richard M. Hughes, to take rank from February 19, 1906;
Frank W. Bartlett, to take rank from February 28, 1906; and Frederick C. Bieg, to take rank from April 13, 1906.

Midshipman Charles A. Harrington to be an ensign in the Navy from the 2d day of February, 1906, to fill a vacancy existing in that grade on that date.

CONSUL-GENERAL.

Edward L. Adams, of New York, now secretary of the legation and consul-general at that place, for promotion to be consul-general of the United States of class 6 at Stockholm, Sweden, to fill an original vacancy.

CONSULS.

José de Olivares, of Missouri, to be consul of the United States of class 7 at Managua, Nicaragua, vice Chester Donaldson, appointed consul at Port Limon.

Lester Maynard, of California, to be consul of the United States of class 7 at Sandakan, British North Borneo, to fill an original vacancy.

COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS.

George E. Cousens, of Maine, to be collector of customs for the district of Kennebunk, in the State of Maine. (Reappointment.)

POSTMASTERS.

CALIFORNIA.

John N. Newkirk to be postmaster at San Diego, in the county of San Diego and State of California, in place of John N. Newkirk. Incumbent's commission expired February 28, 1906.

Alfred A. True to be postmaster at Highland, in the county of San Bernardino and State of California, in place of Alfred A. True. Incumbent's commission expires June 30, 1906.

CONNECTICUT.

Henry Dryhurst to be postmaster at Meriden, in the county of New Haven and State of Connecticut, in place of Henry Dryhurst. Incumbent's commission expires June 30, 1906.

GEORGIA.

John M. Barnes to be postmaster at Thomson, in the county of McDuffie and State of Georgia, in place of Lulu M. Farmer. Incumbent's commission expired March 14, 1906.

ILLINOIS.

Frank E. Eckard to be postmaster at Vandalia, in the county of Fayette and State of Illinois, in place of John A. Bingham. Incumbent's commission expired June 10, 1906.

Joel S. Ray to be postmaster at Arcola, in the county of Douglas and State of Illinois, in place of Joel S. Ray. Incumbent's commission expires June 27, 1906.

IOWA.

Lew I. Sturgis to be postmaster at Oelwein, in the county of Fayette and State of Iowa, in place of Lew I. Sturgis. Incumbent's commission expires June 27, 1906.

KANSAS.

L. C. McMurray to be postmaster at McPherson, in the county of McPherson and State of Kansas, in place of Benjamin A. Allison. Incumbent's commission expires June 28, 1906.

KENTUCKY.

Thomas F. Beadles to be postmaster at Fulton, in the county of Fulton and State of Kentucky, in place of Thomas F. Beadles. Incumbent's commission expired January 13, 1906.

George W. Bury to be postmaster at Clinton, in the county of Hickman and State of Kentucky, in place of Joel P. Deboe. Incumbent's commission expired June 12, 1906.

Edna J. Kirk to be postmaster at Paintsville, in the county of Johnson and State of Kentucky. Office became Presidential April 1, 1906.

Ludlow F. Petty to be postmaster at Shelbyville, in the county of Shelby and State of Kentucky, in place of Ludlow F. Petty. Incumbent's commission expired March 1, 1906.

Orrin A. Reynolds to be postmaster at Covington, in the county of Kenton and State of Kentucky, in place of Orrin A. Reynolds. Incumbent's commission expired January 13, 1906.

Perry Westerfield to be postmaster at Sebree, in the county of Webster and State of Kentucky. Office became Presidential January 1, 1906.

MICHIGAN.

Miles S. Curtis to be postmaster at Battle Creek, in the county of Calhoun and State of Michigan, in place of Frank H. Latta. Incumbent's commission expires June 25, 1906.

Frank L. Irwin to be postmaster at Albion, in the county of Calhoun and State of Michigan, in place of Frank L. Irwin. Incumbent's commission expired January 21, 1906.

Scott Swarthout to be postmaster at Lakeview, in the county of Montcalm and State of Michigan, in place of Cary W. Vining. Incumbent's commission expired February 7, 1906.

MISSOURI.

Alexander F. Karbe to be postmaster at Neosho, in the county of Newton and State of Missouri, in place of Frank E. Miller, resigned.

NEW JERSEY.

L. W. Cramer to be postmaster at Mays Landing, in the county of Atlantic and State of New Jersey, in place of Shepherd S. Hudson, deceased.

NEW YORK.

George B. Harwood to be postmaster at Skaneateles, in the county of Onondaga and State of New York, in place of George B. Harwood. Incumbent's commission expired April 22, 1906.

OHIO.

John B. Elliott to be postmaster at Greenfield, in the county of Highland and State of Ohio, in place of John B. Elliott. Incumbent's commission expired June 19, 1906.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

James O. Ladd to be postmaster at Summerville, in the county of Dorchester and State of South Carolina, in place of James O. Ladd. Incumbent's commission expired April 30, 1906

WITHDRAWAL.

Executive nomination withdrawn from the Senate June 21, 1906.

Emma Metzger to be postmaster at Oakharbor, in the State of Ohio.

WATERS OF THE RIO GRANDE.

The injunction of secrecy was removed June 21, 1906, from a convention between the United States and Mexico, signed at Washington on May 21, 1906, providing for the equitable distribution of the waters of the Rio Grande for irrigation purposes.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, June 21, 1906.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. HENRY N. COUDEN, D. D.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

BANKING INSTITUTIONS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (H. R. 118) to amend sections 713 and 714 of "An act to establish a Code of Law for the District of Columbia," approved March 3, 1901, as amended by the acts approved January 31 and June 30, 1902, and for other purposes, with a Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment was read.

Mr. KLINE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (S. 5769) to declare the true intent and meaning of parts of the act entitled "An act in relation to testimony before the Interstate Commerce Commission," and so forth, approved February 11, 1893, and an act entitled "An act to establish the Department of Commerce and Labor," approved February 14, 1903, and an act entitled "An act to further regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the States," approved February 19, 1903, and an act entitled "An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1904, and for other purposes," approved February 25, 1903, with House amendments disagreed to by the Senate.

Mr. JENKINS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House insist on its amendments and agree to the conference asked for.

The motion was agreed to. The Chair appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. JENKINS, Mr. LITTLEFIELD, and Mr. DE ARMOND.

FISHERIES OF ALASKA.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (H. R. 13543) for the protection and regulation of the fisheries of Alaska, with Senate amendments.

The Senate amendments were read.

Mr. CAPRON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

BONDS FOR AMERICAN PRINTING HOUSE FOR THE BLIND.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 16290) to postpone until 1907 the maturity of $250,000 of 4 per cent United States bonds held in trust for the benefit of the American Printing House for the Blind, with Senate amendments.

The Senate amendments were read.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

BRIDGE ACROSS THE OHIO RIVER, WEST VIRGINIA.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the bill (S. 6146) to authorize the Back River Bridge Company to construct a bridge across the west or smaller division of the Ohio River from Wheeling Island, West Virginia, to the Ohio shore, a similar bill being on the House Calendar.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Back River Bridge Company, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of West Virginia, its successors and assigns, be, and they are hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto, for street railway and wagon traffic and other appropriate public uses, across the west or smaller channel of the Ohio River, known as the Back River, from a point near the southerly end of Wheeling Island, which is a part of the city of Wheeling, in the State of West Virginia, to the Ohio shore, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

Mr. GAINES of West Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move the passage of the Senate bill, a similar House bill being on the Calendar.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

A similar bill (H. R. 19856) was laid on the table.

RIGHT OF WAY THROUGH PUBLIC LANDS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House the bill (H. R. 15513) to declare and enforce the forfeiture provided by section 4 of the act of Congress approved March 3, 1875, entitled "An act granting to railroads the right of way through the public lands of the United States," with Senate amendments.

The Senate amendments were read.

Mr. LACEY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House concur in the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. LACEY, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. PARKINSON, its reading clerk, announced that the Senate had agreed to the amendments of the House of Representatives to bills and joint resolution of the following titles:

S. 1697. An act confirming to certain claimants thereto portions of lands known as Fort Clinch Reservation, in the State of Florida;

S. 4109. An act to increase the efficiency of the Bureau of Insular Affairs of the War Department; and

S. R. 47. Joint resolution granting condemned cannon for a statue to Governor Stevens T. Mason, of Michigan.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 14171) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, for the armament thereof, for the procurement of heavy ordnance for trial and service, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the following titles:

H. R. 20119. An act to authorize the village of Oslo, Marshall County, Minn., to construct a bridge across the Red River of the North; and

H. R. 19181. An act to grant a certain parcel of land, part of the Fort Robinson Military Reservation, Nebr., to the village of Crawford, Nebr., for park purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment the following resolution:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause an examination and survey to be made of the harbor at Duluth, Minn., including the entrance thereto, with a view to determining what modifications of the present plan, if any, are desirable.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the naval appropriation bill, and ask unanimous consent that the reading of the report be dispensed with, and that the statement on the part of the managers of the House be read in lieu thereof.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois calls up the conference report upon the bill of which the Clerk will read the title.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 18750) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The following is the report and statement:

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 18750) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 9, 34, 35, 38, and 47.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 3, 5, 11, 12, 14, 16, 17, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 48, 49, 50, 52, 53, 54, 57, 58, 59, and 63, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 8: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 8, and agree to the same with amendments as follows:

In line 10 of said amendment strike out the colon and insert in lieu thereof a period.

In lines 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, and 17 of said amendment strike out the following: "Provided, That hereafter the pay and allowances of chaplains shall be the same, rank for rank, as is or may be provided by law for officers of the line and of the Medical and Pay Corps, all of whom shall hereafter receive the same pay on shore duty as is now provided for sea duty: And provided further, That the present pay and allowances of any officer now in the Navy shall not be reduced: Provided further," and insert in lieu thereof as a new paragraph:

"That all chaplains now in the Navy above the grade of lieutenant shall receive the pay and allowances of lieutenant-commander in the Navy according to length of service under the provisions of law for that rank, and all chaplains now in the Navy in the grade of lieutenant shall receive their present sea pay when on shore duty: Provided, That naval chaplains hereafter appointed shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of lieutenant (junior grade) in the Navy until they shall have completed seven years of service, when they shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of lieutenant in the Navy; and lieutenants shall be promoted, whenever vacancies occur, to the grade of lieutenant-commander, which shall consist of five members, and when so promoted shall receive the rank, pay, and allowances of lieutenant-commander in the Navy: Provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be held or construed to increase the number of chaplains as now authorized by law or to reduce the rank or pay of any now serving."

In line 17 of said amendment, commencing with the word "That," have a new paragraph; and in lines 17 and 18 of said amendment strike out the words "pay and;" and in line 21 of said amendment strike out the words "pay and."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 10: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 10, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 4 of said amendment strike out the words "rank, highest;" and in lines 4 and 5 of said amendment strike out the comma after the word "commander" and the words "and of no higher rank;" and in lines 6 and 7 strike out the words "be appointed from civil life in the manner and at" and insert in lieu thereof the word "receive;" and at the end of said amendment insert the following: "Provided further, That such officer shall not have the benefit of retirement;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 15: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 15, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In said amendment, after the word "million," strike out the words "three hundred thousand;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 18: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 18, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 5 of said amendment strike out the words "immediately available and to be;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 36: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 36, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In the last line of said amendment strike out the comma and the words "to be immediately available;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 51: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 51, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 6 of said amendment, after the word "graduation," insert the following "or that may occur for other reasons;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 60: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 60, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In said amendment strike out the words "one million" and insert in lieu thereof the words "five hundred thousand;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 61: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 61, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: On page 76 of the bill, at the end of line 5, insert the following: "But this provision shall not apply to or interfere with contracts for such armor already entered into, signed, and executed by the Secretary of the Navy;" and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 62: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 62, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "thirty-three million four hundred and seventy-five thousand eight hundred and twenty-nine dollars;" and the Senate agree to the same.

On amendments numbered 2, 6, 7, 13, 32, 33, 37, 55, and 56 the committee of conference have been unable to agree.

GEORGE EDMUND FOSS,
H. C. LOUDENSLAGER,
ADOLPH MEYER,
Managers on the part of the House.

EUGENE HALE,
GEO. C. PERKINS,
B. R. TILLMAN,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The statement was read, as follows:

STATEMENT.

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 18750) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, and for other purposes, submit the following written statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended in the accompanying conference report on each of the amendments of the Senate, viz:

On amendment No. 1: Provides for hire of quarters for officers serving with troops where there are no public quarters belonging to the Government, and where there are not sufficient quarters possessed by the United States to accommodate them, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 3: Provides that the Secretary of the Navy may, in his discretion, require the whole or a part of the bounty allowed upon enlistment to be refunded in cases where men are discharged during the first year of enlistment, by request, for inaptitude, as undesirable, or for disability not incurred in line of duty, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 5: Reimburses officers and enlisted men of the Navy and Marine Corps who were on duty under orders in San Francisco during the recent fire in that city for losses of clothing and other personal effects sustained by them through said fire, $7,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary: Provided, That such reimbursement shall be made under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Navy and upon vouchers to be approved by him in each case, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 8: Provides that the provision contained in section 13 of an act approved March 3, 1899, entitled "An act to reorganize and increase the efficiency of the personnel of the Navy and Marine Corps of the United States," reading as follows: "Provided, That such officers when on shore shall receive the allowances, but 15 per cent less pay than when on sea duty; but this provision shall not apply to warrant officers commissioned under section 12 of this act," be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

And further provides that all chaplains now in the Navy above the grade of lieutenant shall receive the pay and allowances of lieutenant-commander in the Navy according to length of service under the provisions of law for that rank, and all chaplains now in the Navy in the grade of lieutenant shall receive their present sea pay when on shore duty: Provided, That naval chaplains hereafter appointed shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of lieutenant (junior grade) in the Navy until they shall have completed seven years of service, when they shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of lieutenant in the Navy; and lieutenants shall be promoted, whenever vacancies occur, to the grade of lieutenant-commander, which shall consist of five numbers, and when so promoted shall receive the rank, pay, and allowances of lieutenant-commander in the Navy: Provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be held or construed to increase the number of chaplains as now authorized by law or to reduce the rank or pay of any now serving.

And further provides that the civil engineers and professors of mathematics shall receive the same allowances as are or may be provided by or in pursuance of law for naval constructors and the assistant civil engineers the same allowances as provided for assistant naval constructors.

On amendment No. 9: Strikes out the provision that a sum not to exceed $5,000 may be expended by the Secretary of the Navy for legal advice out of this appropriation, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 10: Provides that the solicitor in the office of the Judge-Advocate-General of the Navy shall hereafter be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall have the pay and allowances of a commander: Provided, That when such office becomes vacant the solicitor shall thereafter receive the compensation now provided by law: Provided further, That such officer shall not have the benefit of retirement.

On amendment No. 11: Strikes out the provision for transportation to the places of enlistment, or to their homes if residents of the United States, of enlisted men and apprentice seamen discharged on account of expiration of enlistment, with subsistence and transfers en route, or cash in lieu thereof, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 12: Provides that hereafter enlisted men discharged on account of expiration of enlistment shall receive, in lieu of transportation and subsistence, travel allowance of 4 cents per mile from the place of discharge to the place of enlistment, for travel in the United States, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 14: Provides that for the performance of such additional services in and about the Naval Home as may be necessary the Secretary of the Navy is authorized to employ, on the recommendation of the governor, beneficiaries in said home, whose compensation shall be fixed by the Secretary and paid from the appropriation for the support of the home, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 15: Appropriates $2,000,000 for reserve supply of powder and shell instead of $2,300,000, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 16: Appropriates $750,000 for reserve guns, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 17: Inserts the word "torpedo" after "naval," so as to read "naval torpedo station," as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 18: Provides for the preparation of sites, furnishing and erecting masts, buildings, and machinery foundations for United States naval wireless telegraph stations on the Pacific coast in the States of Washington, Oregon, and California, to be limited to the purposes above named, $65,000.

On amendment No. 19: Provides that $1,500 may be expended by the Secretary of the Navy in procuring a survey and estimate of cost for a channel into Welles Harbor, Midway Islands, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 20: Provides that the Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks shall be selected from the members of the Corps of Civil Engineers of the Navy having not less than seven years' active service, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendments Nos. 21 and 22: Appropriates $75,000 for boiler shops and changes totals accordingly, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendments Nos. 23, 24, and 26: Reduces appropriation toward the dry dock $50,000 and appropriates $40,000 for quay wall at dry-dock entrance; dry-dock latrines, $3,000; one officers' quarters, $7,000; dispensary building, $12,000, and changes totals accordingly, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendments Nos. 27, 28, and 29: Appropriates $30,000 for dredging and filling in at naval station at Key West, Fla.; also $3,000 for sewer system, and changes totals accordingly, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendments Nos. 30 and 31: Increases appropriations for navy-yard, Puget Sound, Wash., as follows: Telephone system, extensions, $1,500; central power plant, $60,000; water-closets for ships in dock, $2,500, and changes totals accordingly, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendments Nos. 34 and 35: Strikes out language "and power plant," as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 36: Appropriates $35,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, for the reclamation of that portion of the naval station at Honolulu, Hawaii, known as the "Reef."

On amendment No. 38: Applies the word "all" to officers outside of the naval hospital, Newport, R. I., so that it will read "building quarters for all officers," etc.

On amendments Nos. 39 and 40: Provides for a heading, "Public works, Marine Corps," and the erection of barracks and quarters, Marine Corps: Erection and equipment of two laundries for enlisted men, marine barracks, $12,000, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendments Nos. 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, and 46: Provides for the completion of marine barracks on the Schmoele tract of land at the Norfolk Navy-Yard, in the State of Virginia, including plumbing, interior woodwork, painting, grading, and proper connections with the local waterworks, $15,000; for the construction of two additional sets of officers' quarters, Norfolk Navy-Yard, $24,000; in all, Norfolk Navy-Yard, $39,000.

For the erection of marine barracks and officers' quarters, naval station, New Orleans, La., $15,000, which sum shall be in addition to $15,000 appropriated for this object in the naval appropriation act approved March 3, 1901, and $6,500 provided in the naval appropriation act approved April 27, 1904.

For the erection of marine barracks and completion of officers' quarters, marine barracks, naval training station, San Francisco, Cal., $15,000.

For the necessary repairs and improvements to such buildings at the naval station, New London, Conn., as have been assigned to the Marine Corps by the Navy Department, $25,000.

For the purchase of land adjoining marine reservation, naval station, Sitka, Alaska, $400.

In all, public works, Marine Corps, $106,400, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 47: Strikes out provision that the Secretary of the Nevy be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause to be constructed a fully completed model of each vessel of war of the Navy of the United States which now has or may hereafter be given the name borne by any State of the United States, said model to be deposited in the capitol building of said State, and in every case said model shall be placed in a prominent position, convenient to public view: Provided, That such model shall not cease to be, when so deposited, the property of the Government of the United States, but shall be at all times subject to the authority and direction of the Secretary of the Navy, no model to cost in excess of $3,500, and the sum of $50,000 is hereby appropriated, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 48: Appropriates $60,000 to outfit boiler shop and changes totals accordingly, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 49: Changes totals as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 50: Changes totals as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 51: Provides hereafter the Secretary of the Navy shall, as soon as possible after the 1st day of June of each year preceding the graduation of midshipmen in the succeeding year, notify in writing each Senator, Representative, and Delegate in Congress of any vacancy that will exist at the Naval Academy because of such graduation, or that may occur for other reasons, and which he shall be entitled to fill by nomination of a candidate and one or more alternates therefor. The nomination of a candidate and alternate or alternates to fill such vcancy shall be made upon the recommendation of the Senator, Representative, or Delegate, if such recommendation is made by the 4th day of March of the year following that in which said notice in writing is given, but if it is not made by that time the Secretary of the Navy shall fill the vacancy by appointment of an actual resident of the State, Congressional district, or Territory, as the case may be, in which the vacancy will exist, who shall have been for at least two years immediately preceding the date of his appointment an actual and bona fide resident of the State, Congressional district, or Territory in which the vacancy will exist and of the legal qualification under the law as now provided. In cases where by reason of a vacancy in the membership of the Senate or House of Representatives, or by the death or declination of a candidate for admission to the academy there occurs or is about to occur at the academy a vacancy from any State, district, or Territory that can not be filled by nomination as herein provided, the same may be filled as soon thereafter and before the final entrance examination for the year, as the Secretary of the Navy may determine. The candidates allowed for the District of Columbia and all the candidates appointed at large, together with alternates therefor, shall be selected by the President within the period herein prescribed for nomination of other candidates: Provided, That the President may select a candidate for the District of Columbia for the year 1908, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 52: Provides that the President be authorized to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, two additional professors of mathematics in the Navy, who shall be extra numbers in said list and who shall take rank as now held by them.

On amendment No. 53: Provides that all records (such as muster and pay rolls and reports) relating to the personnel and operations of public and private armed vessels of the North American colonies in the war of the Revolution now in any of the Executive Departments shall be transferred to the Secretary of the Navy, to be preserved, indexed, and prepared for publication, as proposed by the Senate.

On amendment No. 54: Provides for prizes for excellence in gunnery exercise and target practice, both afloat and ashore.

On amendments Nos. 57, 58, 59, and 60: Provides for tests of subsurface and submarine torpedo boats to take place within nine months instead of twelve from the date of the passage of this act, and appropriates $500,000.

On amendment No. 61: Provides that the following clause, "That no part of this appropriation shall be expended for armor for vessels herein authorized except upon contracts for such armor when awarded by the Secretary of the Navy, to the lowest responsible bidder, having in view the best results and most expeditious delivery," shall not apply to or interfere with contracts for such armor already entered into, signed, and executed by the Secretary of the Navy.

On amendment No. 62: Changes totals from $32,975,829 for total increase of the Navy to $33,475,829.

On amendment No. 63: Provides that no part of any sum appropriated by this act shall be used for any expense of the Navy Department at Washington unless specific authority be given for such expenditure.

The committee of conference have been unable to agree on the following amendments:

On amendment No. 2: Which increases the appropriation for pay of the Navy from $20,000,000 to $20,269,637.

On amendment No. 6: Which provides that all officers of the Navy below the grade of rear-admiral, with creditable records, including those retired with the relative rank of commodore, who served during the civil war, and who were honorably retired prior to the passage of an act entitled "An act to reorganize and increase the efficiency of the personnel of the Navy and Marine Corps of the United States," approved March 3, 1899, shall be advanced on the retired list one grade above the grade or rank now held by them, to take effect from the date of the approval of said act; and that rear-admirals retired prior to the passage of said act shall receive the same pay as officers of the Navy of corresponding grade who have been retired under said act: Provided, That this act shall not apply to any officer who has received an advance of grade since his retirement or has been restored to the Navy and placed on the retired list with promotion thereon by virtue of the provisions of a special act of Congress. This provision shall in no case authorize any claim for back pay and shall have effect only for the future, and shall also apply in like manner to officers of the Marine Corps.

On amendment No. 7: Which provides that officers of the Marine Corps with creditable records who served during the civil war and were retired prior to 1904 shall receive the full benefit of the act approved April 23, 1904, in so far as the same provides for the promotion of civil war veterans to the next higher grade above that at which they were retired.

On amendment No. 13: Which provides that the naval station at Port Royal, S. C., including all buildings and other property thereon and the employees attached thereto, be hereby transferred to and placed under the control of the Bureau of Navigation, Navy Department, as an adjunct to the naval training station, Rhode Island, to be used for the instruction of recruits during the winter months and at such other times as may be deemed advisable, and for that purpose the following sums are appropriated: Necessary repairs to the buildings to fit them for berthing, messing, and drilling purposes, and for galleys, latrines, and washhouses for apprentice seamen, and for purposes of administration in connection with the training of the same, $51,000; installing necessary distilling plant or fresh-water supply, $20,000; maintenance of the station as a training station, $25,000; in all, $96,000.

On amendments Nos. 32 and 33: Which provide for the construction of a graving dock of concrete and granite, to cost in all $1,400,000, $100,000; in all, navy-yard, Pensacola, $140,000.

On amendment No. 37: Which provides for changes in the totals, public works, navy-yards and stations, from $2,848,450 to $3,052,450.

On amendment No. 55: Which provides that from and after the date of the approval of this act the Commandant of the Marine Corps shall have the rank, pay, and allowances of a major-general in the Army, and when a vacancy shall occur in the office of Commandant of Corps, on the expiration of the service of the present incumbent, by retirement or otherwise, the Commandant of the Marine Corps shall thereafter have the rank, pay, and allowances of a brigadier-general.

On amendment No. 56: Which provides that before any proposals for said battle ship shall be issued or any bids received and accepted the Secretary of the Navy shall report to Congress at its next session full details covering the type of such battle ship and the specifications for the same, including its displacement, draft, and dimensions, and the kind and extent of armor and armament therefor.

GEORGE EDMUND FOSS,
H. C. LOUDENSLAGER,
ADOLPH MEYER,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I would state that this report is a partial report and covers all matters in disagreement between the House and the Senate except practically five or six subjects, the first relating to the civil-war veterans, which is covered by amendments 2, 6, and 7; the thirteenth Senate amendment, appropriating less than $100,000 for Fort Royal; Senate amendments Nos. 32, 33, and 37, providing for an additional dock at Pensacola Navy-Yard, and amendment 55, giving the Commandant of the Marine Corps the rank and pay of a major-general, together with 56, relating to the battle ship. These are the only matters in disagreement between the two Houses, or will be after the adoption of this report. Mr. Speaker, I now move the previous question on the adoption of the report.

Mr. PAYNE. Oh, Mr. Speaker, does not the gentleman propose to have some debate on this?

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, this report is too important to be put over under the previous question. If the gentleman insists upon that motion, I sincerely hope the House will vote it down. There are some things here that the House should understand before it adopts this report.

Mr. FOSS. Very well, Mr. Speaker, I will withdraw that motion. Does the gentleman desire to ask some questions?

Mr. HULL. I desire to discuss this report and incidentally to ask some questions.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I hope the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Foss] will give time enough to discuss this report.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, this relates simply to the adoption of a partial report.

Mr. PAYNE. It involves a great many important matters that the House should be in possession of before it votes on it.

Mr. FOSS. How much time does the gentleman from Iowa desire?

Mr. HULL. I do not want to use any unusual time. It is impossible to say how long.

Mr. FOSS. I yield five minutes to the gentleman.

Mr. HULL. Five minutes would not be enough. I would want at least ten or fifteen minutes.

Mr. FOSS. Well, I will yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to move that the House recede from its disagreement on amendment No. 6 and concur in the Senate amendment. Is it proper for me to make that motion at this time?

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands that there is a conference report that brings the two bodies together upon certain matters of disagreement, and that there are certain other matters that have not been agreed to. The first question that would present itself is as to whether the House will agree to the conference report. After that any matters that have not been settled in the conference report, in the event the conference report should be adopted, would be subject to disposition by the House. If the conference report is defeated, then all matters, if the House should further insist upon its disagreement to the Senate amendments, would go back to conference.

Mr. PERKINS. Yes; but I suppose it would be proper for the House to vote to instruct the committee to recede and concur on amendment No. 6.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, that would be in order.

Mr. PERKINS. Then the report thus amended could be adopted.

The SPEAKER. That is not in order at this time. The only question before the House at this time is as to whether the House will agree to the conference report. If they agree, then it takes all those matters contained in that report out of disagreement with the Senate.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I understand that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BURTON] has a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. BURTON of Ohio. No; I think that has been answered by what the Speaker said. As I understand, the motion now before the House is to adopt that part of the conference report upon which the conferees agree. I do not understand that any former motion was made to that effect.

The SPEAKER. That is all there is to the conference report.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I do not like to antagonize the report of the conferees——

Mr. PRINCE. Mr. Speaker, I call for order. This report affects not only the Committee on Naval Affairs, but the Committee on Military Affairs, and the Army is affected by it as well.

The SPEAKER. The House will be in order.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, there is a constant strife between the two arms of the service, as they say, to be put upon an equality; but each time that one is put upon an equality it is found out afterwards that he goes a little beyond equality, and then the other arm begins to press up—never presses down. I have never found either of them to come and solicit Congress to equalize rank and pay downward. It is always to equalize up. This report, in my judgment, in some respects is equalizing up, and I desire to call the attention of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Foss], the chairman of the committee, to amendment No. 1, which provides as follows:

For hire of quarters for officers serving with troops where there are no public quarters belonging to the Government, and where there are not sufficient quarters possessed by the United States to accommodate them.

That is to say, the naval officers shall have quarters. Now, the Army has that in a limited degree. In other words, where an officer of the Army is serving with or without troops and the Government can not furnish quarters, he gets, according to his rank, so many rooms. In other words, if he is a lieutenant, he gets two rooms; if he is a captain, he gets three rooms, and the price of the room is fixed at $12 a room. There is no limitation in this, and a man serving in any city of the United States could receive out of this appropriation rent for a house that would cost $5,000 a year and be within the law. Now, what I want is for the conferees, when they take this up again—and I hope they will—to limit the price of the room to $12, and give to each naval officer rooms according to his rank, as is done in the Army. If you will do this, we will have no further trouble about this room matter. If you do not do it, we will be bothered here every Congress for as liberal a provision as is given here——

Mr. TAWNEY. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. HULL. Certainly.

Mr. TAWNEY. Is this amendment included in the agreement of the conferees?

Mr. HULL. It is included in the agreement.

Mr. TAWNEY. Then there is only one way to reach it, and that would be to vote down the conferees' report. That is the parliamentary situation?

Mr. HULL. That is correct. I have a serious objection, Mr. Speaker, to amendment No. 10, which has been agreed to by the conferees.

Mr. WATSON. What is amendment No. 10?

Mr. HULL. It is a Senate amendment.

The solicitor in the office of the Judge-Advocate-General of the Navy shall hereafter be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall have the rank, highest pay, and allowances of a commander, and no higher rank: Provided, That when such office becomes vacant the solicitor shall thereafter be appointed from civil life in the manner and at the compensation now provided by law.

The conferees changed that, and, I think, intended to cover my objection. They struck out the words "rank, highest" and the words "no higher rank," so it will read "shall have the pay and allowance of a commander," and then they made the proviso read: "When such office becomes vacant the solicitor shall receive the compensation now provided by law," and they add another proviso: "Provided further, That such officer shall not have the benefit of retirement." But my point, Mr. Speaker, is that that proviso in regard to retirement should have come in immediately after giving the rank to the officer. He is a civilian employee of the Navy Department. He is getting pay now fixed by law. This makes him virtually a commander in the Navy, and by putting in the proviso where it is it does not keep him off the retired list——

Mr. FITZGERALD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HULL. In other words, the proviso fixing the retirement only provides for those who may come after him.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Does this amendment in effect take a civilian into the Navy at the rank of commander?

Mr. HULL. Yes.

Mr. FITZGERALD. That is the purpose?

Mr. HULL. That is the purpose of the Senate amendment.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Why should some civilian who has been working in the Navy Department at this time be given rank in the Navy as commander with the pay and allowances of one?

Mr. HULL. And he has also the retired pay.

Mr. PAYNE. Is not the object of this amendment to increase the pay of the present incumbent while he is in office?

Mr. HULL. I will say the object of the amendment was to increase the pay of the present incumbent, but the intent of the House conferees unquestionably was to limit it to him while on the active list, and if they had put their proviso immediately following the word "commander" in line 18 of the bill, I should not have had a word to say, but putting the proviso at the close of the whole legislation, after they had provided what the succeeding officer should have, simply provides that the succeeding officer shall not be put upon the retired list. I do not believe there is any question as to the construction that will be placed upon it.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Speaker, it was quite impossible for us over here on this side of the House to hear the gentleman's explanation of the item about quarters provided for in this bill—quarters for officers on shore duty, I suppose.

Mr. HULL. Serving where there are no public quarters.

Mr. SLAYDEN. In what respect does that differ from the legislation for the Army?

Mr. HULL. It makes no limitation whatever on what shall be expended for quarters by any officer.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Do you mean to say not so much for a room and not so many rooms for rank?

Mr. HULL. No, sir; nothing of the kind. It simply provides they shall have quarters, and as I said before, while I think it is extreme, and it would be doubtful if any such thing would ever happen, yet they would have the power under this law to furnish a house in Washington, or in any other city where they are serving with the troops, no matter what the cost should be.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Does not the gentleman think that it would only be fair to the public and doing exact justice as between the two branches of the service, if they were limited to the same emolument in that direction?

Mr. HULL. It is my suggestion, if this goes back to the conference, that they provide that they shall have so many rooms for each rank, and that they shall not pay over $12 a month for each room, as it is for the Army.

Mr. SLAYDEN. What about the compensation for the chaplains?

Mr. HULL. I want to compliment the committee on this, that they have adjusted the chaplains on the same line as is now provided for the Army.

Mr. SLAYDEN. That is wise legislation.

Mr. HULL. They have fixed it so that they go in at lower grades, and are gradually promoted in line until they reach the grade of lieutenant-commander of the Navy—equal to the grade of major in the Army; and I want to congratulate the committee that in this respect they have compelled the Senate to recognize the justice of the pay and emoluments between the two branches of the service.

Mr. RIXEY. As I understood the gentleman a moment ago, he was referring to amendment No. 10.

Mr. HULL. I was.

Mr. RIXEY. Which provides for the increase in the compensation of the solicitor in the office of the Judge-Advocate-General.

Mr. HULL. Yes.

Mr. RIXEY. And provides that at the expiration of his term the compensation shall then go back to what it is now.

Mr. HULL. Yes.

Mr. RIXEY. Well, so far as I know, I never heard of any reason for this. But the Secretary of the Navy appeared before the House committee, and also before the Senate committee, urging that he might be allowed $5,000 extra with which to employ legal counsel. It seems to me that this amendment No. 10 is very inappropriate at this time.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I am not arguing that feature of it. The House has as much judgment as myself as to whether it is an overpayment or not. The proper way to have met that question, if this amendment is fixed as it should be, would be to provide simply for an increase of pay for this officer.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I ask for ten minutes more.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield ten minutes more to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, in my judgment, whenever you do give an increase of pay to the solicitor of the Navy, you have got to give increased pay to the solicitor of every other Department of the Government. But that question is for the House to determine. But what I am protesting against is this: The injecting into the appropriation bill of a civilian and giving him rank and giving him retired pay, who has only a few years more to serve until he reaches retirement. If this officer should be a regular naval officer, why not bring in a bill here providing for the detail of a naval officer and giving him rank and pay while he is holding that position—as the Army has done and as the Navy has done in so many cases?

Mr. PAYNE. Was this amendment in the bill when it passed the House?

Mr. HULL. No, sir.

Mr. PAYNE. No attempt to increase the pay?

Mr. HULL. No attempt to do it. There is another feature I desire to call attention to that is not in the conference report.

Mr. BUTLER of Pennsylvania. Before the gentleman leaves that——

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. HULL. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. BUTLER of Pennsylvania. Does the gentleman construe that amendment—I could not hear him very distinctly—to put this civilian on the retired list?

Mr. HULL. I have no question of it. I call the attention of the gentleman to it as it will read:

The solicitor in the office of the Judge-Advocate-General of the Navy shall hereafter be appointed by the President, by and with the advice of the Senate, and shall have the pay and allowances of a commander.

Now, that stops there. Then follows the proviso:

Provided, That when such office becomes vacant the solicitor shall thereafter receive the compensation now provided by law.

Then the committee on conference follow that with another proviso:

Provided further, That such officer shall not have the benefit of retirement.

What officer does that mean? The last proviso does not mean the present incumbent, because you give him the rank of commander and then provide that his successor shall not be retired.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. HULL. Why, certainly.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Does the gentleman acquiesce in the construction of the words "to be appointed from civil life?"

Mr. HULL. Why, Mr. Speaker, they are already appointed from civil life. This man that it is proposed to benefit is appointed from civil life. He is only the Solicitor of the Navy Department. There is a man occupying the same position as Solicitor of the Treasury Department as this man is in the Navy Department. He is only a civil-life man. The beneficiary of this amendment is a civil law officer of the Navy, and always has been since he was promoted from a clerkship. While I say I would have preferred to see him given simply an increase of his pay, I do not object to giving him the pay of a commander, but I do object to giving him the benefit of the retired list after six years' service after this day, where he will receive three-fourths of that pay as long as he lives, without performing any service whatever.

There is another proposition that is not in the conference report I wanted to call the attention of the House to, but I will wait until later.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I do not desire to detain the House longer. I wanted to call especial attention to these two features of the bill, not because I have not confidence in the Committee on Naval Affairs, and not because I desire to interfere in their business; but these two matters are so closely and intimately related to each branch of the service that it seems to me that the House will make a mistake if it should level them up. Let us put the two branches on an equality and stop there.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Iowa is more apprehensive than right in his criticism of this report. He has made two objections to it—one upon the ground that we have provided in here for the hire of quarters, and we propose to hire quarters in the Navy that will cost more than the commutation for quarters. This provision was put in by the Senate upon the recommendation of the Secretary of the Navy, to meet a Comptroller's decision upon the question of whether or not they had the right to quarters. This does not seek in any way to make a new distinction between the Army and the Navy; and I will read here the last clause of the letter from the Secretary of the Navy, in which he brings that out clear. He says:

No increase in the appropriation will result from the additional language, as its only result will be to restore conditions existing before the decision of the Comptroller and permit the allotment to an officer serving on shore duty with troops the quarters to which his rank and duty entitle him.

Mr. HULL. Let me ask the gentleman a question. Why not fix that in the law?

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, that settles the whole controversy.

Mr. PAYNE. Has the gentleman any objection to reading to the House the exact provision put in the bill? That would give more information than the statement of the Secretary.

Mr. FOSS (reading):

For hire of quarters for officers serving with troops where there are no public quarters belonging to the Government, and where there are not sufficient quarters possessed by the United States to accommodate them.

Mr. PAYNE. Where is the limitation in that language?

Mr. FOSS. The limitation is in the general law providing commutation for quarters.

Mr. HULL. What is the general law fixing commutation of quarters for the Navy? We have it for the Army, but what is it for the Navy?

Mr. FOSS. The Navy are given the allowances of Army officers of corresponding rank.

Mr. HULL. Then why not put it that way, if that is true?

Mr. FOSS. That is the general law, and the gentleman from Iowa knows it.

Mr. HULL. I do not; and if so, why this provision?

Mr. FOSS. And where they put in there "hire of quarters for officers," they will not be able to get any better quarters than they are entitled to under the general law, and the gentleman from Iowa knows that. [Applause.]

Mr. HULL. Well, I do not know that.

Mr. FOSS. Now, upon the second proposition that the gentleman from Iowa has raised here to-day——

Mr. HULL. I hope the gentleman will read the law. It is fair to the House that we should have the law.

Mr. FOSS. On the second provision, Senate amendment 10, our provision reads as follows:

The solicitor in the office of the Judge-Advocate-General of the Navy shall hereafter be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall have the pay and allowances of a commander.

The Senate added other language. Now, that refers to Mr. Hanna, who has been a solicitor in the office of the Judge-Advocate-General for a great many years. He came in as a clerk at $1,800 a year. He is a man now 50 years of age, the only civil lawyer in the Department. He receives a compensation of $2,500 a year. If this passes, he will get $3,500 a year, an increase of a thousand dollars, so I am told by Mr. Hanna himself this morning.

Mr. HULL. Does the Navy get "fogy" or longevity pay?

Mr. FOSS. Yes; but this cuts out the longevity pay, because it does not pay "the highest pay;" it will only be $3,500. We thought it would give him $4,000, but he says not. Now, the gentleman from Iowa says that this provision puts Mr. Hanna on the retired list. I stand here and say that the language of that provision, giving the solicitor simply the pay and allowances of a commander, does not put him on the retired list.

Mr. HULL. Why not say that he shall not be eligible to retirement?

Mr. FOSS. We have stricken out the word "rank," which would have put him on the retired list, and that is all that provision means. Then, in addition to that, in the conference we put in another proviso, settling it forever as against any doubt or question. What is that proviso? It is:

And such officer shall not have the benefit of retirement.

Making it doubly sure. Mind you, if the proviso had not been there, it would not have given him the privilege of retirement, and I have consulted our own Judge-Advocate-General's corps upon that question. But in addition to that we put this proviso upon it.

Mr. HULL. The gentleman ought to read that in connection with the whole language.

Mr. FOSS. It relates to the present solicitor and to his successor. It relates to the office.

Now, Mr. Speaker, it seems to me there can be no objection to this conference report.

Mr. RIXEY. I should like to ask the gentleman a question in regard to another amendment. It will shorten the discussion if he will answer it.

Mr. FOSS. Is it covered by the report, or is it an amendment that is in disagreement?

Mr. RIXEY. It is an amendment concerning which the conferees have agreed.

Mr. FOSS. All right.

Mr. RIXEY. And that is the latter part of amendment No. 51, which gives to the District of Columbia an additional midshipman for 1907. I want to ask why that was? The District of Columbia now has two midshipmen at Annapolis. Why should it have an extra midshipman for 1907? That provision is on page 73.

Mr. FOSS. This is an amendment placed in the bill by the Senate. The President desired to appoint an individual of special qualifications.

Mr. RIXEY. That was placed there at the special request of the President?

Mr. FOSS. Not directly, but, I am informed, it came directly from him.

Mr. RIXEY. I have no disposition not to gratify him in regard to a special request, but I think it is rather bad legislation.

Mr. UNDERWOOD and Mr. PRINCE rose.

Mr. FOSS. I yield first to the gentleman from Alabama, and then I will yield to my colleague from Illinois.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I notice that the bill as it went from the House to the Senate carried an authorization of a million dollars to provide for the building of submarine boats.

Mr. FOSS. Yes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The Senate made an appropriation of a million dollars to carry that provision into effect.

Mr. FOSS. Yes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. In other words, carrying out the provision of a House bill as agreed to by the House—really appropriating sufficient money to carry out that provision. Now, I notice that the conferees have cut down that appropriation to half a million dollars. Although the House had expressed its view in favor of the million dollars, the committee of the House—for it must have been a disagreement on the part of the House conferees—cut down the amount of the appropriation to half a million dollars. I desire to ask the gentleman the reason for cutting down the appropriation which the House had practically authorized?

Mr. FOSS. This was a Senate amendment. The House had not appropriated a single dollar for these boats.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Undoubtedly; but the House had provided for their building.

Mr. FOSS. All that the House had done was simply to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to enter into contracts to the extent of a million dollars, but the House had not appropriated a single dollar. Now, the Senate appropriated a million dollars, but, in view of the fact that these tests would cover a period of nine months, the House conferees thought that half of that appropriation would be sufficient for this year, and I think it is.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. As far as that is concerned, we may not need the appropriation this year——

Mr. FOSS. We may not need it at all.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Before next year; but the House had expressed its desire to expend a million dollars for these submarine boats. It is true the House provision was inartificially drawn, and no appropriation was made, but the will of the House was expressed in that provision authorizing the building of a million dollars' worth of submarine boats. There was practically no opposition to it, and I do not see wherein lay the power of the conferees to cut down the will of the House as expressed in that way.

Mr. FOSS. We did not cut down the will of the House. If we had cut down the right of the Secretary to enter into contracts to the extent of a million dollars, then we would, perhaps, have been moving against the will of the House; but to the House provision we added an appropriation of $500,000, because the House did not appropriate one single dollar, but only allowed the Secretary of the Navy to enter into contracts.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. As I understand the provision as it stands to-day, the Secretary of the Navy can enter into contracts.

Mr. FOSS. Can enter into contracts to the extent of a million dollars, but we only appropriate this year $500,000.

Mr. PAYNE. Will the gentleman give me about four minutes?

Mr. FOSS. I yield to the gentleman from New York four minutes.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, this bill will have to go back to conference anyway. There are a number of items here that have not been agreed upon. The conferees will have to meet again. It seems to me the whole matter ought to go back to conference. Now, as the simple object of this amendment is to increase the pay of the present incumbent of the office of solicitor, why not put it in a few words and say that during the lifetime of the present incumbent he shall have a salary of so much per year, as has been done time and again in appropriation bills? If that is the simple object, why is it necessary to say that he shall have the pay of a commander, and leave it in this hazy way? The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Foss] says that will not give him longevity pay. It is a grave question whether it will or not, because it gives him the pay of a commander. It is not necessary that it should say the highest pay of a commander. Of course every man who gets the pay of a commander gets the highest pay. He always manages to get that. Now, why not put it in a few simple words? It is a Senate amendment. It is new legislation. We can have our own way about it, if we stick to it.

Mr. FOSS. I know that, but this custom has obtained in the Navy, and it obtains in the Army always, in describing the pay, to say that a man in a certain position shall have the pay and allowances of an officer in a certain grade in the Navy or in the Army.

Mr. PAYNE. It is not the Army or the Navy that makes this bill. The House of Representatives makes it.

Mr. FOSS. Men from civil life have gone into the Army, and this language is simply descriptive.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that it is so easy to put this thing into language that can be understood that it ought to be done.

Mr. FOSS. It is a matter so small that it makes no difference whatever.

Mr. PAYNE. It is not a matter so small; we are constantly increasing the pay of some officer, and when we increase the pay of one individual, it reaches a class, and then we have to increase the whole of them. Then we are out of joint with another class just above or just below. If you want these people or this individual to have an increase of salary, say so and put in the salary whether a commander or a commander with longevity pay.

Now, as to the quarters, the gentleman has not satisfied me that there is any general law to regulate this and bring it on a par with the Army. He does not cite any general law. This is an independent statute by itself, and it gives them the right to quarters, without any limitation, in any city where they will be; and, of course, they will overstep the limits, and the quarters will be more expensive. Then the Army comes in and they want to be leveled up.

I notice another thing in this bill, and while I haven't any objection to the item, I want it understood that it is an emergency item. They appropriate $7,000 for the Army and Marine Corps in the late San Francisco disaster. That makes the Government of the United States an insurer of property against earthquakes. In view of the appalling disaster, I am not raising any objection to the item, but I want it understood that it is on account of that and it is not a precedent whereby we shall be insurers of the goods of officers who lose property through fire. I had a telephone a short time ago from an officer who desired the same thing done for the Army, and I think likely it ought to be done; but whenever we have done it in Congress, it has been on the ground that the officer was engaged in saving the property of the Government, and while so engaged paid no attention to his own personal property, and for that reason we paid for the personal property. The House passed such a bill only two sessions ago, but we have not gone beyond that. We have not gone into the insurance business; and yet, if we adopt it, I think we ought to adopt it on the ground of the great calamity which happened there and not adopt it as a matter of insurance for these officers.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I want to say to the gentleman from New York that here is a law which gives the naval officer an allowance of the Army officers of corresponding rank. It provides:

> After June 13, 1899, commissioned officers of the line of the Navy Medical and Pay Corps shall receive the same pay and allowance except for forage as may be provided by or in pursuance of the law for officers of corresponding rank in the Navy.

That gives them commutation for quarters when quarters are not provided.

Mr. TAWNEY. Does not that enable officers of the Army, if you change the quarters for the Navy, to claim the same quarters that are given to the Navy?

Mr. FOSS. No; there is always a difference of quarters. When the Government provides quarters, some houses are better than other houses. Where officers' quarters are established at West Point or at some barracks, they draw their quarters according to their rank, and some officers get better quarters than others. I say to you that they could not provide any differently than they have provided for the Army, and these objections, every one of them, are captious here to-day. No conference committee has ever worked with greater zeal in this matter than the conferees on the part of the House. It was only the other day when, after thinking the matter over for twenty-four hours, in my own mind I felt that I had done two men an injustice, and I came back upon this floor and did what I never did before in the twelve years of my service—I asked the House to vote down my conference report and go back to conference in order to rectify an injustice I believed I had done to individuals. I say to you gentlemen here to-day that every objection that has been raised to this report on the floor here is absolutely captious and trivial.

Mr. TAWNEY. Will the gentleman permit a question and see whether it is captious or not? Amendment No. 10 reads as follows:

> The solicitor in the office of the Judge-Advocate-General of the Navy shall hereafter be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall have the rank, highest pay, and allowances of a commander, and of no higher rank: Provided, That when such office becomes vacant the solicitor shall thereafter be appointed from civil life in the manner and at the compensation now provided by law.

Then that is followed up with this further proviso:

> Provided further, That such officers shall not have the benefit of retirement.

What officer? The officer mentioned in the last proviso? Not the officer that you are now providing for; that is the solicitor in the office at present, but the officer mentioned in the first proviso is the man who will not be entitled to retirement.

Mr. FOSS. Oh, no; the gentleman is entirely wrong.

Mr. TAWNEY. Well, that is the language.

Mr. FOSS. That proviso applies to the solicitor.

Mr. TAWNEY. Then the gentleman should so state.

Mr. HULL. Why not put it in, then?

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I trust that the House will adopt this report. All of these criticisms and objections which were made here to-day, I again repeat, are only captious and trivial, in my judgment. I move the previous question upon the adoption of the report.

Mr. PRINCE. Mr. Speaker, I will ask the gentleman to yield to me for a minute or two.

Mr. FOSS. I withdraw that motion for a moment, and I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. PRINCE. Mr. Speaker, this amendment No. 10 originally gave him a rank, a civilian. That was stricken out. The proviso says that when such office becomes vacant the solicitor shall thereafter be appointed from civil life. The office of solicitor never becomes vacant. It is the officer you are seeking and not the office. What does it all mean? It means simply this, that you take a civilian and give him the pay and allowance of a commander. What is a part of his pay and what is a part of his allowance? Quarters, longevity pay, long service pay. There is no possible way of escaping it. I am in full accord with the chairman of the committee. I think he wants to pay additional compensation to a capable and efficient solicitor. I say, to put it in plain English, that you want to pay this solicitor while he holds that office a certain amount of compensation, as the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] has clearly stated to this House; and it seems to me that this conference report ought to go back and be carefully looked over and brought into this House. I want to be heard on amendment No. 6, which I think the House ought to know something about more than it does now in this turmoil.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, so far as the term of office is concerned with reference to the solicitor, the President can appoint him if he sees fit or not. It is left with the President just the same, for instance, as the office of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy. It does not make him a permanent officer. It can not make him a permanent officer. It is in the will of the President of the United States.

Mr. HULL. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. FOSS. Yes.

Mr. HULL. I know the gentleman wants to be fair in this statement. He has referred to the Army. We have one class of officers in the Army with this kind of language, and that is the veterinary surgeons. They wanted the full rank and pay, and the committee reported it, giving them the pay and allowance, just as this does, and every one of them, when they reach the age of 64, goes on the retired list with the pay and allowance of a first lieutenant, and with the same rule, the Comptroller holding always that that was the meaning of that law. Now, why wouldn't he hold that this is the meaning of this law?

Mr. FOSS. I would state that I got the decision from the Judge-Advocate's Department this morning that under this law, under the language of it, the solicitor would not be entitled to retirement, and he would not for a moment think he had that right or claim it. He has told me so; and not only that, but in addition to that we put in this further clause, which the gentleman says does not apply to the first, but, in my judgment, it does apply to the first, "provided there shall be no benefit of retirement by reason of this section."

Mr. Speaker, I now move the previous question upon the adoption of the report.

The question was taken, and the previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. Foss) there were—ayes 84, noes 90.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I call for tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and the Speaker appointed the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Foss] and the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HULL] tellers.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 85, noes 96.

So the conference report was rejected.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, there are certain amendments here in disagreement that I would like very much to have the House pass upon, as the managers on the part of the House did not feel like assuming the responsibility of passing upon them.

And so, Mr. Speaker, I move that the House further insist upon its disagreement to all the Senate amendments except those amendments which were in disagreement in the last conference report—not included in the last conference report.

The SPEAKER. Is a separate vote demanded upon any one of these amendments?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I demand a separate vote upon the battle ship amendment.

Mr. BURTON of Ohio. Amendment No. 56——

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I demand a separate vote upon amendment No. 6.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I should like a separate vote on No. 1 and on No. 6 and also on No. 10.

Mr. LAMAR. I would like to have a separate vote on amendment No. 32.

Mr. HAUGEN. And I would like a separate vote on No. 52.

Mr. PATTERSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I demand a separate vote on amendment No. 15.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the question will be put upon further insisting upon the disagreement to all the Senate amendments except the ones intimated—56, 6, 1, 10, 52, 13, and 32.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I want to say the gentleman who is in favor of what is known as the "civil war amendment"—No. 6—ought to include No. 7 also, and also No. 2, because they are all related and the same action should apply to all.

Mr. HULL. Do I understand a separate vote is called for on amendment No. 10?

Mr. FOSS. Yes.

Mr. PERKINS. I ask the vote be taken jointly on Nos. 6, 7, and 2.

The SPEAKER. That matter can be adjusted when it is reached. The question is upon further insisting on the disagreement by the House upon all Senate amendments except those indicated.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SLAYDEN. When we come to vote upon these amendments for which a separate vote is demanded, will there be any brief statement indicating the nature of those amendments?

The SPEAKER. Oh, it will be read, and the consideration of each one is in the discretion of the House. The question is on further disagreeing to all the Senate amendments except those indicated.

The question was taken; and the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The House votes to further insist upon its disagreement. The Clerk will report amendment No. 1.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, lines 4 and 5, after "constructors," insert:

"For hire of quarters for officers serving with troops where there are no public quarters belonging to the Government, and where there are not sufficient quarters possessed by the United States to accommodate them."

Mr. MURPHY. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on that.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I believe I have the floor, as I called for a vote.

The SPEAKER. It seems to the Chair the gentleman from Iowa is recognized.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I desire to move to strike out—I have not the full list of rooms before me—but I move to instruct the House conferees to amend amendment No. 1 by placing in that language the Army provision as to rooms for officers where the Government does not furnish quarters.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Iowa that instructions, if instructions be given, under the practice come after the conference is asked and before the conferees are appointed.

Mr. HULL. I would move to recede with an amendment, but I can not——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman can move to recede and concur with an amendment at this stage.

Mr. HULL. I would state to the House I would not want to prepare that amendment here, because I might do another injustice in some line——

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I hope the gentleman will amend this provision that he says needs amendment, and I think he ought to amend it here on the floor. If he thinks it needs amendment, he can do it by very simple language if he wishes to do so.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has not the amendment prepared at this time, and if such is the pleasure of the House it can be passed by unanimous consent and returned to later.

Mr. HULL. I ask unanimous consent that it be passed at this time.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the second amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, line 19, after "million," insert "two hundred and sixty-nine thousand six hundred and thirty-seven dollars."

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that that amendment be passed, inasmuch as our action upon that amendment will be duplicated by our action upon amendments 6 and 7.

The SPEAKER. Then why not ask unanimous consent, if such is the pleasure of the House, that amendments 2, 6, and 7 be considered together?

Mr. PERKINS. That would meet the question.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read amendments 6 and 7.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 3, after line 25, insert:

"That all officers of the Navy below the grade of rear-admiral, with creditable records, including those retired with the relative rank of commodore, who served during the civil war, and who were honorably retired prior to the passage of an act entitled 'An act to reorganize and increase the efficiency of the personnel of the Navy and Marine Corps of the United States,' approved March 3, 1899, shall be advanced on the retired list one grade above the grade or rank now held by them, to take effect from the date of the approval of said act; and that rear-admirals retired prior to the passage of said act shall receive the same pay as officers of the Navy of corresponding grade who have been retired under said act: Provided, That this act shall not apply to any officer who has received an advance of grade since his retirement or has been restored to the Navy and placed on the retired list with promotion thereon by virtue of the provisions of a special act of Congress. This provision shall in no case authorize any claim for back pay, and shall have effect only for the future, and shall also apply in like manner to officers of the Marine Corps."

Page 3, after line 25, insert:

"That officers of the Marine Corps with creditable records who served during the civil war and were retired prior to 1904 shall receive the full benefit of the act approved April 23, 1904, in so far as the same provides for the promotion of civil war veterans to the next higher grade above that at which they were retired."

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I insist that a separate vote must be had on this, because No. 7 is entirely different from No. 6.

Mr. PERKINS. I have no objection, Mr. Speaker. I move that the House recede on amendment No. 6 and concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. Is that motion subject to amendment?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. PERKINS] moves that the House do recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. PERKINS. The others, Mr. Speaker, can be disposed of afterwards.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. PERKINS] moves that the House recede and concur in Senate amendment No. 6. That is open to amendment.

Mr. HULL. Then, Mr. Speaker, I move to recede and concur with the following amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa offers the following amendment to the motion of the gentleman from New York. The Clerk will read.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out all of section 6 and insert what I have sent to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

That any officer of the Navy not above the grade of captain who served with credit as an officer or as an enlisted man in the regular or volunteer forces during the civil war prior to April 9, 1865, otherwise than as a cadet, and whose name is borne on the official register of the Navy, and who has heretofore been, or may hereafter be, retired on account of wounds or disability incident to the service or on account of age or after forty years' service, may, in the discretion of the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, be placed on the retired list of the Navy with the rank and retired pay of one grade above that actually held by him at the time of retirement: Provided, That this act shall not apply to any officer who received an advance of grade at or since the date of his retirement or who has been restored to the Navy and placed on the retired list by virtue of the provisions of a special act of Congress.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I want to call the attention of the House to the effect of the language that is reported in the bill as an amendment of the Senate. It takes a man who is retired with the grade of commodore, which is equivalent to that of brigadier-general in the Army, and makes him a rear-admiral, with the grade of a major-general. It takes a rear-admiral of the junior grade, equal to a brigadier-general, and gives him the senior grade, equal to a major-general. Now, I am willing for the Army and Navy to be together, and this amendment I submit is an exact copy of the Army law, except making it apply to the Navy. The Navy retirement law now provides that every officer in the Navy of a corresponding rank of brigadier-general in the Army shall receive a major-generalship when they retire, if he had civil-war service. I have not touched that. This deals with the retired list. I do not believe it is fair to adopt the Senate provision. The House only this month refused to give to nine officers of the Army, three of them medal-of-honor men, the additional grade above that of brigadier-general. We want to stop this constant pushing up if we can. And it ought to be stopped. If this amendment passes, it gives to every man on the retired list in the Navy exactly the provisions that the Army has. It is a copy of the Army law applied to the Navy. It touches no other feature, and it does seem to me that this House ought to be unanimous in coming to some agreement by which these two branches of the service will have equality before the law.

Mr. PRINCE. Will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. BUTLER of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

Mr. PRINCE. Will the gentleman yield to me? I think I first asked his permission to interrupt.

Mr. HULL. Very well, then, I will yield to the gentleman from Illinois, my colleague.

Mr. PRINCE. Is this the provision that exists—a colonel in the Army is equal to a captain in the Navy?

Mr. HULL. Exactly the same rank.

Mr. PRINCE. And the same law which you provide is that a colonel can be advanced one grade in the Army you wish to make applicable to a captain in the Navy?

Mr. HULL. Certainly.

Mr. PRINCE. And put both on an equality as officers on the retired list?

Mr. HULL. My colleague is right; but the question hardly brings it all out. Our law gives to the colonel and all below him in rank who served in the civil war an additional grade. This gives to the captains of the Navy and all below in rank the same promotion now given the Army.

Mr. PRINCE. It gives the same in the Navy.

Mr. HULL. Now I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. BUTLER of Pennsylvania. So that I may understand just what the gentleman's amendment proposes, I would like to ask him a question. If a civil-war sailor is on the retired list as ensign, he will be promoted, provided this amendment should become law, one grade?

Mr. HULL. Yes.

Mr. BUTLER of Pennsylvania. If he should be retired at a grade above ensign, which is lieutenant of the junior grade, he would be promoted on the retired list to lieutenant?

Mr. HULL. It will give him one grade.

Mr. BUTLER of Pennsylvania. Up to the rank of a captain of the Navy?

Mr. HULL. Yes; and a captain of the Navy will also get one grade.

Mr. BUTLER of Pennsylvania. A captain of the Navy will get one grade.

Mr. HULL. He will become a rear-admiral of the junior rank, just as an officer of the Army, if he had civil-war service and gets to be colonel, gets to be a brigadier-general on the retired list.

Now, I want to call attention to what will happen if the gentleman's motion should prevail. I believe we have only three commodores on the retired list. That rank has been abolished, I believe; but we have a good many rear-admirals of the junior grade on the retired list.

Mr. MAHON. One hundred and nine.

Mr. HULL. The gentleman from Pennsylvania says 109; and every one of these of the junior grade will be made a rear-admiral of the senior grade, and every one of these commodores would become rear-admirals of the senior grade; all of them who had civil-war service made equal to major-generals in rank and pay.

Mr. BUTLER of Pennsylvania. Are they not all civil-war veterans?

Mr. HULL. Only those who were civil-war veterans were commodores; but there are a great many—I do not know how many—rear-admirals who may or may not have been civil-war veterans.

Now, I want to call the attention of the House to this fact: That we have on the retired list a large number of men who served before the civil war in the Regular Army, who served all through the civil war, and some of them were major-generals of volunteers, that have been placed on the retired list as brigadiers, and remained there as brigadiers. I have one illustration in my mind, because the man was my own immediate division commander—Major-General Carr—and he served over forty years in the Army with most distinguished service. He was retired as a brigadier, and is still a brigadier under the law.

Mr. GROSVENOR. And Thomas Anderson is another.

Mr. HULL. Thomas Anderson is another; and I could name a good many others, if I had the time.

Now, I want to ask if this House will take a man, simply because he is in the Navy, now on the retired list with the grade of brigadier-general and say as a matter of grace we will exalt him above his brother of the Army, and make him a major-general; yet, if the gentleman's motion prevails, that will be done. Now I want to congratulate the chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs that he would not agree to it in conference.

Mr. FOSS. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. HULL. Certainly.

Mr. FOSS. Is it not a fact that officers of the civil war went up one grade on the active list for a day and then were retired?

Mr. HULL. Never by law.

Mr. FOSS. Then I want to call the gentleman's attention to a speech made by my colleague [Mr. PRINCE] in which he stated this:

One day's service—

Speaking of those on the retired list from the active list of the Army, he said:

One day's service for four major-generals; one day's service for sixty-two brigadier-generals. Can we justify ourselves in this House when the facts are before us? Can we justify ourselves before the country that we are in favor of it?

Now, what did he refer to?

Mr. HULL. The gentleman certainly knows what he referred to, because he is an able gentleman, has served for a very large number of years ably in this House. He referred to the President nominating officers to the Senate for promotion and the Senate confirming. When this is done promotion is given. The President has exactly the same power with an officer of the Navy of nominating him to the Senate at a higher grade, and he is retired, and then send in another man's name to the Senate for confirmation, and he is retired. The President can do this with either the Army or Navy.

If the gentleman will look up the record, I have no doubt he will find many that have been promoted to brigadier-general and retired. That has not been necessary in the Navy, for the reason that in making the personnel bill provision was put there that a man who had civil-war service should have an additional grade regardless of law and regardless of the action of the President. That provision of law extended its benefits to all officers of the Navy regardless of the rank held by them. It made it the law that a rear-admiral of the junior grade who was to be retired, who had had civil-war service, should be retired as a rear-admiral of the senior grade. That never applied to the Army. The President has in many cases tried to equalize these two things by this action, but there is nothing to prevent the President from taking a rear-admiral of the junior grade and promoting him to be a rear-admiral of the senior grade, even if he never had civil-war service, and retiring him, if he served the length of time the law provides he should have served before being retired. But in the Army we never gave that additional grade to an officer above the grade of colonel. In the Navy they gave it to all officers up to the highest grade in the Navy. The President has tried to equalize this, and it has brought forth the condition that my friend from Illinois [Mr. PRINCE] referred to in his speech. I do not believe in that either. I believe that a man who is a brigadier-general of the Army, or a rear-admiral of the junior grade of the Navy, with his three-quarters of his full pay of $5,500 a year and other privileges, gets as much as he ought to have for the rest of his life without rendering any service to the Government. [Applause.] Whether he is in the Army or Navy, that is true.

Mr. GARDNER of Michigan. Will the gentleman allow a question?

Mr. HULL. Yes.

Mr. GARDNER of Michigan. If this Senate amendment should become a law, is it not probable that there would at once be a movement as to all the brigadier-generals and major-generals retired from the Army to advance them another grade, in harmony with the action in regard to the Navy?

Mr. HULL. Without any doubt as to brigadier-generals. The Committee on Military Affairs has been met at every session of Congress since the personnel bill passed to make our law liberal enough to take in the brigadier-generals and make them major-generals. If Congress deliberately passes this provision now, Congress ought to pass a law putting the Army on an equality with the Navy. I am opposed to raising the Army up, and I am opposed to raising the Navy up any further than the law now provides for the Army. [Applause.]

Mr. BUTLER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman allow me one minute?

Mr. HULL. Oh, certainly.

Mr. BUTLER of Pennsylvania. I am a member of the Committee on Naval Affairs, but I am not a member of the conference committee. I do not know whether it will do any of the gentlemen any good, but I propose to vote for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa, which I think is entirely fair and which I think we should accept.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to state very briefly to the House the object of this amendment. I ask the attention of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HULL] to my statement. If the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa fully covers the manifest injustice that has occurred in reference to one branch of the service, then, of course, I am willing to accept it. The facts can be stated in very few words. In 1899 this House passed what was called the "personnel bill," by which it was provided that all officers of the Navy who had served honorably in the civil war and who should be retired subsequent to that time, should be retired at one grade higher. That was a proper recognition of services rendered, and no one objects to it.

Now, Mr. Speaker, prior to 1899 a certain number of officers who had served in the Navy in the civil war had already retired, because before that time they had reached the age of 62. Every officer who served in the Navy during the war and who was 28 years old at the time the war ended had necessarily been retired before 1899. The result was (a result that I presume was not anticipated) the older officers who held the more important commands during the civil war, all who were over 28 years old when the civil war ended, failed to receive the benefit of the increase of one grade in rank, but stood and still stand in the grade, receiving the pay and allowances of the rank they held when retired. Now, I am sure the House will see the manifest injustice of this. Suppose we should pass a pension law providing that all soldiers who served in the Army after 1863 should receive pensions, but that those who served prior to 1863 should receive no pensions. What a manifest injustice that would be. As a result of the provision of which I have been speaking, the junior officers under 28 when the war ended, having honorable service in the civil war, have been retired, one by one, as they reached the age of 62, at one grade above that which they held; but there are now between 100 and 200 men having honorable service in the civil war, the youngest of them now 70 years old, who stand in a position of inferiority with reference to all the younger officers of the Navy who served in the civil war.

It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that the mere statement to the House must carry conviction, for we intend to be, we should be, we will be fair to every officer of the Navy who in the civil war served with an honorable record. This amendment, in whatever shape it may be agreed upon in order to accomplish that purpose, does that, and that only. It takes this class of men, who have been reduced from about 300 in 1899 by death to less than 200 in 1906, after seven years' delay, and gives them the same promotion that has been given to their juniors in the service.

There are naval officers who served with a higher rank in the civil war who now stand lower than those who served under them in the war, and who are receiving a smaller compensation. Men who were captains in the civil war are receiving smaller retired pay than those who served as lieutenants under them. It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, if the object of this motion is understood by the House, that it merely takes a small body of old men who served honorably during the civil war, who have by the accident of legislation been omitted from the rewards given to their juniors, and gives them precisely the same measure, there is not a man in this House who, understanding the proposition, will not see its justice and support it. Now, if I have any control over the time, I desire to yield to the gentleman from Ohio, General GROSVENOR.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, I will take time in my own right; I do not want over ten minutes. I want to first ask the gentleman from Iowa what the difference is between his proposition and the proposition of the gentleman from New York.

Mr. HULL. The proposition of the gentleman from New York is to take the commodores on the retired list who have the grade corresponding to brigadier and make them rear-admirals, one grade higher, or which is equal to a major-general. The gentleman from New York gives the same promotion to rear-admirals of the junior grade.

Mr. GROSVENOR. How many are there of them?

Mr. HULL. Three commodores, I understand; and then it takes the rear-admirals—the gentleman understands that the grade of commodore has been abolished—and gives them the rank corresponding to major-general of the Army.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Yes.

Mr. FOSS. May I interrupt the gentleman to furnish some information to the gentleman from Ohio? With regard to the rear-admirals, this will be the effect: The rear-admirals who will be affected will receive $5,625, which is three-quarters of $7,500, instead of $4,500, which is three-quarters of $6,000, their present pay—that is to say, it will raise the pay of these rear-admirals about $1,100 each.

Mr. HULL. It gives them the corresponding rank of major-general instead of the corresponding rank of brigadier.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Now, what is the amendment of the gentleman from Iowa?

Mr. HULL. It gives no man above the grade of captain of the Navy an increased rank by law, and that is exactly what the Army bill does. We took the ground that a man who was brigadier-general was comfortably provided for by law and for life; but many men who are lieutenants, captains, and majors who have been retired ought to have an increased rate. The question was where to draw the line. The Navy had given all men on the active list who served in the war an increased rate, and made what we call a "major-general" the head of the list. We drew the line at the colonels, and said that a man that stayed in the Army until he was a colonel ought to have the grade of brigadier as a reward. Now, this amendment of mine limits the Navy to precisely the same favor that was given to the Army, and does not give those on the retired list as commodores and rear-admirals any increased grade at all, but gives the captains a higher grade, and from the captain down to ensign an increased grade and rate of pay, just as they refused the general officers increased rank from colonel down. The House must bear in mind that a captain in the Navy has the same rank and pay as a colonel of the Army.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, as I understand, the result of the amendment of the gentleman from Iowa will be that every Navy officer who served in the civil war and who has been retired at the grade of captain or lower will receive from this time one additional grade, and his pay will be correspondingly increased from this time.

Mr. HULL. That is correct.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, I feel very strongly that injustice has been done by manipulation of the statutes, but I am very considerably impressed by the argument of the gentleman from Iowa, and if the gentleman from New York will join me I will consent to that amendment, and I believe it would be perhaps the best settlement of the matter that could be had.

Mr. PERKINS. Before I consent to that I would like, if I have any time, to yield to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. TAYLOR], who said that he wished to be heard on this question. I would be glad if the gentleman would consent to yield to him.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I would be very glad to yield to him.

Mr. PERKINS. I am not particular as to these commodores and rear-admirals. If the gentleman from Ohio thinks that this amendment of the gentleman from Iowa covers the case——

Mr. GROSVENOR. I understand that it does, and I think the gentleman from New York will be justified in withdrawing his amendment and adopting the amendment of the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. PERKINS. If the amendment is adopted, the House will recede——

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, if the amendment is adopted, it is taken out of the hands of the conference committee practically, except the amended form. The amended form only is with them.

Mr. PERKINS. Then, of course, that still leaves it necessary for the Senate to agree.

Mr. HULL. Certainly.

Mr. PERKINS. In the amendment in the form in which we present it.

Mr. HULL. Certainly.

Mr. PERKINS. What is the opinion of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Foss] as to the probability of the Senate conferees agreeing to this amendment?

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I could not state that. This matter was not discussed in the conference committee, because the House conferees felt it was a matter they should report back to the House and take the judgment of the House on it in the first place.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I think the Senate will undoubtedly agree to it.

Mr. PERKINS. Very well, then.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that this line of argument on an amendment before the House is lowering the dignity of the House. Why should we sit here and haggle whether the Senate will agree with us or not? We are a coordinate branch of Congress and have the right to our own views. If they will not agree to it, let it come back to us and let us determine whether we will agree with them, and not stand here and haggle about the question of whether they will agree to a proposition that we make. That is worse than I have ever heard before.

Mr. GROSVENOR. I hope the gentleman does not address those remarks to me.

Mr. HULL. Not a bit of it.

Mr. PERKINS. I hope he is not addressing them to me. [Laughter.] There is no one who feels more keenly the rights of the House, and no one who believes more in not yielding to the Senate than I do. I do not yield one particle to my friend from Iowa in that respect, and, as a proof of that, I will accept his amendment.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say one word upon this amendment, and that is this: The personnel act referred to in this amendment was the personnel act which was adopted by Congress March 4, 1899, and which I had the honor to report to this House. That personnel act provided for a flow of promotion through the active list of the Navy. The upper grades of the Navy were filled by men who were in the civil war, and the younger men in the Navy were kept down in the lower grades a great many years and did not move up to the higher grades until they were really too old to command ships, and, therefore, in order to make a flow of promotion by which the younger officers in the younger grades could reach command rank at what might be called a command age, when they had not lost their nerve or initiative, that act was passed. Of course most of those in the upper grades were men who had served in the civil war. That was one purpose of the personnel act.

Another purpose was to amalgamate the Engineer Corps and the line, and it was found that when the Engineer Corps and the line were amalgamated officers who had served in the civil war came into the amalgamated line and received lower numbers than they would if the two corps had remained separate. Consequently, to remedy that injustice it was provided in the personnel bill that officers who should go out on voluntary retirement or under the section which provided for compulsory retirement should have the rank and pay of the next highest grade, and that included for the most part the officers that had served in the civil war.

I just want the attention of the House for a moment. That was the situation up to April 23, 1904. I have always been opposed to this provision when brought up as an independent proposition in the committee, but in 1904 the Army went a step better. We provided for the retirement from the active list, but the Army put in this provision for retired officers, providing that all officers of the Army below the grade of brigadier-general on the retired list as well as the active list who served in the civil war should have the rank and pay of the next higher grade. The Army to-day is trying to level the Navy down, as they say, but they went a long ways ahead of the Navy in 1904, because under the personnel act of 1899 we did not touch the retired list of the Navy, and the retired list of the Navy has been the same, but when the Army in 1904 put that provision on, then I may say that my judgment changed, because I felt that if the retired list of the Army had been raised up a grade, it was no more than right that the retired list of the Navy should also be treated in the same way.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Is the gentleman willing to have this amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa go into this bill at this time?

Mr. FOSS. Oh, yes.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Then let us put it in and go ahead.

Mr. FOSS. Yes. I am not opposing the amendment of the gentleman from Iowa. As I understand the amendment of the gentleman, it puts it on the same basis as the Army retirement to-day.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa moves that the House do recede and concur with an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I accept the amendment of the gentleman from Iowa. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Iowa to recede and concur with an amendment in the nature of a substitute which has been reported.

The question was taken; and the motion was agreed to.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, the next is amendment No. 7.

The SPEAKER. What is the nature of the motion?

Mr. HULL. I move to recede and concur with an amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

That any officer of the Marine Corps below the grade of brigadier-general who served with credit as an officer or as an enlisted man in the regular or volunteer forces during the civil war prior to April 9, 1865, otherwise than as a cadet, and whose name is borne on the official register of the Marine Corps, and who has heretofore been, or may hereafter be, retired on account of wounds or disability incident to the service, or on account of age or after forty years' service, may, in the discretion of the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, be placed on the retired list of the Marine Corps with the rank and retired pay of one grade above that actually held by him at the time of retirement: Provided, That this act shall not apply to any officer who received an advance of grade since the date of his retirement or who has been restored to the Marine Corps and placed on the retired list by virtue of provisions of a special act of Congress.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Iowa.

The question was taken; and the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. No. 2 is not disposed of. What is the motion?

Mr. FOSS. I would ask the House to further insist upon its disagreement to the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Amendment No. 10 is the next. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 4, after line 14, insert:

"The solicitor in the office of the Judge-Advocate-General of the Navy shall hereafter be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall have the rank, highest pay, and allowances of a commander, and of no higher rank: Provided, That when such office becomes vacant the solicitor shall thereafter be appointed from civil life in the manner and at the compensation now provided by law."

Mr. KEIFER. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following as a substitute for No. 10. I do this at the request of the gentleman from New York, who is obliged to be absent.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Ohio move to recede and concur with an amendment?

Mr. KEIFER. I would ask that the Clerk read the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Recede from the disagreement to Senate amendment No. 10, and concur in the same with an amendment striking out the whole of said amendment and substituting therefor the following:

"The Solicitor in the office of the Judge-Advocate-General of the Navy shall hereafter receive an annual salary of $3,500 during the services of the present incumbent."

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I hope the gentleman will make that $4,000. The conferees were of the opinion that the provision which they agreed upon would mean $4,000 to the Solicitor, but the Solicitor told me this morning over the phone that the striking out the words "highest pay" made it $3,500, because that would cut out longevity pay. Now, if the gentleman from Ohio desires to fix it in this way, then I think it should be made $4,000. He is a man 50 years of age, who has been in the Navy Department for a good many years, and is well worthy of it.

Mr. KEIFER. I ask unanimous consent to change and insert $4,000 instead of $3,500. I will accept the suggestion of the gentleman.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman move to insert $4,000 in place of $3,500?

Mr. KEIFER. Yes, sir.

Mr. HULL. I would like to ask if this amendment fixes the salary permanently at that figure?

Mr. KEIFER. It expressly provides it shall terminate with the present incumbent.

The question was taken; and the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 13: Page 8, line 8, after "dollars," insert:

"Provided, That the naval station at Port Royal, S. C., including all buildings and other property thereon and the employees attached thereto, be hereby transferred to and placed under the control of the Bureau of Navigation, Navy Department, as an adjunct to the Naval Training Station, Rhode Island, to be used for the instruction of recruits during the winter months and at such other times as may be deemed advisable; and for that purpose the following sums are appropriated: Necessary repairs to the buildings to fit them for berthing, messing, and drilling purposes, and for galleys, latrines, and washhouses for apprentice seamen, and for purposes of administration in connection with the training of the same, $51,000; installing necessary distilling plant or fresh water supply, $20,000; maintenance of the station as a training station, $25,000; in all, $96,000."

Mr. PATTERSON of South Carolina. I desire to withdraw my motion and ask that it be sent back to conference.

Mr. FOSS. I move that the House further insist on its disagreement to Senate amendment No. 13.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. BUTLER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, would it be in order to move to instruct the conferees under no circumstances to concur in that amendment?

The SPEAKER. It would be in order to make that motion after a conference is asked and before it is appointed, and not at this stage.

The Clerk will report amendment No. 32.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 32, line 21, after "dollars," insert "toward construction of a graving dock of concrete and granite, to cost, in all, $1,400,000, $100,000."

Mr. LAMAR. Mr. Speaker, the Senate amendment, in my opinion, cures an unintentional injustice done the port of Pensacola by the Committee on Naval Affairs.

The SPEAKER. What is the gentleman's motion?

Mr. LAMAR. My motion is to recede from the disagreement and concur in Senate amendment No. 32.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Florida moves to recede from the disagreement to Senate amendment No. 32 and to concur therein.

Mr. LAMAR. Mr. Speaker, I am well aware that when a committee report comes into this House it comes with the almost prima facie presumption that it is correct. But the committee may err, and, in my opinion, it has erred in this case, more especially if it insists upon leaving the Pensacola dry dock out, now that the floating dock has been stricken out that was proposed originally in the bill for Solomons Island, Chesapeake Bay. The bill as reported to the House made an appropriation for the construction of a dry dock at Puget Sound and a floating dock at Solomons Island. These two appropriations were probably based upon the recommendation of the Secretary of the Navy. But before the committee the Secretary of the Navy highly recommended that they also retain the dry dock at Pensacola. Admiral Endicott, the Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, gives the stone graving dock at Pensacola first place in importance above all others, and Admiral Capps, the Chief of the Bureau of Construction, highly recommends a dry dock at Pensacola, because of the deep water there and its strategic importance in case of war.

I would not like to urge upon the House the construction of a dry dock at a place where it was not needed. I would not like to occupy that position. But with this floating dock left out of the bill for Solomons Island, then I ask the House to place in the bill this initial appropriation of $100,000 to construct a dry dock at Pensacola.

Mr. HILL of Connecticut. Which will mean $1,400,000.

Mr. LAMAR. It means the usual appropriation to construct a dry dock at any given port in the United States.

Now, Mr. Speaker, in the interest of Pensacola, more particularly in the interest of the Gulf coast, and more particularly still in the interest of a dry dock for the South Atlantic and Gulf coasts, I urge this matter. New York, Boston, League Island, Norfolk, Newport News, Charleston, Puget Sound, and Mare Island are all provided for, and but for the fact that the floating dock at Solomons Island, in the Chesapeake Bay, went out of the bill on a point of order in this House provision would have been made in this bill for this floating dock, to cost a great sum of money.

I submit to this House that the proposition as it came from the Navy Department before the committee was that there should be three docks. The Secretary of the Navy recommended this. But the committee determined on two docks—one, the floating dock at Solomons Island, and one at Puget Sound—and the one proposed for Pensacola went out of the bill. Now, why not place this dry dock at Pensacola in the bill at this time, especially when the highest naval authorities recommend it. I have the Secretary of the Navy's testimony, in which he urgently suggested to the committee that they retain the three—the one at Puget Sound, one at Solomons Island, and one at Pensacola. Admiral Endicott places the one at Pensacola first in importance above all the others, and Admiral Capps highly recommended it not only because of the deep water, but because of the peculiar strategic importance of Pensacola in time of war.

Mr. MUDD. Do I understand the gentleman from Florida to suggest that the stone graving dock at Pensacola take the place of the floating steel dock on the Chesapeake?

Mr. LAMAR. Not at all.

Mr. MUDD. I want the gentleman to understand that certainly I have not abandoned hope of that yet.

Mr. LAMAR. Not at all. I believe firmly that if the proposed floating dock in the Chesapeake Bay were in this bill that I could not urge this amendment with any degree of success, because I believe your committee were determined that only two docks should figure in this bill.

Now, there are 32 feet depth of water in the channel entrance at Pensacola, and there are more than 30 feet depth of water in the harbor, in what is called the anchorage ground. That anchorage ground is 1 mile in one direction and about 2½ miles in another, and could ride the navies of the world in it with safety. The entrance of Pensacola Harbor is defended by two forts equipped with an armament of the highest modern type.

What objection can there be to retaining in this bill this Senate amendment, which practically takes the place of the floating-dock proposition at Solomons Island, which has been eliminated from this bill by a point of order in this House?

Mr. MUDD. If the gentleman will permit me, I realize it is not altogether hopeful that I shall get it at this session; but I do not wish the gentleman from Florida, nor do I wish the House, to get the impression that the construction of this dock at Pensacola will take the place of the dry dock that we ought to have at Solomons Island or at such other point as it should be deemed best to send it.

Mr. LAMAR. I am not making any antagonistic remarks against the floating dock that my friend urges, because the Secretary of the Navy really placed it first in importance. I am not against it, and I say frankly to him that if it were in this bill I do not believe I could urge the retention of the Senate amendment with any degree of success or hope for its success. I am not arguing against the floating dock that the gentleman favors, but what I state to this House is this: That the committee were willing to have two docks constructed, and the deep water at Pensacola, the peculiar strategic importance of its position in time of war, its nearness to the isthmian canal, with 32 feet depth in the channel entrance and the great depth of water inside of the harbor, and its great capacity for defense in time of war, all combined, should be sufficient to impel the House to concur in the proposition to put in this bill $100,000 toward the construction of a dry dock at Pensacola.

In his statement before the Naval Committee, speaking of the proposed docks, viz, one a floating dry dock for Chesapeake Bay, the dry dock at Puget Sound, and the dry dock at Pensacola, Secretary of the Navy Bonaparte uses this language:

I strongly advise the committee to retain all three if they can.

And again, speaking of these three proposed docks, although he placed the floating dock first and the Puget Sound dry dock second, the Secretary says:

But still I would like to see the Pensacola dock also.

Admiral Endicott places the dry dock at Pensacola first in importance above all others. I quote his statement before the committee:

Mr. LILLEY. How many dry docks are you estimating for this year?
Admiral ENDICOTT. Four.
Mr. LILLEY. Suppose you get only one or two; where would you prefer to have them?
Admiral ENDICOTT. First, Pensacola; then Puget Sound; then Solomans Island, Chesapeake Bay.

And on another occasion before the committee the further statement was made by Admiral Endicott:

Mr. LOUD. There are four new docks asked for; which, in your opinion, is the most necessary?
Admiral ENDICOTT. I should say that the Pensacola dock is the most necessary, and the Puget Sound dock a very close second. I think the Gulf coast ought to be better provided with docks.
Mr. LOUD. For this year which one is the most necessary?
Admiral ENDICOTT. I should say the one at Pensacola.

And again before the committee this further statement is made by the same authority:

Mr. ROBERTS. Isn't it in the contemplation of the Navy Department from now on indefinitely to keep a pretty good fleet in the Caribbean waters?
Admiral ENDICOTT. Yes, sir; they are there every winter.
Mr. ROBERTS. There ought to be a good fleet down there as long as the canal is being worked on.
Admiral ENDICOTT. A fleet goes to Pensacola nearly every winter. The records show that a great many vessels were docked there last year.
Mr. LILLEY. There is plenty of water there?
Admiral ENDICOTT. Yes, sir.
Mr. LILLEY. Is it the best point on the Gulf?
Admiral ENDICOTT. Yes, sir.

Admiral Capps, in his report dated November 10, 1905, uses this language:

In view of the strategic importance of Pensacola and the necessity for having in that vicinity a dock which will accommodate the largest battle ships and cruisers, it is recommended that provision be made for a dock of the largest size at that navy-yard. An additional dry dock is also recommended for the naval station, Puget Sound.

The greatest ships of the Navy enter Pensacola Harbor, if they so desire, without the aid of a pilot. It is evident that a dry dock should at once be provided for at Pensacola, by an initial appropriation of $100,000 in the present naval bill for the following reasons:

(1) The strategic importance of Pensacola in time of war.

(2) The proximity of Pensacola to the isthmian canal at Panama.

(3) The great depth of water in the channel and in the harbor at Pensacola.

(4) The present want of dry-dock facilities on the South Atlantic coast and on the Gulf coast.

(5) The recognition of the importance and the value of Pensacola for a dry dock by the Secretary of the Navy, the Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, and the Chief Constructor of the Navy.

(6) The efficient protection of the Pensacola navy-yard and its property against attack in time of war.

(7) The value of the navy-yard at Pensacola and its buildings, and all property connected with it, is about $2,000,000.

I hope the motion to concur in the Senate amendment will prevail.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I would say in regard to this Senate amendment, that the House committee carefully considered this, and after having hearings upon the subject of docks this year they recommended but two docks, one at Puget Sound and a floating dry dock. The dock at Pensacola was stricken out of the bill as it came into the House. It is not simply a question of providing a dock at Pensacola. We have a floating dock there to-day, but the moment you provide another dock, it means an enlargement of the yard, it means a building of new shops and one thing and another necessary for the repair of ships. I think our equipment for the repair of ships as our Navy is at present constituted is perfectly able to take care of all ordinary work, and consequently I hope that this motion will be voted down.

I desire, however, to say to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. LAMAR] that no man could have been more zealous than he in trying to secure this for his constituents. He has not only advocated it on the floor of the House, but he has appeared before our committee, and while I trust this motion will be voted down, yet I know that the gentleman can go back to his constituents with the assurance that he has done everything he could do to secure the enactment of this provision for the benefit of his district. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I call for a vote.

Mr. RIXEY. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Foss] has charge of this bill. While this motion is a preferential one, the gentleman does not lose control primarily as the Member in charge of the bill; and in this instance, the gentleman having charge can reserve his time or he can yield to his colleague, and he can test the sense of the House at any time by moving the previous question. In other words, the gentleman has not lost control of the bill at this stage.

Mr. FOSS. I understand, Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Illinois yield to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. RIXEY].

Mr. FOSS. Yes; but am I right, Mr. Speaker, in this parliamentary inquiry, that when the gentleman makes a motion to concur he has control of the time on that motion?

The SPEAKER. No; that depends. The fact that a Member makes a motion to concur in an amendment, which is a preferential motion, and would have preference over the motion to disagree, does not entitle him to the floor to debate in the first instance, and does not deprive the gentleman from Illinois of the floor, if he asserts his right, and at this point, the gentleman from Florida having yielded the floor, the gentleman from Illinois is remitted to the position that he might have held in the event that he had asserted it.

All of this is equivalent to saying that the charge of the bill is in control of the gentleman from Illinois, to move the previous question at any time that he sees proper to move it, and the gentleman, if he desires the floor, will get it from stage to stage, when a motion is made on this or other amendments. Now, does the gentleman from Illinois yield to his colleague from Virginia?

Mr. FOSS. I have already yielded to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. RIXEY. I want to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. RIXEY. The gentleman from Illinois had yielded the floor and taken his seat. I took the floor and addressed the Speaker. Have I not the right to be recognized?

The SPEAKER. Ah, but it takes something more than addressing the Speaker to gain recognition.

Mr. RIXEY. No previous question had been ordered.

The SPEAKER. And the Chair is constrained to recognize the gentleman from Illinois. If the gentleman from Illinois desires to yield the floor——

Mr. RIXEY. He had yielded the floor.

Mr. FOSS. I should like to ask the gentleman from Virginia how much time he desires?

Mr. RIXEY. I want ten minutes, not all of it for myself.

Mr. FOSS. I yield ten minutes to my colleague on the committee, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. RIXEY].

Mr. RIXEY. Mr. Speaker, I favor the motion of the gentleman from Florida [Mr. LAMAR], and for this reason: The Navy Department recommended to the Naval Committee that it should provide in the present appropriation bill for the building of three dry docks. The House committee dissented from this recommendation and decided to build only two dry docks. The three docks recommended by the Department were at Puget Sound, at Pensacola, and the floating steel dock. There never was a question in the committee but that two out of these three should be provided for in the present appropriation bill. When the question came up as to the order of the importance of these dry docks, I hazard nothing in stating that the weight of evidence before the committee was that the dry dock of first importance was the one at Pensacola; that the one of second importance was the one at Puget Sound, and the one of third importance was the floating dock. The committee, however decided to give preference, first, to Puget Sound, and then to the floating dry dock. Eminent authority in the Navy Department doubts the wisdom of a floating dry dock in Chesapeake Bay.

Mr. MUDD. Mr. Speaker, may I interrupt the gentleman?

Mr. RIXEY. You may.

Mr. MUDD. I understand there is no floating dry dock in this bill at this time.

Mr. RIXEY. I know that.

Mr. MUDD. Because if the gentleman wants to argue the merits of a floating dry dock, I shall want some time. Otherwise, I do not want to take the time of the House.

Mr. RIXEY. I have no objection to the gentleman having all the time he wants. I am not opposed to his floating dry dock when it gets before the House, but I have a right to express my opinion here.

Mr. MUDD. I realize that.

Mr. RIXEY. The floating dry dock has never been as useful as the graving dock.

Mr. MUDD. I do not understand that the gentleman feels called upon to argue now as to the merits of the two docks. If so, I would respectfully dissent from his view, and think I could fairly well sustain my own contention as to the general superiority of the floating dock.

Mr. RIXEY. I am arguing that it was the opinion of the expert before the Naval Committee that the Pensacola dry dock ought to be built.

Mr. MUDD. Who was the expert?

Mr. RIXEY. Admiral Endicott. He was asked by the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. LILLEY]: "Suppose you get one or two, where would you prefer to have them?" Admiral Endicott said: "Pensacola first, Puget Sound second, and Solomons Island, in Chesapeake Bay, third." He then went on to state that he did not attach as much importance to a floating dry dock as he did to a graving dry dock.

The floating dry dock is out of the bill. The bill as it left the House only provided for one, and that was at Puget Sound. It seems to me that the interest of the Navy requires the building of a dry dock at Pensacola. The winter maneuvers of the Navy are held there, and they have adequate facilities. We have no large docks south of Charleston except the floating dry dock at New Orleans and a small one at Pensacola, but neither of them are generally used.

Mr. MUDD. How much water is there at Pensacola?

Mr. RIXEY. I understand that there are 30 feet there.

Mr. MUDD. That is not in accordance with the testimony of the experts of the Navy Department.

Mr. LAMAR. The figures submitted by the chairman of the committee some weeks ago were 30 feet. The report of the board of trade was 32 feet.

Mr. MUDD. My recollection is that Admiral Endicott himself stated that there was not enough water for a first-class battle ship to enter. If I am wrong I am willing to be corrected. I think that the hearings before the committee will show that I am right.

Mr. LAMAR. You are very much mistaken.

Mr. RIXEY. Now, Mr. Speaker, I want to say a word and then I want to reserve the balance of my time. Under the testimony given by the Navy Department the dock most important to be built was the one at Pensacola. I have no interest in the matter. I simply want the interest of the Navy subserved. It has no large graving dock south of Charleston, and it ought to have one on the Gulf coast, where the winter maneuvers are held. Now, Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WILLIAM W. KITCHIN].

Mr. WILLIAM W. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, in reference to the statement of the gentleman from Illinois in charge of this bill, that this dock is hardly needed because we are now sufficiently prepared with docks to make necessary repairs to our Navy, I want to state that my recollection is that all the testimony before the Naval Committee is to the contrary of that. My recollection is that we had several witnesses who complained of the scarcity of dry docks in this country. We were reminded of the great number of dry docks in other countries, especially in England, and officials insisted on the advisability of our having more dry docks for the necessary repairs of the Navy.

I can add nothing to what has been said on this matter by Admiral Endicott as to the necessity for this graving dock at Pensacola. Why should gentlement object to the building up of the Pensacola Navy-Yard? In the opinion of every naval expert that has considered it, this yard is important and necessary. If we could have a proper navy-yard at Key West, I would prefer to abandon some other yard and build it at Key West; but I am informed that natural conditions will not permit it. If we could get a good one at Tampa and conditions would justify it, I would prefer to build it at Tampa rather than at Pensacola; but my information is, taking all things into consideration, Pensacola is by far the best point on the entire Gulf coast for a navy-yard. Does anyone doubt that we ought to have one great navy-yard on the Gulf, with the immense scope of our coast exceeding 1,000 miles, with only one yard of comparatively small consequence up the river at New Orleans, with no other yard on that coast of any importance except Pensacola, which is highly recommended by every naval officer who knows anything about it? Why should the chairman of the committee object to building up the yard at Pensacola? We have invested many millions of dollars in navy-yards at the North, some within 100 miles of each other, all of them comparatively close together. When you pass beyond Norfolk and go into that scope of country around to the Mexican border, we have no great navy-yard. You may reply that we are building one at Charleston, but think of the great distance from Charleston around to Pensacola. I submit that it is wisdom, that it is business sense to build up the navy-yard at Pensacola.

Reference has already been made to the statement of Admiral Endicott, that if this Congress should give during this year only one dock, that it should be at Pensacola. Notwithstanding that, the Naval Committee put in Puget Sound first. Then the committee put in the floating dock, which is out and which need not be discussed now. Even with these two docks in, one the floating dock and the other the Puget Sound dock, the Naval Committee was almost as evenly divided on this question as could be—it was defeated by a majority of only one vote. Now, when the second dock is out, why should we hesitate to give the Navy Department the two docks and why should we hesitate to concur in this Senate amendment, when all the expert testimony of the Navy Department favors it? Why should we hesitate when we know that with the opening of the Panama Canal the great center of trade, and of Navy maneuvers probably, will be down in the Caribbean waters and in the Gulf of Mexico? Under these conditions, Congress ought not to hesitate to concur in this Senate amendment and give Pensacola this dock.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, just a word upon this question. So far as docking facilities are concerned on the Gulf, we have a splendid floating dock at Algiers, near New Orleans, and we also have a smaller floating dock at Pensacola.

Mr. LAMAR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. FOSS. Yes.

Mr. LAMAR. As the gentleman well knows, the floating dock at Pensacola is a dock of less than probably 10,000 tons, and will not even take the smallest battle ship of the Navy.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, there is a naval station at Key West, besides that at Pensacola and at Algiers; and so far as the Panama Canal is concerned, we expect to have a naval station at Guantanamo, in Cuba. It has been difficult in times past for the Naval Committee, which has charge of appropriations for the different yards and stations throughout the country, to keep down appropriations or keep down building up yards which it does not believe necessary. The moment a community or a State or a Congressional district has in it a navy-yard or a little naval station, immediately pressure comes to make it a first-class naval station, a first-class navy-yard. We have got to have first-class yards and then second-class yards and third-class yards and fourth-class yards. There must be some classification all along the line; otherwise every naval station and every navy-yard will be a great, large industrial establishment, more than is necessary to do the repair work of the Navy. Consequently, for this reason, the committee, in its wisdom, did not think it was wise to build up Pensacola, and therefore it did not authorize this dock, because the moment you authorize the dock, along come the machine shops for the Bureau of Construction and Repair, for Equipment and for Engineering, and for all the different bureaus of the Navy, and it means the building up of a great first-class yard. I trust that the motion offered by my distinguished friend from Florida will be voted down.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Florida that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

So the motion to recede and concur was rejected.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do further insist upon its disagreement to the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 64, after line 4, insert:

"That the President be authorized to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, two additional professors of mathematics in the Navy, who shall be extra numbers in said list, and who shall take rank therein according to that held by them respectively when so appointed, if such appointees are officers of the Navy, otherwise at the foot of said list."

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I understand that the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HAUGEN] withdraws his request to concur in this amendment, and I will therefore move to further insist upon the disagreement.

Mr. GROSVENOR. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman what effect this has on these two professors.

Mr. FOSS. I would say that the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HAUGEN] gave notice that he wanted a separate vote upon the provision, inasmuch, I take it, as these two line officers who will go into the corps of professors will go in above a professor who came from the State of Iowa and, I presume, from the gentleman's district. I understand the gentleman withdraws that request.

Mr. HAUGEN. Mr. Speaker, I wish to say that it is now so late in the afternoon that I shall not insist upon a separate vote.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Illinois that the House do further insist upon its disagreement to the Senate amendment.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 73, line 10, after "Navy," insert ": Provided, That before any proposals for said battle ship shall be issued or any bids received and accepted the Secretary of the Navy shall report to Congress at its next session full details covering the type of such battle ship and the specifications for the same, including its displacement, draft, and dimensions, and the kind and extent of armor and armament therefor."

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I understand that some gentleman desires to move that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment and concur in the amendment.

Mr. BURTON of Ohio. That is the fact.

Mr. FOSS. Then I will yield to the gentleman from Ohio for the purpose of making that motion.

Mr. BURTON of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede from its disagreement and concur in Senate amendment numbered 56.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio moves that the House recede from its disagreement to amendment numbered 56 and concur in the same.

Mr. FOSS. Now, Mr. Speaker, I would ask the gentleman from Ohio how much time he desires for the discussion of this matter?

Mr. BURTON of Ohio. As far as I am personally concerned, ten minutes would be sufficient. One gentleman has asked for five minutes—that would make fifteen minutes; and the gentleman from Virginia another five minutes——

Mr. BARTHOLDT. And I would like to have two or three minutes.

Mr. BURTON of Ohio. I would say twenty-five minutes.

Mr. FOSS. I will yield to the gentleman from Ohio twenty-five minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio is recognized for twenty-five minutes.

Mr. BURTON of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, this battle ship if constructed would be larger and more expensive than any ship ever built for the United States Navy. The provision of the House bill relating to it reads as follows:

One first-class battle ship, carrying as heavy armor and as powerful armament as any known vessel of its class, to have the highest practicable speed and greatest practicable radius of action, and to cost, exclusive of armament and armor, not exceeding $6,000,000.

Then follows the proviso which shows that this battle ship is regarded as, in a measure, experimental. Opportunity is afforded to any competent constructor to submit plans and specifications. There has been a wide difference of opinion in regard to its efficiency. Many naval officials and others expert in naval construction contend that it would not have better fighting power than boats very much smaller and less expensive. The Senate amendment provides—

That before any proposals for said battle ship shall be issued or any bids received and accepted the Secretary of the Navy shall report to Congress at its next session full details covering the type of such battle ship and the specifications for the same, including its displacement, draft, and dimensions, and the kind and extent of armor and armament therefor.

An important question is involved here relating to the boundary line between the authority of the executive department and that of the legislative department. I think it may be safely said there has been no instance in time of peace when so large an authority in naval construction has been given to the executive department as is proposed by this House provision. If there is any one prerogative this House ought not to abdicate, it is the control of appropriations for the Army and Navy, for that is of the very essence of representative government and of free government as well. The proposition contained in the Senate amendment is a very mild one. It is merely to the effect that proposals shall not be asked until the plans are presented here, so that Congress may know what kind of a battle ship is intended. It is a conceded fact that $6,000,000 will not cover the total cost. Probably it will be twice that, or $12,000,000. Now, the contention was made here that we should not build a battle ship at all. This Senate amendment does not go so far as that. It recognizes, at least as far as present legislation is concerned, that there is to be another battle ship, but it does insist that Congress shall know what type of ship is to be built, and the details and specifications, as well, and I insist that this House should concur. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time and yield five minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD].

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I was opposed when the bill was before the House to including in the terms of the bill any provision for building the battle ship at this time. It went into the House bill, and the next best proposition we can vote on is to limit the building of that battle ship until we can investigate whether it is wise to build a ship of this type. Now, since I have been a Member of this House I have not been opposed to building a good navy. As a matter of fact, until last year I think I voted for every naval programme that the Committee on Naval Affairs presented to this House, but when I started in to vote along that line we had a comparatively small navy. To-day we have a naval force that is at least the third among the naval powers of the world, if not the second. But there is another good reason why we should not continue the programme that we have had in the past of building these great battle ships without careful consideration. We do not need them to protect our commerce; we do not need them now to maintain our standing in civilized nations. We merely should build sufficient ships to maintain our present status as a world power. But the inventions of to-day are growing so rapidly that I believe within a few years from now it will possibly be demonstrated that the present form of battle ship is not needed; that it is not efficient; that it will be put out of commission, and we will go to the development and building of a different type of naval vessel.

I am informed by gentlemen who know—experts on the question—that the development of the submarine torpedo boat is rapidly reaching a point where battle ships can not live in the same waters with them. I have been told that at the tank down here, where they test the models of the different ships that the navy is going to build, they have tested a new type of submarine torpedo boat that shows a speed of 22 knots per hour.

This bill carries an appropriation of a million dollars to build those boats and to test them. Now, if we succeed, as I believe we will and hope we will, in building a submarine torpedo boat that, submerged, will show the speed of a battle ship of to-day, that battle ship will have to go out of commission; and we are wasting our money by putting it into armor plate, because it goes without saying that if the submarine torpedo boat can run as fast as a battle ship, the battle ship can not approach our shores. More than that, if we are engaged in a war in foreign waters, the type of the ship that would take the place of the battle ship, in my opinion, in case of the development of these submarine torpedo boats, would be fast cruisers that were so arranged that they could take these small torpedo boats on board, and if they were attacked by battle ships, they would drop them in the water and run away and leave the submarine torpedo boat to fight it out with the battle ship. We know now that the submarine boat can go from 10 to 18 feet below the surface, and has got a better protection because thereof from shot and shell than all the armor you can put on a battle ship. And yet if it can reach the battle ship, as it will if the submarine's speed is increased to 20 knots an hour, a battle ship can not live in those waters. Therefore, I think it is unwise to make this full appropriation at this time.

Mr. BURTON of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask if the chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs desires to be heard at this time?

Mr. FOSS. I would state that I do not care to debate the question at this time. Mr. Speaker, how much time has the gentleman consumed?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GROSVENOR). The gentleman still has fifteen minutes.

Mr. FOSS. I yield ten minutes to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. MUDD].

Mr. MUDD. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me this is not the time to discuss the comparative merits of battle ships and some other type of naval vessels. This House has declared by a very decisive majority when this bill was pending before it that we should have this battle ship. Any attempt now to undo that action, as I consider this practically to be, is simply trying to do by indirection that which we can not do directly. The chief effect of the language of this amendment is to provide for delay. It can not undo the work of this House. It does not say that the Secretary shall not contract. It does not repeal the authorization for him to contract, but simply requires, referring to the language of the amendment—

> That before any proposals for said battle ship shall be issued or any bids received and accepted the Secretary of the Navy shall report to Congress at its next session full details covering the type of such battle ship and specifications for the same—

And so forth.

Now, I repeat, Mr. Speaker, that it does not recall or undertake in any way to repeal the unquestioned and complete authority we gave to the Secretary of the Navy to go ahead and contract for the construction of this ship after he shall have reported to Congress. But the time of that report is held back until next December. Now, if we want to go ahead with this ship, so far as I am concerned—and I believe that to be the view now held by the Navy Department, though I am not authorized, of course, to speak for the Department—there is no objection to requiring a report of these plans to the extent of a general description of the ship. I infer from an informal talk with the Secretary of the Navy, which I do not think I violate any confidence in stating, that there will be no objection to reporting to Congress, provided that the work of contracting and construction be not delayed, leaving out the words "at its next session," but reporting to Congress at such time as the Department may be ready to do it, "full details covering the type of such battle ship, including its displacement, draft, and dimensions, and the kind and extent or armor and armament therefor."

I do not believe, however, Mr. Speaker, it is wise to require the Department to report all of the "specifications" to Congress. I do not believe anyone will contend that it ought to be the policy of this Government, or any other government, to report to the governments of the world every minute detail, every single specification involving all the advancements in the construction of its greatest fighting naval machine.

Under this provision as it now stands the Secretary is required to make a detailed report, with all the complicated minutiæ and all the specific and manifold details, to the next session of this Congress, which is tantamount to reporting to all the governments of the world.

Mr. TAWNEY. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. MUDD. Yes.

Mr. TAWNEY. Is it not a fact that there is to-day in the Naval Acadamy at Annapolis a citizen of a foreign country, from a country, too, that has a first-class naval academy, who is being educated in the American Navy; and does not that man have an opportunity at all times to gain all the information, detailed or otherwise, about this very battle ship and its construction?

Mr. MUDD. I think not. Mr. Speaker, I do not think that a midshipman in the Naval Academy has opportunities to look into every detail of construction of our battle ships.

Mr. TAWNEY. We are educating them, are we not?

Mr. MUDD. But assuming that to be true, if we are doing the work in this country of allowing citizens of foreign countries to be educated here at our Naval School and to have the opportunity for such inspection, that evil ought to be corrected. It has been stated that Japanese sailors or other Japanese employees on our ships are making reports to their Government. If we have spies on our battle ships or in the Naval Academy, that is an evil, I say, that ought to be corrected, and we ought not to enlarge these opportunities by requiring that this report shall be made in the shape of a public document to Congress next December, which is tantamount to giving every detail of construction of the most advanced type of battle ship that the world, perhaps, has ever provided for the construction of.

Mr. RIXEY. I would like to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. MUDD. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. RIXEY. I understood the gentleman a moment ago to state that the Secretary of the Navy had indicated to him that he had no objection to the Senate amendment if we would strike out the words that he shall "report to Congress at its next session."

Mr. MUDD. Perhaps that would be stating it too broadly. The Secretary of the Navy stated informally to me that the Department had no objection to requiring a report of the general plans and type of the ship. He would not object to this if we leave out the words that operate as a suspension of authority to receive and accept proposals in the meantime, and the words "at its next session," referring to the next session of Congress; and, in my judgment, the words requiring a report as to the "specifications." And if I am not mistaken, he is ready to make the necessary report now, or in a comparatively brief time, as to the essential plans, showing the contemplated draft, displacement, and dimensions of the ship and the kind and extent of armor and armament to be used.

Mr. RIXEY. I suppose he proposes to submit these general plans descriptive of the type and draft and dimensions before he goes on with the bids and contract.

Mr. MUDD. I am of the opinion that the Department is not unwilling for that.

Mr. RIXEY. I do not see very much difference between the Department and the Senate according to that. I think it is an admission that the Senate amendment is all right.

Mr. MUDD. Perhaps my statement, taken literally, goes a little bit too far, inasmuch as Congress will in all likelihood adjourn in about a week from this day. But I do say that the Secretary of the Navy and the Navy Department are not unwilling to furnish the Congress or to anybody any plans showing the general type and plans of the ship, but they do not want all work held up until next December, when the report shall be made as contemplated by this amendment.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. MUDD. Yes.

Mr. FITZGERALD. The provision of this bill contemplates sending all over the world and expending $25,000 in order to get the best, does it not?

Mr. MUDD. My answer to that will be this: That the adoption of this amendment is practically saying that we undo the authorization that we have made, and we in effect postpone the authorization for the battle ship until the short session of Congress, and Congress has voted not to do that.

Now, Mr. Speaker, one word in reference to the statement of the gentleman from Ohio, who is generally accurate in his statements, in which he seems to think that we have abrogated some of our functions and that we have allowed an unprecedented latitude to the executive department as to the cost of this ship. Now, stated as strongly as language can phrase it, the committee put in this provision that it shall not cost over $6,000,000, exclusive of armor and armament. That is my recollection of the language we have placed in naval bills before, in exactly the usual phraseology.

Mr. TAWNEY. What percentage of the cost of a battle ship is the armor and armament?

Mr. MUDD. I do not know.

Mr. TAWNEY. About the usual percentage of the cost of the armament?

Mr. MUDD. I do not know precisely.

Mr. TAWNEY. You are on the Naval Committee?

Mr. MUDD. I am free to confess that I have not the varied and unlimited knowledge on all subjects that come before the Committee on Naval Affairs that the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations has as to what comes before all the committees. The percentage varies somewhat. It has generally been about or somewhat in excess of 40 per cent, if I recollect aright. My contention is this: That we have used the same language as to limitation of cost that we have used in other authorizations for the increase of the Navy that the gentleman from Minnesota has so cordially supported in the past. We have not varied from the language except, of course, as to the amount.

Mr. BURTON of Ohio. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him a question? Is not the striking fact of this appropriation that it is for an entirely different kind of fighting machine from any heretofore provided, and much larger?

Mr. MUDD. Not an entirely different kind.

Mr. KEIFER. Much larger.

Mr. MUDD. The difference is rather in degree than in kind.

Mr. BURTON of Ohio. More than a difference in degree, is it not?

Mr. MUDD. I think not. The amount is larger, but not any larger proportionately than have been the amounts provided for other ships that we have been building in the last few years as compared with those which were built a few years before. It is simply an enlargement in size, a difference in degree, not a difference in type. It is a difference that marks the progress and improvement of our war ships that we hope and expect to continue as time goes on.

Mr. BURTON of Ohio. I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BARTHOLDT].

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Maryland has stated the case correctly. The purpose of the Senate amendment, as I understand it, is to postpone the construction of this battle ship until next winter, and it is the same purpose which I had in view when I had the honor to make a motion to this effect when this paragraph in the naval appropriation bill was originally under consideration here.

The action of the Senate, in my judgment, is eminently proper and wise. In a few months from now the nations of the world will assemble at The Hague for the purpose of laying the foundation for more permanent peace. There will possibly be two elements contending with each other at that great conference. One element will favor the limitation of military and naval armaments. The other element will favor the adoption of arbitration treaties and the adoption of a system of international legislation. Whichever side may prevail, the construction of this battle ship will be unnecessary.

I want to say in this connection that France is ready to-day not only to limit armaments, but also to enter into an agreement with all the world for international arbitration and peace. The men now at the helm in the French Republic are all members of the Interparliamentary Union. In England the same is true. The men now at the helm in England are members of the Interparliamentary Union. They are in favor of the settlement of international controversies by arbitration, and they are also in favor of a limitation of armaments.

The question, then, is as to whether this country should permit any other to wrest from it the proud distinction of leadership in the great movement for international arbitration and peace. By the postponement of the construction of this battle ship this Congress will serve notice upon the world that we are ready to join hands with all the nations in any agreement that may be arrived at at The Hague for the purpose of settling international difficulties by arbitration instead of by the arbitrament of the sword. [Applause.]

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. LOUDENSLAGER].

Mr. LOUDENSLAGER. Mr. Speaker, I do not believe that the Members of the House thoroughly understand the effect of this amendment of the Senate. It is not so much the delay in building this battle ship, but it is, to my mind, a most unwise course for Congress to pursue, especially when the other nations of the earth are guarding carefully all their plans and specifications. In my judgment, it would be much wiser for the House to agree with an amendment striking out the words "the next session of Congress" and inserting "the admiralties of all foreign nations."

We ought not, in my judgment, to advise them of our proceedings. And above or beyond that, it has been stated that it is an impossibility for these specifications and plans, as suggested by this amendment, to be filed and to become a public document. Both the House and the Senate have agreed to the construction of this battle ship, and it is unwise for the American Congress now to make a deviation regarding the construction of these battle ships, and to spread before the whole world the knowledge that we possess in the construction of our machines of warfare.

I trust that this House will not concur in this amendment, but will send it back to conference in disagreement, so that the House conferees may be able to secure the adoption of an amendment with a modification that will not give our knowledge to the whole world. [Applause.]

Mr. BURTON of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. RIXEY].

Mr. RIXEY. Mr. Speaker, the House provision varies from any other provision that I have ever seen carried in a naval bill for the building of ships. Heretofore the provision in an appropriation bill has always designated the size of the vessel. In this case nothing was said about the size of the vessel, but there was a lump appropriation of $6,000,000 for a battle ship. For the information of the gentleman from Minnesota I will state this battle ship is to cost $10,600,000, according to the statement I have here from the Navy Department. This battle ship will therefore cost 50 per cent more than any battle ship we have ever built. It will cost within three or four million dollars of what the total expenses of the naval establishment were twenty years ago. Under these conditions it seems to me that we might exercise ordinary business care in regard to the appropriation. We ought to know the class or type of ship and its size. The greatest ship so far authorized in the world that we know of is the Dreadnaught, by Great Britain, which is to cost $8,900,000, and will be of 18,500 tons displacement.

Mr. TAWNEY. Where does the gentleman get the information as to the displacement of the Dreadnaught?

Mr. RIXEY. I have seen the statement repeatedly. The displacement is 18,500 tons.

Mr. TAWNEY. Can the gentleman tell the House what the displacement of this proposed battle ship will be?

Mr. RIXEY. No. The conjecture is that it will be between 20,000 and 22,000 tons.

Mr. TAWNEY. I do not care about it; but I want to call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that the details, as far as the displacement of the Dreadnaught is concerned, have already leaked out from Great Britain.

Mr. RIXEY. The Dreadnaught is to be 18,500 tons displacement and to cost $8,900,000. We provide for a ship to cost $10,600,000—in round numbers, $2,000,000 more than Great Britain is paying for the Dreadnaught. There was no testimon before the Naval Committee as to what would be the size of this ship for which we are appropriating. The whole matter was in doubt, and I risk nothing in stating here that this provision did not come within the recommendation of the Navy Department.

Now, as I understand it, it is contended by the gentleman from Maryland that the Department possibly would be willing to accept this provision if you strike out "next session" and let it report the plans now. On the other hand, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. LOUDENSLAGER] says that if you adopt this amendment and require these plans at the next session the Department will not be able to furnish then by that time. I do not know which statement to take. But certain it is there can be no question, as a business proposition, that we ought to know the size of this vessel, we ought to know its type, and we ought to know the general specifications. The gentleman from New Jersey says that we would be giving away the information. I want to call his attention to the fact that in the act of March 3, 1901, plans and specifications were called for by a provision very similar to the present Senate amendment. I have never heard that the world thereby gained information to our disadvantage.

Mr. FOSS. May I interrupt the gentleman? Has the gentleman read the act?

Mr. RIXEY. I am going to read it.

Mr. FOSS. You will note that the words "general description" are in that act.

Mr. RIXEY. It is practically the same thing. The provision is as follows:

For the purpose of further increasing the naval establishment of the United States in accordance with the latest improvement of construction of ship and the production of armor and armor plate therefor, the Secretary of the Navy is hereby directed to prepare the plans and specifications of two sea-going battle ships and two armored cruisers carrying the most suitable armor and armament for vessels of their class, and to submit to Congress a general description of such battle ships on the first Monday in December next.

Mr. KEIFER. Does the gentleman interpret that to mean that he shall not proceed with the work, or merely to make the report?

Mr. RIXEY. As I understand the Senate provision, it does not do away with the authorization for the battle ship, but before the matter goes to bids, we are to know the type of the vessel and have the plans. I will state to the gentleman from Ohio this additional fact: More than a year ago, under the bill of March, 1905, we provided for two battle ships, and those specifications and plans were only adopted by the Department twelve months after the ships were ordered, and the contracts for the two battle ships authorized fifteen months ago have not been given out or signed. There will therefore be no delay if we have the plans and specifications by the next session.

Mr. KEIFER. Is it not a fact that the law which the gentleman has just read was not a prohibition against proceeding to build a ship and the Senate amendment is in this case?

Mr. RIXEY. I will state to the gentleman that it does not operate as a prohibition, because it is only five months until Congress meets in December, and if the Department gives us the plans for this ship in five months, it will show more expedition than it has ever done heretofore. It was twelve months getting plans for the 16,000-ton ships, although they were but little more than a repetition of what preceded them. It has now been fifteen months and the contracts have not been executed.

Mr. KEIFER. I understood the gentleman to say once or twice that there was no provision in the bill for fixing the size of the vessel.

Mr. RIXEY. That is right.

Mr. KEIFER. I find in reading the bill, on page 81, that it provides for one first-class battle ship carrying as heavy armor and as powerful armament as any known vessel of its class, to have the highest practical speed and the greatest practical radius of action. Is not that almost exactly like the law the gentleman has just read with reference to other battle ships?

Mr. RIXEY. No; a first-class battle ship may be of 13,000, or 15,000, or 18,000, or 20,000 tons.

Mr. KEIFER. This is to be the most powerful.

Mr. RIXEY. Most powerful in armor and armament. That is different from the size or the type of the vessel.

Mr. KEIFER. Is not that in the law the gentleman read, in the former legislation?

Mr. RIXEY. It may be in the law, but the law heretofore has always designated the size of the vessel.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, the House provision was the result of a little hysteria. The Naval Committee and certain gentlemen had heard that Great Britain was going to build the Dreadnaught, the biggest ship that floats, 18,500 tons, and to cost $9,000,000. I think it is to the discredit of the Naval Committee that it brought in a provision of this sort, having no other foundation and for no other reason than that the committee wanted to provide for a bigger ship than Great Britain was building. [Applause.]

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, how much time has been consumed by the other side?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BURTON] has seven minutes time remaining to him and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Foss] has twenty-two minutes of time remaining in the hour.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL].

Mr. DALZELL. Mr. Speaker, I can say all that I want to say in two minutes. It is manifest this proposition is simply to knock out this battle ship. The gentlemen who have discussed this Senate amendment on the floor are the gentlemen who opposed the battle ship when the appropriation was in the House. In their discussion they have discussed not the merits of the Senate proposition, but the merits of the original question, as to whether or not we should have a battle ship. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BARTHOLDT], who says he did not, simply gave his cause away, I think, when he said that this Senate amendment is simply in the line of the proposition that he submitted to the House when the original proposition was under discussion in the House. The gentleman from Missouri, as we all understand, is an optimist, who believes in the early advent of the millenium, and it is on that ground that he is now in favor of this amendment. The amendment, as I say, is simply an attempt to get rid of the previous action of the House. It is an attempt to substitue for the House action the Senate action. So far as the proposition is concerned that we shall gather together all the details of a great battle ship and then present them to Congress, I have two things to say. First, that when they are presented to Congress, Congress will not know the first thing about them, and, second, that it would be a violation of the policy uniformly pursued by all the nations of the world, who guard with the greatest sanctity and with all possible care all the details of a battle ship. I hope the motion of the gentleman from Ohio will be voted down.

Mr. BURTON of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. TAWNEY].

Mr. TAWNEY. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL] says that the purpose of this amendment is to defeat the action of the House when the naval appropriation bill was under consideration, when it passed favorably upon this proposition. I can see no basis for the gentleman's claim whatever. Under this provision we authorize the construction of one first-class battle ship carrying as heavy armor and as powerful armament as any known vessel of its class. That means, if it means anything, that this vessel is to excel in size, in power, and in fighting capacity any other vessel that has been constructed or is authorized by any government in the world. It may necessitate the entire remodeling of our Navy. A vessel of that size will certainly require at least four or five additional ships of the same class and speed. If this amendment is stricken out, as it will be unless the motion of the gentleman from Ohio is adopted, we then authorize the construction of this vessel to excel all others, thereby fixing a new standard of battle ships far above the standard we have now. When we have done that, then, in the judgment of the Navy Department and in the judgment of Congress, it may become necessary to change entirely the type of our whole Navy. A few days ago I stated, in opposition to this proposition of building this battle ship, that I thought the time had come when, if we should not halt in carrying on our ambitious naval policy, we could at least mark time for a while without any injury to service, and the adoption of this Senate amendment will simply be marking time until the Navy Department can enlighten Congress as to the size and capacity of this fighting machine, and whether or not, in the adoption of this proposition, we are going to create a necessity for remodeling our Navy upon an entirely different line than that upon which our present Navy has been constructed. We are this year, I repeat again, expending on account of war and in anticipation of war 63¾ per cent of our total revenue, exclusive of postal revenues, and that, too, in a year when the aggregate revenue of the Government will exceed the aggregate revenue of the Government in any year in the history of the Government. This expenditure is about $28,000 more than the total revenue of the Government, exclusive of postal revenue, only nine years ago. This alone should cause Members of this House to pause and reflect on the advisability of continuing a policy that involves such an enormous expenditure. I say, therefore, that if we adopt this amendment, we will simply be marking time until we can ascertain more definitely the necessity for and the effect of a battle ship the only apparent necessity for which at the present time is to excel some other country in the matter of a big ship.

No man can even tell us to-day what the cost of this vessel will be. Differences of opinion exist even among the members of the Naval Committee who have studied the question, some claiming that it will cost no more than $6,000,000, with 25 per cent added for armor and armament; others claiming it will cost from twelve to fifteen millions. So we do not know. We are simply acting in the dark and doing it because somebody else is building a bigger battle ship than we had heretofore, and I trust the amendment will be concurred in. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. FOSS. Has the gentleman from Ohio or the gentleman from Illinois the right to close the debate upon this question?

The SPEAKER. Why, the parliamentary situation is this, that the gentleman is in charge of the bill, and he has an hour, and the gentleman in charge of the bill always has the right to control his hour.

Mr. FOSS. Then I ask the gentleman from Ohio to consume the balance of his time.

Mr. BURTON of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I would state there was a distinct agreement as to time—twenty-five minutes on each side—and under those circumstances is not the one who makes the motion entitled to close debate?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio was recognized by the gentleman from Illinois, yielding him twenty-five minutes. Now, while the motion to recede and concur is a preferential motion, yet it does not carry any rights with it that are not yet granted by the House. Now, the gentleman from Illinois yields a portion of his time to the gentleman from Ohio, and the gentleman from Illinois within his hour would have the right to move the previous question. If the House wants to vote that down, then the time would pass to the gentleman from Ohio upon this particular motion; but the gentleman from Ohio has had time within the hour yielded to him by the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield at this time to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER] two minutes.

Mr. KEIFER. Mr. Speaker, I can not do more than I have hitherto done in relation to this subject, to wit, state in as emphatic a way as I could that I am in favor of building at least one battle ship a year until we have a satisfactory navy, equal to the best type of battle ship in all respects in the world, and I believe that that will help to bring about the desired result that my friend from Missouri [Mr. BARTHOLDT] is laboring so faithfully to accomplish. I agree with the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL] that delay and dallying with this subject now will be vain and useless. Why say we define a class of ships as is defined in this bill and then say that before a step is taken of any kind toward the construction of the ship we shall wait to get a report? I would like to know from the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BURTON], who makes this motion, whether or not he believes when that report comes it is essential for Congress to pass some further law before we proceed with the construction of the proposed battle ship. It seems as though no further law would be needed. I think the time is here when this nation must stand abreast with the greatest powers of the world in the matter of a navy, and that can only be brought about or accomplished by building up a navy equal to the best in the world. That is all I can undertake to say now on this important matter, and I hope the motion will be voted down and that the conference committee will adhere to the judgment of the House so clearly expressed some time ago.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, how much time have I remaining?

The SPEAKER. Fifteen minutes.

Mr. HEPBURN. I would like to have a little time, if you please.

Mr. FOSS. I yield two minutes. I will state that I desire to say something upon the proposition and want to keep fifteen minutes. Does the gentleman desire more time than that?

Mr. HEPBURN. I am not caring particularly about it.

Mr. FOSS. Well, I will yield five minutes to the gentleman, if the gentleman desires it.

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Speaker, I want to suggest to the gentleman from Ohio who made the motion, that in the few moments that he has he will explain the office of this amendment. As I read it, it provides:

That before any proposals for said battle ship shall be issued or any bids received and accepted, the Secretary of the Navy shall report to Congress at its next session full details covering the type of such battle ship and specifications for the same, including its displacement, draft, and dimensions, and the kind and extent of armor and armament therefor.

I understand that in this bill there was complete authorization for the construction of this ship; that all details were provided for. This amendment simply provides that before a bid shall be accepted a report shall be made to this Congress. When that report is made to Congress, has not the Navy Department then the power and the duty to comply at once with the statute and construct this vessel? What is the efficacy of this report to Congress? Why should we delay in that manner? It is simply advertising to the world what ought perhaps to be a secret carefully guarded by the Navy Department; that is all. It does not interfere with the construction of the vessel; it does not change the line of duty of the Secretary. What do these gentleman want with this amendment?

Mr. DALZELL. Delay.

Mr. HEPBURN. Is not their mission as peace advocates carrying them somewhat to extremes? Is not the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BURTON] and his colleague from Missouri [Mr. BARTHOLDT] in this new gospel of peace a little off their base? Are they accomplishing anything by this particular form of legislation? It seems to me not. I am not here at all to criticise the purposes of these gentleman. We all look forward to a time, perhaps not in our lifetime, when the theories they advocate may be made applicable in the affairs of nations. All the doctrines of the church teach us to look forward to that era when men will love one another as they love themselves, when the brotherhood of mankind will really mean something more than mere declamation or rhetoric; but that time has not come. It is not here now. We find the same selfishness among nations as among individuals. We are far from the era that the church promises us, that period when the lion and the lamb shall lie down together side by side—not one inside. We are all looking forward to that time; but will it not do for these gentleman to wait until there is some evidence as to the approach of that period?

My experience and my observation has taught me that that man is safest from assault who has the greatest muscular development and the greatest skill in its use. In all of the history of nations it is shown that that nation is least assailed, that that nation secures most of all of its rights, its possibilities, its hopes, that has the largest armies and the most efficient and disciplined navy. It is the power to resist that secures men from the necessity of resistance. And I am like the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER], who just now said that he desired to see at least one battle ship added to our Navy every year, and that of the best possible type and construction. [Applause.]

Mr. BURTON of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, how much time have I remaining?

The SPEAKER. Four minutes.

Mr. BURTON of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield one minute to the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL].

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I am in favor of the Senate amendment, not that I am opposed to the construction of a battle ship, but because I have doubts as to the wisdom of building a larger battle ship than any now afloat. It does not follow, it has not been proven in naval history, that a larger battle ship than any now afloat would be any more effective than a moderate-sized battle ship. The office of this amendment, I would suggest to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HEPBURN], is to give Congress an opportunity, after scrutiny of the plans and specifications of this proposed monster of the deep, to decide whether we shall build a battle ship larger than any now afloat or follow the lines of policy heretofore laid down and add to our Navy one battle ship a year, or more if necessary, of the same approximate class and type as those we are now building.

The SPEAKER. The time of the genteman has expired.

Mr. BURTON of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I note a decided difference in the arguments of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HEP-

BURN] and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DALZELL]. The gentleman from Pennsylvania says this is a proposition to do away with the battle ship entirely. The gentleman from Iowa intimates that the amendment is entirely ineffective, and that the Secretary of the Navy must, even if this motion prevails, proceed with the construction of the ship. In answer to his question as to what will be the effect of this amendment, I would say, first, that the legislation directing that the battle ship be built stands, even if the amendment is adopted. It would be the duty of the Secretary of the Navy to go on with its construction, unless he is ordered to do otherwise. Nevertheless, when these plans shall be filed here Congress will have opportunity to take further action on the subject. It may either forbid entirely the construction of the battle ship or it may change the plans in accordance with what is its right and its duty.

That leaves the sole argument against this amendment, that we are giving away our secrets. That is a pleasing conceit of many persons, that you are hiding your plans of the battle ship from the world, but it is a delusion. A naval designer of a foreign country might disguise himself and find employment in the shipyard. You give out to six builders the specifications in full. A thousand argus eyes are watching, and they can tell what your ship is to be to the last detail. I can tell you how you can insure secrecy. Say to your naval constructor, "Get thee to Waukegan or to Annapolis, hide yourself in a room with merely sufficient light for the printing of blueprints, and there use unlimited quantities of pens, ink, and paper; stick close to your plans, and never build a ship." That is the only way to insure secrecy. [Applause.]

Whatever we may seek to do, the naval powers of the world will know. The terms "details and specifications" are both very general in their nature. If there is any special secret the officials of the Navy Department may desire shall be kept with unusual care, they can withhold that from Congress. What disadvantage can there be in waiting until another winter for a report upon the plans for the battle ship, so that we may know whether the model is a good one? So that we can again consider whether it is wise to proceed along the line of construction recommended or along any line of construction? It is stated that it will be 1910 or 1912 before the battle ships under way already are completed. It is also said that the plans for the proposed ship can not be completed before the next session. Why, then, refuse to concur in this amendment, which can do no harm, and which will bring the subject before the body which should decide upon the plan and upon the whole subject? [Loud applause.]

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, how much time have I?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has twelve minutes.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call the attention of the House to this Senate amendment:

Provided, That before any proposals for said battle ship shall be issued or any bids received and accepted the Secretary of the Navy shall report to Congress at its next session full details—

Not general details, but full details—covering the type of such battle ship and the specifications for the same, including its displacement, draft, and dimensions, and the kind and extent of armor and armament therefor.

That can mean plainly but one thing. It means that Congress must again pass upon this ship; must again authorize the ship. Now, we had a contest here in this Chamber when this bill first came before this House. It was fought valiantly on both sides, and this House, by a splendid and substantial majority, determined to provide for this battle ship without putting any strings upon it. This Senate amendment is simply putting a string on the authorization which this House made before. And it is confirmed by the debate which took place in the Senate. If gentlemen of the House will refer to that, it was clearly and plainly the intention that we must again authorize this ship if we would have it. That is the purpose of this Senate amendment. The very fact that every gentleman but one here who has been in favor of this Senate amendment to-day was also, when this debate was had in the House, opposed to the battle ship shows the plain intent and purpose in this contest. The line was drawn then, and the line ought to be drawn here to-day. Everyone who was in favor of this battle ship before should vote down the motion of the gentleman from Ohio.

Why, it seems there never was presented to this House a more senseless and ridiculous proposition than to bring in the plans and specifications for a great battle ship and report here to Congress. We might know the moment you report to Congress you report to the whole civilized globe; you report to every foreign navy everywhere; and you might insert in that provision "report to the whole civilized globe" instead of "report to Congress."

Ah, but gentlemen say do we not know something about the pattern of the Dreadnaught?" Yes; we know what the newspapers have said about it. And you go to the Navy Department here in Washington and ask them whether they have any accurate information on the subject, and they say: "No; all we know is what we have seen in the newspapers."

Now, the gentleman has said that it is a very large undertaking to build this big battle ship, and therefore you ought to report to Congress. Well, if we were a body of experts that argument might go; it might have some weight; but we do not know anything more about it than anyone else who is not in the business of constructing naval vessels. And why should we report here to Congress? If the Navy Department can not build the ship they will not build it, but if they can build it they will build it. I have a letter from the chief constructor saying that it is easily within the capacity of our Navy Department to build this ship.

The gentleman from Ohio, in his first speech to-day on this subject, said: "Why, here we are going from 16,000 tons up to 20,000 tons. Here is an unusual thing; here is a new construction." It is only a larger battle ship; only larger guns, and more of them. It is simply building a bigger house. That is all, and the architect who can build a small one can also build a bigger one. When we authorized the first ships of the Navy, the Atlanta, the Boston, and the Dolphin, they were little ships of 2,500 and 3,000 tons. Then we went up to the Texas, of 6,000 tons. Did we then ask the Navy Department to report to Congress when we jumped up from 3,000 up to 6,000 tons? Or up to our first first-class battle ship, the Iowa, of 10,000 tons? Did we say, as the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BURTON] has said here, "This is an unusual proposition, and therefore the Navy Department should report their plans in full detail to Congress before they undertake this?" No; we said to our Navy Department, "Go ahead."

Our first battle ship only had a displacement of about 10,000 tons, then we went up to 11,000, and then we went up to 12,000, and then we went up to 14,000; now we are up to 16,000, and the ships upon which plans have recently been made have practically a larger displacement than that.

We are authorizing a large battle ship. The navies of the world are authorizing large ships. Japan is authorizing a ship of 19,400 tons. France is authorizing six battle ships of 18,000 tons, which will be followed by the laying down of six battle ships of twenty or twenty-one thousand tons. Is not our Navy Department able to construct such a vessel? We have the finest ships of any navy in the world. We have the best talent and the best skill and the best genius, and yet we propose to give the navies of the world the benefit of our genius and our skill by authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to report the plans to Congress.

The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BARTHOLDT] said a moment ago that he wanted to wait for the peace conference. When this matter was before the House I showed that since the last peace conference met, the nations of the world had authorized about 2,000,000 tons in battle ships. That is to say, since the last peace conference enough tonnage in battle ships has been authorized to amount to a hundred of these 20,000-ton battle ships. And, mind you, that peace conference was called together for the purpose of considering the question of disarmament, but the coming peace conference is not called together to consider that question, which has been eliminated in the call of the Czar. Just think, if the peace conference that considered the question of disarmament was followed by such naval activity on the part of the nations of the world, which authorized more ships than ever before, just think what may happen after the next peace conference!

So, gentlemen, that question is ridiculous. In my judgment the only thing for the House to do is to give us in this bill a clean-cut authorization of the battle ship, just as the House voted it a few weeks ago.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion of the gentleman from Ohio.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois moves the previous question on the motion of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BURTON], that the House do recede from its disagreement to Senate amendment 56, and concur in the same.

The previous question was ordered.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. BURTON of Ohio, on a division there were—ayes 123, noes 130.

Mr. BURTON of Ohio. I demand tellers.

Mr. HULL, Mr. FOSS, Mr. BUTLER of Pennsylvania, and Mr. WATSON demanded the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 128, nays 113, answered "present" 14, not voting 125, as follows:

YEAS—128.

Adams	Fitzgerald	Littauer	Sherley
Adamson	Flood	Livingston	Sims
Andrus	Floyd	Lloyd	Slayden
Bankhead	French	McCall	Small
Bannon	Fulkerson	McCarthy	Smith, Cal.
Bartholdt	Fuller	McCreary, Pa.	Smith, Ill.
Beall, Tex.	Gardner, Mich.	McLain	Smith, Iowa
Birdsall	Garner	Macon	Smith, Tex.
Bonynge	Garrett	Marshall	Smyser
Brundidge	Gillespie	Minor	Southwick
Buckman	Gillett, Mass.	Mondell	Spight
Burgess	Goebel	Moore	Stafford
Burleson	Granger	Mouser	Stanley
Burnett	Hamilton	Norris	Steenerson
Burton, Ohio	Haugen	Otjen	Stevens, Minn.
Butler, Tenn.	Hay	Padgett	Sullivan, Mass.
Candler	Hedge	Patterson, S. C.	Tawney
Chaney	Heflin	Perkins	Taylor, Ala.
Clark, Fla.	Henry, Tex.	Pollard	Thomas, N. C.
Clark, Mo.	Hill, Miss.	Prince	Towne
Cockran	Hinshaw	Rainey	Townsend
Cooper, Wis.	Hoar	Ransdell, La.	Tyndall
Cromer	Holliday	Rhodes	Underwood
Crumpacker	Houston	Richardson, Ala.	Volstead
Davis, Minn.	Howard	Rixey	Wallace
Davis, W. Va.	Hunt	Robinson, Ark.	Watkins
De Armond	Johnson	Rodenberg	Webber
Dixon, Ind.	Keliher	Russell	Weems
Ellerbe	Kennedy, Nebr.	Ryan	Williams
Ellis	Kitchin, Wm. W.	Scott	Wilson
Esch	Lamar	Shartel	Woodyard
Finley	Lee	Sheppard	Zenor

NAYS—113.

Aiken	Denby	Kennedy, Ohio.	Payne
Alexander	Dickson, Ill.	Kline	Reeder
Allen, N. J.	Draper	Lacey	Richardson, Ky.
Barchfeld	Dunwell	Landis, Chas. B.	Rives
Bennet, N. Y.	Fassett	Landis, Frederick	Roberts
Bennett, Ky.	Fordney	Law	Samuel
Boutell	Foss	Lilley, Conn.	Schneebell
Bradley	Foster, Ind.	Lindsay	Sherman
Brick	Gaines, W. Va.	Loudenslager	Smith, Md.
Broussard	Gardner, Mass.	McCleary, Minn.	Smith, Samuel W.
Brownlow	Gardner, N. J.	McGavin	Smith, Pa.
Burton, Del.	Gilbert, Ind.	McKinney	Snapp
Butler, Pa.	Gill	McMorran	Sperry
Calder	Goldfogle	McNary	Sterling
Campbell, Kans.	Goulden	Mahon	Sulloway
Campbell, Ohio	Graff	Martin	Talbott
Capron	Graham	Maynard	Thomas, Ohio
Cassel	Grosvenor	Meyer	Tirrell
Chapman	Hale	Miller	Wachter
Cocks	Hayes	Moon, Pa.	Waldo
Cole	Henry, Conn.	Mudd	Wanger
Conner	Hepburn	Murdock	Watson
Cooper, Pa.	Hermann	Murphy	Weeks
Cousins	Higgins	Needham	Wiley, N. J.
Currier	Hubbard	Olcott	Young
Curtis	Hull	Olmsted	The Speaker
Dalzell	Humphrey, Wash.	Overstreet
Darragh	Kahn	Parker
Dawson	Keifer	Parsons

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—14.

Dale	Gregg	Lever	Southard
Gilbert, Ky	Jenkins	Mann	Wiley, Ala.
Glass	Jones, Wash.	Moon, Tenn.
Greene	Kitchin, Claude	Pou

NOT VOTING—125.

Acheson	Dresser	Knapp	Reid
Allen, Me.	Driscoll	Knopf	Reynolds
Ames	Dwight	Knowland	Rhinock
Babcock	Edwards	Lafean	Robertson, La.
Bartlett	Field	Lamb	Rucker
Bates	Flack	Lawrence	Ruppert
Bede	Fletcher	Le Fevre	Scroggy
Beidler	Foster, Vt.	Legare	Shackleford
Bell, Ga.	Fowler	Lewis	Sibley
Bingham	Gaines, Tenn.	Lilley, Pa.	Slemp
Bishop	Garber	Little	Smith, Ky.
Blackburn	Gillett, Cal.	Littlefield	Smith, Wm. Alden
Bowers	Griggs	Longworth	Southall
Bowersock	Gronna	Lorimer	Sparkman
Bowie	Gudger	Loud	Stephens, Tex.
Brantley	Hardwick	Lovering	Sullivan, N. Y.
Broocks, Tex.	Haskins	McDermott	Sulzer
Brooks, Colo.	Hearst	McKinlay, Cal.	Taylor, Ohio
Brown	Hill, Conn.	McKinley, Ill.	Trimble
Burke, Pa.	Hitt	McLachlan	Van Duzer
Burke, S. Dak.	Hogg	Madden	Van Winkle
Burleigh	Hopkins	Michalek	Vreeland
Byrd	Howell, N. J.	Morrell	Wadsworth
Calderhead	Howell, Utah	Nevin	Webb
Clayton	Huff	Page	Weisse
Cushman	Hughes	Palmer	Welborn
Davey, La.	Humphreys, Miss.	Patterson, N. C.	Wharton
Davidson	James	Patterson, Tenn.	Wood, Mo.
Dawes	Jones, Va.	Pearre	Wood, N. J.
Deemer	Ketcham	Powers
Dixon, Mont.	Kinkaid	Pujo
Dovener	Klepper	Randell, Tex.

So the motion to concur in the Senate amendment was agreed to.

The following pairs were announced:

For the session:

Mr. MORRELL with Mr. SULLIVAN of New York.

Mr. DALE with Mr. BOWIE.

Mr. SOUTHARD with Mr. HARDWICK.

Until further notice:

Mr. REYNOLDS with Mr. WEISSE.

Mr. MANN with Mr. BARTLETT.

Mr. EDWARDS with Mr. BROOCKS of Texas.

Mr. LAWRENCE with Mr. WEBB.

Mr. LONGWORTH with Mr. STEPHENS of Texas.

Mr. VREELAND with Mr. GREGG.

Mr. LILLEY of Pennsylvania with Mr. GILBERT of Kentucky.

Mr. GREENE with Mr. PATTERSON of North Carolina.

Mr. BISHOP with Mr. CLAYTON.

Mr. DAVIDSON with Mr. GRIGGS.

Mr. FOSTER of Vermont with Mr. POU.

Mr. DOVENER with Mr. SPARKMAN.

Mr. HITT with Mr. LEGARE.

Mr. LE FEVRE with Mr. CLAUDE KITCHIN.

Mr. WELBORN with Mr. GUDGER.

Mr. HASKINS with Mr. LEVER.

Mr. POWERS with Mr. GAINES of Tennessee.

Mr. MCKINLEY of Illinois with Mr. REID.

Mr. SLEMP with Mr. GLASS.

Mr. JONES of Washington with Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi.

For this day:

Mr. LOVERING with Mr. WOOD of Missouri.

Mr. PALMER with Mr. SOUTHALL.

Mr. PEARRE with Mr. VAN DUZER.

Mr. MADDEN with Mr. TRIMBLE.

Mr. KNAPP with Mr. SULZER.

Mr. HOGG with Mr. SMITH of Kentucky.

Mr. BROOKS of Colorado with Mr. LEWIS.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota with Mr. LITTLE.

Mr. CALDERHEAD with Mr. PUJO.

Mr. DAWES with Mr. RHINOCK.

Mr. BOWERSOCK with Mr. JAMES.

Mr. BEIDLER with Mr. HOPKINS.

Mr. BEDE with Mr. BRANTLEY.

Mr. WM. ALDEN SMITH with Mr. SHACKLEFORD.

Mr. KLEPPER with Mr. RUCKER.

Mr. GRONNA with Mr. GARBER.

Mr. ACHESON with Mr. BELL of Georgia.

Mr. BINGHAM with Mr. BYRD.

Mr. BROWN with Mr. FIELD.

Mr. KETCHAM with Mr. HEARST.

Mr. BURLEIGH with Mr. MCDERMOTT.

Mr. HUGHES with Mr. RANDELL of Texas.

Mr. BABCOCK with Mr. BOWERS.

Mr. KNOWLAND with Mr. ROBERTSON of Louisiana.

Mr. DEEMER with Mr. PATTERSON of Tennessee.

Mr. JENKINS with Mr. DAVEY of Louisiana.

Mr. SIBLEY with Mr. MOON of Tennessee.

Mr. HILL of Connecticut with Mr. WILEY of Alabama.

On this vote:

Mr. BURKE of Pennsylvania with Mr. PAGE.

Mr. LAFEAN with Mr. RUPPERT.

Mr. HUFF with Mr. JONES of Virginia.

Mr. HOWELL of New Jersey with Mr. LAMB.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

On motion of Mr. BURTON of Ohio, a motion to reconsider the vote was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. Senate amendment No. 1 is not yet disposed of.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my demand on that amendment.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I hope the gentleman will amend this Senate amendment. There were two objections made to the conference report. One was to this amendment and the other was in regard to the solicitor. All the House did was to increase the salary of the solicitor, making it $4,000.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House further insist on its disagreement to the Senate amendment.

The question was taken; and the motion was agreed to.

Mr. FOSS. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. FOSS. Have we disposed of all the Senate amendments upon which a separate vote was asked?

The SPEAKER. Yes.

Mr. FOSS. I ask that the House request a further conference.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois moves that the House ask for a further conference.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BUTLER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I move that the conferees be instructed to resist any agreement to Senate amendment No. 13, and I offer the resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That it is the sense of the House that the committee of conference do not yield in the disagreement of the House and Senate to Senate amendment 13, providing for an appropriation for Fort Royal station.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania desire to offer a resolution to test the sense of the House that the conferees ought not to yield in the disagreement of the House to the amendments?

Mr. BUTLER of Pennsylvania. That is the purpose of the resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would suggest to the gentleman that he had better strike out the words "and Senate."

Mr. BUTLER of Pennsylvania. I ask unanimous consent to modify the amendment to the resolution to that extent.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has a right to modify his resolution.

Mr. WILLIAMS. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Does not this motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania come too late—has not that matter been passed upon?

The SPEAKER. This is the exact time and the only time when it can come.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Should he not move first to reconsider the action?

The SPEAKER. No; this is in the nature of instructions to the conferees, and this is the time that it is in order to offer it.

There was no objection, and the Clerk again reported the resolution.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, does the gentleman desire to say anything?

Mr. BUTLER of Pennsylvania. I do not. I simply move the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. FOSS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BUTLER] that I do not think it is necessary to pass the resolution instructing the conferees of the House upon this question. A number of years ago we abandoned Port Royal and went to Charleston, where we are now engaged in building up a navy-yard. It was understood at that time that we would abandon and get out of Port Royal. The Senate has offered an amendment here appropriating a certain sum of money to open up Port Royal as a naval training station in the winter months. Mr. Speaker, I would say that the House conferees have stood resolutely against this provision, and, in my judgment, I do not think it is necessary for the gentleman from Pennsylvania to attempt to bind the House conferees, because I think they realize and appreciate the sentiment of this House on this amendment.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman what reason he has for not desiring the House to stand behind him, holding up his arms?

Mr. BUTLER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, it is not offered because I imagine for one minute that the gentleman will draw away or weaken from the position they have taken, but this is a strengthener, and I hope the gentleman will not object to its adoption.

Mr. FOSS. Oh, I shall not object to the adoption of it. I only desire to have the House understand that we do not regard it as necessary.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. WILLIAMS) there were—ayes 160, noes 70.

So the resolution was agreed to.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That it is the sense of the House that its conferees do not agree to Senate amendment No. 1.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The question was taken; and the resolution was agreed to.

The SPEAKER announced the following conferees on the part of the House: Mr. FOSS, Mr. LOUDENSLAGER, and Mr. MEYER.

PURE-FOOD BILL.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule heretofore adopted, the House is in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (S. 88) for preventing the manufacture, sale, or transportation of adulterated or misbranded or poisonous or deleterious foods, drugs, medicines, and liquors, and for regulating traffic therein, and for other purposes, and the gentleman from New Hampshire [Mr. CURRIER] will take the chair.

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the first reading of the bill be dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent that the first reading of the bill be dispensed with. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Chairman, under the special order it is provided that there be six hours of general debate, to be equally divided, I presume. I ask unanimous consent that the order of debate be under the control of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. ADAMSON] and myself.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent that the time given to general debate may be equally divided, one-half to be controlled by himself and one-half by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. ADAMSON]. Is there objection?

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. GROSVENOR having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message from the Senate, by Mr. PARKINSON, its reading clerk, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 6493. An act to authorize the city of Buffalo, N. Y. to construct a tunnel under Lake Erie and Niagara River, to erect and maintain an inlet pier therefrom, and to construct and maintain filter beds for the purpose of supplying the city of Buffalo with pure water.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments bills of the following titles; in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

H. R. 20266. An act to amend an act entitled "An act authorizing the condemnation of lands or easements needed in connection with works of river and harbor improvement at the expense of persons, companies, or corporations," approved May 16, 1906;

H. R. 19682. An act authorizing the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to permit the extension and construction of railroad sidings in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 20210. An act to authorize the city of St. Louis, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Missouri, to construct a bridge across the Mississippi River.

A further message from the Senate, by Mr. PARKINSON, its reading clerk, announced that the Senate had passed bill of the following title; in which concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 6191. An act to provide for the construction of a lock canal connecting the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, and the method of construction.

PURE-FOOD BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Chairman, I desire to make a request for unanimous consent. The print of the minority report is exhausted. I do not know whether we want more prints or not. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARTLETT], who is absent, drew the minority report, and I ask unanimous consent that it may be printed in the RECORD to-morrow morning, in order that Members may see it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentlman from Georgia asks unanimous consent that the views of the minority may be printed in the RECORD to-morrow morning. Is there objection?

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Chairman, is it competent to do that in the committee?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks that strictly it should be ordered in the House.

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Chairman, then I shall withdraw the request and make it in the House.

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to my colleague on the committee, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN]. [Applause.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I wish, first, to say that although there has been considerable criticism—at least outside of this Chamber—over the delay in the consideration of this bill in the House, that, as a matter of fact, since the bill was reported into the House and was first given a privileged position in the House no bill has been considered by the House except appropriation bills, bills under suspension of the rules, by unanimous consent, or bills on the Private Calendar, except the one bill which was then a continuing order—the bill in regard to naturalization; so that the delay in the consideration of this bill has been caused on account of the unwritten rule of all legislative bodies, I believe, that appropriation bills, when ready for consideration, as a general thing, are disposed of ahead of all other legislative propositions. But during all this time, Mr. Chairman, I wish to say in justice to the House that I have been constantly assured by leaders of the House that the pure-food bill would have its day in court, would have its chance for consideration by the House before the final adjournment of Congress for this session.

COMPARISON OF SENATE BILL AND HOUSE SUBSTITUTE.

Mr. Chairman, Members of the House are interested to know not only what the pure-food bill does, but to know what the difference is between the propositions submitted by the Senate and the propositions submitted by the House committee.

The Senate passed a bill, No. 88, which came to the House, and the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce have reported that bill to the House, striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting a substitute by way of amendment, and in order that the Members of the House may compare the two bills you will permit me to make a short statement in reference to the so-called "House bill," or rather between the House amendment and the Senate bill.

Section 1 of the Senate bill makes it unlawful to manufacture or offer for sale within any Territory, District, or insular possession of the United States adulterated or misbranded foods or drugs, or to ship from any State, etc., to any State, etc., such articles, under penalty of fine and imprisonment.

Section 2 of the Senate bill prohibits the introduction into any State, etc., from another State, etc., of adulterated or misbranded foods and drugs, and provides that any person who shall ship or deliver for shipment such goods from a State, etc., or export the same to a foreign country from a State, etc., to a State, etc., or export the same to a foreign country, or who shall knowingly receive such goods in a State, etc., shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, etc., and provides that violations of sections 1 and 2 by a corporation may be enforced against the officers of the corporation personally responsible for the violation.

Section 1 of the House amendment covers sections 1 and 2 of the Senate bill and provides that the introduction of adulterated or misbranded foods or drugs into any State or Territory, etc., from any other State or Territory, etc., or shipment or receipt of such goods to or from any foreign country is prohibited, and that any person who shall ship from one State or Territory to another State or Territory, or to a foreign country, or receive in one State from another, or who shall offer for sale in the District of Columbia or the Territories adulterated or misbranded foods or drugs, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and be fined $200 for the first offense, and for a subsequent offense not exceeding $300 or one year's imprisonment, or both, containing a proviso, however, that a person shall not be liable to the penalty of imprisonment unless he knowingly committed the offense charged, and containing the further proviso especially intended for the preparation of certain articles for export, such as meats, that an article shall not be deemed misbranded or adulterated when exported and prepared according to the specifications of the foreign purchaser.

Section 2 of the House bill is almost identical with section 3 of the Senate bill, and provides that the Secretaries of Treasury, Agriculture, and Commerce and Labor shall make rules and regulations for carrying out the provisions of the act and for the collection and examination of specimens of foods and drugs which may be offered for sale in the District of Columbia or any Territory, or offered in unbroken packages in any State where not produced, or received from a foreign country or intended for shipment to a foreign country or submitted for examination by the health or food officers of any State.

Section 3 of the House bill is almost the same as section 4 of the Senate bill, and provides that the examinations of specimens of foods and drugs shall be made in the Bureau of Chemistry, or under its supervision, and if it shall appear from examination that any specimen is adulterated or misbranded, the Secretary of Agriculture shall cause notice to be given to the party from whom the sample was obtained, and such party shall be given an opportunity to be heard, and if it then appears that any of the provisions of the act have been violated, the Secretary of Agriculture shall at once certify the facts to the proper United States district attorney, with a copy of the analysis or examination, and after judgment of the court notice shall be given by publication.

Section 4 of the House bill is almost the same as section 5 of the Senate bill, and provides that it shall be the duty of each district attorney to whom the Secretary of Agriculture shall report any violation of the act, or to whom any health or food or drug officer or agent of any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia shall present satisfactory evidence of such violation to commence prosecution.

Section 5 of the House bill and sections 6, 7, and 8 of the Senate bill contain definitions. The Senate bill defines the term "drug," the term "food," and the term "liquor." The House bill includes all under the two terms "drug" and "food," and defines the term "drug" as including all medicines and preparations recognized in the pharmacopœia or national formulary for internal or external use, and also any substance or mixture of substances intended to be used for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease of either man or other animal. The term "food" is defined as including all articles used for food, drink, confectionery, or condiment by human beings or domestic animal, whether simple, mixed, or compound.

Section 9 of the Senate bill defines what shall be considered as adulteration or misbranding of drugs, confectionery, foods, and liquors.

Section 6 of the House bill defines what shall be deemed adulterations under the act, and provides that a drug shall be deemed adulterated if when sold under the standard recognized in the pharmacopœia it differs from the standard as laid down therein, or if sold under any other professed standard or quality it differs from the professed standard.

Confectionery shall be deemed adulterated if it contain terra alba, barytes, talc, chrome yellow, or other mineral substance or poisonous color or flavor, or other ingredient deleterious or detrimental to health.

Food which includes both food and drink shall be deemed adulterated if any substance has been mixed with it so as to lower its quality or strength, or has been substituted wholly or in part for the article, or if any valuable constituent has been removed, wholly or in part, or if it be mixed, colored, powdered, coated, or stained in a manner to conceal damage or inferiority, or if it contain any added poisonous or other added deleterious ingredient which may render such article injurious to health, or if it consists, in whole or in part, of filthy, decomposed, or putrid animal or vegetable substance, or is the product of a diseased animal.

This section contains a proviso that if food prepared for shipment is preserved by an external application which is necessarily removed in preparation for use, the condition of the food at the time when ready for consumption shall be the test under the act. This is the provision urged by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] as necessary to prevent the destruction of the codfish industry. It may be considered somewhat doubtful whether the proviso has any practical value or effect either one way or the other, as it is doubtful whether any preservative can be used in such manner that it shall be necessarily removed in preparing the food for consumption.

The provision against adulteration of confectionery might properly be extended so as to prohibit the use of spirituous liquors or alcoholic compounds or narcotic drugs in confectionery in any shape.

Section 7 of the House bill relates to the subject of "misbranding," and is the section the provisions of which have given rise to the greatest controversy. It provides that the term "misbranded" shall apply to all drugs or articles of food, or articles which enter into the composition of food, which bear any statement, design, or device on the package or label regarding the ingredients or substances contained therein, or the article as a whole, which shall be false or misleading in any particular; and to any food or drug product falsely branded as to the State, Territory, or country in which it is manufactured or produced; that also a drug shall be deemed "misbranded" if it be an imitation of or offered for sale under the name of another article, or if the contents of the original package have been removed in whole or in part and other contents substituted, or if it fail to bear a statement on the label of the quantity or proportion of alcohol, or of opium, cocaine, or other poisonous substance contained therein.

It is proposed to offer an amendment to this provision, which in effect will provide that the quantity of alcohol or narcotic need not be stated upon a pharmacopœia remedy prepared in accordance with the pharmacopœia formulary, but that on other preparations of drugs the amount of alcohol and of opium, morphine, cocaine, heroin, alpha and beta eucaine, acetanilid, and chloral hydrate shall be stated, so that people may be informed who purchase prepared medicines whether they are taking habit-forming drugs or alcoholic compounds.

"Food" shall be considered as adulterated if it be an imitation of or offered for sale under the distinctive name of another article, or if labeled or branded so as to deceive the purchaser, or falsely purport to be a foreign product, or, if in package form the quantity of the contents of the package be not plainly and correctly stated in terms of weight and measure on the outside of the package.

An amendment will be offered to the package provision somewhat modifying the arbitrary provision, but still protecting the purchaser and the honest manufacturer from the fraud of those who wish to cheat and swindle by short weight or measure.

It ought also to be considered as misbranding of food if the contents of the original package shall have been removed in whole or in part and other contents placed in the package, or if the package fails to bear a statement on the label of the quantity or proportion of any of the narcotic drugs.

The section provides that an article of food not containing added poisonous or deleterious ingredients shall not be deemed adulterated or misbranded in case of mixtures or compounds known as articles of food under their own distinctive names and not imitations, if the name be accompanied on the label with a statement of the place where the article has been manufactured or produced, and also that food shall not be deemed adulterated or misbranded in case of articles labeled, branded, or tagged so as to plainly indicate they are compounds, imitations, or blends, provided that the term "blend" as used therein shall be construed to mean a mixture of like substances not excluding harmless coloring or flavoring ingredients.

Many of the provisions in the House bill and the Senate bill are very similar in reference to misbranding and adulterations, but there are various differences. The package provision in the House bill is not contained in the Senate bill in any form. The provision in the House bill requiring the amount of alcohol and of habit-forming drugs to be stated in medicinal preparations is not in the Senate bill at all. The Senate bill contains the provision in reference to liquors—that a liquor shall be deemed misbranded if it be blended or rectified, or consists of an admixture of different grades of the same liquor, or contains or is mixed with other substances, and the word "blended," "rectified," or "mixed," as the case may be, is not plainly stated on the package in which such liquor is offered for sale, or if the label or any written or printed statement accompanying the package in which the liquor is kept or sold contains any false statement as to the character of the contents of the package, or represents the liquor to be the product of any other country than that in which it was actually produced.

The provision in the House bill which covers the subject of liquor, as well as other articles of food and drink, is that an article shall not be deemed misbranded when labeled, branded, or tagged so as to plainly indicate that it is a compound, imitation, or blend, provided that the term "blend" as used therein shall be construed to mean a mixture of like substance, not excluding harmless coloring or flavoring ingredients.

Section 8 of the House bill is very similar to section 10 of the Senate bill, and provides that no dealer shall be convicted when able to prove a guaranty of conformity with the act, signed by the manufacturer or parties from whom he purchased, but the guarantor must be a resident of the United States. In such case the guarantor shall be amenable to the penalties provided for the dealer.

Section 9 of the House bill makes it the duty of the Secretary of Agriculture from time to time to fix standards of food products for the guidance of the officers charged with the administration of the food laws and for the information of the courts and to determine the wholesomeness of preservatives and other substances added to foods; and to aid him in reaching just decisions authorizes the Secretary to call upon the committee on food standards of the Association of Official Agricultural Chemists and the committee of standards of the Association of State Dairy and Food Departments, and such other experts as he may deem necessary; and further provides that any person interested in the question as to the wholesomeness of a preservative or other substance to be added to food may require the Secretary to appoint a board of disinterested experts of five members to consider, investigate, and report to the Secretary as to the wholesomeness of such articles. The provisions in section 9 of the House bill are not contained in the Senate bill.

Section 10 of the House bill is similar to section 11 of the Senate bill, and provides that any person dealing in foods or drugs covered by the act shall furnish, within business hours, at the ordinary price, a sample to the person duly authorized by the rules and regulations in sufficient quantiy for analysis.

Section 11 of the House bill and section 12 of the Senate bill are the same, and provide that any person refusing to sell a sample in compliance with the section of the act requiring it shall be fined or imprisoned. This section also contains the provision that any person guilty of manufacturing or selling adulterated or misbranded articles in violation of the act may, in addition to the penalties provided, be adjudged to pay the costs and expenses of inspection analysis.

Section 12 of the House bill provides that the act shall not be construed to interfere with commerce wholly internal in a State nor with the exercise of police powers by the States, but foods and drugs fully complying with its provisions shall not be interfered with by State authorities so long as they remain in original unbroken packages, except as otherwise provided by the United States statutes.

Section 13 of the House bill and of the Senate bill provides for seizing and confiscating adulterated or misbranded articles by process of libel for condemnation.

Section 14 of the act proposes to put in permanent statute the provisions which have been carried in the agricultural appropriation bill for several years, authorizing examinations to be made of imported articles of food and drugs and directing the Secretary of the Treasury to refuse entry and delivery when found to be adulterated or misbranded.

Mr. PADGETT rose.

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] yield to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. PADGETT]?

Mr. MANN. I yield.

Mr. PADGETT. The gentleman was speaking a moment ago of mixed foods, and I wanted to ask a question for information. There is a class of flour that is called "mixed flour," in which a portion of corn meal is added to the wheat flour. Would that be prohibited, if it is known to be so, and was published? A great many mills in the country make that class of flour.

Mr. MANN. They make it under a special statute of the United States.

Mr. PADGETT. Would it be prohibited under this bill?

Mr. MANN. It would not be prohibited if they marked it correctly. It would be prohibited to be sold as wheat flour.

Mr. PADGETT. If it is correctly indicated in the sale, it would not be prohibited?

Mr. MANN. That is true. The term "misbranded" shall apply to all drugs or articles of food which have any false statement, design, or device on the package or the label regarding the ingredients, and to any food misbranded as to State, Territory, or country in which it is manufactured, and will apply if it be an imitation of or offered for sale under the name of another article, etc. There are various provisions in reference to misbranding. One of the provisions is in reference to the weight and measure of the contents of the packages, which has given rise to considerable controversy, and which I hope to explain more fully later on. A committee amendment will be offered to the provision of the bill which we think, while modifying the arbitrary provision of the House amendment, will still protect the purchasers and the honest manufacturer from the frauds of those who wish to cheat and defraud by short weight or measure.

PROVISIONS AS TO WHISKIES.

Another provision which has given rise to considerable controversy, at least out of the House, is the one which affects whisky. We found that there were two antagonistic interests involved in the whisky question. One was those who wished all whisky sold, as far as possible, to be the whisky as it came from the still after being aged; the other was the interest which wished to drive out of business, practically, the pot distilleries, and would require the whisky in the market to be made by so-called "rectification" or other processes, out of ethyl alcohol, pure alcohol with the addition of coloring or flavoring matter. The committee did not take a decided stand in favor of either of these interests against the other, but leaves each to stand upon its own foundation, upon its own merits, but requiring that the so-called "rectified" whiskies shall bear upon their label the statement that they are imitation, compounded, or blended, so that the purchaser may know when he buys that class of goods that he is not obtaining whisky as it came from the pot still, simply by aging in barrels or otherwise. We were asked on one side to adopt an amendment which would have put out of business the straight-whisky manufacturers; and we were asked on the other side to adopt an amendment which would have put out of business those who mix or blend the whisky. We did not recommend and have not recommended a proposition upon that point as either side requested, thinking it was not the duty of the committee to recommend to Congress legislation which would determine what people should either eat or drink, but rather to recommend legislation which would permit people to know what they are eating or drinking. [Applause.]

Mr. HENRY of Texas rose.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Illinois yield to the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. MANN. I yield.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. In the bill you provide what shall be pure whisky, as I understand it.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman is mistaken.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. Well, what do you provide in reference to it, because I want to follow it up with another question?

Mr. MANN. I have not the time now.

Mr. HENRY of Texas. Let me ask you this question, then: If the whisky is put up in accordance with the provisions of this law, then does not section 12 of the act protect the whisky when it is shipped from one State to another, as long as it is in the original package?

